I must bring the book it is not will out to begin it

August 12th 1686: thirsday
Thord Appoard in Heaston And it spoke on us calls Nabaga & Magsama, and they are in serious Confounded together And And said Well the God hath sent you
Our trust is that he will for ever send you as a Comfort unto you & all his Servants worthy of the our late Denarian Action of yesterday Had like to have bin overwhelmed & beat it & our Portcullis violently surprised & also diminished or taken away by the damnable & diviliish assault of a wicked Offender of great Divill Gonzardt who braking his Chains after a limited Expiration, hath braked [illegible] loose, and his lurking in the hearts of Sons of your Passions Enimies stirring them up to wicked Confiracies against your Honourably

but God be thanked we were in place by divine permission from to defend the place & all things in Action at the time contended And Glorified be his holy Name we and Heaston victors & conquered that Infernall Assault with was Attempted = led by 7 Infernall Agents, And all is reward before not
Our Eyes though the Conflict was great & Marvellous = of your Knowledg for with glorifie God in my spirit Spirit & zealous Candor worthy S^r the Action of yesterday was [illegible] for it showed forth unto you by that sacred Oppression though seemingly contrary in show to natural apprehen sion or humane conjecture the true & hopefull effect of what is & hath him promised to be fulfilling of your desires in the great work of Nature like wise efforts were as it is ignorantly & improperly presumed to transmute or change base Mettals into finer, No sr not the worst of Mettalls but the same seeds of Nature & Art in its embrionated conception & radicated fomentation though tormented into a baser product by a contrariety & irregularity of principles & Elementary propositions & the temperature or intemperature of the womb bearing & exporting Celestiall influences upon Terrestiall Passives as naturally inherent & conjunctly Inseparable; No S^r if any this great Mission qualify base things separating purity from impurity Confirming youth Leprosie from their parts & by uniting fortitude temperance fomentating seeds of its first Creation; then wealthy purifieth & so thereby transmuteth the baser part of any thing into as absolute & fine a being as the finest & best of things Naturall, nay better, by reason Nature is subject to infirmities, as being Morally & effected Elementary Elementary only, but when a Celestiall or divine quintessence is Administred, maketh Nature then incorruptible & immortall; even as Man tho' compos'd only of Elementary fragile & essentiall beauty doth decay ordinary sickness & prolonged sickness but wonderfully rarely then Mortality before the quintessentiall soul of immortality is put on & all afterwards together into immortall & incorruptible Glory so temporarily is the quality & condition of mankind is unhappily doomed to great wants sorrows & desperate dangers how how uncomfortable & how Miserable is the state of that person whom wishing for death it flyeth from him like as himself him from vast inward perils, we on divine grand mercy shall yet find forth & grand deliverance to this troubled frontier & by the light of that Grand conduct it into a safe & happy state of Peace & plenty, how great is this comfort is it not a Terrestially divine Glory & suitable to a Celestiall enjoyment, truly S^r in our Celestian observa = tion we enjoy truly foreground Terrestiall happiness to Christ:

= iall blessedness as to Lord different Kinds we then continue here you are in the present state of mortification as to wants & distempers during then of Gods will beyond & immortall in your enjoyment of Peace plenty & true happiness both here & hereafter as I doe certainly assure if the most High God is pleased to give you life whilst our Charge is in order to your conduct, wherein we shall make as dextrous a progress as divine grand mercy admission

And we will begin to examine the books on Monday Morning
& thursday; &c we intend on wednesday Morning on action
I would have you S^r make a voluntary small offering of your signall obedience when you consider how by reason of internall suggestions & incoragements, you are not enjoyned to do it of necessity nor to any expression but at pleasure as you please reserving only & exacting offering wholly & otherwise enjoyned on times of ration both Trinarian & annually quaternian & so we shall bound you at this time into the hand of the highest & his grand Century in your protection & preservation wishing we humbly unto you both of him to his glory & your comfort Amen Hallelujah

It is not amiss to let blood in the Earnest but it may do very well

: 1686: October: 18th: monday:

Three Apparitions before the stone Dammiel

there is under the stone a red fiery Apparaunce under the said stone only Mark God is Louinabl Cond Legal on the South side is Anael
And Dammiel seuls

It is conjectured altogether needless to make particular of those Great mercies & Benifits wherewith the most high God by the mouth of his sacred Spirit in the unity of the blessed Trinity Endowed his Servants in the beginning of time; and since, by the Inspiration also of his most holy spirit, And so as hath been said in all ages since both medial & immediat unto all his Chosen Mosbis of Grace and other his Servants elect unto mercy, and as the first promise & benifite Gods was delivered immediat & by mediums of Grand through time — appointment both medial & immediat as by often given from superiour Power left inherent to Posterity by Inspiration Revelation & visible Apparaunces as now at this day with you, wherein the wonderfull work of the Creator is shewed forth in the Creature & as it hath been said of all Creatures weatsoever in the Creation both Animall, Vegitable & Mineral

Now then Sirs to tell you how need you are in Vertue the benifits of temporall felicity the full fruition of your hopes through faith in the highest & the Blessed of Colosiriah, I may not Appoynt nor shew forth but I will relate thus far unto you, that as we are of time & by reason time & dwellers not with us any other wise than as being moved into sublunar parts by divine Emission & in our Apparaunce unto the Children of Grand as before hath been said; I trust on thirday next at your next Convention here or in this presence to marvaile at some of your usuall meetings &c — — something will be delivered of great importaunce the reasons & ways & shew forth this my Message wholly intirely in saying & conjectured thus must know yours that Celestiale Inspiration Revelation or otherwise by visible Apparaunce should forte unto the Celestiall Mosbis provided & formed that light least mortall Eye can see, hearing Apprehend, or thought conceive, but from the only ground of that God whose is great Lord of all things his Servants not daring otherwise then to attend that pleasure divine and ouerlordly neglect them truely happy through faith humillity & obedience,

I know you must consider here on thirday next at your accustomary time & of trust in the highest you may rejoice & =turn not lose your labour for as it hath been said upon suppliant Bowes, Attend Inferior Adorations & humble supplication know y Celestiall audery also mouths & profound thankfulness as divine pleasure shall be Graciously mortified in that appointment & so Emitted & sent forth unto holy name be for ever blessed, and unto Paternall — benefactions be given to his Servants for their temporall & Eternall Comforts Amen Hallalujah & so we end this

October: 21th: 1686:

There appeared a fiery red appearance under the stone in white is Imperiall Appearance as we suppose it to be Pastor — — and within the stone is the Testimony giving great light in it like the sun
And in the stone is Uriel Sachiel, Galuah, and they are all 3 Crowned only Uriels is Mitrall And before y stone is a great many about 9 small Apertures in a Sky brisk Cloud
And Uriel Galuah, looked on me and then looked one on y other and smiled and Uriel said well Sir we now observe the saying of our fellow Servant in the highest Dammiel only Profound of the last Days action declaring of your address at this time in saying that paradventure you might not lose your Labor neither shall you, for wch will fulfill y saying to your Comfort in ye action of this day

Remember it hath bin shewed forth unto you that all Mysterall sayings should in some kind hereafter be declared, and what should be declared or shewed forth for y future should be easily & in short plaine Language as attonemarily possible
And it is comonly used amongst duen ye most inferiour sorts of Domine Lessons

And now we will discover unto you ye greatest of knowledg though from y meanest of things, and ye most triall subject matter there of standing the whole Earth & all ye most learned & sophi should not without great difficulty & perturbation of thought & apprehention thereunto we may justly call
This Misticall Equiuocation, And ye hieroglyphicall
Enigmata, of ye greatest both Antient & Modern Sophia =ts, and so kept as a tenebrous Arcanum to amuse ye sonns And imaginations of Ambitious & Aspiring Ignorants (and then they all 3 smiled one on ye other And said well Lord

I pray you S^r what is man & what is his originall and how it he composed and how dignified, hath he not in him three principles & 4 Elements and is it not so of ye whole Creation Animall vegetable & Mingrall, come we then to the first words of ye Creation 2dly to Man, and 3dly to the understanding benifit & use of those gifts wherewith man was Adorned & Strengthened first as to y Earth (he said I know y^r you have him here to found at the begining or first of your Readings he tould or it hath bin shewed forth unto you in these words (hast thou walked in the bredth ascent ground of ye Deepe & knowst not Salt to be ye first matter of all things then Consider from whence all things proceed & know you well say from ye salt of Nature wherewith ye Earth is impregnated and from whence by a fiery nature & issuing from y influence of the fiery & Airy Elements & Mutually contrating a natural heat heat & Moysture upon ye passing ambrionated conceptions of water & Earth or Colde & drinesse attended by an Aqueous humidity of Aire & water ye one giveing forme & ye other life by ye assistance also of ye Generall influence produceth ye conception greate & production of all things &

Creatures in their Generall & different Respective kinds as y Germs & parts are formed by like different Aspects passing through Astrall Constellations in their signall Powers but of this Subject more hereafter Let us Returne to man

I pray you S^r of what was he made (of Earth) well then he have all in him y is contained in ye Earth yea ye heavens
& other Elements of wch discourse also more hereafter

Let us Returne again to man how was he adorned how was he dignified, with it not with Celestiall, Angelicall & Divine beauty and accompanied with equall parts & participations of the greatest Glory, but when lost was then changed & reduced to the most base & meanest of things the wch subject hath bin already shewn forth unto you &
It hath bin also shewed forth in these words yt the most high God dealt to ye intent he may make himselfe the strongest and also that he tore Rind Moses out of ye Earth to testify his Name make those sayings — Cloathed we then man to be made of ye meanest subject of ye Creation through Cloathed with Celestiall beauty & through disobedience Returned to ye vilest & the meanest of all Creatures despised his strength & wrestle must with ye highest for grand primacy for his profound and future felicity from all wch we will contract ye Allegation & Equiuocall determination of those Misticall sayings of ye great Sophiarchi in their formal results That the first matter of their great Lathanum is to be produced or taken from ye meanest despicable things common to be had in every corner & in every thing we carry it with us we live not without it yet we divide it & throw it out of doors & make no other regard then to foil it at nought

I pray you Sr to be brosse wth you what can you fmagine this to be; it is nought else but your owne vnderstandinge the foyles you make from your bodie from your worke & what els can else also may be thought wholly vnlesse other wise then to feed & harten up the Mother of Nature to bind & bring forth fruits of her body for y Nourishment & Comfort of all things continued & part of her still fmyprognating vphold =ing fupporting & maintaining Mother Earth in its primitiue ens producing thereby a Nitrall salt wch by the Attractiue Power of the Celestiall influences sublimeth & guideth life to all Creatures both Animall vegetables & Mineralls as they fubsist one vpon the other.

Thus sir I have vnmasked & vnclothed vnto you on this topt & fubiect of salt to be the first matter of all things to stand upon your understanding

To all the Parrabollinall fuyings and opplaints wch from 3 alius well fpn Sr to vnfold, we say that nothing could amend homo genian and Conspitius salt to that of Nature then the Spermine or Urine of Man wch though you pretend a fuyling in the Anatomising thereof we will yet further help your fundamen therein most vnto wch is the salt of Plants or the salt of the Viall Plant, the vine,

Now then since we have explained the Parrabollinall fnigmas as to the Mainz fonet & menstruum it selfe you shall make or cause to me made a very well Rectified spirit of wine that must be truly & Actually dephlegmated wch before & by its selfe then you shall make a spirit of mans wine it matters it not wch the salt of the drink wch yare adventure Sr the vine might not be well Rectified yare adventure it might not be dephlegmated & then your flomb washeth away your salt but I will tell you how to know when the vine is well Rectified or prepared for this worke

59

Take about halfe a spoonefull or ½ legt & when the wine hath stood as before hath bin said 7, 9, 12 or 15 dayes more or lesse if you put some of this wine on the furrup of violets wch is of azure or blew Colour & if the wine turneth it into a green then is it fit fmediatly to be distilled & be prepared for worke

Then if you powre of this well prepared spirit of wine on your well Rectified spirit of wine 1 ℥ to 3 it will be all vnmarked into a body of salt from wch you must draw a spirit or Menstruum wch most wonderfull effectually wch I must also tell you how to doe or else
I feare you cannot doe it it self

Take of Clay fluer as wch you is called to bacco pipe Clay gently Calcined or fmeed rather the Moysture therof Exhaled away by a gentle ordaining the wch being mixed with your salt will then vnmarke in a spirit or menstruum of fay most Admirable wonderfull & great effectly preparing all bodies by dissolution for effecting the greatest efforts and thus far have I fulfilled the Adventured Promise of the last action at the end wherein your difficulty & difficultie of your worke & contemporary offertories have caused a great exuption & gaue entrance for wicked fmination intreatment was made & still Lurketh for opportunity but Sr let me tell you it lyeth on your part as well as on our part to oppriat this effect wch Crime had otherwise deprived of ation this tornay & it may be the not also by dubling the offertory of this day wch of right should have bin fulfilled but that we have detected your vnder sight by your forgetfulnes wch otherwise might have grounded of great losse & difficultie vnto you & then say you Rand Rodi a Mony in his dayes of action & his favor of your obedient Hnd Caleab Ford having Regard S^r to your weakness bott my Children to defend your Enmonty wise as this our Ally & high Forsont of Grand Allodgah hath defended but had you bin formd Ally & Assistant you had bin at a great loss if not for our Loss pray take ward it be so not more I doe assure you I have bin your friend & am so I shall continue so And so long as you serue god & stand obedient to his Law & Comandements & and mine Allies will also still serue you & be your friends

I wish my brother in Hnd & Leonard had bin taking view & comparing all his making of Glass truly S^r we cannot finde any Glass to defend your wont having only Say you we went a weldnesse or lunar Lustre and then you should be well but pray S^r doe you take notice of the Principles or Ingredients of white other glassworke and composes & then I confess you may wright your owne to best in your of goodness I pray you S^r how must of your Mettall doe you Loyld or throughaway & then you will know his Differents between your gains & others loss when you bot examine the Matter
But S^r I can tell you & I will tell you what can make your glass as fine & beautifull as silver & yet keepe its Strength white others do not doe
Nitrous others worke must in prepared saturne or brulle
I confess his found to be good so far as it will flow but when it comes to folle & fuse to a kind of vinglutination it will not worke, or worke to little effect, white is oppositt & so is found by, & will doe things gid by that yet you may use some Drugs according to your discretion walk then S^r to prepare & for to weaken Glass to dissolue & in his Menstuum Fuid Spook &c Thus hence we S^r boast promise with you & in doing your duty you boast promise with us & we will fill you with knowledg

I come on Monday Morning

October 25: 1686 =

Verily S^r you have not said more then hath bin heard, his foresight expects appointed consultation heard at this time the actions & Motions of your Envious Enimies at this time we may call, the blustring storms & boating Billows of Maliguity, tossing, & tumbling you on his raging surges of danger & deprivation, and confess with you his any and great Fraile & great hassards, yet through Gread & mony in the highest affray & great violence & Turbulence of this Adventure & Calme may follow & you may be a little happy Corahuda, but then a gentle Gaile shiske & wherske you with safety into the Port of Peace
This S^r I must adde say, that the Person in whom his Right & Power of the disposall of your Charge employ ment lyeth, must restraine us, by reason we tooke not the Card so nearly, as to withstand the Proper & due Rights of Propriety & Proprietors
Behind it S^r those your Divisions Enimies now in question and in some Respects in greater straights then you and were it thus to be understood, they doe find themselves sinking, for his Barke of their Ambitions Hopes will not float & scarcely buoy about the Seas and white mabes them in many different thoughts & Consultations & Contracts many doubts & fears in their Forsight as not considering how the proceedings thereof will Proue & determine for they provided with great Art & Craftiness it impossible for them to stand or depart you fall & have not any way to persue that Refull but to offer bait of Purchase for many write is generally thought will take hd paines well then Consider wd that yd shall to the plain & persons confirmed & distaste hd matter wch you may fatily dod in laying downe how profoundly this world began & accordingly fundded by Godfull & himself Mandgmout as then was well known & grounded at this day to be attested

So S^r if you can with thus good Patience as you genuinely carry on this discourse & with what hassard to your selfe you Hand managed which & Carried on hd Credit of his work & with what difficulty & adoption to your selfe you Hand sought till to prevent hd downfall & distruction of those by those who now plainly appeard unto hd prelacy of Purchase to hand it out of their hands wherefore S^r if you consider well how to dispute & lay all those things gradually home before them & the fill Consequences of of pursuing Efforts of this Rollitick Elusions & deritfull others they may easily perceive hd finall determination thereof to be nod more nor otherwise to be a distruction to their finall hopes & a totall Subversion to hd work

October 28 :: 1686 :: the 2^d ::

There appeard before hd Gen a sportum it is Zedechiah
And also an Appearance of a sportum within hd
Gen; it is said, And the looks towards me & smiles
And Zedekiah looks on us very gravely & seriously and not angerily,

And the said Come on S^rs to our Purpose, hearing of your scruples at Lamehat lately deliuered you of salte the spirits thereof Especially & in particular of Wine
I will now take upon me to Anatomize & define hereof obserue then that spirit of wine & spirit of wine although wonderfully highly & well rectified & truly dephlegmated, they are attended with & Clouds also by your Clerks of sharpe spirits not thus, that Wine before any thing of Rectification is called Recent Wine, to make the spirit & full as before it is to be thus made

A tabb of this Wine quantum wise, and in a moderate heat vapor off or exhale wp 2/3 parts thereof & the other part of third may be distilled 3 into good spirit wine wise the salt volatile will attend as you may perceive by the sides of the glass Receiver & if any flemb remainde behind after the spirit & salt is tooke out it is that wise washt away & defoliate your salt the wine spirit & salt may be after distillation a few times & then by sublimation brought all into a body of salt & then again

if you take wine after due rectification according to the Rules here Rowed & distill the same the spirit thereof comes first out as you shall well perceive by bladders at the nose of the Retort wise wilbe of all colours & when you see the salt come to adjunct to the sides of your glass Receiving it by similitude of many plants or vegitables, and if you be after wards by a water warme out it doth dissolue the salt then stop that worke and this spirit by often sublimation may be brought all into salt

This hand S^r removed your doubts towards your scruple & rectified your error, the use whereof shall as it may please the highest be shortly laid aside & other hand & shewed forth unto you,

& question as little as I hand one in those Rebukes but shortly as it may please the highest as great gifts & benefits may be given to your supply & comfort & doe assure you of the Care & Charge in order thereunto is now in motion to that purpose it may be better

you may consider here on Tuesday morn if you can conveniently

The best way is to make your memorable offertory with the Ternarian offertory on ye 6th of January And that day will be a great Day of Rejoycing and being Comforted in the Joyes of Happiness in the highest 1686/7 January 3: Monday

There appeared a small Portum of Light on the Moon & was very pleasant as if it was Rejoyced at something & it turned about & did Face towards the East, And it turned his way & smiled & said
So, Sr what is it you have to say methinks I heard you make Struple touching Fontanal Fordshood, wch I will Separate from further mistake Know ye then ye 13th day Instant is your proper dies Ternarius & not ye 13 & 16 you ought to observe it both in the Generall & particular appointed offertories therefore were you commanded to pray durbolly &
Solast your Soules with Joyful hopes of future Felicity &c — it is a day of a double Jubile if you do this as ye 13th instant is the entrance of action & it Couples all 3 principals & if you Jubile the single offertory of this day it is as much as can be required of us, by the sayings of my Mother but not Jubiled as a Ternarian offertory only as a Jubile entranced into action as may be fully & Legally showed forth & discovered unto you in the two first in Rising Ternaries & the 3 from thence proceeding into effects, that you May Injoy your Soules in your fulfilled hopes & happiness well well Sr you have stopped my mouth & am gone but I leave the Blessing with you behind me words with the highest Grafted your strength your faith & Hopes in him

stone; and it said No action appeareth until Wednesday Morning then bring his stone with you something eclipseth his action of this day

1686/7 Feb 2d: Wednesday the first after Vernary

Thord appeared the testimony in forme like the fire at the top of the stone out of which went a ray upwards at the top of which is a bright glittering star & out of that star come flashes fire now then And there is a fortune in the stone that looks first to one follid glass tonight & then to the other And Jabuk turned round about & called And presently came two fortunes & brought with them two ugly things and Jabuk said something angrily to them and then the two fortunes tumbled themselves down into a hole

And Jabuk said God be praised that we have subdued his evill thoughts infernall Powers will still be fomenting & stirring to evil their wicked designations against the president, & stirring up his spirits of evill minded persons to storme their guard with most wicked and stand alone Batteries, but their and false & will do not Execution & God be thanked they are now vanquished and confined to a restraint & their Power wholly diminished & extinguished

If you be remembred Sr Thord. Bring up 3 professors against will Sr now we go on with you & with all imaginable opportunity for your deliverance not only from your fear but your evill of Danger & danger of Misery & have returned the malice of your Enimies upon their heads, make haste with those papers that the Post

1686/7 feb: 15th Tuesday:

There appeared over ye stone a body like ye sun with a Rubied Appearance in it

There appeared in ye stone a fountaine like shining & a spectrum standing one of each side and out of ye fountaine issueth out fiery rayes like as water running out of pipes

There appeared a small spectrum before ye stone & it looked on us & smiled & seemed to be ready to speake & then turned to ye stone & afterwards to us & smiled & seemed to be ready to speake to us & did severall times but now the whole we beheld the mercy & waitings of god his Servants & the humble supplications & earnest petitions unto ye highest for further comfort & peace and certainly are moved with great pitty & Compassion, but as we have not the Corruptions of the Earth so we reject to deale with defiled things, but I am willed to shew parts of this next Ternarius entring & the qualities thereof, on the 2d day you are to consider words as in order to the Ternary: and R: C must sit downe before ye stone at and if it cannot fully with light you will have but hopes to your former with your books & pen & ink on y mystery, but when action here is called then you shall prepare to ye other Mystery & therefore the spirit will with ye other spirits mentioned in y preface guide you As touching your oratory & great Mistery therof upon y day you shall know it is 3 sound part of a Centering peale of Attonement 2 ply of Louder & 3 ply dignity of ye ply Song dignifies therewith & the right sense of well conducte to song hearing & understanding of spirituall Mistries & apparitions, its also an oratory containing more enforce Mystery as first a Conquest over disposing of your Enimies & their malitious subtilties 2dly Producing thereby Redemption in the quality & Condition of your vocation 3dly the fruits of your future good for this let me give you to understand that it is a Mapria in Philosophy as you call it that effects depend not upon Causes, so as your Enimies neither had or could cause thus to dispite you as they doe & could don, then Consequently ought your endeavors & will redound on their own heads & procure their own distruction well Sr it is said before we must not the Earth nor the Corrupt part thereof what can not be don the one day may be in following dayes of action as they present of the Ternary to afford as it may be advanced then if from the one thereof will be the ends of your Sorrows & Afflictions & the begining of your Comfort & Redemption your action is at this time ended you may give thanks & Coast

1685/7 feb: 17: Ternary:

from hence to others but this Retrograde entred & passed his grady & all this is to try, the very fruits & hopes of our friends & to see us if possible diswade us least we might thereby Clamerously be scandalously tempted to anger, but with sober & find Rate & insinuated shall surely & immediately Receive those Rewards of a Throne & a Robbe & Staff & God And Leonard looked towards us & said why thus it is not long and things prepared for Commendable action but those malitious divells imdiatly powres vpo dorons till they find Prey soe devower the hopes of many honest Cardfull oppotunitys soe rejoyce at their damned designes of shattering the foods of devastation. emongst the hopefull Groaths of the faithfull but of how they will quickly be fast enough you shall have bin fond grivious slanders cast upon the but in post & truly hardly taken mute Notice of but through those you seduc'd soe wonderfe at the deadness of profit that should attend from honour is shute as prodeuble to the effects I say not knowing the reasons thereof may be animated to seeke some further in quiry into the state & condition of your works, they come to see sufficions as mute as ought offer

1686/7 March 3: the 2d after Ternary::

There appeared a solar body under the stone with in imperiall Profound in it And there came a flash out of ye solar body & it fired all under ye world My boy ye is fixed Centre of to eastward of ye Center of ye sun a wonderfull glorious portum in a Celestiall Ruby Vessell wch we suppose to be Easter in ye Center of ye stone is a beautifull glittering font like lying with a Ruby flame ascending out of it and at ye side Northward & Southward of it is a seate and to ye west ward of it is Saluah
And Saluah said be silent & mind not
And the 3 portums about ye font did bend downd but ye fiery portum did not
And the fiery portum takes something from its breast throwes it into ye font with great force & it tossed all ye shew in ye stone of a Ruby Vessell & dryed towards And now they and all told us & spake a great deale of wonderation, and Could not know you not from whence for your Action began & ye solar body broke into a flash & became a star & sunk downe & lay into ye Center of ye stone & there was a Cloud towards ye end of it and beyond in ye stone is And it said
Come & let us goe on to our business in hand & then [illegible] Vessell on ye said And now for your instruc tion & satisfaction in Terrestiall actions & proceedings on ye 5th instant being Saturday next you make ye 3d & last part of your entrance into & how you may haue great signes of appearance on ye next day being Sunday ye first day of ye week you shall humbly & earnestly Invocate and move by supplication & petition to Michael & Uriel, as you did before with dumbstruck, Then on Tuesday morning at 7 a clock make progress being ye first of action to Uriel, other thing administring Forsights as by degrees offered and accordingly pleads & Invocation you may wonder =ard find them somewhat perish or slow in their motion or appearance but be not dismaid for that is by reason they are Powers of ye Air & perhaps also ye Earth & Subterranean & by Nature more gross & naturally somewhat obstinate in serving or — assisting mankind but they are by vertue of Invocation mouth & constrained to do their duty & fulfill the Requests & Commandments of mankind

For yet in short proofs of time the Earth shall through ye spiritual middums as aforesaid by nature & office being properly Reformed & appointed shall send your assistants make the fulness of its treasuries &c —
And when you shall behould & looked corporall appearance of those or any of those spirits shall address present before you & view it or them well & see if you can discern or discover wch I desire in orders you may conjecture or imagine thereto be of if you find it bold Kingly as by its Attendants may be thought or observed, then you must give it titles of (Royall) if it be of Dukes or Lords then (the most Noble) if it be of ye Inferior sort of ye highest of them you may say (Honorable) & of ye lower sort (Honourable) or friendly) at their first appearance say ye first be Uriel (welcome be you Royall spirit, you are to me kindly welcome & desire you to tell me your name, & show me your seale or Character into wch you give obedience if they be slow in answering say and you ye Royall spirit Uriel or any that of hair name or any of ye inferior orders superiors or inferior under ye Royall spirit Uriel or who are you otherwise ye may be noted of your [illegible] reason for unsatisfied herein.

if you see their seale make a copy of it with Character & ye spirit bound to you to perform ye office during ye time then calling it by its name & bid it welcome
And now by ye same Power you were invocated & moved to appear in presence hereat this time I do also by ye said Power & ye said and most dreadfull Name of your God & ye seale of his your seale or Character or bond of Creation (most firmely & fully binding you to ye service of ye God & also his servants ye sons of men living on Earth) Earnestly Request & Powerfully Conjure constrain you to stay with me here in peace, modesty & Gravity, untill you have fulfilled & accomplished into me all & every my Request & shall now demand of you & ye ye write & now also do in the dreadful name of your God Powerfully Command you to serve & assist me in & not to depart into your Orders or mansion or place of Residence untill you have fulfilled all my desires nor untill I give you license to make your departure being your office to make discovery of all hidden treasure I doe command you to make discovery to me of all what is easy to come at & obtained

And since it was provided for the use of man to serve his necessities therewith I do command you to ~~make~~ make discovery of all such hidden treasure as ~~my~~ may easily be obtained and to bring it to me ~~or~~ to this place

~~the first under dukes are called honoured the rest are called benevolent~~

~~O you [illegible] spirit (N)~~

O you spirit (N) now since you have obeyed the name of your God the superiour powers & seales of your orders & your owne seale or Caracter & by your selfe here delivered unto me according to my desire & hath also obeyed my wayes & at my invocation moved & appeared here before me and accordingly served & assisted me by office given you, for the which I give harty thanks unto god & your superiours & also unto you for this your friendly faith & kindnesse unto me which I desire may be for ever continued between us & the peace of the highest confirme it unto us & remaine with us during my Naturall life commanding you thereby to be always ready to move at my Call & to appeare unto me when soever necessity shall give occasion for your further friendship & assistance & so you may depart in peace unto your orders

If any evill Power hath the keeping any hidden treasure

~~these~~ Powers will discover it & their Names & their seales And you may command it to bring the treasure & say to them, Depart to your Orders thou art of darknesse & the places of darknesse, this was provided for the use of man therefore depart to your orders & say Feouah, Feovah, Feovascah

It mattereth not whether you doe put on your girdle untill tuesday & so likewise for your Pentagon of Power let it hang at your brest or lay before you on tuesday first your Invocation to Vhiel 3 times, 5 minits between or 6 or 7, then make a stop for 9 or 12 or 15 minits between then read the Invocation to Arnen, Poriel, Amandiel, & Hissam, & doe the like by them (viz) ~~ree~~ repeat their Invocation 3 times with like distance then stop againe as before then must call againe to Vhiel & stop 3 minits & then the Invocation to the 4 dukes then stop 5 or 6 or 7 minits and then call on Vhiel againe & so do 2 times ~~and~~ more & then you have don calling stay ½ an houre after

Now I will tell you Sir there is neither doubt nor question to be made of successe in the practise or use of this arcana I could say much as to the commendation & encouragement & benefit here of if I durst since I have said enough in reason its not befitting for mankind to know more thereof for that will seme to many wonderous as to be incredible & thereby subject to suffer abuse or corruption vpon and yet wholly depriued hee benifit thereof

And you knowing enough herein need not more but humbly to supplicate grace & mercy from the highest wherewith I humbly bessech him also to bless you —

And said (looking more seriously & Gravely) Ha good friend
I have heard you Lamenting your unfortunate state of profession being in your employment, and fill of your Lodge & Declining hopes of future certainty & surety thereof in some to stretch out fear & terror of mind more than the danger real attends you you may nay you must appear to them partly as or else it will be worse through mercy in the night you may shortly find disturbance to your great & undeserved comfort
M. Millot) some shrewd thought hath been sent in amongst some persons were are daily wholly unconcerned in those affairs but by Stragmary flashings & Flutterings of persons unconfounded as they themselves could to gather Rumors weekly spreading abroad may also fix to others to them be affordently thereof until it sounds in the Ears parts & ruined of those that are confounded though there be not Reality therein more foundation

Lord ford, & confess what you say that ouer as finding persons will lay hold of a straw to buy them up though in deed so Mr Lilly will take hold of what benifit opportunity may offer, but his report is yet nothing though hard may be Contrivance of some to create a Conception of setting things designs on foote but still it is Nothing for it cannot be daily Confirmed nor determined so y still it produces nothing
I say question not your sight for it will be given you & your Instructions are sufficient to make use of upon any Appearance presents it selfe well my good Lord you may withdraw into your Conformable region the most high God Protect, & bless you.

May 10th, 1687: Tomary

There appeared a fine like body over y Sun and in it a thing like an Eagle y cast a ray towards like a streame of light,
And Jusamiah in the solid glass = kept on y Northside
And Damaniel in the other & stood all postures more write then And Jusamiah & Damaniel did looke to y East wards & then to the Sun & upon us & smile
And in the Sun in the Sun like thing is a flame & Mikael is on the North side of it & Uriel is on y South side of and Madimiel & Ane are of the west side of it & on y East side of it is a shadow in Imperiall forme in a fiery appearance And Mikael & Uriel looke directly on me & they have care of them a star on their breast out of which come a ray pointing to mid from the Sun :

And Madimiel & Ane did looke to the Eastward & then one on another & then on us & smile
And Madaniel said, God send our Good friends & brethren safely & well by this time you may think me much a stranger by reason of my late not profound in appearance upon a throne Not y our absence is mostly or many times to some as present to us and at all times & every where present by powerful & command from our great Master & have often soone you & forbod you at Command & by Charge in mine & mildred into and though you see me not nor know me not for the Most high & Great Soveraign & mighty Magistrary when he made the Earth & the Glory there of and looked downe from Heaven upon that his most Invincable & Eaft Frame but worke & moving the greatness & Glory variety of all things as the Soule & image of him selfe & then framing the more Noble Creature of all Man as the image Lord of y by beholding this wonderful & unconceivable worke as to the apprehension of man in all succeeding ages until this day. the great & most high God of say, did declare all this to be good & made man the sole Emperator & governour under him selfe of all y he had to create & made, & withall made particular promise into man not only to enjoy but to command the great benifit & comforts Lord of, if he would become humble & obedient & obey & his command & not wise if he so kept & observed should be inherent to all posterity even to all Eternity but foolish man falling from his duty into a Soleys of disobedience & swerving divine Justice as a punishment due to his disobedience was degraded of his Angelicall & immortall habit =ide & cast forth into dishonour & so became sinfull & subiect to death & corporall dissolution intailing thereby the like on all his posterity

But yet my Brethren let us also exult herein with all, the goodness of the highest that although he Justly punished that great offence & sin of man yet he compassionately beheld his woefull & lost his grand enemy paternally to continue with him that he should yet stand in a state of glory & retain an imperiall power of all God his good Creatures & Celestiall & Elementall & to make the infernall & powers of Darkness as his Vassalls & to remand them as wild slaues although by Nature still yet in their place & office to be not only submitted but also humbly & submissively bound to obay his Commandment upon Called & moued thereunto from wence my brethren you daily suffer & tentided with and what the Morall of Gran shall possess effectially where Celestiall power dwelleth
& the light thereof is as I may say alwaies or Continuall present = the last is given to Adam =
And she said This truth now said & shewed forth must ouerwhelmingly be confessed of all & indeniably affented into (clouded on me) if so be you sir & till you the great words of the hermetick Sophiarks will be truly given declared & shewed forth unto you & that you shall by your industrious endeauours in vayl is delinded you partake of those gradual Earthly benefits, wch shall not only be bestowed but delinded into you as a Continuall supply to feed your Noble spirit that you may find in a Magnificent Comfort & enjoyment of promised felicity; but stay was not the 23d day of the last month wch you pointed at & mentioned well be on be contented for I heard not given me to say the of now, and they looked to the East & then spake to the two flash folded glass Rod & you may give thanks & obey but all your utmost powrs let not a foot enter into this land till the sun is set

May 18: 1687: the first after Ternary ~~wednesday~~

There appeared in the form Uriel & before it Cathabiel & one the form like a wolde & fire & in the center of it is an Eye & looked directly on me
And Uriel did transfer mine with Cathabiel & Uriel did sometimes & also Cathabiel looke on y two Solid Glass Rods and now & then Uriel did cast a smile on me
And Cathabiel turned his way & smiled & said smiling mine & hearts you S^rs but mine Now considering the action of the last day of your Convention how the weight & hard Conterms in yt for the world & work of flay heat the Power & Providence of the highest is past the Date of humaine apprehention & imagination well though you are incompassed with Terrestiall Obstruation & Battered furiously with the most Malitious suggestions that can be attended or practised by Infernall Inventions dangerous enough his trust in portent & effect but what thinke you not that yet Tendings not born ouerwhelm Power you S^rs most assuredly & heat to your Comforts too as that I could manifest in many points & examples & in all ages of time if God not finds by you are greater sinners then many kept haire him wonderfully deliuered & preserued from more greater & apparent dangers then you now suffer & are at present vexed in to me & confess S^r what you but even now offered as to be advised touching those present diffimlties now laying vpon them but vpon you are very considerable & needed as necessary for you to be advised in, but it is not of myne office at this time I staind breathe at ye said Barbe on Monday morning & then you wilbe resolued by Emanuel

- A faythfull & skill hand fight & dignity &c — — — Behould the Lords seruant of the highest God, comfort to your Comfort & assistance into whom it is wilbe given mortifull to the confirmation of your hopes in him into whom all honour glory & thanks given be attributed for ever & ever Amen

May: 23: 1687: Monday:

There appeared Emanuel in the Inn very pleasant & friendly yet seriously, & looked on me and said smiling this said S^r you went Crumbell in order wherunto I am present here at this time; And do find that you would gladly understand what wilbe the fate & event of this late Expedition of the place & employment of your present being, & the good or ill further thereof, as it now stands in the midst of a storme of uncertainty wrapped even to the utmost delibe=ration, and how you shall regard a Lord herein for a generall reformation — but of it, & all what ever is therein conformed, you say you know not neither know you how to advise your selfe herein, neither know to be the reason of the Clergies of this day what say you S^r is the scope of your desire well then if you desire I shall summon up the principles in y^e sense of your present desires, and I shall turn a flesh & turned to the Lord & then turned to us again & looked more pleasant then before if possible & said

Now then upon a view of this whole Matter as I have taken & thereby observed & find of all persons concerned here in whose proper Claime it is or who will lay Right or Claime hereunto, is at this time wholly unknown & not to be understood but many layth out baits angling to here the profits & benifits that layth ready who made them & those who are or may be properly said to lay Claime thereunto are subject to give over & Giffen to Emanuel Contrary & malitious informations, undervalluing deriding & setting the same at Nought thereby making it mute of strange disorder & confusion so eclipsing y^e truth that the splendor of its glory will not any of y^e shine forth in the Luster of right understanding — shun most horrid & turbulent tyes like a girldrond storme wilbe infernally disposed, that the innocency of the Naked truth wilbe cloathed with a scandalous and mistomely garment gladly seeking to shroud it selfe behind a Cork till a more season calme appeare & the storme cease & the sun of Righteousness give a benevolent ray & wholly disperse it self & all malitious importunes & then will all appear in a joyfull safety & blessed hopes of happy determinations
I must needs tell you S^r that your interest hath the most & first Right & will surely hould the same from the Duke of Lorn by Reason it is to be understood that the obligations must first be paid And herein they may be both strangely perswaded into great Mistakes by strong flatteries & other many fould delusions by several invasions & Tyranous villaines who like Hythonds will seeke to hunt the very truth it self to slaton & distruction if possible that Nothing should hinder them like Pauorons wolues to tare & rend all in Pces theft and ye intentions of shute as fitt for distruction

But through diuine grace wch is fortitude enough to defend ye innocent tho' roaring Lions shall misse theire aime & Loose their pray Notwithstanding ye rigorous fury of their vphoulders & wastfull strok-rule & now will shee forth & declare vnto you that if ye Duches should claime ye same as doubtles some spirituall freinds of will appear animated on by nothing but mere & my & ignorants as knowing nothing of differences betwen will Mr Elizabeth Browne be partly intruded to looke to some for her owne intrest & preservation of right, whom to me what I haue said to pase And verily S^r I am in great hopes that you maist be vpon ye purchasing I feare your selfe & so beat them all out now S^r take notice & be vare full of wright I shall aduise thee if I find it will be to litle purpose for you to make addresse vnto your patronesse But I tell the what thou art some persons wch should be valued to ye law wch either hate or may haue her ear And alls may distorte her & wch soeuer may be intrusted by her vnto wom you may addresse your selfe by first Contracting in a friendly bote ye good & euill effects of all such conferres & ye good or euill Consequences ye may insue, & ye Meane of prosecuting her intrest or ye distruction therof & for her to take some Card therein & then will she be willing to consult with you being so animated to looke to ye safety of her intrest for this I Certainly Assure you if both two gentlewomen should fall at variance & thereby walke into trubles by your laws or other diffentions they will bote surely Indaed & ye reputation of the worke down almost lost Although ye Eminence thereof gits nothing by it verily S^r this matter requireth a litle deplority in your addresse

Dauid pag not dobt

S^r I tell you a greater nor more trued Christian oppression or opprobrium in my part of true freinds is hardly to be found & therefore your bused in it & through grace in ye Highest you will find good effects therof wch you may pursue at your distression first you are vnder no limitt of time

May 26: 1687: this day: 2: after &c—

There appeared a dilitate lordly looked man & son in a purple vestment mixt with gold & ribbon hung
And looking very verry pleasantly
My freinds for so I shall call you although as yet you know me not by Name or I am willed into good freinds of yours that haue bin & are & will be to ye glory of ye highest & I trust into your Comforts & benifits
I am also of Gilys filious by name Phariel & stand in place of absent Lordy to serue & by order & profound charge giuen by ye seruants of the highest in their addresses & to you in particular as profound head in place & attending Celestiall grace for a support into your hopes vnder doubtfull & dispairing difficulties, & not only sufficeth that I haue heard partly of your distressed giue me leue more fully to consult vpon reasonable answere for you & will tell you S^r god to Comfort first & then to Mr Browne verily S^r I will tell you although it is not for me to iustify an euill person nor yet ill action of any person yet not withstanding those things must be adiudged at reasonable tomes duty doe not discharg him but giue him to ye worke & encrease him faire

The Lordes will not stirr
Ay marry S^r if you take of witnesse there is enough of ye worke doe to make a fair parting with him

Consuming fem ydo I haue seene it & in my dayes many ill Roms it is considering her ill flesh he hath bin nourished it must be well looked & vpon —————— god on with your Calls finished & dar nothing.

May 30: 1687: on mondays instead of Conquer, made us & our words faill & by y^r^ meanes vtterly distroy the future prosperity & good Iustice here of in stead of y^r^ fine fortunes I say it is credibly reported by good information

June 3: 1687: Iornary friday prof

There is a fine like body on ye ston & some lying in it And in the ston is Glory
And in the fallid flash Rogall on ye North side is Michael and on the South side is Uriel And Mithael is in Rogall formd Crowned And a Golding Key in its hand
And Uriell is in a High Dutch Rabbit with a golden Rod in its hand & out of the top of it flames of fire out like a Candle of Torth
And we suppose the Goodmour of Stylish is in the fine like body under the ston And Methratton is before in ye ston with the Cidure in its hands
And Methratton looks on Mithael then on Uriel & points with its Cidure to me & looks on me with Graue Countenance & Body Michael & Uriel and in the ston beyond Methratton is in Great Glory Dagall & before Dagall is Anall & Galuah & before the ston is Nogall as we suppose —— & in the two hollow Vessels is Iuramiah in one & Samariel in the other and Numbers of Fortunes with them of divers formes And by fortune before the ston said Ego sum Nogall and Nogall hath a witch wand like dying in its hand & with a bright pearle at the end of it & it looks steadfully on me & Body all the while shew And Nogall said The Glory of Appearance in action surpasses Terrestrial Enformation as it is a peculiar Gift of Great Ones you heard for no Words mouth until Monday 7 or 8 in the Morn until then you may Cease ——

June 6: 1687: Monday

There appeard a light in all the Room & vailed in And a fortune before the ston & it smiled & was sorry it had Lost Nogall & it went away and after a little time Phariel came in its place & it looked on us & smiled on us & hath fine Golden hairs Braided, and it bowed to us & Looked very pleasently on us And it said
The appearance in action on ye last day of ye Convention hath signally showed forth the mercies of your God in his Paternall grace & favor towards you,
There appeared the Goodmour of Light & its disposition to give ouer & forgetting of the Great Mobrider & Ope Motion all King and Lord was Michael & Uriel to give power
And Light to R. O, and Jurramiah had with it the Knowledge
And Samariel the Glyphs, were willed subserted to Obedience Now then let us to our purpose in hand, to end, You are highly commended for addressing your selfs to Combell with what you had occasion for its assistance And showing forth the state & Condition of your Confusions, verily it was well done of you & now you may use your owne discretion in your steps future intentions seeing only to mourn God not on any material Etherevill, not to Feaste with any body to morrow but any day else

I tell you y^r^ Lordships will seem to be animated on by some very Ignorant fooles as hath bin already showed forth unto it will surely Create forth into folly tending to make some fraction or dessorent in ẏe Claime but it will turne to nothing, for ẏe Duthess will take Norice of ẏe Learned

And when she will be giuen to vnderstande ẏe difficulties
Attending her Claime & Properly here she will vnderstand
And arguids but yet some disturbance will hardly rest there for some other foliish Attorys will seeme strangly to Strike from imbrowne principles striuing to make mutch mise vnderstending And through many Mistakes Strive this will strike & in ẏe midst of ẏe storme all Malitious Batteries & Attorys will dissolue & dash of & vtterly nothing
& so ẏe world stand in a perpetuate Unity & Peace & settling Properity. You need not be further Confounded at this

1687 June 13th Monday

There appeared Phariel before ẏ ston & in ẏe ston is Michael & Uriel & they are a speaking to several persons in ẏe ston & over ẏe ston is a fine like body looking of a Ruby Redness; And Phariel doth looke very pleasantly on us and hath something in each hand & that it looks on like bottle stone & it strikes them together & they strike fire

And it looked on me as if it would be attempted great vanity or at least a great oversight for us to declare or dispute of the infernall Machinations & other malitious suggestions & most wicked Conspiracies dayly & hourly fomented & acted upon y Earth Amongst ye Children of men but only to Comfort you Sirs for with a satisfaction unto your disturbed Spirits Enjoyning you then unto us, unto wch we may also Continue without sensible Error any sacred word of the highest hath it and hath declared it, that thus great & Cruell Enquiries may be permissively prohibited & acted by wicked persons — but upon wch followeth we be to them from whom they come And are demonstrated Certainly it were better Truth had never bin borne then live to suffer ye Reward of it's — witnesses for it is to be observed that if all things must return ye returne from whence they came then pray judge you ye Rationall Construction hereof & of those dire full effects wch returneth upon ye heads of those from whence these materiall Enquiries most perfidiously shall proceed wch undoubtedly you may live to find & see verified, Object on the Contrary how great is ye Reward of truth in its hoped fruit & Obedience be not rendered troubled nor so much disquieted in spirits minds, at hearing or threatned dangers or Malitious Contro= =versies for they will returne from whence they came wch make shame enough to ye Conspirators & promoters hereof, And so dissolved, Then will victory triumphantly stand in a Glorious & firme stability before ye servants of the highest & continue in their Defence against all worldly assasinations stirred up by any infernall motive whatsoever

Mand attending on them 4 &c — in the folded glass Tongue y
South side is ye Like them with Samariel — —
And Ath looked on me & smiled And said

The Righteous shall be justified & victoriously defended not= =withstanding the desperate & difficulties accompanying all infernall malice, And shall triumphantly rejoyce in happy delivrance Blessed are ye then in your fruite Obedience Patience & Perse= =verance the Superlative vertues supporting ye hope & hopefull enjoyment of the Mozodi & Elect through divine grace into eternity, This day Sirs is appointment of Action ye wch manifested it selfe in Glorious Appearance, the effects whereof will be accordingly Enjoyed thion I will tell you 8th this day in the Action he does it is of Advice to you, wch I am willed to show forth for it is of great consequence, Understand me then I on thursday or 23 instant you shall mett at this Mystery in the morning at 7 a clock & make Earnest prayer & supplication unto your God for grace & mercy to dignify you with light & happy fruits in all your future proceedings, for the same shall be a day of humiliation or of humble thanks unto your God as before I said Eating Nothing I hate lost life until 6 in the After noon the offertory of that day shall be only two Angels Crowned the wch touches not the offertory of this day for the 27th day is a day of Preparation as well as mutuall oblation as hereby is injoyned preceeding the next day of action wch is dies Ternarius Magnus And indeed as I may say likely to be the greatest day of action that hath preceeded it being on the 7th day stay an hower in all from 7 to eight & then withdraw But be very Circumspect in your doings I day that you offend not, nor are tempted to any offence until after six of the clock

Now I observe with fear & Restraint unto Supreme Power on the 8th day you shall meet at this Mystery by 8 in the morning for as it is the greatest day we trust of mercy unto you as may succeed the Glorious & happy Events thereof & by reason it may be that many future Expressions in extraordinary offertories may be mitigated & the burden thereof called & very Reasonable offertories for the future injoyned as in showed forth already wch in I day I trow will be settled to your good liking now upon although it hath been said that Ternarius will Crave after the Oppiration of this present Ternarius Magnus of wch I should not fear at this present that is partly referred to the Election of that day

I am Commanded to show forth unto you what you are to observe & to do on that great day, the offertory of the Action singly only as dies Ternarius, the wch stands singly & off it selfe but then considering the magnitude & greatness of the day & time as it must of necessity be, if with us, then consequently also with you that single offertory of the Ternary must be bribled & preformed at the foot of this holy stone wch I trow will be a period to all extraordinaries & an entrance into a future & happy Estate both as to your Selves and the benefit of our Nation here in for the word your Enimies hateth you the more & greater will Celestiall love & grace be with you; let not Hereford dismaid I you shall have not trouble from any other wise exposing but you shall enjoy all your desires

I have now showed forth & declared what I was commanded desiring you in Gods name to observe & take heed unto it by reason it nearly concerneth you wherein the most high God graciously endow you with happy & heavenly fruits to his Glory & his great name & the Comfort of a lasting peace unto you

There appeared in the ston Mithaell & Uriel before them is Zaluah & before the ston is Madimiel there in the hollow Roopts two like humaine syorteus and there is two in Angelicall forme with them great number of syorteums seemingly to attend them
And the Angellicall syorteum next me is Semmiell & that of the other side is Saffaliah but what the are as yet we know not if the most high God lookth downd upon y Earth & visiteth his servants with many sharpe triales let them not therefo Conclude or fear must loss concluded y gods hath forsaken them or deserted them in the midst of Adversity — least shuch blasfomy should greatly offend & obstruct mercy when Elisha disdained & complained unto Elias, when he beheld the Enimies of Gods Chosen people were much mo numerous then they whereby in humaine imagination the lesser number must be overcome & distroyed by the greater wherefor holy Elias lifted up his spirit unto heaven and prayed that God would be pleased to open the eies of Elisha see as he might see & beholde the salvation of his god & when he had blessed him the Elisha looked up & beheld themselves & their people Environed with Legions of Angels, who then with great Zeale glorified God & beheld the distruction of his enimies what then is impossible to the great god, who is it then that offereth to dispaire of his and be guiltless of manifest offence therefore forward for Deliverance cometh in a moment unto all his servants the Meedi, who may be under the trials of tribulation & oppressed in Spirit by thy journying walkation, helas a much bubill[153] a sore fasting[154] as rising you two shall commaden hard at 8 a Clock the 2 day in the morning come hither to this mistery & say the first part of your prayers to God, and then god to the other & pray to God that he would dignify us with sight to see those sublunar Elementall Powers & have the benifit of witness in those operations keepe your duties to your god you love to his servants and obay the Comands injoyned you, and ye also shall behould the salvation of your God which we humbly beseech him for his owne Glory who only is to be worshipped in the unity of the blessed trinity Amen

August: 17 : 1688: 161

It is true the Earth appeareth variously in her customary & seasonall seasons but the Glory of Celestiall wherby the Divine power & Grace of the highest alwaies continueth in Glory as the verdure of the pleasant spring and florishith as the beauty of the Summer & Florishith as the pleantifull fruitfulness of the harvest & fruitfull vintage for Nourrishment even so doth the great mercies of the highest extent to the comfort of his Darling Mercie who yet in the sowre & Depth of Sorrowfull winter yet florrishith as well in the Antartick as the Artick sun mounting his Dilinations to the Perpendicular of terrestriall Greate Behould upon the glorious Image of that sunshine issuing from the light of Celestiall Grace giveing yet more splendor to dispearing hopes even as by the stormy pressures of Contrary formes even as boystrous weather toucheth the Goodly Graine & grass with the Earth, but then as the Comfortable Rayes of sweet sunshine shall breake forth & give a Comfortable heate thereunto the Passive Plants drinke & standeth upright fit for the sithe & sickle of the Painfull husbandman to the joy & happiness of the farmer whose care is then freed by the happy Delinerance of his Dispairing hopes from the fear of a future Dearth and scarcity and by that means drawes to great wonn & gaine by the totall losse of his former Labors, it is evident then that if the mercy of the highest shall appear even in the most desperate & unexpected season when yet in humane imagination wee noe hopes of future can be in thought diformed then, then even then, doth the Glory of Celestiall Grace appear as a rising sun in the fashions of the pleasant you entertainment and so perhaps I bring you safe friendly at the Cape of Good hope I am well informed of you Sr you are also Charged still to persuere & work on in that your elaborat operation the benifit wherof of his true & faithfull servants vnto to Admiration & by such mediums as by Celestiall Grace thereunto assisting as by the predominate Decrees of the highest hath from the begin ing of time bin Constituted & appointed & accordingly by office & place given Lords & given vnto man his knowledg use & benifit hereof observe you then yt

August 21: 1688.

there appeared Carias his mitre Blossomed on it some some white like sylver some yallow like Gould and some red as a Ruby, The scottia in his son is Gabriah & it turned to the East & it said so let thy enimies of God florish as y most beautifull Celestirian Borders of the pleasant and glorious spring that the blessed fruites of true faith may also bring forth increase & blessed issue to the effect & fulfilling hopes, and Comfortable Promises, of all Terrestiall felicity known & thy servants Rejoyce & thereunto be ever blessed to thyne owne Glory and the benifit of thy servants who have long time wintered a sorrowfull pilgrimage &c Amen Stay awhile mine not then thereto Madimiel you one thing, but verily the price of it may not in this same place or I had brought the same and also I

I was commanded in charge of two Allies in the hierarchy of Potestats, commanded to be assistants of my Brethren who also have been named in present affair only 162
I had allotted the knowledg of this glasse unto you but I will tell you, take about ½ a spoonfull or as much as will doe the business and annoynt the Crowne of thy brow and cast it in & the temples & chase it in and the mould of the head bring your finger into it & put a little up the Nostrills or put a drop or two into your hand and rub the other upon it & hould it to the Nostrill & snuff up the scent of it mine not from place & talked and there time live in worlds hubbit, there names are Potestia, the other is fortitia those names are according to the Carge and Madimiel called again And there appeared Sattaliah & Samariel and they embrace and kiss one in other and they are in discorse with one and other so dearly Beloved and blessed in the highest prepare to Charge by office Command you and unto place as the occasion requireth let not terrestiall obstinacy think with stand the Power above them &c and they went away & Madimiel said we trust in the highest Sr that an Happy Catastrofe, attends this present Revolution remaining on the 25 day instant, so that the 25, 26 & 27th are all 3 dayes of Joy unto you, and we hand 3 dayes heretoo it is possible there may be some Conflict or turbulent Appearance in Action of your terrestiall actions the two next insuing dayes but on the 3d my may liberalise with your Animall Spirits & Corporall Senses may be also exalted & blessed with all temporall happiness which the most high God of abundant mercies transmite & give unto you for his owne sake that is gracio =us and mercifull Amen Halalujah

August: 24: 1688:

The Appeared Gabriah and Midimi with many more rome on Sr, be thoughtfull and let your Animall Spirits be raysed up and elevated above thought of dispaire, your God hath not forsaken you neither will he suffer his Ser vants to fall into desperate Extremities and Especially the mercies of Celestiall as you have of dayes of Jubile now entring, perfume the Roome of frankincense & Rosemary before you forgit not to implore the highest in the morning to be blessed you the first thing and Call on Uriell one Sunday morne & perfume the Roome

You are not left alone nor shall be for y Celestiall Lad & friendship dwelleth with you and you are blessed in your

August 28: 1688: 163

There appeared A lovely Bower made of a tree full of Leaves and fruite and in Imperiall majesty sitting therein in a great light, and many small spirits at play under it

And Madimiah appeared in a silver Cloud & sayd to you have done very well Sr in observing & fulfilling y comands in Charge imposed you the 3 last by yonder dayes the white indeed is not only Considerable unto you but also commendable as to the performance of that duty which through Comandes you by us as the Servants of y
Supreme God with you though Deffarent only in Immortability Celestiall mediums of divine light of whose will & plea sure we are only Administrators for my Mother saith well unto you when she declared the cause the end of our of our happiness, the office of my Mother is the finishing the will of the most high Donator & distributing the gifts that goe forth unto us her inderard Children as we are administrators & so attordingly to be administred, it is not therefore that any may dare to say that the Superior Powers of Celestiall Angells or any others, that we should be supposed to prey into the Secret will & unsearchable wisdom of the Great & most high donor of grate & mercy in the dispensation of his Paternall bounty & extended Benifits unto his Servants therefore the office of my Mother is not to put a period but to fulfill the Charge there of not cut cutting but truly communicating the benifits by virtue issuing forth descending & omitted unto her therefore say not she is the end of any happiness to the Servants of God, for as she is a beame of that wisdom which is the end of mans Espetially so she is a Ray or light also of y Grate which giveth the Comforts of mans felicity in verity Sr you disturbed me with dispaire - the which notwithstanding we know the Secret will oft the highest in his imbrue able dispensations, yet we may give the hopes of that Comfort into his servants as by the light of his Grate shineth forth & emitteth into our understanding that it is truly [illegible] man is like to Angells in Standerstanding and Angells like to God in Immortall ity. Sr you have your Commands what observe in the persuance and perforate and in ye operations, and Murmur not but persist herein with like vigor & Courage as will obtaine the victory & support by animall spirits as you may that your Corporall Senses also may thereby be rendred able to withstand any Suddaine Extraordinall rushing hastily or fortely upon you whilst though nothing can harme you by Reason of that Power that supports you, yet Suddaine or turbulent Affects may Chansly daunte or dismay you

August: 31: 1688

there appeared Gabriah in the ston in Great Glory & very pleasant and looked wilfully on me: and there appeared two before the ston like young men or youths about 20 or yeared of age; and are in Consorte with Gabriah their names are Celestiae Fortifia mond not from

(and it smiled) and verily I as yet know it not but I will goe a little aside into the Nore North East and behould the prospect of the west stay a while mond not & Madonia turned again & said verily Sr Imprudent obstinacy Resists medial Powers though Superior it being the Natural of Terrestiall Evills to withstand Celestiall Goodness but with tion it hardly not withstands for Reason smiles at shall folly leib indeed Earthly disturbants and Causeth great conflict producing much trouble in their inferiour operations of terrestiall Contentments there by shewing forth much difficulty & despaire in your proceedings and perseverants to the depression of your health by unstable Imagination converting the Animall thoughts into many various & disparing Comport unto the humaine frailty of men being under bound thereby whose frailty beholds hope & fear may stager but not stumble if he looketh upwards, but verily I commend thee Sr and may Call the Champion of Magnitall Resolution in this thy, persistance without intermission, or selfe preservation, by thought of Ceasing or desisting here from by Reason of your insistant & Elaborate progression, but desist not, & persevere

Sept 4: 1688.

Madonia why truly Sr knowen hardly not you but Ellementary and Subterranean Parts inhabited by Polapto Powers but you are assisted in dealing with these Spiri in the dominion & place of your habitt hath the like Mastery with you, in the sense & Power, of Imitation nor endowed with a more commendable Resolution of Relation to & Perseverance having triumphant and Powerfull consti taining method wherein persist as as can finde in truth it rejoyceth me that I know well of you and to find you so true & lively in your faith & so firmly strong in your hopes and I worketh against disparing that I worthy Assure you that it will purchase great mercy unto you & contract the Inestimable benifits of Christ and Rayment after so many trialls of Satanicus warfares by Infernall troubles & vexations so often assaling & surprising you with desperate fears & folacies but yet be comforted & keep close unto your God in Prayer and all dutifull obedience and he will surely close you and Crowne your actions with eternall joy both here and hereafter in light and Prosperity of his owne Glory unto wch we also humbly beseech him, and it said, how doe you Sr I speake thus unto you only as it an Accustomary Greeting amongst you, which I need not other since I well know how you doe & also how it is with you but the storehouse of divine graces Celestial Loves, where mercy is intended still remainth undiminished & You think Sr that you have with stood a great Assalt by violent rushing in upon you with perils might have surprised your Animall Spirits And bodily senses with a suddenne Astonishment by it selfe had not superior power ouer ruled but thanked be the highest for his unfadeable mercies to all his Servan which is the reason of that obstinacy and unwillingness to a ready Compliance, but cease not, persevere &

Rumors of wars & dire attacions Chiefly by the subtil & Crafty solutions & many subtil inventions of contrary Powers to the Practise of Government established by your National Laws to Create things that are not

Liber Genesis & Sanctus Sextus

This writing beginning (not at Arnay Vahetu but) at Oxar Parmoseth is the 2d Page of the first Leaf of the famous Book shown in the Sketch, wch consists of 49. lines or Rows. Every Row of 49. words or Letters. The first 40. of this Page have a word in every little Square. wch could not well be contained in the little Cells of a Square Table in this Book — Therefore they are writ thus at large as you see.

But the 9. last Rows of this Page had but one Letter a piece, & are accordingly set down at the end hereof — pag. 5.

All the other Leaves of that Book had but a single Letter in each little Square. & so they are set down, as hereafter follows in this Book — Vide l. 5. ms. pag. 142-143. &c.

The first Page of that first Leaf (not (as ~~they ought~~ it ought to be) transcribed here before this 2d Page. save only the 49. or last Row beginning (Arnay Vahetu) But they may be seen (if thought fit) copied out thence) in Lto ms. p. 150. 151. &c.

PREFACE.

WHAT is here presented unto thee (Christian Reader) being a True and Faithful Relation, &c. (as the Title beareth, and will be further cleared by this Preface) though by the carriage of it, in some respects, and by the Nature of it too, it might be deemed and termed, A Work of Darkness: Yet it is no other then what with great tenderness and circumspection, was tendered to men of highest Dignity in Europe, Kings and Princes, and by all (England excepted) listned unto for a while with good respect. By some gladly embraced and entertained for a long time; the Fame whereof being carryed unto Rome, it made the Pope to bestir himself, not knowing what the event of it might be, and how much it might concern him. And indeed, filled all men, Learned and Unlearned in most places with great wonder and astonishment: all which things will be shewed and made good (to the utmost of what we have said) in the Contents of this book, by unquestionable Records and evidences. And therefore I make no question but there will be men enough found in the world whose curiosity will lead them to Read what I think is not to be paralleil'd in that Kind by any book that hath been set out in any Age to read: I say, though it be to no other end then to satisfie their curiosity. But whatsoever other men, according to their several inclinations, may propose to themselves in the reading of it, yet I may and must here professe in the first place, in Truth and Sincerity, that the end that I propose to my self (so far as I have contributed to the Publishing of the Work) is not to satisfie curiosity, but to do good, and promote Religion. When we were first acquainted with the Book, and were offered the reading of it, having but lately been conversant in a Subject of much Affinity; to wit, of Mistaken Inspiration and Possession, through ignorance of Natural causes (which labour of ours, as it was our aime at the first in publishing of it, to do good, so we have had good reason since to believe, that we did not altogether misse of what we aimed at) we could not but gladly accept of it. And as we gladly accepted, so we read unto the end with equal eagerness and Alacrity: Which when we had done, truly it was our Opinion, That the Publishing of it could not but be very Seasonable and Useful, as against Atheists at all times, so in these Times especially, when the Spirit of Error and Illusion, not in profest Anabaptists only, even of the worst kind that former Ages have known and abhorred, doth so much prevail, but in many also, who though they disclaim and detest openly (and heartily too, I hope, most of them) the fruits and effects that such causes have produced in others, yet ground themselves nevertheless upon the same principles of Supposed Inspiration and immaginary Revelations; and upon that account deem themselves, if not the Only, yet much better Christians then others. And I was much Confirmed in this Judgment when I was told (as indeed I was, at the first, by them that knew very well) that the Most Reverend, Pious and Learned Archbishop of Armagh, lately deceaſed, upon reading of the ſaid book, before his death, had declared himſelf to the ſame purpoſe, and wiſhed it Printed. But becauſe it is very poſſible, that every Reader will not at the firſt be ſo well able of himſelf to make that good uſe by good and Rational Inferences and Obſervations of this ſad Story as is aimed at, my chiefeſt aim in this Preface is to help ſuch. And becauſe it is not leſſe probable that this Licentious Age will afford very many, who with the Saduces of old (that is, Jewiſh Epicures) believe no Spirit, or Angel, or Reſurrection; who therefore being prepoſſeſſed with prejudice when they hear of ſo many Spirits as are here mentioned, and ſo many ſtrange Apparitions, in ſeveral Kinds, will not only fling back themſelves, but will be ready to laugh at any other that give any credit to ſuch things. Although I will not take upon me to convert any by Reaſon that are engaged into ſuch an opinion by a wicked life; that is, Unjuſt practiſes, Luxurious lewd courſes, open profaneneſſe, under the name of Wit and Galantry, and the like, becauſe, I think, it is very juſt with God to leave ſuch to the error and blindneſſe of their Judgments; ſo that without a Miracle there can be little hopes of ſuch. Yet I ſhall hope that ſuch as are Rational men, ſober in their Lives and Converſations, ſuch as I have known my ſelf; yea, men of excellent parts in other things, men that are both willing to hear and able to conſider: that ſuch, I ſay, may receive ſome ſatisfaction by what I ſhall ſay and propoſe to their Ingenuous conſideration in this matter. Were we to argue the caſe by Scripture, the buſineſſe would ſoon be at an end; there being no one Controverted point among men, that I know of, that can receive a more Ample, Full, Clear and ſpeedy determination, then this buſineſs of Spirits, and Witches, and Apparitions may, if the Word of God might be Judge. But I will ſuppoſe that I have to do with ſuch, who though they do not altogether deny the Word of God, yet will not eaſily, however, admit of any thing that they think contrary to Reaſon, or at leaſt not to be maintained by Reaſon. I ſhall therefore forbear all Scripture Proofs and Teſtimonies in this particular, and deſire the Chriſtian Reader (who otherwiſe might juſtly take offence) to take notice upon what ground it is that I forbear.

But though I will not uſe any Scripture for proof, yet by way of Application I hope I may be allowed to uſe ſome Scripture words, which may direct us perchance to a good Method in the examination of this buſineſſe. The Apoſtle ſaith in a place, φάσκοντες εἶναι σοφοὶ, ἐμωράνθησαν: (profeſſing themſelves to be wiſe, they became fools) I ſhall not enquire of whom, and upon what occaſion it was ſpoken: I draw no argument from it; only becauſe there is a ſhew of great Wiſdom in this Opinion; and yet, as I conceive, as much of Error and falſhood (that is, Folly, as the word is often uſed) as in any other falſe opinion that is leſſe popular. I will frame my diſcourſe to this iſſue, firſt, to enquire what it is that makes it ſo popular and plauſible, among them eſpecially that pretend to more then ordinary Wiſdom; and then ſecondly, lay it open (as I am able) to the view in its right colours, that the Folly or falſhood of it may be diſcernable even to ordinary judgments.

Firſt then, (as for them that deny Spirits, &c.) we ſay, The world is full of impoſture; to know this, to obſerve it in all Trades, in all Profeſſions, in all ranks and degrees of men, is to know the world, and that is to be wiſe. Though we call them Juglers, yet they deſerve to be thought the plaineſt dealing men of the world that ſhew their tricks openly in the ſtreets for money; for they profeſſe what they are. They are the trueſt Juglers that do their feats (and they for mo-ny too, moſt of them) under the Veil and Reputation of Holineſſe, Sanctity, (or, Saintſhip) Religion, Virtue, Juſtice, Friendſhip; fine words to catch men that are of eaſie Belief, and thinks that every thing that gliſters muſt needs be gold. Hence it is, that men that have had the Reputation of Wiſe men in the world, have commended this unto us as greateſt Wiſdom, NOT EASILY TO BELIEVE: Νῆφε, καὶ μέμνησο ἀπιστεῖν· ἄριστα ταῦτα τῶν φρενῶν. Epicharmus got more credit for this one ſaying (and hath done more good too, perchance) then many that have been the Authors of vaſt Volumes. Now if thoſe things that are expoſed to ſenſe, the proper Objects of our Eyes and Eares, be lyable to ſo much Impoſture and Deceit, that the wiſeſt can ſcarce know what to believe: How much more caution do we need in thoſe things that are ſo much above Senſe, and in ſome reſpects contrary to Senſe (and that is Spirits) that we be not deceived? If we conſider the Nature of man, his Bodily frame, the Affections of his ſoul, the Faculties of his mind, we ſhall have no occaſion at all to wonder if moſt men are apt to believe and to be cheated. But as no cauſe to wonder, ſo as little cauſe to imitate: Felix qui rerum potuit cognoſcere cauſas! τερατολογία, a deſire of, or to ſtrange things that may cauſe amazement, is the proper affection of the vulgar, that is, of moſt men, which they bring into the world with them, (it is the obſervation of the wiſeſt of men that have written concerning the affairs and actions of men) and cannot be rid of but by wiſdom, which is the happineſſe of few: Errandi, non neceſsitas tantum, ſed amor. Seneca ſomewhere ſpeaking of the Nature of Man; There was a time when the world was much governed by Oracles; private men went unto them as unto God, Kings and Princes ſent unto them to be adviſed about greateſt matters: and ſo much faith was aſcribed unto them, generally, that the very word became a Proverb appliable unto thoſe things, whereof no queſtion can be made. Yet thoſe very ancient Heathens, that tell us of theſe Oracles, tell us of their vanity; and though they ſay not, That all were falſe and counterfeit, yet whileſt they acknowledg it of ſome, they give us juſt occaſion to ſuſpect that it might have been found as true of the reſt alſo, had like care been taken to examine the truth of them alſo.

Again, there was a time (and that time not many hundred years yet paſt) when Miracles were the only diſcourſe and delight of men: Ghoſts and Spirits were in every houſe; and ſo prone were men to receive what was delivered unto them in that kind, that Miracle-makers were much put to it, not to make their ſtories probable, (for that was not ſtood upon) but to make them wonderful enough; inſomuch that ſome have been forced to complain publickly of the credulity of the people, who yet themſelves tell us much more, I dare ſay, then was ever true. As of Miracles, ſo of Exorciſmes: How many Divels and Spirits have been driven out of men and women, ſuppoſed to be poſſeſſed, by ſolemn Exorciſmes, to the great wonder of the beholders, which afterwards upon further ſearch and examination, have been convicted to have been nothing but the artifices and ſubtil contrivances of men? Sentences and Judgments have paſſed upon ſuch cheats when they have been diſcovered in moſt places of Europe, which have been publiſhed. But they have done ſtrange things though (ſome that were thought poſſeſſed) and things impoſſible, to ordinary ſenſe, to be done by Nature. It is very true, ſome have: But they that know what ſtrange things may be done to the amazement of all not acquainted with ſuch myſteries, by long Uſe and Cuſtome, they will not eaſily wonder (ſo as to make a ſupernatural thing of it) though they ſee things, which, to their ſight and of moſt, cannot but ſeem very wonderful, and almoſt impoſſible. As for the bodily temper of man and of his Brain, it hath been ſufficiently by ſome late books of that ſubject (Enthuſiaſme) both by reaſons from Nature, and by ſundry examples proved, that a very little diſtemper of the brain, ſcarce diſcernable unto any, but thoſe that are well verſed in the ſtudy of Natural cauſes, is enough to repreſent Spirits, Angels and Divels, Sights and Stories of Heaven and Hell to the Fancy: by which ſober kind of Madneſſe and deliration, ſo little underſtood vulgarly, many have been, and are daily deceived; and from theſe things, through the ignorance of men, ſtrange things ſometimes have enſued, and the peace of Common-weales hath ſuffered not a little.

Ariſtotle, in his Meteors, tells of one that alwayes ſaw (ſo he thought, at leaſt) another man's ſhape before his eyes, and how they happened unto him naturally, he gives a reaſon. Hyppocrates, Περὶ παθῶν, (a very ſhort Diſcourſe, but full of excellent matter) ſheweth how ſome, both men and women, through Natural cauſes, come to fancy to themſelves that they ſee δαίμονας. Divels and Spirits, and to be tormented in their Souls, even to the making away of themſelves by their own hands. The Author of the book, De Morbo Sacro, (very ancient too, but not right Hyppocrates, as many are of opinion) hath excellent matter too, to the ſame purpoſe; but I have not the book at this time by me. Hyppocrates, (where before) ſheweth how many in that caſe were gulled by the Prieſts of thoſe times, making them believe, That this happened to them through the anger of ſome god. "They that are verſt in the Opticks know, That there is a "way, through the help of glaſſes that ſhall not be ſeen, to make moving ſha-"dows that ſhall appear like Ghoſts, to the great terror of the ignorant behold-"er: and it is ſaid, That pretended Aſtrologers and Fortune-tellers cheat many "by thoſe ſights. It is the opinion of ſome Jewiſh Rabbins, That what Ghoſts or Souls are raiſed by Necromancy, they alwayes appear inverſo corpore, that is, their head dowards and feet upwards. Though nothing is to be wondered at in Rabbins, who (commonly) are as full of ridiculous conceits as ever came into the head of any Bedlam: Yet my opinion is, "That the firſt ground of "this wild conceit was, ſome appearance by the Species of an object, gathered "through a little glaſſe into a dark room. For ſo indeed the objects muſt ap-"pear inverſo corpore if it be done in a high room, and the objects from whence "the Spiecies are gathered be lower then the glaſſe through which they paſſe. And the reaſon of it is very Demonſtrable to the ſight of any reaſonable man. Certainly, by this ſecret (which yet is no great ſecret, being commonly ſeen and practiſed among them that are any thing curious) ſtrange things may be done by a Cunning-man, to their great amazement that know not the cauſe. There would be no end if I ſhould attempt to gather from ſeveral Authors what hath been invented by men, and what may be done by Art to cheat men in matters of this nature. Let any man, that is yet a ſtranger to it, but read the life of Alexander the falſe Prophet, or Prognoſticator, written by Lucian, and he ſhall ſee notable examples of ſucceſſeful Cheats and Impoſtures, ſcarce credible indeed, but that the thing was yet then freſh and famous, and that all circumſtances of History confirm the truth of the relation. And let him that reads it judge, what dull and dry fellows the Mountebank-Astrologers, Prognosticators and Fortune-tellers of these dayes are, to this Noble, Renowned Alexander. Only let him know that reads, that Lucian was a profest Atheist, and therefore no wonder if he find Epicurus spoken of with great respect, whom all Atheists, and Atheistically inclined are so much obliged to honour. This accepted, I think, the Story is very worthy to be known, and much more worthy to be read by all men (considering the good use that may be made of it) then many books that are daily translated out of other languages.

Hiſto-

But lastly, If there were any such thing, really as Divels and Spirits that use to appear unto men; to whom should they (probably) sooner appear, then to such as daily call upon them, and devote their Souls and Bodies unto them by dreadful Oaths and Imprecations? And again, then to such, who through damnable curiosity have many times used the means (the best they could find in books, by Magical Circles, Characters and Invocations) and yet never, neither the one nor the other saw any thing?

I have said as much as I mean to say (though somewhat perchance might be added) to shew the plausibleness of the opinion, in opposition to vulgar apprehensions and capacities, whereby (as I conceive, for I have not wittingly omitted any thing that I thought material) it chiefly intitles it self to wisdom, and more then ordinary prudence, which all men generally are ambitious of. Yet I would not have it thought that all men that hold this conclusion, That there be no Spirits, &c. go so rationally to work, or can give this account or any other more rational and plausible for what they hold. God knows there be many in the world, men of no learning, and mean capacities, who can speak as peremptorily as the best, not because they have considered of it, and understand the grounds of either opinion, but because they know, or have heard it is the opinion of some Learned, and they hope they shall be thought learned too if they hold with them. Besides an ordinary (for some have been learned) Epicurean, who makes it his Motto (to himself and in his heart) Ἐν τῷ μηδὲν εἰδέναι, ἥδιστος βίος: and seeks his ease in this world (ἀπαραξίαν, their own word, which imports Tranquility both of mind and body; a good word but ill applyed) as his summum bonum, or chiefest happiness: It is a great ease to him when any strange things doth happen by Witches, Wizards and the like; and other some to satisfie their faith, others their reason and curiosity, are put to it to enquire of men by conference, and to search into books ancient and late, Sacred and Profane, and all little enough. A great ease, I say, for him, then, and upon all such occasions, to possesse his Soul in secure ignorance, and to save his credit (yea, and to gain credit with some) by barely saying, Fabula est, I do not believe it. We shall hear some of them by and by acknowledg, in effect, as much as I have said: I impose nothing upon them. I will not take upon me to judge of a book that I never read; I cannot say that I ever saw it. But because I have heard some men magnifie an English book written of this subject to prove that there be no Witches, I will impart unto the Reader that hath not observed it, the judgment of one of the Learnedst men that ever England saw (I wish he had been more gently dealt with when time was) of that book, whereby it may appear (if his judgment be right, as I am very inclinable to believe, becauſe of his great Learning, and wonted circumſpection in his cenſures) what great undertakers many men are upon very little ground, and how prone others to extol what doth favour their cauſe, though to the prejudice of their better judgments, if they would judge impartially. Dr. Rainolds in thoſe elaborate Prælectiones de libris Apocryphis, where he doth cenſure ſome opinions of Bodinus as prejudicial to the Chriſtian Faith. Reginaldus Scotus, noſtras, (ſaith he) qui contrariam Bodino inſanit inſaniam, ait Papiſtas confiteri, non poſſe Demonas ne audire quidem nomen Jehovæ. Acceperat ille à Bodino, & attribuit Papiſtis in genere, tanquam omnes Papiſtæ in eo conſpirarent. Pergit ipſe, & quoniam animadverterat quaſdam fæminas maleficas, aliquando iſtius modi narrationes ementiri, putavit omnia eſſe ficta; ex imperitia Dialecticæ, & aliarum bonarum artium: Ut qui nullo judicio, nullâ methodo, nullâ optimarum artium ſcientiâ, eodem modo aggreſſus ſit hanc rem, quomodo Poeta loquitur, ——— Tenet inſatiabile quoſdam Scribendi cacoëthes:

& eodem prorſus modo ratiocinatur, &c. We have been the more willing to produce this paſſage out of the writings of that Learned man, becauſe we alſo in our anſwers may have occaſion to ſay ſomewhat to the ſame purpoſe; not of that Author or his book, which he judgeth, any thing, but of the ground upon which he builded, which we ſhall find to be the ſame upon which others alſo, that deny Spirits have gone upon. But we will go Methodically to work, and take every thing in order, as we have propoſed in the objections.

Firſt, We ſaid, The world was full of Impoſture. It is granted, of Impoſtors and Impoſtures. But what then ſhall the concluſion be, That therefore there is no truth in the world, or at leaſt not to be attained unto by mortal man? Truly, many books of old have been written to that effect. Sextus Empiricus is yet extant, a very learned book it cannot be denied, and of excellent uſe for the underſtanding of ancient Authors, Phyloſophers eſpecially. I could name ſome Chriſtians alſo, by profeſſion, men of great learning that have gone very far that way. But this will not be granted by ſome I am ſure that are or have been thought great oppugners of the common opinion about Witches and Spirits; ſome Phyſicians I mean, and Naturaliſts by their profeſſion. But may not we argue as plauſibly againſt that which they profeſſe, as they have done or can do againſt Spirits and Apparitions? We would be loath to make ſo long a digreſſion; we have had occaſion elſewhere to ſay ſomewhat to this purpoſe: and they that will be ſo curious may ſee what hath been written by Cornel. Agrippa (who is very large upon this ſubject) about it, not to name any others. It is not yet a full twelve-moneth, that a friend of mine, a Gentleman of quality, brought his Lady to London (ſome 60 miles and upwards from his ordinary dwelling) to have the advice of Phyſicians about his wife (a very Virtuous and Religious Lady) troubled with a weak ſtomack and ill digeſtion, which cauſed grievous ſymptoms. I think he had the advice of no leſſe then a dozen firſt and laſt: I am ſure he named unto me five or ſix of the chiefeſt in Credit and practice that the Town affordeth. Not one of them did agree in their opinions, either concerning the Cauſe, or the means to be uſed for a Cure. So that the Gentleman went away more unſatisfied then he came. What he did I knovv not: I knovv vvhat ſome men vvould have inferred upon this. Yet I, for my part, for the benefit that I have received by it, and the effects that I have ſeen of it, it, both upon my self, and others in my life-time, upon several occasions (where learned Artists, not Empiricks have been employed) though all the world should be of another opinion, I think my self bound to honour, as the profession, so all Learned, Ingenious Professors of it: and I make no question but the worst of Agrippa's objections, by any man of competent judgment and experience, may easily be answered. I say therefore that as in other things of the world, so in matters of Spirits and Apparitions, though lyable to much error and imposture, yet it doth not follow but there may be reality of truth and certainty discernable unto them that will take the pains to search things unto the bottom, where truth commonly is to be found, and are naturally endowed with competent judgments to discern between specious arguments and solidity of truth.

But this proveth nothing. No: but the removing of this common objection may dispose the Reader, I hope, to consider of what we have to say with lesse prejudice. And that shall be our next task, what we have to say for Spirits, &c. before we come to particular Objections. Wherein nevertheless I will be no longer then I must at this time, because I shall have a more proper place in two several Tractates, the one whereof hath been a long time in loose notes and papers, not yet digested, to wit, my Second Part of Enthusiasme: the other, in my head yet wholly, but in better readinesse to be brought to light, because of later conception; to wit, A Discourse of Credulity and Incredulity, in things Natural, Civil and Divine, or Theological. We shall meet there with many cases not so necessary here to be spoken of, which will help very much to clear this business.

¶ But here I say, first of all, It is a Maxim of Aristotle's the great Oracle of Nature, which many have taken notice of, and applyed to their several purposes: Ὃ πᾶσι δοκεῖ, τοῦτο εἶναι φαμὲν, That which is generally believed, is most likely to be true. Who also in another place of the same book doth approve the saying of Hesiod, Φήμη δ' οὔτιγε πάμπαν ἀπόλλυται, ἥντινα λαοὶ Πολλοὶ φημίζωσι. Now if any opinion whereof question is made can justly pretend to a general assent and consent of all people, places, ages of the world, I think, nay, I know, and it will be proved that this of Witches, Spirits, and Apparitions may. I do not know scarce any ancient book extant of Philosopher or Historian (the Writings of professed Epicureans excepted, of Aristotle we shall give an account by and by) but doth afford some pregnant relation, testimony or passage to the confirmation of this truth. I dare say, should a man collect the relations and testimonies out of several Authors and books (that are come to our knowledge) within the compasse of two thousand years, of Authors well accounted of, generally, and whose testimonies (Historians especially) we receive in other things; a man might make a book of the biggest size and form that ordinary books (which we call Folioes) are. It is true, many Authors may write one thing which may prove false, as the famous history of the Phenix, perchance, or some such; but upon examination it will appear that those many take all from one or two at the most, who first delivered it. They add nothing in confirmation of their own knowledg or experience. But here it is quite otherwise; those many Authors that I speak of (Historians especially of several ages) they tell us different things that hapned in their own times, in divers places of the world: and of many of them we may ſay they were ſuch as knew little of former books, or ſtories of other Nations but their own. Within theſe 200 years the world, we know, by the benefit of Navigation hath been more open and known then before; yea, a great part of the world diſcovered that was not known before. I have read many books, the beſt I could meet with, in ſeveral Languages, of divers Voyages into all parts of the world: I have converſed with many Travellers, whom I judged ſober and diſcreet. I never read any book of that argument, nor yet met with man, that I have had the opportunity to confer with, but was able of his own knowledg to ſay ſomewhat whereby my belief of theſe things might be confirmed.

Now for the Epicureans (of all Philoſophers the moſt inconſiderable in matters of knowledg, as former ages have deſcribed them) no man need to wonder if they denyed thoſe things which by the ſolemn engagement of their Sect they were bound and reſolved, notwithſtanding any ſight or ſenſe, experience or evidence to the contrary, not to believe, at leaſt not to acknowledg. This doth clearly appear by one that may be believed (though I have met with it in more) in ſuch things. Lucian (himſelf a profeſt Epicurean Atheiſt) who doth commend Democritus, Epicurus and Metrodorus (the moſt famous of that Sect) for their ἀδαμαντίνην γνώμην, as he calls it, their fixed, irrevokeable, unconquerable reſolution, when they ſaw any ſtrange thing that by others vvas admired as miraculous, if they could find the cauſe or give a probable gueſſe, vvell and good, if not, yet not to depart from their firſt reſolution, and ſtill to believe and to maintain that it vvas falſe and impoſſible: It is a notable paſſage, andvvhich excellent uſe may be made of. I vvill therefore ſet dovvn his ovvn vvords for their ſake that underſtand the Language: —— ὥσε καὶ τὸ μηχάνημα (ſpeaking of ſome of Alexander the falſe Prophet his devices) ἐδέετο Δημοκρίτε τινος, ἢ καὶ αὐτῷ Επικούρου, ἢ Μητροδώρου, ἀδαμαντίνην πρὸς ταῦτα καὶ τὰ τοιαῦτα γνώμην ἔχοντος, ὡς ἀπιστῆσαι, καὶ ὁπωσοῦν ἦν εἰκάσαι καὶ εἰ μὴ ἐυρεῖν τὸν τρόπον ἐδύνατο, ἐκεῖνο γοῦν προπεπισμένος, ὅτι λέληθεν αὐτὸν ὁ τρόπος τῆς μαγγανείας: τὸ δ' οὖν πᾶν ψεῦδος ἐστι, καὶ γένεσθαι ἀδύνατον. Who doubts that this is the reſolution of many alſo in theſe dayes, not of them only vvho are Epicureans, vvhoſe manner of living (as vve have ſaid before) doth engage them to this opinion, but of others alſo, vvho think it not for their credit (the vanity of vvhich belief nevertheleſs might eaſily appear, there being nothing ſo mean and ordinary in the vvorld vvherein the Wiſdom of the vviſeſt, in the conſideration of the cauſes, by the confeſſion of beſt Naturaliſts, may not be poſed) to believe any thing that they cannot give a probable reaſon of. Not to be wondred then if we ſee many, notwithſtanding daily experience to the contrary, to ſtick ſo cloſe to thoſe tenets which they have wedded themſelves unto with ſo firm a reſolution from the beginning, never to leave them, be they right or wrong.

As for Ariſtotle, I confeſſe his authority is very great with me; not becauſe I am ſuperſtitiouſly addicted to any of his opinions, which I ſhall ever be ready to forſake when better ſhall be ſhewed unto me; but becauſe (beſides the judgment of all accounted wiſe and learned in former ages) I am convicted in my judgment, that ſo much ſolid reaſon in all Arts and Sciences never iſſued from mortal man (known unto us by his writings) without ſupernatural illumination. Well: Ariſtotle doth not acknowledg Spirits, he mentions them not in any place. Let it be granted: And why ſhould it be a wonder to any man that knows the drift and purpoſe of Ariſtotle's Phyloſophy? He lived when Plato lived; he had been his fellow Scholer under Socrates, and for ſome time his Scholer; but afterwards he became his æmulus, and pleaſed himſelf very much to oppoſe his Doctrine; inſomuch as he is cenſured by ſome Ancients for his ingratitude. The truth is, Plato's writings are full of Prodigies, Apparitions of Souls, pains of Hell and Purgatory, Revelations of the gods, and the like. Wherein he is ſo bold that he is fain to excuſe himſelf ſometimes, and doth not deſire that any man ſhould believe him, according to the letter of his relations, but in groſſe only, that ſomewhat was true to that effect. Indeed he hath many divine paſſages, yea, whole Treatiſes, that can never be ſufficiently admired in their kind; but too full of tales, for a Phyloſopher, it cannot be denyed. Ariſtotle therefore reſolved upon a quite contrary way: He would meddle with nothing but what had ſome apparent ground in Nature. Not that he preciſely denyed all other things, but becauſe he did not think that it was the part of a Phyloſopher to meddle with thoſe things that no probable reaſon could be given of. This doth clearly appear by a Divine paſſage of his, De part. anim. l. 1. c. 5. where he divides Subſtances in ἀγεννήτους καὶ ἀφθάρτους, Eternal and Incorruptible, that is, in effect, Spiritual (for even Spirits that were created might be termed ἀγένητοι, that is, properly, That have not their beginning by Generation; but we will eaſily grant, that the creation of Angels, good or bad, was not known to Ariſtotle: (we may underſtand Gods and Intelligences) and thoſe, that μετέχουσι γενέσεως καὶ φθορᾶς, that is, are mortals. He goes on, As for Divine Subſtances, which we honour, we can ſay but little of them, though we deſire it; becauſe ſo little of them is expoſed to ſenſe [and Reaſon.] Mortal things that we are familiarly acquainted and daily converſe with, we may know if we take pains. But much more ſhould we rejoice in the knowledg (yea though we know but a very little part) of things Divine for their excellency, then in the knowledg of theſe worldly things though never ſo perfect and general But the comfort that we have of them (which doth make ſome amends) is the certainty, and that they come within the compaſſe of Sciences. What could be ſaid more Divinely by a man that had nothing by revelation? Truly, there appeareth unto me (if I may ſpeak without offence and miſconſtruction) more Divinity in thoſe words, then in ſome books that pretend to nothing elſe. Add to this another place of his in his Metaphyſicks, where he ſaith, That though things ſupernatural be of themſelves clear and certain, yet to us they are not ſo, who ſee them only with Owles eyes. Can we ſay then that Ariſtotle denyed thoſe things that he forbore to write of, becauſe they were (their natures and their qualities) above the knowledg of man? Neither is it abſolutely true that Ariſtotle never wrote of Spirits and Apparitions. Cicero in his firſt book De Divinatione, hath a long ſtory out of him of a ſhape or Spirit that appeared in a dream to one Eudemus (his familiar friend and acquaintance) and foretold him ſtrange things that came to paſſe. (Clemens Alexandrinus hath a ſtrange ſtory out of him, of a Magical Ring, one or two, which Exceſtus, King of the Phocenſes did uſe, and foreſaw things future by them. It is to be found and ſeen among the fragments of Ariſtotles works. And that he did not deny Witches, may appear by that mention he makes of them in more then one place. How much he aſcribed to common report and experience, though no reaſon could be given, doth appear by his Preface to his Treatiſe De Divinatione per ſomnia: where he propoſeth the caſe, how hard it is for a rational man to believe any thing upon report which he can ſee no reaſon for; nay, which ſeemeth contrary to reaſon: as, for a man to foretel by dream what ſhall happen in another Kingdome far off without any apparent cauſe. But on the other ſide, ſaith he, not leſs hard to deny that which all men, or moſt men, do believe, to wit, that there be ſuch predictions. For to ſay (his own words) that ſuch dreams come from God, beſides what elſe might be objected (which might eaſily be underſtood by them that underſtand his Doctrine) it is moſt unreaſonable to believe that God would ſend them to men either vitious in their lives, or idiots and fools, of all men the moſt vile and contemptible, who have been obſerved to have ſuch dreams oftner then better and wiſer men. So leaving the buſineſſe undetermined, he doth proceed to the conſideration of thoſe Prophetick dreams, for which ſome probable reaſon may be given. Yet in the ſecond Chapter he ſaith directly, That though dreams be not θεόπεμπτα, yet they may be perchance * δαιμόνια, for ſuch he acknowledges Nature to be, not θεῖαν, but δαιμονίαν only. I will not enquire further into the meaning of theſe words; it is not to be done in few words. It plainly appears that nothing troubled him ſo much (for he repeats the objection twice or thrice) as that God ſhould be thought to favour either wicked men or fools. I wiſh no worſe Doctrine had ever been Printed or Preached concerning God. But ſtill let it be remembred that he knew of no Divine Word or Revelation. Yet Jul. Scaliger in his Commentaries upon Hypocrates De Inſomniis, doth wonder that Ariſtotle ſhould ſtick ſo much at this, and ſeems himſelf to give a reaſon grounded in Nature. Indeed he ſaith ſomewhat as to the caſe of fools and idiots, but nothing (that I remember) that reacheth to wicked men alſo. Let theſe things be conſidered, and let the Reader judge of how different temper Ariſtotle was from that of ancient or later Epicures. This mention of Ariſtotle and Plato puts me in mind of Socrates their Maſter, his Familiar Spirit; no Shape but a Voice only, by which his life and actions were much directed. The thing is atteſted by ſo many, ſo grave Authors whereof ſome lived at the very time, others not long after, or in times not very remote, that I know not how it can be queſtioned by any man. Neither indeed is it, that I remember, by any Heathens or Chriſtians of ancient times, and there have been books written of it, divers, in Greek and Latine, whereof ſome are yet extant. But whether it were a good Spirit or an evil, ſome men have doubted, and it is free for any man to think what he pleaſeth of it. For my part I ever had a Reverend opinion of Socrates,

* The Latine Interpreter tranſlates it Divina; & I know not how it can be better expreſſed, though lyable to ambiguity.

and do believe (if there be no impiety in it, as I hope not) that he was, as among Heathens in ſome reſpect, a fore-runner of Chriſt, to diſpoſe them the better when the time ſhould come to imbrace (and it did it effectually) the Goſpel. Many other Phyloſophers, that have been of greateſt fame, were certainly great Magicians, as Orpheus, Pythagoras, Empedocles, and the like, as by thoſe things that have been written of them by ſeveral ancient authors may be collected. But above all I give the pre-eminence to Apollonius Thianeus, a man of later times, and of whom we may ſpeak with more confidence and certainty. This was the man whom ancient Heathens very tenacious of their former worſhip and ſuperſtitions, did pitch upon to oppoſe unto Chriſt. His Life hath been written by divers, four of them were joyned together and oppoſed to the four Goſpels: and Hierocles, a famous Phyloſopher of thoſe times, made a Collation of his Miracles with thoſe of Chriſts, who was anſwered by Euſebius, yet extant. Sure it is, they prevailed ſo much, that he was for a long time worſhipped by many, and in ſundry places as a very God; yea, by ſome Roman Emperors, as we find in Hiſtory. Philoſtratus hath written his Life in very Elegant ſtile (as Photius judged) in 8 books, which are extant. And though they contain many fabulous things, as any man may expect by the undertaking, yet have they ſo much truth and variety of ancient learning, that I think they deſerve to be better known then commonly they are; but cannot be underſtood, I am ſure, as they ſhould be, by any tranſlation either Latine or French that ever I ſaw: For the Paris Edition, though it boaſt of great things (as the manner is) yet how little was performed may eaſily appear unto any that will take the pains to compare it with the former edition of Aldus: Which I ſpeak not to find fault, but becauſe I wiſh that ſome able man would undertake the work; there is not any book, by the Tranſlations yet extant, that more needeth it. What uſe Scaliger made of him, may appear by his frequent quotations in his Notes upon Euſebius, in the Hiſtory of thoſe times. As for Appollonius his Miracles or wonderful Acts (which is our buſineſſe here) though many things have been added, ſome, probably, done by Impoſture, yet I do not ſee how it can be doubted but he did many ſtrange things by the help of Spirits, which things may be judged by due obſervation of circumſtances; as for example, That being convented before Domitian the Emperor in the preſence of many, he preſently vaniſhed and was ſeen a great way off (at Puteoli I think) about the ſame time. That at the very time when Domitian was killed at Rome, he ſpake of it publickly and of the manner of it at Epheſus: and ſo of many others, which ſeem to me (as unto moſt) almoſt unqueſtionable. The greateſt wonder to me is, that ſuch was his port and outward appearance of Sanctity aud Simplicity, that even Chriſtians have thought reverently of him, and believed that he did his wonders by the power of God, or by ſecret Philoſophy and knowledg of Nature not revealed unto other men. So Juſtine Martyr, one of the ancient Fathers of the Church judged of him, as is well known. Moſt later Phyloſophers that lived about Julians time, and before that, as alſo the Emperors themſelves, many of them, were great Magicians and Necromancers, as may easily appear, partly by their own writings, and partly by the History of those times.

I do very much wonder whether any man, being a Scholer, and not strongly prepossessed, that doth not believe Spirits, &c. can say that he ever read the books of Tryals and Confessions of Witches and Wizards, such I mean, as have been written by learned and judicious men. Such as, for example, I account Nichol Remigius, his Demonolatria: ex judiciis capitalibus 900 plus minus hominum, &c. grounded especially upon the Confessions and Condemnations of no lesse then 900 men and women in Lorraine within the compasse of few years. That he was a learned man, I think no body will deny that hath read him; and that he was no very credulous and superstitious man (though a Papist) that also is most certain: and I have wondred at his liberty many times. I know not how it is now in those places; but by what I have read and heard of the doings of Witches and Sorcerers in Geneva and Savoy in former times (I could say somewhat of my "self, how my life was preserved there very strangely, but my witnesses are "not, and I will not bring their credit in question for such a businesse.) I am of opinion, That he that should have maintained there that there was no such thing as Witches, or Spirits, &c. would have been thought by most either mad and brain-sick (so frequent and visible were the effects to sober eyes) or a Witch himself. For indeed it is ordinary enough, that those that are so really, are very willing (which deceiveth many) to be thought Impostors, and there is good reason for it: I should sooner suspect him an Impostor that doth professe himself (except it be by way of confession, as many have done) and is ambitious to be counted a Witch or Sorcerer. I remember I saw a book some years ago, intituled, De l'inconstance des mauvais Anges & Demons, printed at Paris 1612. in quarto, and another of the same Author, and size, intituled, L'incredulite & mescreance du sortilege, Paris 1642. Strange stories are told there of a Province of France, about that time (or little before) marvellously infested with Witches and Sorcerers, insomuch that people did not know one another (in some one place) in the streets, by reason of evil Spirits appearing publickly in the shape of men; and that the proceedings of justice (which doth not happen often) were sometimes disturbed by them. I think the Author himself was one that was sent to the place by the King with some authority, and to make report. But as I do not altogether trust my memory, having had but a sight of the books (it was at the Bell in St. Pauls Church-yard:) So I beseech the Reader not to rest upon this account that I give him upon my best remembrance, but to peruse the books himself. I am confident he may receive good satisfaction, being things that were not done in a corner, but very publickly and well attested as I remember. However the reader must give me leave (though it be not to this purpose, lest my silence be drawn to the prejudice of the truth) to tell him, that I met with one great falshood there concerning my own father (of Bl. M.) which I have abundantly refuted, and all others of that nature, when I was yet very young. But that (as I conceive) which in all these stories would most puzzle a rational man, is the signes which are set down down by many how witches may be known, as Teats, ſwimming upon the water, dry eyes, and the like: which things indeed have ſome ground of truth, being limited to particular times and places, but are not of general application. Mr. Voſsius had therefore reaſon to find fault with Springerus and Bodinus for making that a certain token of a Witch that ſhe cannot weep. Who alſo in the ſame place doth well except againſt the tryal of γυναικολήσεως, as he calls it (commonly, purgatio per aquam frigidam) condemned by many. But he had done well to have limited his exception, and to have ſhewed how, and when, and how far ſuch obſervations may be uſed. For certainly they are not altogether to be neglected. But the reaſons of ſuch obſervations or marks that are given by ſome, are ſo ridiculous, that they would make a ſober man (that hath not patience enough to ponder all things diligently) to ſuſpect all the reſt. So one tels us, That when the Cock croweth the ſolemn meetings of Witches (which opinion perchance may prove ancient enough; as we ſhall ſhew elſewhere) are diſſolved: and he thinks a reaſon may be becauſe of the crowing of the Cock in the Goſpel, when St. Peter denyed Chriſt. Another tells us, That Witches being well beaten trunco vitis (with a Vine ſtick or club) Maleficia illata ſolvere ſævillima coguntur, have no more force to do hurt, or, that the party bewitched recovereth. And the reaſon (he thinks, and yet he no ordinary man neither) ex myſterio vini & vineæ dilectæ Deo, ex cujus myſterio quotidie Sacramentum Sacroſancti Sanguinis Domini conficitur, &c. But I ſhall have a more proper place for the full examination of theſe things in one of the two Treatiſes before mentioned. It cannot be denyed but this whole buſineſſe of Witches, what through ignorance, what through malice, is very lyable to many miſtakes and divers impoſtures. And it were to be wiſhed that in all ſuch Trials ſome prudent Divines, and learned experienced Phyſicians might be joyned. But hence to conclude with Wierus (who nevertheleſſe doth acknowledg Spirits, and the Illuſions and Apparitions of Divels, and their miſchievous opperations as much as any, and tells as ſtrange things of them) and ſome others, that therefore there are no Witches and Sorcerers, is as if a man ſhould deny the power of herbs becauſe a thouſand things have been written of them of old, and are yet daily falſely and ſuperſtitiouſly. And indeed it ſo fell out once in Rome, as by Plinie is recorded at large, Where when ſome aſcribed ſuch power unto Herbs, as though Sun and Moon had been ſubject unto them, the dead might be raiſed, armies vanquiſhed, and what not! which was not very well reliſhed by many: at laſt came Aſclepiades, who perſwaded men that were very well diſpoſed to be perſwaded, that all Phyſical uſe of Herbs and Simples was a meer cheat, and that men were better want them, there being other means eaſier and leſſe troubleſome to reſtore health and overcome diſeaſes, which he profeſſed to teach: and prevailed ſo far for a while, that they were laid aſide, and a new courſe of Phyſick introduced. Which for a while, as I ſaid, (ſo prone are men commonly to entertain new divices) gave good content generally. It is well obſerved by Ariſtotle (and I think a great part of humane wiſdome dedependeth on it) that in all things of the world that are commendable, as there is ſomewhat which is true and real, ſo ſomewhat alſo which is counterfeit and falſe. There is beauty Natural, ſaith he, and there is Artificial beauty by painting and trimming. A true, ſound, healthy complexion, and that which makes a good ſhew, but is not ſound. True, real gold and ſilver, but divers things alſo that may be taken for gold and ſilver at a diſtance, or by them that judge at the outward appearance. So, true, ſound Ratiocination, and that which ſeems ſo to the unlearned, or to corrupt judgments, though it be very falſe. They that conſider well of this, may the ſooner come to the knowledg of truth in all things.

Voſſ. de Idolol. III. 180, 181.

So in my Copy, it may be it ſhould be, vitis & vin.

Well: we go on.

There was in Aix (Aquæ Sextiæ anciently, now Aquenſis Civitas) in Provence (a County of France ſo called) in the year of the Lord 1611. a Romiſh Prieſt tryed, convicted, and by Sentence of the Court or Parliament condemned to be burned alive for abominable practiſes, and horrid things by him upon divers (ſome perſons of quality) committed with and by the Divel. He had long deſired it and ſought it; at laſt the divel appeared to him in the habit of a Gentleman. The ſtory is in divers books, French and Latine, and tranſlated (at that time I believe) in divers languages. I would goe forty miles with all my heart to meet with that man that could tell me any thing whereby I might but probably be induced to believe, or at leaſt to ſuſpect, that there might be ſome miſtake in the particulars of his Sentence. For my reaſon, I muſt confeſſe, was never more poſed in any thing that ever I read of that nature. Gaſſendus indeed in Pereskius his life, hath ſomewhat (as I remember) of Pereskius his Opinion, as if he thought ſome of thoſe things he confeſſed might be aſcribed unto imagination; but I ſee no reaſon given: neither are the things of that nature, that can admit any ſuch ſuſpicion. Beſides, Triſtan, of the Lives of the Emperors and their Coynes, will tell you ſomewhat which may make a doubt, whether Gaſſendus ought to be believed in all things that he reporteth concerning that famous man. I am not very much ſatisfied of what Religion (though truly a very learned man) Gaſſendus was. And by the way (which is ſomewhat to the caſe of Witches in general) if I be not miſtaken (for I have it not at this time) there is a relation in that very book of ſomewhat that hapned to Pereskius by Witches when he was a child. That wicked Sorcerer which was burned at Aix, foretold before his death that ſome misfortune would be done at the time and place of his execution, which hapned accordingly, and very ſtrangely too. Somewhat again, I muſt confeſſe, I have ſeen printed (Mimica Diaboli, &c.) to take away the ſcandal of ſome part of his confeſſion, or the Devils ſaying of Maſſe, &c. ſome part of which things might perchance with ſome colour be aſcribed to imagination: but that is not it that troubles me. But enough of him.

What man is he, that pretends to learning, that hath not heard, and doth not honour the memory of Joachimus Camerarius, that great light of Germany? ſo wiſe (and for his wiſdom, and other excellent parts, ſought unto by many Princes) ſo moderate a man (an excellent temper for the attain-attaining of Truth) and ſo verſed in all kind of learning, that we ſhall ſcarce among all the learned of theſe later Times find another ſo generally accompliſhed. The ſtrangeſt relations that ever I read, or at leaſt as ſtrange as any I have read of Witches, and Sorcerers, and Spirits, I have read in him: ſuch as either upon his own knowledge he doth relate, or ſuch as he believed true upon the teſtimonie of others known unto him. The laſt work that he ever went about for the publick was, De generibus Divinationum, but he did not live (the more the pity) to make an end of it. But ſo much as he had done was ſet out by one of his learned ſons, Lipſiæ, an. Dom. 1576. There p. 33. he hath theſe words, De Spirituum verò, quæ ſunt Græcis δαιμόνια admirabili non ſolum efficacitate, ſed manifeſta Specie, quæ φάσματα perhibentur, præſentiâ; incredibiles extant paſſim veterum narrationes, & noſtris temporibus ſuperantia fidem comperta ſunt, extra etiam γοητείας, de quibus poſteà dicetur. So p. 89. & p. 151. again and more fully. But his ſtrangeſt relations are in his Proœmium to Plutarchs two Treatiſes, De Defectu Oraculorum, and De Figura EI conſecratâ Delphis, ſet out by him with Notes. Here I could come in with a whole cloud of witneſſes, name hundreds of men of all Nations and profeſſions that have lived within this laſt hundred years, and not any among them but ſuch as have had, and have yet generally the reputation of Honeſt, Sober, Learned and Judicious, who all have been of this opinion that we maintain. But becauſe we have to do with them eſpecially who by their Profeſſion pretend to the Knowledge of Nature above other men, I will confine my ſelf for further teſtimony to them that have been of that Profeſſion. I have been ſomewhat curious for one of my Calling, that had no other end but to attain to ſome Knowledge of Nature, without which a man may quickly be lead into manifold deluſions and Impoſtures. I have read ſome, looked into many: I do not remember I have met with any profeſſed Phyſician or Naturaliſt (ſome one or two excepted, which have been or ſhall be named) who made any queſtion of theſe things. Sure I am, I have met with divers ſtrange relations in ſundry of them, of things that themſelves were preſent at, and ſaw with their own eyes, where they could have no end, that any man can probably ſuſpect, but to acknowledge the truth, though with ſome diſparagement to themſelves (according to the judgment of many) in the free confeſſion of their own ignorance and diſability to give reaſons, and to penetrate into cauſes. Well: what then ſhall we ſay to ſuch as Jul. Cæſar, Scaliger, Fernelius, Sennertus, the wonders and Oracles of their times? As Phyſicians ſo Philoſophers, men of that profound wiſdom and experience (much improved in ſome of them by long life) as their writings ſhew them to have been to this day. What ſhall we make of them? or what do they make of themſelves, that will cenſure ſuch men as either cheaters or ignorant idiots? Henericus Saxonia, a Learned Profeſſor and Practiſer of Phyſick in Padua, in that Book he hath written of that horrible Polonian Diſeaſe, which he calls Plicam, which turneth mens hairs (in ſight) to Snakes and Serpents; in that book he doth aſcribe ſo much to the power of Witches and Sorcerers in cauſing Diſeaſes, not private only but even publick, as Peſtilences and the like, as himſelf confeſſeth he could never have believed, until he was convicted by manifest experience; and indeed is wonderful, and may well be thought incredible unto most, yet is maintained and asserted by Sennertus De Febribus; and in his sixth book (as I remember) De Morbis à fascino, incantatione, & veneficiis inductis. I will forbear the names of many men of fame and credit, Physicians too, because most of them are named (and commonly enough known) by Sennertus upon this occasion. There is one, whom I think inferiour to none, though perchance not so commonly known or read, and that is, Georgius Raqusaius a Venetian, who by his first education and profession was an Astrologer, cast many Nativities, and took upon him to Prognosticate; but afterwards conscious to himself of the vanity of the Art (that is, when the Divel doth not intermeddle, as alwayes must be understood: for some Astrologers have been Magicians withall, and have done strange things) gave it over, and hath written against it very Learnedly and Solidly. Read him, if you please, in his Chapters De Magis, De Oraculis; yea, through his whole Book De Divinatione, and you may be satisfied what he thought of these things: he also was a Physician. But I must not omit the Learned Author that set out Musæum Veronense, a great Naturalist and a Physician too; he handles it at the end of that work somewhat roundly and to the quick, I must confesse, but very Rationally and Solidly, in my judgment, against those pretended Peripateticians, that would be thought to defend the opinion of Aristotle herein. I could say somewhat of ancienter Physicians too, and give some account of those many Spels and Charmes that are in Trallienus, in all his books; an ancient Physician, in high esteeme with some eminent Physicians of these late times, as they themselves have told me; though not for his Charms, but for his other learning and excellent experience, which they had found good use of But this I reserve for another place & work. And this mention of that eminent Physician who commended Trallienus unto me, puts me in mind of what he imparted himself, not long before his death, of his own knowledge and experience; and particularly of the account he gave me of the examination of a Conjurer in Salisbury, at which, he said, none were present but King James, (of most Blessed Memory) the Duke of Buckingham, and himself: It is likely some others may have heard the same, and I had rather any body should tell it then I, who was then a patient under him, and durst not, were I put to it, trust to my memory for every circumstance.

Hitherto I have gone by Authorities rather then Arguments, partly because I thought that the shortest and the clearest way for every bodies capacity, and partly, because such Arguments (if any besides these we have here) as have been used against this opinion, may be found fully answered in those I have cited. The truth is, it is a Subject of that nature as doth not admit of many Arguments, such especially as may pretend to subtilty of Reason, Sight, Sense, and Experience (upon which most Humane Knowledge is grounded) generally approved and certain, is our best Argument. But before I give over, I will use one Argument which perchance may prove of some force and validity, and that is, A consideration of the strange shifts and evasions and notorious absurdities that these men are put to, who not being able to deny the ὅτι, or matter of Fact, would seem to say somewhat rather then to acknowledg Spirits, and Divels, and Witchcraft. Pomponatius, who hath not heard of? I once had the book, I know not now what is become of it. But I remember well, I never was more weary of reading then when I read him; nothing that ever I read or heard of Legends and old womans tales did seem to me more groundlesse and incredible. But because those men bear themselves very much upon the power of imagination (which indeed is very great, and doth produce strange effects) I shall commend to the sober Reader that hath not yet met with him, Tho. Fienus his Learned Tractat, De Viribus Imaginationis, a very Rational and Philosophical discourse. Of their miserable shifts and evasions in general, the Author or Observator rather of Musæum Veronense, before quoted, will give you a good account. I have at this present in my hands the writings of a Physician, Augerius Ferrerius by name. What he was for a Physician I know not; all (I doubt) of that profession will not allow very well of his Preface to his Castigationes Practicæ Medicinæ, whatever they think of the Castigationes themselves. But in general, his Stile, and various reading, and knowledge of good Authors, speak him a Learned man sufficiently. Thuanus in his History gives him a most ample Elogium, and makes him to have been Jul. C. Scaliger his intimate acquaintance and much respected by him. But I doubt whether Thuanus had ever seen this book of his: it doth not appear by that Elogium that he had. Well, this Learned man in his Chapter De Homerica (so he calls it) Medicatione, where he treats of cures done by Charms and Spels, by Words and Characters, which others impute commonly to Witchcraft: first, for the ὅτι, he doth not deny it: (Nam iis quæ sensibus exposita sunt contravenire, sani hominis non est.) He thinks them little better then mad men that will deny that which is approved by so visible experience. Yet it seems he was one of them that did not believe, or would not believe (though he doth not say so positively) Spirits and Witches, and Supernatural Operations. What then? he plainly maintaineth and argueth it (though he quote no Gospel for it) that such is the nature of the Soul of man (if he know how to use it) that by a strong faith and confidence it may work any miracle without a miracle: Verum confidentia illa, ac firma persuasio (that you may have some of his words if you have not the book) comparatur indoctis animis per opinionem quam de Characteribus & sacris verbis conceperunt. Doctis & rerum intelligentiam habentibus, nihil opus est externi, sed cognitâ vi animi, per eam miracula edere possunt. &c. And again a little after, Doctus verò & sibi constans solo verbo sanabit. I do not hence conclude that this Ferrerius, though he speak as though he were, and names no body else, that he was the first or only that hath been of this opinion. Avicenne the Arab was the first, as I take it, that set it on foot: some others have followed him in it. But since these men acknowledg the strange effects that others deny, let the sober Reader judge whether of the two more likely to grant Spirits and Divels, or to make the Soul of man (of every man, naturally) either a God or a Divel. But let men take heed how they attempt to do Miracles by their strong faith and confidence, for that is the ready way to bring the Divel unto them, and that is it which hath made many Witches and Sorcerers. As for that Faith whereby men did work Miracles in the Primitive times, ſpoken of in the Goſpel, commonly called, The Faith of Miracles, that is quite another thing, which I ſhall not need to ſpeak of in this place. Of a ſtrong confidence in God, even in them that are not otherwiſe very godly, whether it may not, according to Gods firſt order and appointment, produce ſometimes ſome ſtrange effects; we have had a conſideration elſewhere, where we treat of Precatorie Enthuſiaſm. But this alſo is quite another thing, as may appear by what we have written of it.

But to conclude this part; upon due conſideration of the premiſes, and what elſe I have in readineſſe upon the ſame Subject (if God give me life and health) I cannot ſatisfie my ſelf how any Learned man, ſober and rational, can entertain ſuch an opinion (ſimply and ſeriouſly) That there be no Divels nor Spirits, &c. But upon this account which I give my ſelf (leaving all men to their own judgments herein) that if there be any ſuch truly and really, it muſt needs be becauſe being at firſt prepoſſeſſed upon ſome plauſible ground, and being afterwards taken up with other thoughts and employments, they are more willing to ſtick to their former opinion without further trouble, then to take the pains to ſeek further. Οὕτως ἀπαλαίπωρος τοῖς πολλοῖς ἡ ζήτησις τῆς ἀληθείας, καὶ ἐπὶ τὰ ἕτοιμα μᾶλλον τρέπονται, as Thucydides doth very well obſerve. And when we ſay, A Learned man, there is much ambiguity in that word. For a man may be (not to ſpeak of the ignorance of the common people, in thoſe climates eſpecially, who think all Learning concluded in Preaching; and now in theſe times too, them beſt Preachers that in very deed have leaſt Learning, but preach by Inſtinct and Inſpiration, as they call it) but a man, I ſay, may be a Learned Man, a very Learned man in ſome one kind or profeſſion, even to Excellency and Admiration, who nevertheleſſe is and may be found ignorant enough in other kinds: but a general Learned man is a thing of a vaſt extent, and not often ſeen. It is a buſineſſe of an infinite labour, beſides that it requireth Natural parts anſwerable; without which (judgment ſpecially) the more pains ſometimes the more ignorance. I aim not by this at any particular man or men (Deum teſtor) I would much rather ſubmit to the cenſure of others my ſelf, then take upon me to cenſure any; but the obſervation is of very good uſe, I know it, and may give much ſatisfaction in many caſes, and have given an inſtance of it in Tertullian, and ſome others elſewhere.

I have done for this time; I come now to the Objections, wherein I ſhall not need to be very long, becauſe they run much upon one thing, Impoſture, which hath already been ſpoken of and anſwered. But yet ſomewhat more particularly ſhal be anſwered.

Firſt, Of Miracles. It cannot be denyed but the world is full of horrible Impoſtures in that particular: Yet I believe, that ſome ſupernatural things, as cures, &c. do happen in every age, for which no reaſon can be given, which alſo for the ſtrangeneſſe may be called Miracles. But if we limit (with moſt) the word to thoſe things that proceed immediately from God or divine power: I ſhall not be very very ready to yield that many ſuch Miracles are ſeen in theſe Dayes. But I will not further argue the Caſe in this place. Well, let us take Miracles in the ordinary Senſe: I verily believe that many ſuch things do happen in many places; but that through negligence partly, and partly through incredulity, they are not regarded oftentimes, or ſoon forgotten. And wiſer men, ſometimes, though they know or believe ſuch things, yet are not they very forward to tell them, leſt they bring themſelves into contempt with thoſe ſuppoſed wiſe men, who will ſooner laugh at any thing they do not underſtand, then take the pains to rectifie their ignorance or inform their judgments. I hope I ſhall do no wrong to the Memory of that Venerable, Incomparable Prelate, BISHOP ANDREWES, for Sound Learning and True Piety whileſt he lived, one of the greateſt Lights of this Land; if I ſet down two Stories, which we may call Miracles, both which he did believe to be true, but for one of them, it ſeemes, he did undertake upon his own knowledge: The one, concerning a [illegible]d, or at leaſt by many ſuſpected Witch or Sorcereſs, which the Divel, in a ſtrange ſhape, did wait upon (or for rather) at her death. The other, concerning a man, who after his death was reſtored to life to make Confeſſion of a horrible Murder committed upon his own Wife, for which he had never been ſuſpected; both theſe, as he related them to my F. (in familiar converſation) and my F. did enter them for a remebrance into ſome of his Adverſaria. In the ſubſtance I believe there could be no miſtake, but if there be any miſtake in any Circumſtances, as of Names, or otherwiſe, that muſt be imputed to my F. who was a ſtranger, not to the tongue only, but to all buſineſſes (more then what might be known by printed books, and ſuch publick wayes) of England.

The Firſt, thus:

L. vetula Londinenſis, cui morienti Diabolus affuit.

Mira Hiſtoria quam narrabat ut ſibi compertiſsimam Dom. Epiſcopus. Fuit quædam L. mulier ditiſsima, et curioſis artibus addictiſsima: vicina ædibus Fulconis, qui fuit pater Domini Fulconis, totâ Angliâ celeberrimi; atque adeo lectiſsimæ matronæ, matri ejuſdem Fulconis, familiariſsima. Hæc per omnem vitam ſortilegiis dedita, & eo nomine infamium mulierculârum amica et patrona: cui morienti cum adſtarent quà viri, quà fæminæ graviſsimi; animadverſum eſt ſub horam mortis, adſtitiſſe ad pedes lecti hominem vultu terribilem, vulpinis pellibus amictum, quem ipſa contentis oculis intuebatur; ille, ipſam. Quæſitum eſt à janitore, quare illum admiſiſſet ille negaræ ſe vel vidiſſe. Tandem ſecedunt ad feneſtram duo vel tres, conſilium capturi quid illo facerent. Erat quidam Senator ingentis nominis . . . . . qui bis Prætor Londinenſis fuit: item Pater Fulconis, et alii. Placet illis ipſum compellare et rogare quis eſſet. Hoc animo repetunt priora loca ſua ad lectum. Interim L. vocem magnam edit, quaſi animam ageret; omnes illam curare, ſpectare, ſublevare; mox redit ad ſe illi ignotum illum requirunt oculis. Nuſquam apparet. Ante horæ ſpatium moritur ægra.

The other thus,

Kalend. Auguſt. Narrabat hodie mihi rem miram, Reverendiſſ. Præſul, Domin. Epiſcop. Elienſis: quam ille acceptam auribus ſuis à teſte oculato & auctore, credebat eſſe veriſsimam. Eſt vicus in Urbe Londino, qui dicitur, Vicus Longobardorum. In eo vico Paræcia est, & ædes paræcialis, in qua fuit Presbyter, homo summæ fidei, et notæ Pietatis, ... An. 1563. quo anno, si unquam aliàs, pestis grassata est per hanc Urbem Londinum. Narravit igitur hic Parochus et plusim aliis, et ipsi quoque Dom. Episcopo sibi hoc accidisse. Erat illi amicus in suâ Paræciâ insignis; vir, ut omnes existimabant, probus et pius. Hic peste correptus advocavit Presbyterum illum suum amicum, qui et ægrotanti affuit, et vidit morientem nec defernet nisi mortuum; ita Demum repetiit domum suam. Post horas satis multas à morte hujus, cùm ipse pro mortuo esset relictus in cubiculo; uxor illius idem cubiculum est ingressa, ut ex arcâ promeret Lodicem, sine linteamen ad ipsum ενδυτον, ut est moris. Ingressa audit hanc vocem, operi intenta. Quis hic est? terreri illa, et velle egredi, sed auditur iterum vox illa: Quis hic est? Ac tandem comperto esse mariti vocem, accedit ad illum: Quid, ait, marite; tu igitur mortuus non es? et nos te pro mortuo compositum deserveramus. Ego verò, respondit ille, verè mortuus fui: sed ita Deo visum, ut anima mea rediret ad corpus. Sed tu uxor, ait, Si quid habes cibi parati, da mihi esurio enim. Dixit illa veruecinam habere se, pullum gallinaceum, et nescio quid aliud: sed omnia incocta, quæ brevi esset paratura. Ego, ait ille, Moram non fero; panem habes, ait, et caseum? quum annuisset, atque petiisset afferri, comedit spectante uxore: deinde advocato Presbytero, et jussis exire è cubiculo omnibus qui aderant; narrat illi hoc: Ego, ait, verè mortuus fui; sed jussa est anima redire ad suum corpus, ut scelus apperiram ore meo, manibus meis admissum, de quo nulla unquam cuiquam nota est suspicio. Priorem namque uxorem meam ipse occidi manibus meis, tantâ vafritie, ut omnes res lateret: deinde modum perpetrati sceleris exposuit; nec ita multò post expiravit, ac verè tum mortuus est.

There is no necessity that any body should make of either of these relations an Article of his Faith; yet I thought them very probable, because believed by such a man, and therefore have given them a place here. So much of Miracles.

Of Exorcismes we must say as of Miracles. One notable example of a counterfeit Possession, and of great stirs likely to have insued upon it in France, we have out of Thuanus, in our late Treatise of Enthusiasme. The History of the Boy of Bilson is extant, who by the Wisdom and Sagacity of the R^t R^t F. in God Thomas, Lord Bishop of Lichfield and Coventry, was discovered to be an Impostor on purpose set up and suborned to promote the Romish cause, An. Dom. 1620. Such examples and stories most Countries have afforded good store, which are extant in divers Languages. Neither must it be concealed (by them that seek truth without partiality) that some, once called Disciplinarians, now more known by another name, have attempted to deal in those things, hoping thereby to gain great advantage to their cause. It was a famous Story in Q. Elizabeth's Reign, though now perchance out of the knowledg of many, and beyond the remembrance of any living, how one Mr. D. a very zealous man of that Sect, did take upon him by long prayers to cast out Divels. So maintained and asserted with great vehemency by him and some others that favoured that cause, though upon legal examination they proved otherwise, which occasioned many books on both sides in those dayes, but two, melioris notæ, as we say, written by Dr. H. concerning Exorcismes; the one against Papists, the other against P. I have them both somewhere yet, I hope, but can not come at them them at this time, which is the cauſe that I cannot particularize that buſineſſe with circumſtances of times, and names or perſons as I would. But there were many other books written (ſome very big, which I have ſeen) about it, as I ſaid before; ſo that the whole buſineſſe, with very little inquiſition, if any have a mind, may quickly be found out. One Bookſeller in Little Britain did help me to the ſight of ſix or ſeven at once; yet one of the books then written, and as I was told, upon this occaſion much commended unto me by ſome very Learned, to wit, Dr. Jordan, of the Suffocation of the Matrix, I long ſought before I could meet with it. And ſuch was the ignorance of ſome Bookſellers, that I could not perſwade them there was any ſuch book extant: but now at laſt I have got it. All the uſe I ſhall make of it at this time is; that whereas the whole drift of the book tends unto this, to ſhew the error of many in aſcribing natural diſeaſes to ſupernatural cauſes, which might be thought by ſome to favour their opinion that believe not Witches, &c. The Author doth very prudently and piouſly make this profeſſion in the Preface, I do not deny but that God doth in theſe dayes work extraordinarily for the deliverance of his children, and for other ends beſt known to himſelf; and that among other there may be both poſſeſſions by the Divel, and obſeſſions, and Witch-craft, &c. and diſpoſſeſſion alſo through the Prayers and Supplications of his ſervants, which is the only means left unto us for our relief in that caſe, but ſuch examples being very rare now adayes, &c. Yet for all this I do not conclude that Mr. D. was guilty of any Impoſture: he might do it through ignorance being cozened by others. I have heard he was an honeſt man, and dyed piouſly, and diſclaimed to the very laſt that he did any thing in that buſineſſe otherwiſe then Bonâ Fide. I would judge charitably, even of thoſe men that are not guilty of much charity towards others, whoſe judgments and conſciences will not ſuffer them (though men of approved worth and piety otherwiſe) to ſay as they ſay, and to do as they do in all things. Be it granted therefore, that this buſineſſe of Exorciſmes is lyable to much Impoſture: however, no man that hath read the relations of men and women poſſeſt, in ſeveral places, with due obſervation of circumſtances, ſome of which relations, beſides other perſons of credit, have been atteſted; yea, ſome penned and publiſhed by learned Phyſicians and Naturaliſts, who have been employed about the Cure, obſerved their carriage, heard ſome of them ſpeak ſtrange Languages: ſilly women poſſeſt, diſcourſe of higheſt points of Phyloſophy, or the Mathematicks and the like. No man, I ſay, that is not a ſtranger to theſe things (beſides what ſome Travellers, no way intereſſed in the cauſe, can aver upon their own knowledge) will make any queſtion either of the real poſſeſſion of divers, according to relations that have been made, or of the Divels ſpeaking in them and by them when they have been Exorciſed; and ſometimes upon bare conference. And though ſome Proteſtants are of opinion, That it is not lawful or warrantable for any man to take upon him to Exorciſe upon ſuch occaſions, that is, (as I conceive) by way of abſolute power and authority, and by ſuperſtitious wayes and means, as is ordinarily done: Yet where a man hath a Calling, as if he be lawfully Called to the Miniſtry, and ſet over ſuch a Pariſh where any happen to be poſſeſſed (as indeed

B. V. M. F. deed may ſelf have a Pariſh, that is, right to a Pariſh as good as the Laws of the Land can give me, which hath been grievouſly haunted, though not altogether in the ſame kind, this many years, to the undoing of many there; but I muſt not come near it, nor have the benefit of the Law to recover my right, though never told why) and he find himſelf zealouſly moved, yet without preſumption, I would not deſpair, but his prayers, with other performances of devotion, and the aſſiſtance of ſome others of the ſame calling, might prove available before God: but ſtill preſuppoſed, as moſt expedient and neceſſary, that the opinion and reſolution of ſome Learned and conſcionable Phyſician, one or more, be had in the caſe; and their preſence alſo in all actions, if it may be had, obtained. Some, it may be, will thank me, and I hope it will offend none, if I impart unto them what I have found in my F. his Ephemeris (or, Daily account of his life) tending to this purpoſe.

Anno Dom. 1603. Kal Junii. *Quem memſem, et reliquos omnes velis ô Deus, &c. In Engliſh (for their ſakes that underſtand no Latine, and that it be not required alwayes, for it would be very tedious) this is the effect, At ſuch a time, in ſuch a place, he had the opportunity to meet with a grave (whether Lady or Gentlewoman) Matron, one he had a very good opinion of; her name M. de St. Pons, and having often heard by common report of a certain Proteſtant Miniſter that was ſaid to caſt out Divels, he did accurately inform himſelf by her (ſhe living, it ſeems, very near, if not in the ſame pariſh) of all particulars concerning that buſineſſe; who did averre it to be moſt true, and that ten, or thereabonts, Demomoniacks, or poſſeſſed men (all making profeſſion of the Roman Catholick Religion) had been brought to the Church (at ſeveral times, as I take it) and that publickly, and by the generall confeſſion of all then preſent, and by ſome notable ſignes (ſometimes) at the going out of the Devils; they were, upon his Praying after Sermon, all delivered. But that he took it very haiouſly if any ſaid, that he had caſt out Devils; For, not I, ſaid he, but the earneſt Prayers of the Church, have prevailed with Almighty God to work this wonderful thing.

As for Oracles: It is true, Heathens themſelves acknowledg, that ſome were were the jugglings of men. Sometimes Princes; ſometimes private men: (as now of Religion, of Preaching, and Praying, and Faſting; of Maſſes and Proceſſions: moſt Princes and States in all places) made good uſe of them to their owne ends; and made them ſpeak what themſelves had prompted. But a man might as probably argue; becauſe ſome have been ſo freely acknowledged to have been by compact and ſubornation, it is the more likely, that thoſe of which never any ſuſpicion was, ſhould be true. We read of many in Herodotus: of one, which was contrived by fraud; but there we read alſo, that when it came to be known (though care had been taken that it might not:) the chief Contriver, a great man, was baniſhed, or prevented worſe, by a voluntary Exile; and the Sacred Virgin or Propheteſſe, depoſed. But not to inſiſt upon particulars, which would be long, it is moſt certain, and it will cleerly appear unto them that are well read in ancient Authors and Hiſtories, That all Heathens, generally the wiſeſt and learnedeſt of them, thoſe eſpecially, that lived when Oracles were moſt frequent, did really believe them to be, which they pretended unto: and that they were ſo indeed, for the moſt part (taking it for granted that their Gods were Divels or Evil Spirits) by many circumſtances of Stories, and by other good proofs, may be made as evident: neither was it ever doubted or denyed (alwayes granted and preſuppoſed, that, as in all worldly things, much impoſture did intervene and intermingle) by ancient Chriſtians acknowledged, I am ſure, by moſt, if not all. But I have ſpoken of them elſewhere already, and therefore will be the ſhorter here.

Our laſt Objection was: If there be Devils and Spirits, Why do they not appear unto them, who do what they can, as by continual curſes, ſo by profane curioſity to invite them? Firſt, We ſay, ἀνεξεῤεύνητα τὰ κείμενα αὐτῷ, καὶ ἀνεξιχνίαστοι αἱ ὁδοὶ αὐτοῦ. When we have good ground for the ὅτι, to ſtick at the διότι, becauſe we do not underſtand the reaſon, is as much as to ſay, that we think we ſhould be as wiſe as God. Ariſtotle did not meddle with things that he could give no reaſon of; yet he did not deny them (as we have ſhewed) and it is one thing to require a reaſon of things meerly natural; and another of thoſe that happen by a meer ſecret Providence. But this will give them no great ſatisfaction who perchance believe a God (ſome) as much as they believe a Devil. Secondly, Therefore we ſay, There may be ſome natural reaſon too, upon Ariſtotles grounds. Ariſtotle (as hath been ſhewed elſewhere) compares the effects of Melancholy, from whence he deriveth all kind of Enthuſiaſm, to the known effects of Wine. What is the reaſon, that ſome men with little wine will quickly be drunk, and become other Creatures, being deprived for the time of the uſe of reaſon? Others though they drink never ſo much, will ſooner burſt then reel, or ſpeak idly · as ſome in their exceſs grow merry, others ſad: ſome calm and better natured; others furious: ſome talkative, others ſtupid. The Devil knowes what tempers are beſt for his turn; and by ſome in whom he was deceived, he hath got no credit, and wiſhed he had never meddled with them. Some men come into the world with Cabaliſtical Brains; their heads are full of myſteries; they ſee nothing, they read nothing, but their brain is on work to pick ſomewhat out of it that is not ordinary; and out of the very A B C that children are taught, rather then fail, they will fetch all the Secrets of Gods Wiſdom, tell you how the world was created, how governed, and what will be the end of all things. Reason and Sense that other men go by, they think the acorns that the old world fed upon; fools and children may be content with them but they see into things by another Light. They commonly give good respect unto the Scriptures (till they come to profest Anabaptists) because they believe them the Word of God and not of men; but they reserve unto themselves the Interpretation, and so under the title of Divine Scripture, worship what their own phansie prompts, or the devil puts into their heads. But of all Scriptures the Revelation and the obscure Prophesies are their delight; for there they rove securely; and there is not any thing so prodigious or chimerical, but they can fetch it out of some Prophesie, as they will interpret it. These men, if they be upright in their lives and dealings, and fear God truly, it is to be hoped that God will preserve them from further evil; but they are of a dangerous temper; Charitable men will pity them, and sober men will avoid them. On the other side, some there are whose brains are of a stiff and restive mould; it will not easily receive new impressions. They will hardly believe any thing but what they see; and yet rather not believe their eyes, then to believe any thing that is not according to the course of nature, and what they have been used unto. The devil may tempt such by sensual baits, and catch them; but he will not easily attempt to delude them by magical Shews and Apparitions. And what sober man, that believeth as a God, so a divel, doth doubt, but they that make it their daily practice to damn themselves, by such horrid oaths and curses, are as really possest, yea far more in the possession of the devil, then many that foam at the mouth, and speak strange languages?

But 3dly Some have tried and used the means, but could never see any thing but what if others that never desired it really, but in some wanton curiosity, unadvisedly, that they might be the better able to confute the simplicity of some others as they thought, rather then that their faith wanted any such confirmation, have tryed some things, or have been present at some experiments and have seen (with no small astonishment) more then they expected or desired? Some persons of credit and quality, I am sure, have made it their confession unto me, that it hath so hapned unto them; who have been so affected with it, that they would not for a world be so surprized again.

But 4^ly and lastly, The Confessions of some Magicians are extant in print, who tell very particularly what means they used, what books they read, &c. and they saw and found (if we believe them; and what should tempt them to lye, no melancholy men, I know not) till they were weary, and Gods grace wrought upon their hearts to bring them to repentance. There be such confessions extant, but the Reader shal pardon me, if I give him no further account. It would much better becom them therefore, that have made such essays without succesſe, to repent, and to be thankful unto God, then to make that an argument, that theres no divel, and perchance no God. There is a terrible saying (if well understood) in the Scripture; ὁ ῥυπῶν ῥυπάτω, He that is filthy let him be filthy still Let them take heed (I advise them as a friend) if they persist in their hardness of heart and infidelity, lest God in just judgment, though they seek still, and provoke as much as they can, will not suffer that they shall see any thing, lest they should fear and be converted.

I come

I Come now to Dr. DEE, and to This Book of his, which hath been the occaſion of all the Diſcourſe hitherto. As for his Perſon or Parentage, Education and the like, I have but little to ſay more then what he ſaith himſelf in his firſt Letter to the Emperor (RODOLPHE) of Germany, that being yet very young he was ſought unto (ambiverunt me) by two Emperors, CHARLS the 5th and FERDINANDO his Brother and Succeſſor in the Empire. Mr. Cambden indeed in the year 1572 makes honourable mention of him, and calls him, Nobilis Mathematicus. He dedicated his Monas Hieroglyphica to MAXIMILIAN Succeſſor to FERDINANDO, firſt printed at Antwerp, An. Dom. 1564. and afterwards at Francford, 1591. and what other places I know not. In the year 1595. he did write (and was printed 1599 I am ſure, but whether before that or no, I cannot certainly tell) A diſcourſe Apologetical, &c. directed to the then Archbiſhop of Canterbury, wherein he hath a Catalogue of books written by himſelf, printed and unprinted, to the number of 48. in all, and doth alſo mention the books of his Library about 4000 volums in all, whereof 700 ancient Manuſcripts, Latin, Greek, and Hebrew. There alſo doth he produce a Teſtimony of the Univerſity of Cambridg, dated 1548. But this whole Diſcourſe of his being but ſhort, for the better ſatisfaction of the Reader, I thought good to have it here reprinted the next after this Preface. His Mathematical Preface before Euclid, is that I think which of all his writings publiſhed hath been moſt taken notice of in England, and added much to the worth and commendation of that Edition of Euclid. He was a married man and had divers children, as will appear by this Relation; a great Traveller, and lived to a great age. But as I ſaid before, I do not pretend to give an account of his life in general, unto others, which my ſelf am yet a ſtranger to. What concerneth this Relation I am to give an account, and I hope there ſhall be nothing wanting to that. Four things I propoſe to my ſelf to that end, Firſt, Somewhat to confirm the truth and ſincerity of this whole Relation.

Secondly, To anſwer ſome Objections that may be made againſt ſome parts of it.

Thirdly, To give ſome light to ſome places, and to ſatisfie the Reader concerning the perfection and imperfection of the book, as alſo, concerning the Original Copy.

Fourthly, and laſtly, To ſhew the many good uſes that may be made of all by a ſober Chriſtian.

I. It ſeems that Dr. Dee began to have the reputation of a Conjurer betimes. He doth very grievouſly complain of it in that Preface to Euclid but now ſpoken of, about the end of it, and yet there doth alſo term himſelf, An old forworn Mathematician. For my part whether he could ever truly be ſo called, I yet make ſome queſtion: But I am very confident, that himſelf did not know or think himſelf ſo, but a zealous worſhipper of God, and a very free and ſincere Chriſtian. How this is to be reconciled with the truth of this Relation, ſhall be afterwards conſidered of. For the truth and ſincerity of the Relation, I hope no body will ſo groſly miſtake us as though we intended thereby to juſtifie what is here printed againſt any ſuſpition of forgery; as if any man taking the advantage of Dr. Dees name and fame of a Conjurer, could be ſuſpected to have deviſed and invented theſe things in his own brain to abuſe the world. I ſhould be ſorry my name ſhould appear in any kind to any book lyable to ſuch a ſuſpition; and the very name and credit of that ſo much and ſo deſervedly prized Library from whence this is pretended to be taken, is ſufficient (with civil underſtanding men) to prevent the groſſeneſſe of ſuch a miſtake. Beſides the Original Copy it ſelf, all written with Dr. Dees own hand, there kept and preſerved. But by Truth and Sincerity, intending not only Dr. Dee's fidelity in relating what himſelf believed, but alſo the reality of thoſe things that he ſpeaks of, according to his relation: his only (but great and dreadful) error being, that he miſtook falſe lying Spirits for Angels of Light, the Divel of Hell (as we commonly term him) for the God of Heaven. For the Truth then, and Sincerity or Reality of the Relation in this ſenſe, I ſhall firſt appeal to the Book it ſelf. I know it is the faſhion of many (I will not ſay that (I never did it my ſelf) that are buyers of books, they will turn five or ſix leaves, if they happen upon ſomewhat that pleaſeth their fancy, the book is a good book, and when they have bought it, it concerneth them to think ſo, becauſe they have paid for it: but on the other ſide, if they light upon ſomewhat that doth not pleaſe (which may happen in the beſt) they are as ready to condemn and caſt away. It is very poſſible that ſome ſuch buyer lighting upon this, and in it, upon ſome places here and there, where ſome odd uncouth things may offer themſelves; things ridiculous, incredible to ordinary ſenſe and conſtruction, he may be ready to judge of the whole accordingly. But for all this, I will in the firſt place appeal to the book it ſelf; but with this reſpect to the Reader, that he will have patience to read in order one fourth part of the book at leaſt before he judge; and if by that time he be not convicted, he ſhall have my good will to give it over. Not but that all the reſt, even to the end, doth help very well to confirm the truth and reality of the whole Story: but becauſe I think there is ſo much in any fourth part, if diligently read, and with due conſideration, that I deſpair of his aſſent, that is not convicted by it. For my part, when the book was firſt communicated unto me by that Right worthy Gentleman who is very ſtudious to purchaſe and procure ſuch Records and Monuments as may advantage the truth of God (all truth is of God) and the honour of this Land, following therein the example of his noble Progenitor, by his very name, Sir Robert Cotton, known to all the Learned as far as Europe extendeth. I read it curſorily becauſe I was quickly convinced in my ſelf that it could be no counterfeit immaginarie buſineſſe, and was very deſirous to ſee the end, ſo far as the book did go. Afterwards, when I underſtood that the ſaid worthy Gentleman (eſpecially, as I ſuppoſe, relying upon my Lord of Armagh's judgment and teſtimonie, which we have before ſpoken of) was willing it ſhould be publiſhed, and that he had committed mitted the whole buſineſs unto me; I read it over very exactly, and took notes of the moſt remarkable paſſages (as they appeared unto me) truly I was ſo much confirmed in this firſt opinion by my ſecond reading, that I ſhall not be afraid to profeſs that I never gave more credit to any Humane Hiſtory of former times. All things ſeemed unto me ſo ſimply, and yet ſo accurately, and with ſo much confirmation of all manner of circumſtances written and delivered, that I cannot yet ſatisfie my ſelf, but all judicious Readers will be of my opinion. But nevertheleſs, to help them that truſt not much to their own judgments, let us ſee what can be ſaid.

Firſt, I would have them, that would be further ſatisfied, to read Dr. Dee in that forecited Preface, where he doth plead his own cauſe, to acquit himſelf of that grievous crime and imputation of a Conjurer. But that was written, I muſt confeſs, long before his Communication with Spirits: yet it is ſomewhat to know what opinion he had then of them that deal with Divels and evil Spirits. But after he was made acquainted, and in great dealings with them, and had in readineſs divers of theſe his books, or others of the ſame Argument, containing their ſeveral conferences and communications, to ſhew, and the manner of their appearing exactly ſet down; obſerve, I pray, with what confidence he did addreſs himſelf to the greateſt and wiſeſt in Europe. To Queen Elizabeth often, and to her Council, as by many places of this Relation doth appear; but more particularly by his Letter to Sir Francis Walſingham, Secretary, &c. That he did the like to King James and his Councel, may eaſily be gathered by the Records (in this Relation) of 1607. but much defective. But then to the Emperor Rodolphe, to Stephen King of Poland, and divers other Princes and their Deputies; the wiſeſt and learnedſt, their ſeveral Courts did afford for the time: the particulars of all which addreſſes and tranſactions are very exactly ſet down in the book. Nay, ſuch was his confidence, that had it not been for the Nuncius Apoſtolicus his appearing againſt him at the Emperors Court by order from the Pope, he was, as by ſome places may be collected, reſolved for Rome alſo, not doubting but he ſhould approve himſelf and his doings to the Pope himſelf and his Cardinals. In all theſe his addreſſes and applications being ſtill very ready to impart all things unto them that would entertain them with that reſpect he thought they deſerved; yea, readily, which is very obſervable, even to receive them into this Myſtical Society, whom he thought worthy, and in ſome capacity to promote the deſign; as de facto he did divers in ſeveral places: Albertus Alaſco, Prince Palatine of Polonia, Puccius a learned man, and Prince Roſemberg in Germany, who were long of the Society, beſides ſome admitted to ſome Actions for a while, as Stephen King of Poland, and ſome others. We will eaſily grant (as elſewhere hath been treated and handled at large) that a diſtempered brain may ſee, yea, and hear ſtrange things, and entertain them with all poſſible confidence, as real things, and yet all but fancy, without any real ſound or Apparition. But theſe ſights and Apparitions that Dr. Dee gives here an account, are quite of another nature; yea, though poſſibly the Divel might repreſent divers of theſe things to the fancy inwardly which appeared outwardly: Yet of another nature, I say, and not without the intervention and operation of Spirits, as will easily appear to any man by the particulars. Besides the long Speeches, Discourses, Interlocutions upon all occasions and occurrences in the presence of more then one alwayes; and externally audible to different persons, for the most part or very frequently. That these things could not be the operation of a distempered Fancy, will be a sufficient evidence to any rational man.

Again, let his usual preparations and Prayers against an Apparition or Action (as he called them) his extraordinary prayers upon some extraordinary occasions, as upon Edward Kelley his temporary repentance, and another for him when he was about to forsake him (in Latine a long one) Stephen King of Poland being then present. And again, when his Son Arthur was to be initiated to these Mystical Operations and Apparitions, in the place of Edward Kelley, and the like. And again, his Humility, Piety, Patience, (O what pity that such a man should fall into such a delusion! but we shall consider of the causes in its right place afterwards) upon all occasions, temptations, distresses, most eminent throughout the whole Book. Let these things be well considered, and above the rest, his large and punctual relation of that sad abominable story of their Promiscuous, carnal Copulation, under the pretence of obedience to God.—— Let these things, I say, be well considered, and I think no man will make any question but the poor man did deal with all possible simplicity and sincerity, to the utmost of his understanding at that time. And truly, this one thing (as we said before) excepted, his mistaking of evil Spirits for good, it doth not appear by any thing but that he had his understanding, and the perfect use of his Reason to the very last, as well as he had had any time of his life.

Again, let it be considered, that he carryed with him where ever he went A STONE, which he called his Angelicall Stone, as brought unto him by an Angel, but by a Spirit sure enough, which he shewed unto many; to the Emperor among others, or the Emperors Deputy, Dr. Curtz, as I remember: But more of this Stone afterwards. We may therefore conclude surely enough, That Dr. Dee in all this Relation did deal with all simplicity and sincerity. I shall only add, That whereas I used the word Reality before, concerning those things that appeared, according to this Relation: I would not be mistaken, as though I intended that whatsoever the Divel did seem to do or represent; it was Really and Substantially as it seemed and appeared, that would be a great and gross mistake. The very word Apparition doth rather import the contrary. All I understand by Reality, is, that what things appeared, they did so appear by the power and operation of Spirits, actually present and working, and were not the effects of a depraved fancy and imagination by meer natural causes. By which, strange things, I confess, may be presented and apprehended too, sometimes by the parties with all confidence, as we said before, though all be but fancy and imagination. But all circumstances well considered, make this Case here to be of another nature; and it may be it was the policy of these Spirits to joyn two of purpose in this business, to make the truth and reality of it the more unquequeſtionable; hoping (if God had given way) they ſhould have paſſed, in time for good Spirits abroad generally, and then we ſhould have ſeen what they would have made of it. From ſelfe beginnings, I am ſure, greateſt confuſions have proceeded and prevailed in the world, as we ſhall ſhew elſewhere. And ſince that in all this buſineſs, as we ſaid but now, Dr. Dee did not deal alone, but had a conſtant Partner or Aſſiſtant, whom ſometimes himſelf calleth his Seer, or Skryer, one by name Edward Kelly: it will be requiſite before we proceed further, that we give ſome account of him alſo. According to Dr. Dee's own relation here, An. Dom. 1587. April 7. Trebonæ: in the particulars of his Son Arthur's Conſecration (after his manner, which he calls, His offering and preſenting of him to the ſervice of God:) Uriel (one of his chiefeſt Spirits) was the author of their Conjunction: but when and how it hapned (being but obiter mentioned there) we do not find any where; and more then what I find here I have nothing to ſay: For certain it is by this whole ſtory, from the beginning to the end of it, that Kelley was a great Conjurer, one that daily converſed by ſuch art as is uſed by ordinary Magicians, with evil Spirits, and knew them to be ſo. Yet I would ſuppoſe that he was one of the beſt ſort of Magicians, that dealt with Spirits by a kind of Command (as is well known ſome do) and not by any Compact or agreement: this may probably be gathered from ſundry places. But that he was a Conjurer, appeareth firſt by that, where he proffered to raiſe ſome evil Spirit before the Poliſh Prince Palatine, Albert Lasky (of whom more by and by) for a proof of his Art. But Dr. Dee would not ſuffer him to do it in his houſe. Wicked ſpirits are caſt out of him to the number of 15. p. 32. But I make no great matter of that in point of proof, becauſe all there upon his bare report only. But ſee p. 63. &c. where it is laid to his charge, and he anſwereth for himſelf and his Spirits. See alſo where at laſt he yielded to bury not to burn his Magical books. But read his own confeſsion (where you ſhall find him ſpeak like one that knew very well what did belong to the Art) and the record made by Dr. Dee concerning a ſhrewd conteſt that hapned between Dr. Dee and him, (it was about ſome Magical things) wherein Edward Kelly carried himſelf ſo fiercely, that Dr. Dee being afraid of his life, was forced to call for help. Peruſe well this place and I preſume you will require no further light as to this particular concerning Kelly.

As for the ſeveral Epiſtles (in Latin moſt) that will be found here, as alſo Narratives of ſeveral meetings and conferences, they carry ſo much light with them, being ſet out with ſo many remarkable circumſtances of time, place, perſons, &c. that no man of judgment that hath any knowledge of the world, will or can make any ſcruple of the ſincerity and fidelity of either reports or Deeds and monuments (ſuch I account the Letters to be) herein contained. A man might with little labour (that had all kind of books at command) have found ſomewhat concerning moſt (outlandiſh) perſons in them mentioned. I could not intend it, and I think it would have been a needleſs labour. If any make any queſtion let them make ſearch, I dare warrant it unto them they ſhall find all things to agree punctually. But becauſe Albert Lasky (next to Edward Kelley) is the man moſt interressed in this story, I will give you some account of him out of Mr. Camden his Annals.

Anno Dom. 1583. E Polonia, Russiæ vicinâ hac æstate venit in Angliam ut Reginam inviseret, Albertus Alasco, Palatinus Siradiensis vir eruditus, corporis lineamentis barbâ promississimâ, vestitu decoro, & pervenusto; qui perbenignè ab ipsa nobilibusque magnoque honore & lautitiis, et ab Accademia Oxoniensi eruditis oblectationibus, atque variis spectaculis exceptus, post 4. menses ære alieno oppressus, clam recessit.

But of all Letters here exhibited, I am most taken, I must confess, with the Bishops Letter that was Nuncius Apostolicus: he seemes to me to speak to the case very pertinently (take Puccius his account along in his long letter to Dr. Dee, of his conference with the said Bishop concerning the same business) and to have carryed himself towards Dr. Dee very moderately and friendly.

II. Now to Objections:

The first shall be this: Although 'tis very probable that Dr. Dee himself dealt simply and sincerely; yet since he himself saw nothing (for so himself acknowledgeth in some places) but by Kelley's eyes, and heard nothing but with his ears. Is it not possible that Kelley being a cunning man, and well practised in these things might impose upon the credulity of Dr. Dee (a good innocent man) and the rather, because by this office under the Doctor he got 50 l. by the year, as appeareth. Truly this is plausible as it is proposed; and like enough that it might go a great way with them that are soon taken, and therefore seldom see any thing in the truth or true nature of it, but in the outward appearance of it only. But read and observe it diligently and you will find it far otherwise: It is true indeed, that ordinarily, Dr. Dee saw not himself; his business was to write what was seen (but in his presence though) and heard by Kelley. Yet that himself heard often immediately appeareth by many places; I shall not need any quotations for that himself feeleth as well as Kelley. In the relation of the Holy Stone, how taken away by one that came in at a window in the shape of a man, and how restored; both saw certainly. In the story of the Holy Books, how burned and how restored again (part of them at least) which Dr Dee made a great Miracle of, as appeareth by some of those places; there also both saw certainly. And Albert Lasky, the Polonian Palatine saw as well as Kelley. Besides, it doth clearly appear throughout all the book that Kelley (though sometimes with much adoe perswaded for a while to think better of them) had generally no other opinion of these Apparitions but that they were meer illusions of the Divel and evil Spirits, such as himself could command by his art when he listed, and was acquainted with, insomuch that we find him for this very cause forsaking, or desirous to forsake Dr. Dee, who was much troubled about it; and is forced in a place to Pawn his Soul unto him (to use his own words) that it was not so, and that they were good Spirits sent from God in great favour unto them. But for all this Kelley would not be satisfied, but would have his Declaration or Protestation of his suspition to the contrary entred into the book; which you shall find, and it will be worth your reading. I could further al-alledge, that if a man conſiders the things delivered here upon ſeveral occaſions, being of a different nature, ſome Moral, ſome Phyſical, ſome Metaphyſical, and Theological of higheſt points (though ſometimes wild enough, and not warrantable; yet for the moſt part very remote from vulgar capacities) he will not eaſily believe that Kelley, who ſcarce underſtood Latine) not to ſpeak of ſome things delivered in Greek in ſome places) and betook himſelf to the ſtudy of Logick long after he had entred himſelf into this courſe, could utter ſuch things: no, nor any man living perchance, that had not made it his ſtudy all his life-time. But that which muſt needs end this quarrel (if any man will be pertinacious) and put all things out of doubt, is, that not Kelley only ſerved in this place of Seer or Skryer, but others alſo, as his ſon Arthur, and in his latter dayes, when Kelley was either gone or ſick, one Bartholomew, as will be found in all the Actions and Apparitions of the year 1607. which (as I ſuſpect) was the laſt year of the Doctors life, or beyond which I think he did not live long.

Secondly, It may be objected, or ſtuck at leaſt, How Dr. Dee, ſo good, ſo innocent, yea, ſo pious a man, and ſo ſincere a Chriſtian as by theſe papers (his deluſion and the effects of it ſtill excepted) he doth ſeem to have been, God would permit ſuch a one to be ſo deluded and abuſed, ſo rackt in his ſoul, ſo hurried in his body for ſo long a time, notwithſtanding his frequent, earneſt, zealous prayers and addreſſes unto God, by evil Spirits (even to his dying day, for ought we know) as he is here by his own relation ſet out unto us? Truly, if a man ſhall conſider the whole carriage of this buſineſſe, from the beginning to the end, according to this true and faithful (for I think I may ſo ſpeak with confidence) account of it here preſented unto us, this poor man, how from time to time ſhamefully, groſly delayed, deluded, quarrelled without cauſe, ſtill toled on with ſome ſhews and appearances, and yet ſtill fruſtrated and put off: his many pangs and agonies about it, his ſad condition after ſo many years toil, travel, drudgery and earneſt expectation, at the very laſt (as appeareth by the Actions and apparitions of the year 1607.) I cannot tell whether I ſhould make him an object of more horror or compaſſion; but of both certainly in a great meaſure to any man that hath any ſenſe of Humanity, and in the examples of others of humane frailty: and again, any regard of parts and worth, ſuch as were in this man in a high degree. True it is, that he had joyes withal and comforts, imaginary, deluſory, it is true; yet ſuch as he enjoyed and kept up his heart, and made him outwardly chearful often times, I make no queſtion; ſuch as the Saints (as they call themſelves) and Schiſmaticks of theſe and former times have ever been very prone to boaſt of, perſwading themſelves that they are the effects of Gods bleſſed Spirit. But even in theſe his joys and comforts, the fruits and fancies of his deluded ſoul (as in many others of a diſtempered brain) is not he an object of great compaſſion to any, both ſober and charitable? If this then were his caſe indeed, what ſhall we ſay? if nothing elſe, I know not but it ought to ſatisfie a rational, ſober, humble man: If we ſay, That it is not in man to give an account of all Gods judgments, neither is there any ground for us to murmure becauſe we do not underſtand them, or that they often ſeem contrary to the judgment of humane reaſon, becauſe it is againſt all Reaſon as well as Religion, to believe that a creature ſo much inferior to God, by nature as man is, ſhould ſee every thing as he ſeeth, and think as he thinks; and conſequently judge and determine in and of all things as God judgeth and determineth. The Apoſtle therefore not without cauſe, would have all private judgments (for of publick for the maintenance of peace and order among men, it is another caſe) deferr'd to that time, when the hearts of all men ſhall be laid open, all hidden things and ſecret counſels revealed. But we have enough to ſay in this caſe without it. For if Pride and Curioſity were enough to undoe our firſt Parent, and in him all mankind, when otherwiſe innocent, and in poſſeſſion of Paradiſe. Should we wonder if it had the ſame event in Dr. Dee, though otherwiſe, as he doth appear to us, innocent, and well qualified? That this was his caſe and error, I will appeal to his own confeſſion (though he makes it his boaſt) in more then one of his Letters or addreſſes, where he profeſſeth, That for divers years he had been an earneſt ſuter unto God in prayer for Wiſdom; that is, as he interprets himſelf, That he might underſtand the ſecrets of Nature that had not been revealed unto men hitherto; to the end, as he profeſſeth, and his own deceitful heart it may be ſuggeſted unto him, That he might glorifie God; but certainly, that himſelf might become a glorious man in the world, and be admired, yea, adored every where almoſt, as he might be ſure it would be, had he compaſſed his deſire. And what do we think ſhould put him upon ſuch a deſire, with hopes to obtain it, but an opinion he had of himſelf as an extraordinary man, both for parts, and for favour with God? But however, had he been to the utmoſt of what he could think of himſelf, beſides his Spiritual pride of thinking ſo of himſelf (as great a ſin as any in the eyes of God) his praying for ſuch a thing with ſo much importunity, was a great tempting of God, and deſerving greateſt judgments. Had he indeed been a ſuter unto God for ſuch Wiſdom as the Prophet Jeremie deſcribeth (11.v.24,25.) Let not the Wiſe man glorie in his wiſdom, &c. but let him that glorieth, &c. And for ſuch knowledg as our Saviour commandeth, Joh.17.3. And this is life eternal, that they may know thee, &c. And his bleſſed Apoſtle (1 Cor.11.2.) For I determined not to know any thing, &c. he had had good warrant for his prayers, and it is very likely that God would have granted him his requeſt, ſo far as might have concerned his own ſalvation and eternal happineſs. Beſides, it is lawful (nay fit) for a man to pray for Gods bleſſing upon his labours, for competency of wit and capacity that he may do well in his vocation and glorifie God. But for a man to aſpire to ſuch eminency above other men, and by means that are not ordinary (as that conceited Philoſophers Stone, and the like) and to intereſt God by earneſt ſolicitations in his ambitious extravagant deſires; that God, who hath ſaid of himſelf, That he reſiſteth the proud, but giveth grace unto the humble, muſt needs be ſo great and ſo high a provocation (if well conſidered) as that I begin to doubt whether it be charity to pity him that ſuffered ſo juſtly and deſervedly. I do not know but it is as lawfull for any man obſcurely born to pray for a Kingdom, for a Common Souldier that he may have ſtrength to encounter thouſands, or for an ordinarie Maid, that ſhe may become the faireſt of women. In all all these it is possible to glorifie God, we grant, were it fit for us to prescribe unto God, neglecting those that he hath appointed, by what means he should be glorified; and could we secure our selves that in pretending to Gods glory we do not seek our own. I wish that our great undertakers and reformers (such is their wisdom they think) of Arts and Sciences would seriously think of this; they especially who take upon themselves to make all men wise and of one mind, and to reconcile all doubts and difficulties in Religion, and otherwise; in a word, to make Truth to be imbraced by all men. Should these men tell us that if they had had the creating of the world, and the ordering of all things (and there be, I think, in the world that have said little less) from the beginning, they would have made an other guess of things then God had done: We would have considerd of it perchance what might be the ground in any mortal man of such wonderful confidence. But such being the condition of the world, as it is, and such of men, naturally, or to speak as a Christian, since the fall of Adam, and the consequences of it, the curse of God, &c. to make all men wise, of one mind, good, religious, without an infinite omnipotent power, such as of nothing was able to create a world: can any man (sober and wise) hear it; hear it with patience, that thinks it impossible, yea strange, that Castles should be built in the air, or the heavens battered with great guns? And yet such books are read, yea and much set by, by some men. My judgment is, That they are to be pittyed (if distemper be the cause, as I believe it is in some) that boast of such things; but if wise and politick, to get credit and money (as some I believe) it is a great argument of their confidence, that there be many in the word that are not very wise. But to return to Dr. Dee: It might be further added and proved by examples, that some men of transcendent holiness and mortification (in the sight of men) so sequestred from the world (some of them) and the vanities of it, that for many years they had conversed with God alone in a manner; yet through pride and conceit of their own parts and favour with God, fell into delusions and temptations, if not altogether the same, yet not less strange and dreadful. Such examples Ecclesiastical Story will afford, and other books of that nature, but I have them not at this time, and I conceive I have said enough to this particular.

But of his Praying too, somewhat would be observed. His Spirits tell him somewhere, that he had the Gift of Praying. Truly I believe he had, as it is ordinarily called: that is, that he could express himself very fluently and earnestly in Prayer, and that he did it often to his own great contentment. Let no man wonder at this; I have shewed elsewhere that some that have been very wicked, yea, some that dyed for blasphemy, and with blasphemy in their mouth to the last gasp, have had it in a great measure, and done much mischief by it. It is no disparagement to Prayer, no more then it is to the best things of the world (and what better and more heavenly then prayer well used?) if they be abused. And it is commonly observed, that the corruption of best things is most dangerous. What bred those pernicious hereticks that so long troubled the world, and could not be suppressed but by absolute destruction, but long affected prayers (therefore called Euchites or Messaliani, that is to say, the Prayers) and Enthusiasms? And as to that point of inward joy and complacency, which some Schismaticks and wicked men find in themſelves at their prayers, which ignorant deluded people think to be an argument of the Spirit: It is certain, and is a myſtery of nature that hath (may I ſpeak it without bragging) been brought to light (of late years at leaſt) by my ſelf and fully diſcovered, 'That not only the inward heat of " mental conception (where there is any vigor) but alſo the muſick of out- " ward words, is able to occaſion it. Indeed it is a point that doth deſerve to be well conſidered of in theſe times eſpecially. For when young boyes and illiterate men (and the number is likely to increaſe now that Catechizing is ſo much neglected) are turned looſe to exerciſe themſelves in this gift (as they call it) and when by long practice they have attained to ſome readineſs and volubility, which doth occaſion ſome inward lightſomeneſs and excitations, or perchance ſomewhat that may have ſome reſemblance to ſpiritual ſorrow and compunction, they preſently think themſelves inſpired, and ſo they become Saints before they know what it is to be Chriſtians. And if they can Pray by inſpiration, why not Preach alſo? So comes in Anabaptiſm by degrees, which will be the ruine of all Religion and civil Government where ever it prevails. And I believe that this fond fooliſh conceit of Inſpiration, as it hath been the occaſion of much other miſchief, ſo of that horrid ſacriledge, ſhall I call it, or profanation (I hope I may do either without offence, for it is not done by any publick Authority that I know of) the caſting and baniſhing of THE LORDS PRAYER out of many private houſes and Churches; then which, I think, Chriſt never received a greater affront from any that called themſelves Chriſtians. I am not ſo uncharitable as to believe that it is done in direct oppoſition to Chriſt by any real Chriſtians, but in a furious zeale by many, I believe, againſt ſet prayers. But this is not a place to diſpute it: Certainly, as the Lords Prayer is a Prayer of moſt incredible comfort to them that uſe it devoutly and upon good grounds (a good foundation of Religion and ſound Faith, I mean) ſo I believe that ſet Prayers in general are of more concernment to the ſetling of Peace in the Commonwealth then many men are aware of. But let this paſs for my opinion; there be worſe I am ſure that paſs currently.

Again, A man may wonder (I cannot tell whether an objection may be made of it) that Dr. Dee, though he were at the firſt deluded (to which his own pride and preſumption did expoſe him) as many have been; yet afterwards in proceſs of time when he found himſelf ſo deluded and ſhuffled with; when Edward Kelley did uſe ſuch pregnant arguments to him (as he did more then once) to perſwade him that they were evil Spirits that appeared unto them; nay, when he had found by certain experience, that his Spirits had told him many lies, foretold many things concerning Princes and Kingdoms, very particularly limited with circumſtances of time, which when the time was expired did not at all come to paſs; yet for all this he durſt pawn his Soul for them that they were good Spirits, and continued in his confidence (ſo farre as our Relation goes) to the laſt. I anſwer, Such is the power of this kind of Spiritual deluſion, it doth ſo poſſeſs them whom it hath once taken hold of, that they ſeldom, any of them, recover themſelves. In the dayes of Martin Luther (a great and zealous reformermer of Religion, but one that would have deteſted them as the worſt of Infidels that had uſed the Lords Prayer, as ſome have done in our dayes, as appears by what he ſaith of it in more then one place) there lived one Michael Stifelius, who applying to himſelf ſome place of the Apocalypſe, took upon him to Prophecy. He had foretold that in the year of the Lord 1533. before the 29 of September the end of the world, and Chriſts coming to Judgment would be. He did ſhew ſo much confidence, that ſome write, Luther himſelf was ſomewhat ſtartled at the firſt. But that day paſt, he came a ſecond time to Luther with new Calculations, and had digeſted the whole buſineſs into 22. Articles, the effect of which was to demonſtrate that the end of the world would be in October following. But now Luther thought he had had tryal enough, and gave ſo little credit to him, that he (though he loved the man) ſilenced him for a time; which our Apocalyptical Prophet took very ill at his hands, and wondred much at his incredulity. Well, that moneth and ſome after that over, our Prophet (who had made no little ſtir in the Country by his Prophecying) was caſt into priſon for his obſtinacy. After a while Luther viſited him, thinking by that time to find him of another mind. But ſo far was he from acknowledging his error, that he down right railed at Luther for giving him good counſel. And ſome write that to his dying day (having lived to the age of 80. years) he never recanted. And was not this the caſe of learned Poſtellus, who fallen into ſome grievous wild fancies in his latter dayes, though ſound enough ſtill in other things, could never be reclaimed though means were uſed from time to time the beſt and gentleſt (in reſpect to his worth and perſon) that could be thought of? But what talk we of particular men? Conſider the Anabaptiſts in general. Above an hundred years ago they troubled Germany very much: it coſt many thouſands their lives. They roved up and down. No ſooner deſtroyed in one place but they ſprung (whileſt that ſeaſon laſted) in another. Their pretences every where were the ſame; Revelations and the Spirit: the wickedneſs of Princes and Magiſtrates, and Chriſt Jeſus to be ſet up in his Throne. Well, at laſt they were deſtroyed in moſt places. Stories of them have been written in all Languages, read every where, and their lamentable end. Can all this hinder but that upon every opportunity of a confuſed and confounded Government, they ſtart up again in the ſame ſhape and form as before; the ſame pretences, the ſame Scriptures, for all the world, miſerably detorted and abuſed, to raiſe tumults and ſeditions in all places. Such is the wretchedneſs of man that is once out of the right way of Reaſon and Sobriety. But withall we muſt ſay in this particular caſe of Dr. Dee's, though his obſtinacy was great and marvellous, yet it muſt be acknowledged, that great was the diligence and ſubtility of his Spirits to keep their hold: and ſome things ſometimes happened (as his danger and preſervation about Graveſend, when he firſt, here related, went out of the Realm) very ſtrangely, and ſuch was the unhappineſs of his miſapplyed zeal, that he made a Providence of whatſoever hapned unto him as he deſired.

So much for Dr. Dee himſelf. But of his Spirits a greater queſtion perchance may be moved: If evil, wicked, lying Spirits (as we have reaſon to believe, and no man I think will queſtion) how came they to be ſuch perſwaders to Piety and godlineſs, yea, ſuch preachers of Chriſt, his Incarnation, his Paſſion, and other Myſteries of the Chriſtian Faith, not only by them here acknowledged, but in ſome places very Scholaſtically ſet out and declared? It ſeemeth ſomewhat contrary to reaſon and as contrary to the words of our Saviour, Every Kingdom divided againſt it ſelf, &c. But firſt, to the matter of fact: The Divels we know even in the Goſpel did acknowledg, nay, in ſome manner proclaim Chriſt to be the Son of God: which is the main Article he did conteſt with Chriſt by Scripture Authority; and by S. Pauls teſtimony, can transform himſelf, when he liſt into an Angel of light. And in ſome relations well atteſted, of Poſſeſſions and publick Exorciſms that have been uſed; we find the Divel often ſpeaking by the mouth of women, rather like a Monk out of the Pulpit, perſwading to temperance, rebuking vices, expounding of myſteries, and the like, then as one that were an enemy to truth and godlineſs. Inſomuch that ſome have been ready to make a great myſtery and triumph of it, thereby to convict Hereticks and Atheiſts, in time, more effectually, then they have been by any other means that have been uſed hitherto: and aſcribing the whole buſineſs not to the Divel himſelf, but the great power and Providence of God, as forcing him againſt his will to be an inſtrument of his Truth. For my part, I ſee cauſe enough to believe that ſuch things, there contained at large, might come from the Divel; that is, might truly and really be ſpoken by perſons poſſeſſed and inſpired by the Divel. But that they are imployed by God to that end, I ſhall not eaſily grant. I rather ſuſpect that whatſoever comes from them in that kind, though it be good in it ſelf, yet they may have a miſchievous end in it; and that I believe will ſoon appear if they can once gaine ſo much credit among men as to be believed to be ſent by God to bear teſtimony to the truth. A man may ſee ſomewhat already by thoſe very Relations, and that account that is given us there. And therefore I do not wonder if even among the more ſober Papiſts this project (as the relater and publiſher complaineth) hath found oppoſition. The Divel is very cunning; a notable Polititian. S. Paul knew him ſo, and therefore he uſes many words to ſet out his frauds. He can lay the foundation of a plot, if need be, a hundred years before the effects ſhall appear. But then he hath his end. It is not good truſting of him, or dealing with him upon any pretence. Can any man ſpeak better then he doth by the mouth of Anabaptiſts and Schiſmaticks? And this he will do for many years together if need be, that they that at firſt ſtood off may be won by time. But let them be once abſolute maſters, and then he will appear in his own ſhape. There is one thing which I wonder much more at in thoſe Relations I have mentioned, and that is, that the Divel himſelf ſhould turn ſuch a fierce accuſer of them that have ſerved him ſo long, Witches and Magicians. I know he doth here ſo too in ſome kind, in more then one place. He doth much inveigh againſt Divels and all that have to do with them, Magicians, &c. But that is in general only, or in Kelley's particular caſe, upon whom he had another hold, which he made more reckoning of, to wit, as he appeared peared to them as an Angel of light. Any thing to maintain his interest there, and their good opinion of him; for he had great hopes from that plot. But that he should pursue so ridgedly particular men and women whom he had used so long, to death, and do the part of an informer against them, may seem more like unto a Kingdom divided against it self, but it is not our case here; neither am I very well satisfied, that whatsoever the Divel saith or layes to the charge of them by whose mouth he speaketh, ought to be received for good testimony. Here it may be Wierius had some reason; for I doubt some have been too credulous. But this by the way shall suffice.

That the Divel should lie often, or be mistaken himself, in his Prophecies, as by many particulars of this Relation will appear, I will not look upon that, as if any objection could be made of it. But it may be wondred, perchance, Dr. Dee being often in so great want of monies, that he did not know which way to turn, what shift to make; at which time he did alwayes with much humility address himself to his Spirits, making his wants known unto them; and the Divel on the other side, both by his own boasting, and by the testimonie of those who could not lie, having the goods of this world (though still under God) much at his disposing, and alwayes, as he seemed, very desirous to give Dr. Dee all possible satisfaction: that in this case, once or twice perchance excepted, when the Dr. was well furnished (for which the Spirits had his thanks) at all other times he was still, to his very great grief and perplexity, left to himself to shift as he could, and some pretence, why not otherwise supplyed, cunningly devised by them that were so able, and to whom he was so dear. But I must remember my self: I said so able; but in some places his Spirits tell him plainly, It was not in their power, because no part of their Commission, or because it did not belong unto them (such as dealt with him) to meddle with the Treasures of the earth: and sometimes that they were things beneath their cognizance or intermedling. Of the different nature of Spirits, we shall say somewhat by and by, that may have some relation to this also, perchance. But granting that the Divel generally hath power enough both to find mony and to gratifie with it where he seeth cause. Yet in this case of Witches and Magicians, direct or indirect, it is certain and observed by many as an argument of Gods great Providence over men, that generally he hath not: It is in very deed a great Argument of a superiour over-ruling power and Providence. For if men of all professions will hazard (their Souls) so far as we see daily to get money and estates by indirect unconscionable wayes, though they are not alwayes sure, and that it be long oftentimes before it comes, and oftentimes prove their ruine, even in this world, through many casualties; as alterations of times, and the like: what would it be if it were in the power of the D. to help every one that came unto him, yielding but to such and such conditions, according as they could agree?

Hitherto I have considered what I thought might be objected by others. I have one objection more, which to me was more considerable (as an objection, I mean, not so readily answered) then all the rest: Devils, we think generally, both by their nature as Spirits, and by the advantage of long experience (a very great advantage indeed in point of knowledg) cannot but have perfect knowledg of all natural things, and all secrets of Nature, which do not require an infinite understanding; which by that measure of knowledge that even men have attained unto in a little time, is not likely to be so necessary in most things. But lest any man should quarrel at the word Perfect, because all perfection belongs unto God properly, it shall suffice to say, That the knowledge Divels have of things Natural and Humane is incomparably greater then man is capable of. If so, how comes it to pass that in many places of this Relation we find him acting his part rather as a Sophister (that I say not a Juggler) then a perfect Philosopher; as a Quack, or an Empirick sometimes, then a True, genuine Naturalist. And for language (not to speak of his Divinity, which he might disguise of purpose to his own ends) rather as one that had learned Latin by reading of barbarous books, of the middle age, for the most part, then of one that had been of Augustus his time, and long before that. But that which is strangest of all is, that as in one place the Spirits were discovered by Ed. Kelley to steal out of Agrippa or Trithemius (so he thought at least) so in divers other places, by the phrase, and by the doctrine and opinions a man may trace noted Chymical and Cabalistical Authors of later times; yea, (if I be not much mistaken) and Paracelsus himself, that prodigious creature, for whom and against whom so much hath been written since he lived; these things may seem strange, but I think they may be answered. For first, we say, The Divel is not ambitious to shew himself and his abilities before men, but his way is (so observed by many) to fit himself (for matter and words) to the genius and capacity of those that he dealeth with. Dr. Dee, of himself, long before any Apparition, was a Cabalistical man, up to the ears, as I may say; as may appear to any man by his Monas Hieroglyphica, a book much valued by himself, and by him Dedicated at the first to Maximilian the Emperor, and since presented (as here related by himself) to Rodolphe as a choice piece. It may be thought so by those who esteem such books as Dr. Floid, Dr. Alabaster, and of late Gafarell, and the like. For my part I have read him; it is soon don, it is but a little book: but I must profess that I can extract no sense nor reason (sound and solid) out of it: neither yet doth it seem to me very dark or mystical. Sure we are that those Spirits did act their parts so well with Dr. Dee, that for the most part (in most Actions) they came off with good credit; and we find the Dr. every where almost extolling his Spiritual teachers and instructers, and praysing God for them. Little reason therefore have we to except against any thing (in this kind) that gave him content, which was their aim and business.

Secondly, I say, if any thing relish here of Trithemius or Paracelsus, or any such, well may we conclude from thence, that the Divel is like himself. This is the truest inference. It is he that inspired Trithemius and Paracelsus, &c. that speaketh here; and wonder ye if he speaks like them? I do not expect that all men will be of my opinion; yet I speak no Paradoxes: I have both reason and authority good and plausible, I think, for what I say; but to argue the case at large would be tedious. Of Trithemius somewhat more afterwards will be said. But we must go far beyond that time. A thousand years and above, before before either of them was born, was the BOOK OF ENOCH well known in the world; and then also was Lingua Adami (upon which two most of the Cabala stands) much talked of, as appears by Greg. Nissen his learned books against Eunomius the Heretick. To speak more particularly (because so much of it in this Relation) the BOOK OF ENOCH was written before Christ; and it is thought by some very learned (though denyed by others) that it is the very book that S. Jude intended. A great fragment of it in Greek (it was written in Hebrew first) is to be seen in Scaliger (that incomparable man, the wonder of his Age, if not rather of all Ages) his learned Notes upon Eusebius. It was so famous a book antiently that even Heathens took notice of it, and grounded upon it objections against Christians. It may appear by Origen against Celsus, in his book 5. p. 275. Πάνυ δὲ συγκεχυμένος (saith he) ἐν τῷ περὶ τῶν ἐληλυθότων πρὸς ἀνθρώπους ἀγγέλων ἐξεδόσει τιθησι λαὶ ἀθεανώτως ἐληθότα εἰς αὐτὸν, ἀπὸ τῶν ἐν τῷ Ενωχ γεγραμμένων ἅτινα οὐδ' αὐτὸς φαίνεται ἀναγνοὺς, οὐδὲ γνωρίσας ὅτι ἐν ταῖς Εκκλησίαις οὐ πάνυ φέρεται ὡς θεῖα τὰ ἐπιγεγραμμένα τῷ Ενωχ βιβλία. But S. Jerome and S. Augustin speak of it more peremptorily as a fabulous book, and not allowed by the Church. How much of it is extant, besides what we have in Scaliger, I know not; nor what part it is so often mentioned in this Relation. By what I have seen it doth appear to me a very superstitious, foolish, fabulous writing; or to conclude all in one word, Cabalistical, such as the Divel might own very well, and in all probability was the author of. As for that conceit of the tongue which was spoken by Adam in Paradise, we have already said that it is no late invention; and I make no question but it proceeded from the same Author. Yea, those very Characters commended unto Dr. Dee by his Spirits for holy and mystical, and the original Characters (as I take it) of the holy tongue, they are no other, for the most part but such as were set out and published long agoe by one Theseus Ambrosus out of Magical books, as himself professeth: you shall have a view of them in some of the Tables at the end of the Preface. Some letters are the same, others have much resemblace in the substance; and in transcribing it is likely they might suffer some alteration. But it may be too the Spirits did not intend they should be taken for the same, because exploded by learned men, and therefore altered the forms and figures of most of them of purpose that they might seem new, and take the better. So that in all this the Divel is but still constant unto himself, and this constancy stands him in good stead, to add the more weight and to gain credit to his Impostures. Not to be wondred therefore if the same things be found elsewhere, where the D. hath an hand.

With Cabalistical writings we may joyn Chymical, here also mentioned in many places. I have nothing to say to Chymistrie as it is meerly natural, and keeps it self within the compass of sobriety. It may wel go for a part of Physick, for ought I know, though many great Physicians, because of the abuse and danger of it, as I conceive, have done their best (formerly) to cry it down. I my self have seen strange things done by it: and it cannot be denyed but the wonders of God and Nature are as eminently visible in the experiments of that Art as any other natural thing. However, it is not improbable that divers secrets of it came to the knowledg of man by the Revelation of Spirits. And the practice and profession of it in most (them especially that profess nothing else) is accompanied with so much Superstition and Imposture, as it would make a sober man, that tendreth the preservation of himself in his right wits, to be afraid of it.

1t. Of the Transmutation of Metals, what may be done by Art I will not take upon me to determine: I am apt enough to believe that ſome ſtrange things (in that kind) may be done, if a man will go to the coſt of it, and undergoe the trouble upon ſo much uncertainty of the event. But that which we call ordinarily, and moſt underſtand by it, The Phyloſophers Stone, is certainly a meer cheat, the firſt author and inventor whereof was no other then the Divel. Legi etiam Spirituum ſupernorum revelatione traditam antiquitùs artem faciendi Auri, & me ætate idem uſu evenſſe, &c. ſaith one (Jo. Franc. Picus Mirandula) of the learnedſt Authors that I have ſeen of that ſubject, in defence of it, I meant. If he mean Supernos Spiritus, ſuch as appear in form of Angels of Light, ſuch as deluded Dr. Dee, and daily doth thoſe that hunt after Revelations, and Prophecies, and unlawful Curioſities, I grant it. But that any good Angels did ever meddle in a practice commonly attended with ſo much impoſture, impiety, couſenage as this commonly is, I ſhall not eaſily grant. Though I muſt add, I make great difference (if we will ſpeak properly) between Ars faciendi auri (a thing I do not deny to be feaſible by natural means) and that we call the Phyloſophers Stone, as before already intimated. And for that objection of his, why evil Spirits ſhould not be the Authors or revealers of it unto any (though otherwiſe for ſome other reaſons he thinks it probable) becauſe it is not likely that God would ſuffer them to give ſuch power unto men like themſelves, whom only among men they favour and reſpect, that is, wicked ungodly men. Firſt, I anſwer, That is a very weak objection, ſince we know by conſtant experience of preſent and future Ages, that they are not of the beſt of men commonly that are the greateſt and richeſt. But Secondly, There is no great cauſe to fear that any thing hitherto revealed (or hereafter to be revealed, I believe) of this ſecret, ſhould enable men (good or bad) to do much hurt in the world. The greateſt hurt is to themſelves who are deluded (yea, and beggerd many firſt or laſt) and to ſome few not very wiſe whom they couſen as themſelves have been couſened. And for this that they can do no more, we are beholding not to the Divel who certainly would not be vvanting to himſelf or to any opportunity to do miſchief by himſelf or his Agents, but to God vvho doth not give him the povver: So much to Mirandula, out of my reſpect to his name, and for the better ſatisfaction to the Reader. I ovve the ſight and uſe of the book to my Learned friend Dr. Windett before mentioned—. I am much confirmed in that opinion (of the Divel being the Author) by vvhat I find of it in the book vvhich hath given me this occaſion to ſpeak of it. Were there nothing elſe but the groſs and impudent forgeries that have been uſed to commend it unto men, ſome entituling the Invention to Adam himſelf, others to Solomon, and the like; and the many books that have been counterfeited to the ſame end; and again the moſt ridiculous and profane applying & expounding of Scriptures, a thing uſually done by moſt that are abettors of it, thoſe things vvere enough to make a man to abhor it. Sure enough it is, that not only Dr. Dee, but others alſo vvho had part of that precious Powder brought unto them by Spirits, and expected great matters of it, vvere all cheated and gull'd (and I believe it coſt ſome of them a good deal of money; Prince Roſemberg particularly) by thoſe Spiritual Chymiſts. Let them conſider of it that have been dealing in ſuch things as they ſhall ſee cauſe.

So ſtill we ſee, that in all theſe things, as we ſaid before, the Divel is not beholding to others, (as might be ſuſpected) but others have been beholding to him: As for his Divinity, in higheſt points, if he ſpake the truth, it was for his own ends, as we ſaid before: He can do it, who makes any queſtion? In controverted points, we may obſerve, that he doth ſerve the ſcene and preſent occaſion; and I make no queſtion, but had Dr. Dee gone to Conſtantinople, and been entertained there with reſpect, his Spirits there would have ſhewed themſelves as good Mahometans, as elſewhere good Roman Catholicks, or Proteſtants.

We have ſomewhere a very pretty Tale, (I would ſay a curious Obſervation, if I thought it true) concerning the nature of the Serpent or Addar, handſomly expreſſed, how ſhe traineth her yong ones to ſet them out abroad into the world, that they may ſhift for themſelves. Twenty days, as I remember, are ſpent in that work: Now whether it be ſo really, I cannot ſay certainly, but I ſuſpect it. It is not in Ariſtotle, and I looked in Aldrovandus, and I could not finde it: But whether it be ſo or no, let no body wonder; for this was the maner of Preaching formerly (and may be yet perchance in ſome places) among Monks and Fryars in great requeſt. They would make a ſtory of Man, or Beaſts, as they thought fit themſelves, and their Fancies beſt ſerved; pretty and witty, as much as they could; whether it had any ground of truth, or no, no man required: The moralization was good. If the Divel have done ſo here, it was not through ignorance (for he is too good a Naturaliſt; and I believe there is ſomewhat even in Nature, though we know it not, why both in ſacred and prophane Hiſtory, Spirits and Serpents are ſo often joyned) of which is true and real; but as hath been ſaid, it ſerved his turn, and that is enough. And although, having conſidered it as an Objection, how the Divel cometh to ſpeak ſo much truth, as will be found in this Book; no man, I think, will expect I ſhould give an account of any falſe Doctrine or Divinity, that it may contain: Yet one point I think fit to take notice of, and proteſt againſt it; as falſe, erronious, and of dangerous conſequence, and that is, where it is ſaid, That a man (in ſome caſes) may kill another man (Prince or other) without apparent cauſe, or lawful Authority, and therefore puniſhable by the Laws of Man; who nevertheleſs, may expect a great reward at the hands of God for his act: How this may agree with the Principles of New Lights, and Anabaptiſtical Divinity, I know not; it is very contrary to the Principles of that Orthodox Divinity, lately profeſſed and eſtabliſhed by Law in England.

I have now ſaid in this main Objection, (as I apprehended it) what I think was moſt proper and pertinent, and I hope may ſatiſfie. But I have ſomewhat elſe to ſay, which in this caſe of Divels and Spirits in general, I think it very conſiderable, and may ſatisfie perchance, in ſome caſes, where nothing elſe can. We talk of Spirits, and read of Spirits often, but I think it is very little that we know (the beſt of us all) of them, of their nature or differences: And how then can it be expected that we ſhould reſolve all doubts? And though I think it is not much that any man ever knew and rightly apprehended, or can, as he is a man, in this buſineſs; yet my opinion is, (though I know it is much gainſaid and oppoſed) that ancient Platonick Phyloſophers of the latter times, underſtood much more then moſt Chriſtians; I do not write this, as though I thought, or would have any thought by others to be the worſe Chriſtians for being ignorant in theſe things; but rather, in my opinion, any man the better Christian, by much, who doth not regard it or desire it: For my part, although I must acknowledge that some scruples of my minde, did induce me to look into many Books, until I was satisfied, which otherwise I had never done; yet I profess to believe, that it is so little that can be known by man in this subject, and subject to so much illusion, as that I think no study is more vain and foolish; and that I would not go three steps out of my doors (more then what I did to satisfie my minde in some matters of Faith, if any such scruple did arise) to know as much as the profoundest Platonick, or Physopher, yea, or Magician of them all ever knew. Certainly he is but a weak Christian, when so many high Mysteries are proposed unto us in Christ by his Gospel, and of so much consequence, that cannot be know his time better: They that have any hopes, through Faith in Christ, and a godly life, to be admitted one day into the presence of God, and to see face to face, as God hath promised; will they hazard so glorious a hope, by prying through unseasonable, unprofitable curiosity, into the nature of these vassal Spirits, which God hath forbidden: But because it doth concern Religion in general, that we believe Spirits; and when Objections are made that cannot be answered, many are scandalized, and Atheists ready to take the advantage of it; I say, that it should be no wonder to any, sober and rational, if we cannot resolve all doubts, since it is so little that we know, or can know, beyond the bare ὅτι in this matter: Most Christians are bred in and to this opinion, that all Spirits, (so commonly called) are either Angels of Heaven, or Divels of Hell: I know no Scripture for it, or determination of any general Councel, that I remember, at this time at least, and so long I do not think my self bound against apparent reason: For the conceit of all evil Spirits or Divels being in Hell, I think learned Mr. Meade hath taken that to task in some of his Works, and sufficiently confuted it: The very word Spirit, is a term of great Ambiguity; We understand by it, commonly, substances, that are altogether immaterial. Many of the ancient Fathers, it is well known, did not allow of any such at all, besides God: But we think that to have no visible Body, and to be purely immaterial, is all one: God knows how many degrees there may be between these but we cannot know it, neither doth it concern our salvation, for which we have reason to praise God: But if it were so, that all Spirits are either Divels or Angels, what shall we make of these that are found in mines, of which learned Agricola hath written; of those that have been time out of minde called κόβαλοι, (from whence probably, as we have said elsewhere, Gobelin in English is derived) who live in private Houses, about old Walls, and stalks of Wood, harmless otherwise, but very thievish, so frequent and so known in some Countreys, that a man may as well doubt whether there be any Horses in England, because there are none in some parts of the World; not found in all America, I think, till some were carried thither: Neither can I believe, that those Spirits that please themselves in nothing else but harmless sports and wantonnesse, such as have been known in all Ages; such as did use to shave the hairs of Plinius Secundus his Servants in the Night, as himself relates (a very creditable man, I am sure) in his Epistles, and the like; that such Spirits, I say, have any relation either to Heaven or to Hell: We might insist in more particulars, but we do not desire to dwell upon it at this time; and there is yet somewhat else to be said: And what I have said of some Platonicks, I did not intend thereby to justifie all their absurd or superstitious Opinions in this Argument of Spirits: As they have searched further into it then others (besides damnable experience, having confounded Magick with Phylosophy, yea almost turned all Phylosophy into Magick) so it was consequent, they would fall into more Errors and Absurdities; yet withal, they have found somewhat that doth better agree with daily experience, then what is commonly known or believed. Sinesius was a Bishop, but as he doth appear to us in his Writings, a better Platonick then a Christian: In a place (in his Treatise De insomniis) he sheweth how evil Spirits come to inhabit men, and to possesse their Brains: His terms are very course, and apparantly ridiculous; but there may be some truth in the Opinion: For if there were not a very near and intimate conjunction, it were to be wondered how the Divel comes to know the very thoughts of Witches and Magicians, as is found by experience, averred by more then one: And in this very Book, if I be not mistaken, somewhat may be observed to that purpose: It is possible there may be more kindes of possession then one, and that some men, that never were suspected, have had a spirit (besides their own) resident in them, all, or most part of their lives.

I have done, with what I could think of, upon which objection can be made: The next thing is to make the way clearer to the Reader, by some consideration of the method of the Books, and explanation of some terms and phrases there used, at which perchance some may stick at the first: At the very beginning a man may be to seek, it the Title of it, Liber sexti mysteriorum, & sancti parallelus, novalisque. 1583. both as it relates to that which follows, and as it reflects upon somewhat before, by which it may be inferred that the book begins here abruptly and imperfectly: of this I am now ready to give an account to the Reader, and it is very fit it should be done.

First concerning Titles, such as will be found here many more besides this, the whole book, or relation being subdivided into many parts; in general I say, that according to the Doctors genius (we have said before he was very Cabalistical, that is, full of whimsies and crotchets, under the notion of Mysteries, a thing that some very able, otherwise, have been subject unto) and the high opinion he had of these actions and apparitions; they are mostly very concealed, and (to speak the truth) phantastick, which must make them the Obscurer: I could give the Reader a view of them all here put together, but it would be superfluous: There be some fourteen or fifteen Divisions in all now remaining, and so many Titles: There is a Table at the beginning, that doth refer to the beginning of every division, where the Title also will be found: But at the end of the viii. Division, I finde these words, Sequitur liber 24. qui hac die etiam inceptus est, à meridie: horam circiter tertiam, per ipsum Lavanael: But I finde nothing following, (but some vacant sheets, till we come to the ix. Division, Mysteriorum pragensium, &c. And the last Division hath onely some Fables, and before them, some five or six pages of unknown mystical words, which we know not what to make of; but of that more afterwards: The main business to be resolved here (as I take it) is what it is that we have, and what we have not, so far as can be gathered by what remaineth; we shall see what we can say to it. In the year of the Lord, One thousand five hundred eighty four, September the third, (being a Monday) Dr. Dee first appeared (being presented by Honorable persons, and expected) before the Emperor Rodolph. Among other things he then told him, That for these two years and a half, Gods holy Angels had used to inform him: Our Book, or first Action here, beginneth 28 May, 1583. According to this reckoning, it must be, that above a year and three Moneths before, began the first Apparition: The account then of fifteen Moneths from the first Apparition, we want: How much (in bulk) that might come to, I cannot tell; neither will I warrant all perfect from this 28 of May, 1583 to the fourth of April 1587. though for the most part the coherence is right enough to that time: But from thence to the twentieth of March, 1607. is a vast chasma or hiatus, of no less then twenty years: How this hath happened, I cannot tell certainly; what I guess, is this, some years after Dr. Dees death ( ) Sir Robert Cotton bought his Library (what then remained of it) with his Magical Table, (of which afterwards) and the Original Manuscript, written With his own hand, whereof this is a Copy: The Book had been buried in the Earth, how long, years or moneths, I know not; but so long, though it was carefully kept since, yet it retained so much of the Earth, that it began to moulder and perish some years ago, which when Sir Thomas C. (before mentioned) observed, he was at the charges to have it written out, before it should be too late: Now full fifty years, or not many wanting, being passed since this Original came to Sir Robert, it is very likely, that had any more in all that time been heard of, Sir Robert, or Sir Thomas, his Son and Heir, would have heard of it, and got it as soon as any body else: And because no more hath been heard of all this while, it is more then probable that no more is extant, not in England, nor I think any where else: Happily the rest might perish, some part, (if not all) even whilest the Doctor lived; and we shall finde in this Relation, That a good part of his holy Books were burned, but (which is more strange) a great part of them, by the help of Spirits, recovered and restored: Or it may be, that since his death, the rest (the place where they lay being unknown) might rot in the earth; now if, as probably no more be extant, we may account this that we have here, in that respect perfect, because here is all that can be had. But if any, (as it is the nature of many, if not most, rather to desire that which cannot be had, then to content themselves with that which may) shall much lament the loss of the rest, and be less pleased with this, because so much (though indeed we know not certainly whether much or little) is wanting; I would desire them to consider with themselves, in case there had been twice or thrice as much more as all this comes too, what should have been done with it? For my part, for so much as is here set out (all we had) I thought it would do best, though somewhat long, yet as a thing very extraordinary, and of great consequence to many good purposes and uses; I thought, I say, it would do best to have it all Printed; Yet we had some consideration about it, and it may be some others would have thought that less might have served the turn: But I hope more will be of my minde, and there be but few actions but afford somewhat that is extraordinary, and for some respect or other observable and useful; Howsoever, I am confident, if all had been extant, (supposing that the rest would have made much more) that none or very few would have thought fit to have Printed all; and if it had once come to a contraction or abridgement, it may be much less then this must have served: It is free for all men to think as they please; for my part all things considered, I finde no great want of the rest; and if I were put to it, I cannot tell whether I can say, that I wish more were extant: yet it gives me great content, (and I hope there is no Blasphemy or Superstition in it, if I ascribe it to providence) that after that long intermission, or hiatus, we have yet the last Actions of all, whereby it might appear, after many goodly shews and promises, so much hope and expectation; so many Prayers, so many Thanksgivings and Humiliations, what the end is of dealing with Divels, and using means that are not lawful, to compass ambitious unwarrantable desires. Besides, be it more or less that is wanting, yet I am confident we have the chiefest parts here preserved; as particularly, an exact account of his addresses and dealings with the Emperor, and other great men and Princes, in the vii. and some following Divisions; and that sad story of their promiscuous Copulation, under the perswasion of obedience to God, very particularly related in the twelfth Division; wherein as the cunning and malice of evil Spirits, to lead away from God, when they most pretend to God and godliness; so the danger of affected singularity and eminency, (the first ground of all this mischief) of Spiritual pride and self-conceit, is eminently set out to every mans observation, that is not already far engaged (as in these times too to many) in such Principles.

But yet nevertheless I must acknowledge, that there is one part of the story wanting, which I believe by most will be much desired: For whereas at the very beginning, mention is made of a Stone, and that Stone not onely there mentioned, but afterwards in every action almost, and apparition, throughout the whole Book to the very end, still occurring and commemorated as a principal thing; what it was, and how he came by it, yea and what became of it, would be known, if by any means it might: All that we are able to say of it, is this, It was a stone in which, and out of which, by persons that were qualified for it, and admitted to the sight of it; all Shapes and Figures mentioned in every Action were seen, and voices heard: The form of it was round, as appeareth by some course representations of it in the Margins, as pag. 395. 399. b. 413 b. and it seems to have been of a pretty bigness: It seems it was most like unto Crystal, as it is called sometimes, as pag 80 Inspecto Chrystallo, and page 177. b. nihil visibile apparuit in Chrystallo Sacrato, præter ipsius crystalli visibili formam. Every body knows by common experience, that smooth things are fittest for representations, as Glasses and the like; but ordinarily such things onely are represented, as stand opposite and are visible in their substance. But it is a secret of Magick (which happily may be grounded, in part at least, upon some natural reason, not known unto us) to represent Objects, externally not visible) in smooth things: And Roger Bacon (alias Bacun) in a Manuscript inscribed, De dictis & factis falsorum Mathematicorum & Dæmonum communicated unto me by my Learned and much esteemed Friend D. Windett Professor of Physick in London, hath an Observation to that purpose, in these words, Hiis Mathematicis in malitia suâ completis apparent Dæmones sencibiliter in formâ humanâ & aliis formis variis, & dicunt & faciunt multa eis mirabilia secundum quod Deus permittit. Aliquando apparent imaginarie ut in ungue pueri virginis carminati; & in pelvibus & enſibus, & in ſpathulâ arietis ſecundum modum eorum conſecratis, & in cæteris rebus politii: & Dæmones oſtendunt eis omnia quæ petunt, ſecundum quod Deus permittit. Unde pueri ſic inſpicientes res politas vident imaginariè res furtivè acceptas & ad quem locum deportatæ ſunt, & quæ perſonæ aſportaverunt; & ſic de aliis, multis, dæmones apparentes omnia hæc illis pejus oſtendunt.

Joach. Camerarius (that worthy man before ſpoken of) in his Proemium to Plutarch, De Oraculis, &c. hath a ſtrange Story upon the credit of a friend of his whom he much reſpected (as himſelf profeſſeth) for his Piety and Wiſdom. A Gentleman of Norimberg had a Cryſtal (how he came by it, is there to be read) which had this vertue; Si qua de re certior fieri vellet, &c. if he deſired to know any thing paſt or future, that concerned him, yea, or any other (in moſt things) let a young Boy (Caſtum, one that was not yet of Age, &c.) look into it, he ſhould firſt ſee a man in it, ſo and ſo apparelled, and afterwards what he deſired: No other but a Boy, ſo qualified, could ſee any thing in it. This Cryſtal became very famous in thoſe parts; yea ſome learned men came to it to be ſatisfied in doubtful points, and had their queſtions reſolved: Yet at laſt, (as well it deſerved) it was broken in pieces by Camerarius his Friend. Many ſuch ſtories are to be found of Magical Stones and Cryſtals: And though Fernelius, De abditis rerum cauſis; and after him (as I remember) one, in worth and eſteem of all men, not inferior to Fernelius, Dr. Harvey, lately deceaſed, turns the relation of a ſtrange ſtone brought to one of the late Kings of France, into an Allegory, or Phyſical explication of the power and properties of the Element of Fire; yet I am not ſatisfied, but that the relation might be literally true: For ſo it is, (as I remember here alſo, for I have none of thoſe Books by me at this time) related by Thuanus, and ſo by ſome others, very learned, underſtood.

Now for the maner how he came by it, the particulars of the ſtory cannot be had by this here preſerved, but onely this in general, That it was brought unto him by ſome, whom he thought to be Angels: So we finde him telling the Emperor, That the Angels of God had brought to him a Stone of that value, that no earthly Kingdom is of that worthineſs, as to be compared to the vertue or dignity thereof. Page 272. in his conference with Dr. Curtz, appointed by the Emperor to treat with him; and alſo let him ſee the ſtone brought me by Angelical Miniſtery: And we finde this Note recorded, [Prague, Tueſday 25 Septembris, I went to Dinner to the Spaniſh Ambaſſador, and carried with me the Stone brought me by an Angel, and the fourth Book, wherein the maner of the bringing of it is expreſſed.] And for the uſe of the Stone, beſides what hath been ſaid, this is obſervable: Some Spirits being in ſight of E. K. out of the Stone, Dr. Dee would have the Stone brought forth, but E. K. ſaid, He had rather ſee them thus, out of the Stone; to which the Doctor replies, That in the Stone they had warrant that no wicked Spirits ſhould enter; but without the Stone illuders might deal with them, unleſs God prevented it, &c. From which paſſage alſo we may learn, as from divers others in the Book that although the ſtone (as we ſaid before) was the place, in which, and out of which, ordinarily, moſt Apparitions were framed, yet it was not ſo always: For we ſhall meet with with divers things in that kinde that were ſeen and heard, without any reference to the Stone: From the ſame place alſo we may learn, that the ſaid Stone was the ſame he alſo called the Shew-ſtone; as in many places beſides. However, it is certain enough that he had more Stones then one, which he accounted ſacred; obſerve Principal Stone, and this other Stone; & firſt Sanctified Stone, uſual Shew-ſtone, and Holy-ſtone, may be thought oppoſed and different; but I underſtand it otherwiſe: This is the account we can give of this principal Holy-Stone. And to ſupply the defect of the maner how it was brought to him, the Reader, if he pleaſe, may finde ſome ſatisfaction, if he read the maner how it was taken away, and reſtored, very particularly ſet down, as before (upon another occaſion) was obſerved.

Beſides this Stone or Stones, there are divers other ſacred things mentioned, that belonged to this perſonated Sanctuary, but nothing more frequently mentioned then Curtains; a Curtain or Vail, as it is ſometimes called. A man would think at firſt, perchance, that it was ſomewhat outward, but it will be found otherwiſe; it was ſeen in the Stone, and appeared of different forms and colours, as they that read will quickly finde.

Next unto theſe the Holy Table is chiefly conſiderable, ordering of it is referred to Dr. Dee, which he durſt not take upon himſelf, until he had warrant from his Spiritual Teachers: This Table, which may well be called Magical, is preſerved and to be ſeen in Sir Thomas Cottons Library (from whence we had the reſt) and by his leave is here repreſented in a braſs Cut; mention is made of it, as I take it, where Dr. Dee propoſeth to his Teachers, Whether the Table (for the middle croſs of uniting the 4 principal parts) be made perfect or no: You may ſee more of it, it is alſo called League Table, Table of Covenant, menſa fœderis in ſome places: The Pedeſtal of it is mentioned in two or three places, and indeed a very curious Frame belonging unto it, yet to be ſeen in the ſaid Library. But I know not what to make of that, neither Nalu: nor the Table appeareth; and the round Table or Globe appeared not. I believe it muſt be underſtood of ſomewhat that had appeared before in the ſtone. The Reader that will be ſo curious, by careful reading may ſoon finde it out; I was not willing to beſtow too much time upon it.

But here remaineth a main buſineſs whereof we are to give an account to the Reader: There were many Tables or Schemes at the end of the Book, containing Letters, a. b. c. &c. diſpoſed into little ſquares, with an Inſcription over each Table in that unknown Character (before ſpoken of) expreſſed in uſual Letters how it ſhould be read. There is one for a Specimen here at the end of the Preface; the reſt were omitted, becauſe it was judged needleſs, except it were to increaſe the price of the Printed book. For firſt, Dr. Dee himſelf, though he took a great deal of pains to underſtand the Myſtery of them, and had great hopes given him from time to time to reap the benefit (himſelf complains of it in more then one place) of his toilſome work and long patience, yet it never came to any thing: and if he made nothing of them (to benefit himſelf thereby) what hopes had we? Beſides, we may judge of theſe Tables, and all this myſtery of Letters, by what we have ſeen in others of the ſame kinde. Johannes Trithemius was a man that was ſuppoſed by moſt to have dealt with Spirits a long time, and to have been inſtructed by them in

ſome of thoſe ſecrets that he pretends unto by his Books. I know ſome have thought him innocent, or at leaſt, have attempted to juſtifie him: Some affect ſuch things to ſhew their wit, and think they ſhall be thought much wiſer then other men, if they contradict received Opinions, though their vanity and ſtrong conceit of their own parts, be their chief, if not onely ground. Learned and Judicious Maſter Voſſius, hath ſhewed himſelf very willing to think the beſt of him and his Books; yet he gives it over at laſt, and rather concludes on the contrary. They that dare defend Apollonius, the greateſt upholder of Ethniciſm that ever was, and by moſt Heathens accounted either a God, or a Magician, need not ſtick at any thing in this kinde: But ſay he was, what any man will have of him. (Frithemius we ſpeak of, his Polygraphy, he ſet out in his life time, dedicated to the then Emperor: He tells the World of the greateſt wonders to be done by it, that ever were heard of: All Wiſdom and Arts, all Languages, Eloquence, and what not, included in it. But I never heard of any man that could make any thing of it or reaped any benefit in any kinde; which I think is the reaſon that his Steganography, mentioned and promiſed in this firſt work was ſo long after his death before it was Printed: It was expected it would have given ſome light to the firſt; but neither of that nor of this latter, could ever any thing, that ever I could hear, be made by any man. I have good ground for what I ſay: For beſides what others have acknowledged, I finde learned Vigenaire, (who in his old age was grown himſelf very Cabaliſtical, or it may be had ſome diſpoſition that way, though very learned otherwiſe, from his natural temper) as much grounded in that book, as any man before him: He doth plainly profeſs he could make nothing of it: And truly if he could not, that had beſtowed ſo much time and pains in thoſe unprofitable ſtudies, I ſee little hopes that any man elſe ſhould. It would make a man almoſt hate Learning, to ſee what dotage, even the moſt learned, are ſubject unto: I could bleſs them that know but little, ſo themſelves knew it is but little that they know, and were humble: But it commonly falls out otherwiſe, that they that know but little, think that little to be much, and are very proud of it; whereas much knowledge (or to ſpeak properly, more knowledge) if well uſed, hath this advantage that it makes men moſt ſenſible of their ignorance. The reading of Vigenaires book of Cyphers (which I once thought a rare piece, as many other things of the ſame Author, which I had read) hath expreſſed theſe words from me in this place; and becauſe it hath ſo much affinity with our preſent Theme, I was the bolder; But to return. Upon this conſideration, the Reader I hope, will not be ſorry the reſt of the Tables (being many in number) were omitted. Though I muſt adde withal, had I known or thought any uſe could be made of them, having no better opinion of the Author (him or them) I mean, from whom Dr. Dee had them) I ſhould not have been very forward to have had a hand in their coming abroad.

I ſhould have told the Reader before but it may do well enough here, that beſides the particulars before ſpecified, there were other things that belonged to this holy Furniture (as Dr. Dee ſomewhere doth ſpeak) whereof mention is made in ſome places: as Carpet, Candleſtick, Taper, Table-Cloth, Cuſhion, and ſome others perchance. But I know nothing needs be obſerved upon any of these. I make no question but the Divel in all these things had a respect to the Ceremonial Law especially; as also in those words, Move not, for the place is holy, often repeated, which are also elsewhere expounded: The Interlocutors in all this relation, are, △. (that is, Dr. Dee) and E. K. that is Edw. Kelley; and the Spirits, to the number of some twenty, or thereabouts, so many named: (Madini, Esemeli, Merifri, Ath, Galuah, Il, Jubenladece, Gabriel, Jam, Moreorgran, Aph, Lasben, Uriel, Naluage, Mapsama, Aue, Ilemese, Gaza, Vaa, Leveanael, Ben,) at least, but whether all Interlocutors, I know not, because I do not remember, neither doth it much concern.

There be divers marginal Notes and Observations, which being of Dr. Dee his own, are for the most part not inconsiderable, and some very remarkable, all therefore here exhibited; but whereas in some places he had attempted to represent the apparition, or some part of it, in Figures also; this being done but sometimes, and in case it had been done oftner (except it were to satisfie the childish humor of many Buyers of Books in this Age, when because they buy not to read, must have somewhat to look upon; whence it comes to pass, that much trash doth pass for good ware, for the trimming sake, and on the contrary) of little use, no notice is taken of it; except some Figure be in the Text it self, and of some consequence, for the better understanding of the rest.

The Greek, p. 25. b. is exactly set out, as it was found, and yet to be seen in the original, written by Dr. Dee himself: But little or nothing can be made of it, as it is written; and it is a sign that Dr. Dee who writ it, as Edw. Kelley reported it unto him, and afterwards plodded upon it (as doth appear by some Conjectures and Interpretations found in the original, and here also exhibited) as well as he could. was no very perfect Grecian; much less Edw. Kelley, who could not so much as read it, which made Dr. Dee to write some things that he would not have Kelley to read, in Greek Characters, though the words were English: I would not alter any thing that was in the Original: But the words, I believe spoken by the Spirit (and so the Greek is warrantable enough) were these, Οὗτος ὁ ἑλαιεργος τοῦτο ἔργον ἀναιρήσει: Κόσμος γὰρ πεῴλυμος τυγχάνει ὢν: Καὶ αὐτὸς τοσοῦτον πειρᾴζεται: Ὥστε κοίνης ἀφελκυστίας φιλίας: Εἰσέρχ μὴ τινὰ αὐτῷ ἀφορμὴν παρέξης: Τὰς γὰρ ἀπάτας κομιδῇ παρασκευάζεται: Ἵνα σε διὰ παντὸς ἀπολείπῃ: This I think was intended of Edw. Kelley, who was ever and anon upon projects to break with Dr. Dee, and to be gone, as here presently after, and in divers other places of this relation; nay, did really forsake him sometimes for some time: The sence verbatim is this: This fellow (or Friend) will overthrow this work (of Apparitions you must understand, to which he was requisite, because the Divel had not that power over Dr. Dees Body, to fit it, though he did promise it him, for such sights.) His baggage (or furniture) is in a readiness. And he doth very much endeavor: To withdraw himself from this common friendship. Take heed, that you give him no occasion: For he doth mightily plot by art and cunning: How he may leave you for ever. Πεῴλυμος, in the first line, may seem unusual, for ἕτοιμος, or πεῴλυος; but it is an elegant Metaphore. Πειρᾴζεται for πειρᾴζει, is not usual; and happily it should have been πειρᾴλας, and so uttered; but that is nothing. Certainly he that could speak so much Greek, (called here Syrian, to jeer Ed. Kelley) could not want Latine at any time to express himself; which nevertheless, might be thought, where we finde him speaking English, to them that understood it not; so that Dr. Dee was fain to interpret it: But we cannot give an account of all his fetches and projects: He had a consideration, I make no question.

I cannot think of any thing else that the Reader need to be told, that is of this nature, and it may be somewhat might have been spared: However the Reader will consider, that as in all Books, so in this: It is one thing to read from the beginning, and so to go on with heed and observation, without skipping; and another thing to read here and there, which would require a perpetual Comment, which is the wretchedness of most Readers, in these declining days of Learning; and therefore they have Comments (or Rhapsodies rather) accordingly; similes habent labra lactuses, never more true of any thing.

It may be some will wonder what made the Spirits to fall upon English Genealogies and Stories; it is at very beginning, therefore I take notice of it for the Readers sake, that is yet (and cannot otherwise) a stranger to the Book: The business is, Dr. Dee was lately grown into great league and confederacy with Albert Lasky, (or à lasco rather) a great man of Polonia. You had before what Cambden saith of him of his coming to England, at this very time, and his going away, which doth very well agree with our dates here. It seems, though nobly born, and to great dignity, yet his thoughts did aspire much higher; and though no rich man, for a man of his rank and quality, yet expecting such matters from Dr. Dee and his Spirits, as he did, he could finde money enough to supply their wants upon occasion. The Spirits were very glad of the occasion, and did what they could to cherish him according to his humor: Being then at that very time upon deliberations, that much depended of Alb Laskey and his good opinion; among other things, his Pedegree, which must needs please a vain man very well, was taken into consideration: That every thing there said, doth exactly agree to the truth, as I do not warrant it so neither am I at leisure at this time to take the pains to examine. We must never look further in those things that are delivered by such, then if it were, or be pertinent (true or false) to their end and present occasion. Besides, it is very possible, (which I desire the Reader to take good notice of) that both here and elsewhere the Transcribers, as they could not read sometimes, and were forced to leave some blancks (though seldome to any considerable prejudice of the sence) so they might mistake also, having to do with an Original that was (and is yet to be seen) so defaced and worm-eaten as this is, written (as we have said) by Dr. Dee himself.

Besides the authentickness of the Original Copy, written by Dr. Dee himself; the Reader may know, that the Originals of the Letters that are here exhibited, are all, or most of them yet preserved, and to be seen in Sir Tho. Cottons Library.

IV. I am now come to the last of the four things that I promised, to shew the several good uses that may be made of this Book, and which were principally looked upon in the publishing of it. This order indeed I proposed to my self, but great part of this occasion offering it self upon other matter, is already performed in the former Discourse, so that but little is now left to be done. However I will sum them up, and represent them together, that every Reader may have have them in readineſs and in view for his uſe the better.

The firſt is againſt Atheiſts, and ſuch as do not believe that there be any Divels or Spirits: We have argued it, I confeſs, pretty largely, at the beginning of this Diſcourſe or Preface, and I hope ſome may receive competent ſatisfaction by what we have ſaid: But if no Argument had been uſed, (letting aſide Scripture Authority, which would be impertinent againſt Atheiſts) I do not know what can be more convincing then this ſad Story, ſo exactly ſo particularly, ſo faithfully delivered. Truly, they muſt ſee further then I do, that can finde what to anſwer (rationally) and to oppoſe: This is a great point, and a great ground of Religion; but this is not all: For if there be Spirits indeed, ſo wicked and malicious, ſo ſtudious and ſo induſtrious, to delude men, and to do miſchief, which is their end, all which is ſo fully repreſented in this Relation; then certainly muſt it follow, that there is a great over-ruling Power, that takes care of the Earth, and of the Inhabitants of it; of them eſpecially that adore that Power, and worſhip it with true affection and ſincerity: For without this over ruling Power, what a miſerable World ſhould we have? What man ſober or innocent, that could enjoy himſelf at any time with any comfort or ſecurity? But again, what man can read this ſad Story and can be ſo perſwaded of his own Wiſdom or innocency, but will in ſome degree reflect upon himſelf, and will be moved to praiſe God, that notwithſtanding many provocations in ſeveral kindes (as damnable curioſity, open prophaneneſs, frequent Oathes, Curſes, Perjuries, ſcandalous Life, and the like) God hath been pleaſed to protect and preſerve him from the force and violence of ſuch enemies of mankinde?

I ſaid before, from leſs beginnings greateſt confuſions had enſued, which is very true as in the caſe of Bacchus particularly many Ages before; and in the caſe of Mahomet afterwards (two notable lewd Enthuſiaſts, by whom as Inſtruments, evil Spirits, by Gods permiſſion, brought great alterations in Governments, and wrought much miſchief and villany among Men and Women) we ſhall elſewhere ſhew more at large. By due conſideration of all Circumſtances, as chiefly their confident and reiterated Addreſſes unto, and Attempts upon ſo many great men in Power and Authority, and the like; I am much of opinion that theſe Spirits had as great hopes of Dr. Dee, as ever they had of Bacchus or Mahomet. But God was not pleaſed at that time to permit that their malice and ſubtilty ſhould prevail. And I think, if we conſider it well, we have reaſon to praiſe God for it. England might have been over-run with Anabaptiſm (when I ſay Anabaptiſm, I mean Anabaptiſm confirmed and in full power, not as it appears in its firſt pretentions) long before this: God be thanked that it was not then and God keep it from it ſtill, I hope is the Prayer of all truly ſober and Religious And in very deed I know no reaſon, but the Wiſdom and prudence of their Majeſties Councel that then were, in oppoſing Dr. Dees frequent addreſſes and Sollicitations, may (under God) challenge and deſerve ſome part of our Thanks and Acknowledgement.

Again, The Divel we ſee can Pray and Preach, (as to outward appearance we mean; for truly and really, God forbid that any thing ſacred and holy ſhould be thought to proceed from Divels) and talk of Sanctity and Mortification, as well as the beſt. And what he can in his own perſon, or by himſelf immediately; diately; there is no queſtion, but he doth by his Miniſters and Inſtruments much more, more ordinarily and frequently I mean: Let any man judge then, whether it be the part of a ſober wiſe man, not onely to hear ſuch men as can give no account of their calling, but alſo to follow them, to embrace their Doctrine, to be of their number or Congregation; and all this, upon this account, becauſe they can pray and preach very well, (as they think and judge at leaſt) and talk very godlily and zealouſly? How much more inexcuſable they that will cleave unto ſuch, though they ſee and know them ſcandalous in their Lives, Proud, Inſolent, Ignorant, Seditious, Intolerable, becauſe they can pray, and preach, and talk, as beſt agreeth with their own humor, and gives them beſt content? Can any man think they follow God in this, who would have all things done in order, and is not a God of Confuſion, (1 Cor. 14. 33, 40.) when all they do, tends to nothing elſe but diſorder and confuſion? I confeſs it is poſſible, that men lawfully called may prove bad enough, we have divers examples in the Scripture. But if a man, ſimply and ignorantly be miſ-led by ſuch, certainly his judgement will be much lighter then they can expect, who will not uſe the means that God hath ordained, in ſo great and weighty a buſineſs as the ſalvation of Souls is. I know not what theſe men can ſay for themſelves, except it be, that they are reſolved to make uſe of the Liberty of the times to pleaſe their humor; they may do it, but if that bring them to Heaven, they have good luck.

But the buſineſs of praying, is that I would principally inſiſt upon: You ſee here how Dr. Dee, where he gives an account of himſelf to the Emperor, and others, bears himſelf much upon this, that ſo many years he had been an earneſt Suitor unto God by Prayer to obtain Wiſdom, ſuch wiſdom as he was ambitious of. I believe him, that he had prayed very earneſtly, and with much importunity many times: This was the thing that made him ſo confident of his Spirits, that they muſt needs be good Spirits and Angels. I know a man, I have no comfort to tell it, but that I would not conceal any thing that may be a warning unto others, and yet I will have a reſpect unto him too: But I knew one, a very innocent man (in his outward converſation, and as I believe very really) Humble, Religious, very Learned and Orthodox, and one that had ſuffered for his Conſcience, as others have done in theſe times: This worthy man, being engaged in a controverted Argument, upon which his phancy had wrought very much, or rather which had much wrought upon his phancy; he had written much, filled much Paper, and was deſirous to communicate unto me as his friend what he had done: But when I perceived that the drift of his writing was out of the Law and the Prophets, to ſhew the neceſſity of ſome things which I thought of a more indifferent nature; I was not willing to meddle with it; and begun to argue againſt his main drift, and to ſhew my diſliking. After many words to and fro, he began to preſs me with this, that he had often prayed with much earneſtneſs, and he was very confident that God had heard his Prayers: Yea, he proceeded ſo far, that if God were true, he could not be deceived, and uſed many other words to the ſame purpoſe, at which I was much amazed, but could could do no good upon him, such was his confidence and violence upon this occasion, though otherwise a very moderate ingenuous man: And thus I found him more then once, or twice. Truly, I think God was very merciful unto him, that took him away in good time. But certainly this business of Prayer and praising, is a business as of great comfort (the greatest that mortal man is capable of upon earth) so of much more danger and delusion, then many do believe. And if caution and circumspection be to be used in any thing that belongs to Religion, I think it ought in Prayer, as much as any thing. And since I have adventured to tell one story upon mine own credit, I will tell one more upon better authority, which I have long desired (for the observableness of it) to communicate unto the world, and to that end, had once inserted it in a Treatise of mine, which I thought would have been Printed, but it was not: I will first give the English of it, that all men may reap the benefit, and then set it down in the words of my Author (mine own Father Isaac Casaubon, of b. m.) as I have it to shew under his hand.

At a Consistory in Geneva, upon a Friday, 18 July, 1589. The case of one Mr. Nicholas being there proposed to the Assembly to be considered of, who was wont to insinuate himself into private Houses, under pretence of praying, and made small congregations: The business was disliked by the Pastors; First, because nothing in the Church of God ought to be done without order. Secondly, because to turn such duties of Religion to matter of Traffick to get money onely, (without any other end or calling) was not lawful. Thirdly and lastly, his battalogy, (or vain repetition of words) was not to be suffered: Then upon this occasion it was related by Mr. Beza, that the Saturday before, whilest that sharp conflict was, which we had before our eyes, (to wit, between the Genevians, and the Duke of Savoys Forces) that a certain Woman addressed her self to him, saying, What Mr. Beza, will you make Prayers here? To which he had answered, No: What, do you think I do behold these things with mine eyes onely, and do not pray to God in my heart? Giving this reason for his answer he had made to the Woman: [It is not so expressed in the Latine, that the following words were Beza's words, but the coherence of matter doth so require it] That Prayer was certainly a holy thing, which it did not become any man to apply himself unto, (or to undertake) without due preparation: And that they were deceived, who thought it so easie a thing to pray rightly: And that care also should be taken lest [under a colour of zeal and devotion] a way be made to superstition: The Latine words are these, [Die Veneris, Julii 18. 1589. Cùm relatum esset in cœtum, de Mag. Nicolao, qui insinuaret se in domos varias προφάσει τῦ εὔχεσθαι, & ita aliquando cœtus, etsi paruos, coire solitos, pastoribus res improbata est: Primùm, quia extra ordinem, nihil in Dei Ecclesia fieri debet: Deinde, quia πρόσχημα facere τὴν τρησκείαν, nefas. Tertio, hominis βατταλογία *non ferenda Narratum est tum à B se die Sabbathi proxime præcedente, dum acerrimum illud prælium committeretur, quod nobis erat ante oculos, interrogatum à mulieraculâ, Quid tu D. In the laſt place, All men may take warning by this example, how they put themſelves out of the protection of Almighty God, either by preſumptuous unlawful wiſhes and deſires, or by ſeeking not unto Divels onely, directly (which Dr. Dee certainly never did, but abhorred the thought of it in his heart) but unto them that have next relation unto Divels, as Witches, Wizzards, Conjurers, Aſtrologers, (that take upon them to foretell humane events) Fortune-tellers, and the like, yea and all Books of that ſubject, which I doubt, were a great occaſion of Dr. Dees deluſion: That men are commonly cheated by ſuch, is ſure enough; and thoſe that are not very fools, would take heed how they deal with them, and avoid them, to avoid the Imputation of Fools; but thoſe that are wiſe, much more, if they can more then cheat; for the more they can do, the more they know they have of the Divel in them: Wretched people! that will not, dare not truſt God, who as he is the onely fountain of goodneſs, ſo onely knows what is good for every man. They may rejoyce for a time, and applaud themſelves in their conceited ſucceſſes, but miſery, if they repent not, will be their end; and it is a great ſign that God is very angry with them, when he doth ſuffer them to thrive by means which Himſelf hath curſed.

POST-

POSTSCRIPT.

SInce this Preface was written, and almoſt printed, I was ſhewed a Book, entituled, Theatrum Chemicum Britannicum, &c. by Elias Aſhmole Eſq; and in ſome Annotations there, at the end, an account concerning Dr. Dee and Edw. Kelley, (there ſtiled Sir Edward Kelley) out of a Diary of Dr. Dees, all written with his own hand: As I do not queſtion the Gentlemans fidelity in this buſineſs, ſo I make as little queſtion but Dr. Dee's own hand will be found to agree in all matters of Fact both here and there, if any ſhall take the pains to compare. And it may be the Reader may receive ſome further ſatisfaction in ſome particulars by his labor, which is the reaſon that I mention the Book here, being but lately come to my knowledge; His Judgement either concerning Dr. Dee, or Kelley, I meddle not with; and it may be, had he ſeen what is here to be ſeen, he would have been of another opinion in ſome things; Here is enough, I am ſure, to ſatisfie any man that is not very much preoccupied, or otherwiſe engaged by particular ends. As for thoſe Reports concerning Kelley, (ſome whereof concern Dr. Dee alſo) he tells us of, as I believe him, that he hath heard ſo, ſo I muſt (and may truly) profeſs, that I have met with far contrary, and in my judgement, and by this account here given us by Dr. Dee, much more probable: And particularly, that Kelley was put in Priſon by the Emperor, for a notable Chymical cheat that he had put upon him; the particulars whereof, though they were fully related unto me, yet I will not adventure upon, leſt I miſtake in ſome terms of art, or petty circumſtance of fact. And let the Reader judge by that account, Dr. Dee (who beſt knew) doth give us here throughout the whole Book of this Kelley, whether Wevers Story in his Funeral Monum. pag. 45, 46. of damnable Necromancy, and other Diabolical Conjuration, practiſed by Kelley in Lancaſhire, be not (beſides what is there ſaid and atteſted) much more probable, then any thing that hath been or can be ſaid by others, to his juſtification or commendation: Which indeed doth make Doctor Dee's caſe altogether inexcuſable, that believing and knowing the man to be ſuch a one, he would have to do with him, and expected good by his Miniſteries; but that the Doctor his Faith, and his intellectualls (through Gods juſt judgement, as we have ſaid) were ſo much in the power and government of his Spirits, that they might perſwade him to any thing, under colour of doing ſervice unto God, yea had it been to cut his own Fathers throat, as we ſee in the Relation, that they perſwaded him to lie with another mans Wife, and proſtitute his own to a vile, and, by himſelf belived, Diabolical man.

Beſides, I have been told by many, that Dr. Dee, very poor and every way miſerable, dyed at Mortlack, here about London, which doth not ſeem to agree with the report in thoſe Annotations: But enough of them: Neither indeed have I ſaid any thing at all of purpoſe to oppoſe the Author, but to give this further ſatisfaction to the Reader, or rather to the truth, which I thought I was bound to do.

The paſſage in Wevers Funeral Monuments, pag. 45, 46. concerning Kelley, for their ſatisfaction that have not the Book, is this; Kelley, (otherwiſe called Talbot) that famous Engliſh Alchymiſt of our times, who flying out of his own Countrey (after he had loſt both his ears at Lancaſter) was entertained by Rodolph the ſecond, and laſt of that Chriſtian name, Emperor of Germany; for whom Elizabeth of famous memory, ſent (very ſecretly) Captain Peter Gwyn, with ſome others, to perſwade him to return back to his own Native home, which he was willing to do; and thinking to eſcape away in the night, by ſtealth, as he was clammering over a Wall in his own Houſe in Prague (which bears his name to this day, and ſometimes was an old Sanctuary) he fell down from the Battlements, broke his leggs, and bruiſed his body, of which hurts within a while after, he departed this World.

Sed quorſum hæc? you will ſay: Then thus, This Diabolical queſtioning of the dead, for the knowledge of future accidents, was put in practice by the ſaid Kelley, who upon a certain Night, in the Park of Walton in le dale, in the County of Lancaſter, with one Paul Waring, (his fellow-companion in ſuch Deeds of darkneſs) invocated ſome one of the Infernal Regiment, to know certain paſſages in the life, as alſo what might be known by the Divels foreſight, of the manner and time of the death of a Noble yong Gentleman, as then in Wardſhip. The Black Ceremonies of that Night being ended, Kelley demanded of one of the Gentlemans ſervants, what Corſe was the laſt buryed in Law Church-yard, a Church thereunto adjoyning, who told him of a poor man that was buryed there but the ſame day: He and the ſaid Waring, intreated this foreſaid ſervant to go with them to the Grave of the man ſo lately interred, which he did; and withal, did help them to dig up the Carcaſe of the poor Catiff, whom by their Incantations, they made him (or rather ſome evil Spirit through his Organs) to ſpeak, who delivered ſtrange Predictions concerning the ſaid Gentleman. I was told thus much by the ſaid Serving-man, a Secondary Actor in that diſmal abhorred buſineſs; and divers Gentlemen and others are now living in Lancaſhire, to whom he hath related this Story. And the Gentleman himſelf (whoſe memory I am bound to honor) told me a little before his death, of this Conjuration by Kelley, as he had it by relation from his ſaid Servant and Tenant, onely ſome circumſtances excepted, which he thought not fitting to come to his Maſters knowledge.

Doctor

Dr. Dee's Apology,

Sent to the Arch-Bishop of CANTERBURY. 159⅘.

OR,

A Letter containing a most brief Discourse Apogeticall, with a plain Demonstration, and fervent Protestation for the lawfull, sincere, very faithfull and Christian course of the Philosophicall Studies and Exercises, of a certain studious Gentleman: An ancient Servant to Her most Excellent Majesty Royall.

To the most Reverend Father in God, the Lord Archbishop of Canterbury, Primate and Metropolitane of all England, one of Her Majesties most Honorable Privie Councell: my singular good Lord.

MOst humbly and heartily I crave your Graces pardon, if I offend any thing, to send, or present unto your Graces hand, so simple a Discourse as this is: Although, by some sage and discreet my friends their opinion, it is thought not to be impertinent, to my most needfull suits, presently in hand, (before her most Excellent Majesty Royall, your Lordships good Grace, and other the Right Honourable Lords of her Majesties Privy Councell) to make some part of my former studies, and studious exercises (within and for these 46 years last past, used and continued) to be first known and discovered unto your Grace, and other the right Honourable, my good Lords of her Majesties privy Councell: And secondly, afterwards, the same to be permitted to come to publick view: Not so much, to stop the mouthes, and, at length to stay the impudent attempts, of the rash, and malicious devisers, and contrivers of most untrue, foolish, and wicked reports, and fables, of, and concerning my foresaid studious exercises, passed over, with my great, (yea incredible) paines, travells, cares, and costs, in the search, and learning of true Philosophie; As, therein, So, to certifie, and satisfie the godly and unpartiall Christian hearer, or reader hereof: That, by his own judgement, (upon his due consideration, and examination of this, no little parcell, of the particulars of my foresaid studies, and exercises philosophicall annexed) He will, or may, be sufficiently informed, and perswaded; That I have wonderfully laboured, to find, follow, use, and haunt the true, straight, and most narrow path, leading all true, devout, zealous, faithfull, and constant Christian ſtian ſtudents, ex valle hac miſeriæ, & miſeria iſtius vallis: & tenebrarum Regno; & tenebris iſtius Regni, ad montem ſanctum Syon & ad cœleſtia tabernacula. All thanks, are moſt due, therefore, unto the Almighty: Seeing, it o pleaſed him, (even from my youth, by his divine favour, grace, and help) to inſinuate into my heart, an inſatiable zeal, and deſire, to know his truth: And in him, and by him, inceſſantly to ſeek, and liſten after the ſame; by the true Philoſophical method and harmony proceeding and aſcending, (as it were) gradatim, from things viſible, to conſider of things inviſible: from things bodily, to conceive of things ſpirituall: from things tranſitory, and momentary, to mediate of things permanent: by things mortall (viſible and inviſible) to have ſome perſeverance of immortality. And to conclude, moſt briefly; by the moſt mervailous frame of the whole World, philoſophically viewed, and circumſpectly weighed, numbred, and meaſured (according to the talent, and gift of GOD, from above alotted, for his divine purpoſes effecting) moſt faithfully to love, honor, and glorifie alwaies, the Framer, and Creator thereof. In whoſe workmanſhip, his infinite goodneſs, unſearchable wiſdome, and Almighty power, yea, his everlaſting power, and divinity, may (by innumerable means) be manifeſted, and demonſtrated. The truth of which my zealous, carefull, and conſtant intent, and endeavour ſpecified, may (I hope) eaſily appear by the whole, full and due ſurvey, and conſideration of all the Books, Treatiſes, and Diſcourſes, whoſe Titles onely, are, at this time, here annexed, and expreſſed: As they are ſet down in the ſixth Chapter, of another little Rhapſodicall Treatiſe, intituled, the Compendious Rehearſall, &c. written above two years ſince: for thoſe her Majeſties two honorable Comiſſioners; which her moſt excellent Majeſty had moſt graciouſly ſent to my poor Cottage in Mortclacke: to underſtand the matters, and cauſes at full; through which, I was ſo extreamly urged to procure at her Majeſties hands ſuch Honorable ſurveyors and witneſſes to be aſſigned, for the due proof of the contents, of my moſt humble and pitifull ſupplication, exhibited unto her moſt Excellent Majeſty, at Hampton Court, An 1592. Novemb. 9. With many other Books, Pamphlets, Discourses, Inventions, and Conclusions, in divers Arts and matters: whose names, need not in this Abstract to be notified: The most part of all which, here specified, lie here before your Honours upon the Table, on your left hand. But by other books and Writings of another sort, (if it so please God, and that he will grant me life, health, and due maintenance thereto, for some ten or twelve years next ensuing) I may, hereafter make plaine, and without doubt, this sentence to be true, Plura latent, quàm patent.

Thus far (my good Lord) have I set down this Catalogus, out of the foresaid sixt Chapter, of the booke, whose title is this:

49. The Compendious rehearsall of John Dee, his dutifull declaration and proofe of the course and race of his studious life, for the space of halfe an hundred years, now (by Gods favour and help) fully spent, &c.

To which compendious rehearsall, doth now belong an Appendix, of these two last years: In which I have had many just occasions, to confesse, that Homo Homini Deus, and Homo Homini Lupus, was and is an Argument, worthy of the decyphering, and large discussing: as may, one day, hereafter (by Gods help) be published, in some manner very strange. And besides all the rehearsed *B*ooks & Treatises of my writiug, or handling hitherto, I have just cause, lately given me to write & publish a Treatise, with Title (50.) De Horizonte Æternitatis: to make evident, that one Andreas Libavius, in a book of his, printed the last year, hath unduly considered a phrase of my Monas Hyeroglyphica:

gliphica: to his misliking, by his own unskilfulnesse in such matter: and not understanding my apt application thereof, in one of the very principal places, of the whole Book. And this book of mine, by Gods help and favour (shall be dedicated unto her most Excellent Majesty Royall: And this Treatise doth contain three books;

1. The first Intituled, De Horizoute: liber Mathematicus & Physicus.

2. The second, De Æternitate: liber Theologicus, Metaphysicus & Mathematicus.

3. The third, De Horizonte Æternitatis: liber Theologicus, Mathematicus, & Hierotechnicus.

It may now be here also remembred, that almost three years after the writing of this Letter, I did somewhat satisfie the request of an Honourable Friend in Court, by speedily penning some matter concerning her Majesties Sea-Soveraignte: under this title, 51. Thalattocratia Brytannica.

Sive,

¶ Truly I have great cause to praise and thanke God, for your Graces very charitable using of me: both in sundry points else, and also in your favourable yeelding to, yea & notifying the due means for the performance of her Sacred Majesties most gracious and bountifull disposition, resolution, and very royall beginning, to restore and give unto me (her Ancient faithfull servant) some due maintenance to lead the rest of my old daies, in some quiet and comfort: with habilitie, to retaine some speedy, faire, and Orthographicall writers, about me; and the same skilfull in Latine and Greek (at the least:) aswell for my own books, and Works, fair, and correctly to be written (such I mean, as either her most Excellent Majestie, out of the premisses will make choice of, or command to be finished or published: or such of them, as your grace shall think meet or worthy for my farther labor to be bestowed on) as else for the speedy, faire, and true writing out of other ancient Authors their good and rare workes, in greek or Latine: which by GODS Providence, have been preserved from the spoile made of my Librarie, and of all my movable goods here, &c. Anno 1583. * In which Librarie, were about 4000. books; whereof, 700. were anciently written by hand; Some in Greeke, some in Latine, some in Hebrew, And some in other languages (as may by the whole Catalogus thereof appeare.) But the great losses and dammages which in sundry sorts I have sustained, do not so much grieve my heart, as the rash, lewde, fond, and most untrue fables, and reports of me, and my Studies Philosophicall, have done, and yet do; which commonly, after their first hatching, and devilish devising, immediately with great speed, are generally all the Realme overspread; and to some, seem true; to other, they are doubtfull; and to onely the wise, modest, discreet, godly, and charitable (and chiefly to such as have some acquaintance with me) they appear, and are known to be fables, untruths, and utterly false reports, and slanders. Well, this shall be my last charitable giving of warning, and fervent protestation to my Countreymen, and all other in this case;

* Although that my last voyage beyond the Seas, was duly undertaken (by her Majesties good favour and licence) as by the same words may appear in the Letter, written by the Right Honourable Lord Treasurer, unto your Grace in my behalf, and her most Excellent Majestie willing his Honor so to do. Anno. 1590. the 20. of January.

A fervent PROTESTATION.

BEfore the Almighty our GOD, and your Lordſhips good Grace, this day, on the perill of my ſouls damnation (if I lie, or take his name in vaine herein) I take the ſame GOD, to be my witneſſe; That with all my heart, with all my ſoul, with all my ſtrength, power and underſtanding (according to the meaſure thereof, which the Almighty hath given me) for the moſt part of the time, from my youth hitherto, I have uſed and ſtill uſe, good, lawfull, honeſt, chriſtian and divinely preſcribed means to attain to the knowledge of thoſe truthes, which are meet, and neceſſary for me to know; and wherewith to do his divine Majeſty ſuch ſervice, as he hath, doth, and will call me unto, during this my life: for his honour and glory advancing, and for the benefit, and commoditie publique of this Kingdome; ſo much, as by the will and purpoſe of God ſhall lie in my skill, and hability to perform: as a true, faithfull, and moſt ſincerely dutifull ſervant, to our moſt gracious and incomparable Queen Elizabeth, and as a very comfortable fellow-member of the body politique, governed under the ſcepter Royal of our earthly Supreame head (Queen Elizabeth) and as a lively ſympathicall, and true ſymetricall fellow-member of that holy and myſticall body, Catholiquely extended and placed (whereſoever) on the earth: in the view, Knowledge, direction, protection, illumination and conſolation of the Almighty, moſt Bleſſed, moſt holy, moſt glorious, comajeſticall, coeternall, and coeſſentiall Trinity: The Head of that Body, being only our Redeemer, Chriſt Jeſus, perfect God, and perfect man: whoſe return in glory, we faithfully awaite; and daily doe very earneſtly cry unto him, to haſten his ſecond comming for his elects ſake; iniquity doth ſo on this earth abound and prevaile, and true faith with Charity and Evangelicall ſimplicity, have but cold; ſlender and uncertain intertainment among the worldly-wiſe men of this world.

Therefore (herein concluding) I beſeech the Almighty God, moſt abundantly to increaſe and confirm your Graces heavenly wiſedome, and endue you with all the reſt of his heavenly gifts, for the relieving, refreſhing and comforting, both bodily and ſpiritually, his little flock of the faithfull, yet militant here on earth. Amen.

An EPILOGUE.

Good my Lord, I beſeech Your Grace, to allow of my plaine and comfortable Epilogus, for this matter at this time. 1. Seeing my ſtudious exerciſes, and converſation civill, may be abundantly teſtified, to my good credit, in the moſt parts of all Chriſtendome; and that by all degrees of Nobility, by all degrees of the Learned, and by very many other, of godly and Chriſtian diſpoſition, for the ſpace of 46. years triall: (as appeareth by the Records lately viewed by two honourable witneſſes, by Commiſsion from her Majeſtie;) 2. And ſeeing, for theſe 36. years laſt paſt, I have been her moſt Excellent Majeſties very true, faithfull and dutifull ſervant; at whoſe Royall mouth, I never received any one word of reproach; but all of favour, and grace: In whoſe Princely Countenance, I never perceived frowne toward me, or diſcontented regard, or view on me: but at all times favourable, and gracious: to the great joy and comfort of my true, faithfull, and loyall heart. And (thirdly) Seeing, the works of my hands, and words of my mouth (here before notified, in the Schedule of my books, and writings) may beare lively witnesse of the thoughts of my heart, and inclination of my minde, generally, (as all wise men do know, and Christ himself doth avouch,) It might, in manner seem needlesse, thus carefully (though most briefly and speedily) to have warned or confounded the scornfull, the malicious, the proud, and the rash in their untrue reports, opinions, and fables of my studies, or exercises Philosophicall: but that, it is of more importance, that the godly, the honest, the modest, the discreet, grave, and charitable Christians (English or other,) lovers of Justice, truth, and good learning, may hereby receive certaine comfort in themselves (to perceive, that Veritas tandem prævalebit) and sufficiently be weaponed and armed with sound truth, to defend me against such kind of my adversaries: hereafter they will begin afresh or hold on obstinately in their former errors, vain imaginations, false reports, and most ungodly slanders of me & my studies. ¶ Therefore, (to make all this cause, for ever, before God & man, out of all doubt:) Seeing, your Lordships good grace, are, as it were, our high Priest, and chief Ecclesiasticall Minister, (under our most dread and Soveraigne Lady Queen Elizabeth) to whose censure and judgement, I submit all my studies and Exercises; yea all my Books past, present, and hereafter to be written, by me (of my own skill, judgement, or opinion,) I do, at this present time, most humbly, sincerely, and unfainedly, and in the name of Almighty God, (yea for his honour and glory) request, and beseech your Grace, (when, and as conveniently you may, to be well and throughly certified of me, what I am, Intus & in cute: Reverendissime in Christo Pater, & Dignissime Archipræsul, cognosce & agnosce vultum tàm internum, quàm externum pectoris tui: And wherein I have used, do or shall use, pen, speech, or conversation, otherwise then as it appertaineth to a faithfull, carefull, sincere, and humble servant of Christ Jesu, That your Grace would vouchsafe to advertise me. So, I trust, Ultima respondebunt primis: in such sort, as this Authentick Record in Latine annexed (ad perpetuam rei memoriam) doth testifie: having never hitherto had occasion to shew that, in any place of Christendome: to testifie better of me, then they had proofe of me, themselves, by my conversation among them. (The Almighty, therefore, be highly thanked, praised, honoured and glorified, for ever and ever, Amen.

But now, in respect of the generall intent of this briefe discourse, I most humbly, and reverently, exhibit to your Graces view, and perusing, the originall monument, and authentick Record, before mentioned, fair written in Parchment, with the Seal whole, and perfect, duly appendant: as I have 45. years, and somewhat longer, preserved it. The true Copy whereof, your Grace doth see, to be verbatim, as followeth.

PERORATIO.

THe Almighty and most mercifull God, the Father; for his only Son (our Redeemer) Jesus Christ his sake: by his holy Spirit, so direct, blesse, and prosper all my studies, and exercises Philosophicall, (yea, all my thoughts, words, and deeds) henceforward, even to the very moment of my departing from this world, That I may evidently and abundantly be found, and undoubtedly acknowledged of the Wise and Just, to have been a zealous and faithfull Student in the School of Verity, and an ancient Graduate in the School of Charity: to the honour and glory of the same God Almighty; and to the sound comfort and confirming of such as faithfully love and fear his Divine Majestie, and unfainedly continue in labour to do good on earth: when, while, to whom, and as they may, Amen.

Kelley, are exhorted, yea commanded, to have their Wives in common. The caſe argued on both ſides ſtifly and eagerly. Other ſtrange Doctrine of Devils, (noted, and rejected in the Preface) of murder condemned by the Laws of men, approved by God. Saint Paul impiouſly ſlandered. Great promiſes, in caſe of obedience. The Powder. The Pope here accurſed : yet Popery elſewhere juſtified. Kelley ſcandalized : Doctor Dee in great Agony. Some ſecrets of diſtillation revealed by ſpirits. The Powder again, and how E. K. came by it. Predictions of England, &c. (all falſe and fooliſh) Ed. Kelley his fidelity ſuſpected. Cabaliſtical myſteries of Letters, and Numbers : not well underſtood by Doctor Dee, &c. though much helped by his ſpirits. But at laſt, he hath joy, (in ſpirit as he is perſwaded) and reſolves to obey.

¶ Doctor Dee, Ed. Kelley, and their two Wives, their ſenſe, apprehenſions, and reſolutions, concerning this new doctine of promiſcuous copulation enjoyned : expreſſed in form of a Covenant (ſo by them called) with God : here firſt exhibited, and afterwards, p. 20. compleated, and ſubſcribed by the Parties : ¶ with a moſt wicked clauſe, or concluſion, of dreadful imprecations to all that ſhould hereafter come to the knowledge of it, or bring it to knowledge : whereas it is much to the glory of God, and true Religion, that ſuch myſteries of Hell and darkneſſe, ſhould come to light, to be abhorred by all men : and that others may be warned by ſuch ſad examples, not to hunt after new doctrines, and pretended inſpirations and revelations.

¶ p. 17. Ed. Kelley his Declaration of his diſlike, from the beginning of theſe Actions, in generall : His oppoſition upon occaſion. His diſlike of this new doctrine (in particular) as contrary to the revealed Will of God : how ſatisfied in ſome meaſure : and thereupon his readineſſe to obey. But upon the womens profeſſed diſlike, and demurre, reſolves to give over all further dealing.

VII. p. 19. Apparitions. The chief Stone carried away by ſpirits in their ſight. More exhortations and arguments, for compliance to this new doctrine. Offer of a Miracle, for further confirmation.

VIII. p. 21. Another Apparition (upon requeſt made) to confirm them in their purpoſe of obedience.

IX. p. 22. Yet another to the ſame purpoſe. The Covenant torne by Kelley, made whole again by ſpirits. The great power of God : faith and obedience, dience, the main thing. Great promiſes. Judgements pronounced againſt Kelley his tearing the paper of Covenant. Againſt others, (ſome already executed) for enticing him away: By which it ſeems Kelley being terrified, reſolves to tarry, and obey. ¶ The Stone, ſtrangely taken away, as ſtrangely reſtored, in the preſence and ſight of both.

X The Act of obedience (good words, to countenance greateſt villanies, never wanted: as dayly ſeen:) performed, is accepted by ſhews and ſpeeches. Commendation of Wiſdom. Secrecy enjoyned.

XI Cabaliſtical Doctrine, of the Creation of man: The ſoul of man, not the ſubject of ſanctification, &c. Great Promiſes and Predictions: (equally true) entertained, (with the Doctrine:) with comfort.

¶ p. 28. Prince Roſimberg: (the man now in favour: but miſerably abuſed and deluded:) two Letters of his to Doctor Dee, &c. Several queſtions by him propoſed, as expecting great things; and wholly to be governed by their ſpirits. His confidence of a great Treaſure, in the Powder delivered unto him.

¶ p. 30. Several Queſtions, and Petitions of Doctor Dee's upon the former Propoſition, &c. to be offered unto God: among the reſt, one for the making of the Philoſophers Stone: Another, for Kelley's being ſick: for his Wife, being barren: for his own Wife ſick, &c. The Empeperour of Moſcovie, his great opinion of Doctor Dee, and favour offered.

¶ But here followeth that great hiatus, or interruption of Story, which bereaves us of many years (ſpoken of in the Preface:) account. All from hence, to the end, ſet out unto us but the ſad and lamentable Cataſtrophie of this long Deluſion. Kelley is no more heard of now; yet the ſpirits appear ſtill in the ſame ſhape, as before.

¶ An. Dom. 1607. (Stylo Jul.) Martii 20. By this time Doctor Dee was become a very old man: If he were Sexagenarius (as he is ſtiled in Puccius his Letter, P. I. 439. l. 15.) a. d. 1586. he muſt needs be fourſcore and upwards by this: But we need not take the word ſo preciſely: However if towards it then, (more or leſſe) he muſt be very old now, as I ſaid before.

THE CONTENTS OF THE THIRD PART.

Part III.

ACtion I. p. 32. Raphael (pretended) ſent unto Doctor Dee, to comfort him, being (beſides old Age) much afflicted with poverty and ſickneſſe.

II p. 33. The ſame Raphael. Of a certain Treaſure ſomewhere under ground, (as was ſuppoſed.) Doctor Dee's queſtions rather eluded, than really anſwered. Put-offs, and Promiſes, (of wonderful Wiſdom, &c.) ſtill.

III ibid. A Voice ſent to Doctor Dee, then (as it ſeemeth) alone.

IV p. 34. Raphael again: who, with many fair pretenſes, and very forcible Rhetorick (to ſuch anone as Doctor Dee) doth deliver a meſſage unto him, of a Journey into a far Country, to be undertaken by him in this his miſerable caſe and condition, of purſe and body, through years, and preſent ſickneſſe.

The danger of his diſobedience herein, and reward of obedience; the Philoſophers Stone, &c. Doctor Dee is willing. (O rare faith: or rather prodigious, but deſerved infatuation!) Salisbury, and his Devils; if the Devil may be believed.

¶ p. 36. Some Caſes and Queſtions propoſed, and to be propoſed.

¶ It ſeems Doctor Dee, at this time, took upon him to be a Cunning-man. His neceſſity which was great, might put him to it to try all means: but I think he was too honeſt to thrive by it.

V p. 39.

The Table.

V p. 39. The ſame Raphael. Some queſtions (I doubt, how truly) reſolved about the Treaſure. The Journey haſtened. The Hiſtory of Tobias.

VI p. 40. Raphael in the Stone: The Jewel; the Powder: in Doctor Dee's poſſeſſion; but not yet of uſe to him. His thankfulneſſe, (good man.)

VII p. 41. Raphael again in the Stone. The Journey. Great Promiſes of Wiſdom, &c. Doctor Dee's enemies at Court. Money intended by the Emperour (ſo alſo p. 38.) to Doctor Dee, hindered. Some Caſes, concerning others, and himſelf, at his requeſt anſwered.

VIII p. 43. Raphael: Divers Queſtions and Caſes by him anſwered. One John Pontoys, very ambitious to ſerve Doctor Dee, in theſe Apparitions. ¶ Which end here in our Relation: and probably, with his life: or at leaſt, (though his ſpirits had promiſed him, p. 34. addition of many years) not long before his death. I cannot yet learn the direct time of his death: but much about this time, (by all reports:) and in England, certainly. Though his ſin was very great (as in the Preface is ſhewed:) yet becauſe of his ſimple and ſincere intentions towards God, it may charitably be hoped, that God was ſo merciful to him, as to let him know his errour, and to repent of it, before his death.

¶ p. 46. That which follows here, is certainly intended for part of that holy Language, which Adam in Paradiſe is ſaid P. I p. 64, 92. to have ſpoken: and by which great wonders might be wrought. I have neither faith, nor curioſity to inquire into it any further: neither will, (I think,) any ſober man.

INſtead of other Approbation: the Reader (beſides the judgement of the late Arch-Biſhop of Armagh: for his Piety and Learning ſo famous every where; ſpoken of in the Preface, firſt page of it: and the judgement of divers others, that read the Book Manuſcript, and wiſhed it printed:) may conſider, how ſollicitous the Devil hath been, when he ſaw his plots (God oppoſing) not likely to take effect; that theſe Myſteries (theſe Papers and Records) might not come to light. Firſt, by p. 418. and p. 431. (Doctor Dee's Letter to the Popes Nuncio) and ſome other places of the Book, it doth appear, that they were all burnt, by command; though ſome afterwards (upon appearance of better hopes) ſtrangely reſtored again. Again, Part II p. 21. is that horrible imprecation; whereof more in the Table. Laſtly, theſe remaining Papers and Records, here exhibited, were under ground, God knows how long: and ſince that, though carefully preſerved, were even at the very laſt, when the worthy Owner took care, and was at the coſt to have them tranſcribed: and ſo at the laſt, (not unluckily, I hope for the publick good:) they fell into my hands.

M. C.

ERRATA: Thoſe of the Book.

MAny will be found in the Book: a good part proceeding (beſides ordinary typographical miſtakes, even where beſt care is uſed:) from the uncorrectednesse of the Copy: which might happen partly through the illegiblenesse of the Original it ſelf, in many places: and partly from miſtakes in the ſaid Original, where moſt legible. The cauſe of which miſtakes and miſwriting, you may find P. I. p. 159 l. 20. &c. and beſides what is there ſaid, it may be probably collected from P. II. p. 27. l. 43. and p. 23. l. 20. and ſome other like places that Ed. Kelley, for the moſt part, when he made report to Doctor Dee, of voices and ſpeeches, (ſuch eſpecially as were of ſome length) did not know what he ſaid himſelf, and ſo might the eaſier miſtake. A good part of the Greek. P. I. p. 27. was miſreported, and miſtaken, as is ſhewed in the Preface p. . . .) and I believe never throughly underſtood by Doctor Dee himſelf: It cannot therefore be expected otherwiſe, but that there ſhould be many faults in the writing: for which I would not have the innocent (the Printers and Correctors, I mean:) to bear more blame, than comes to their ſhare. Yet however, though many: moſt are ſuch (thoſe places excepted where the Original was very faulty:) as may eaſily be corrected by an ordinary Reader that is converſant in books of all kinds: Or if not ſo eaſily corrected yet ſuch as will not bereave the Reader of the main ſenſe and matter. Some few paſſages here and there, it may be, will be found where a reaſonable Scholar may be put to it: as P. II. p. 9. l. 11. alias vobiſmet ipſis diſimpernis: which certainly muſt be read, alas vobiſmet ipſis diſpuperiti: there being a manifeſt (and pertinent) alluſion, in the words, to that allegorical πτεροφυία (wing-breeding: or, bearing:) of the ſoul, ſo famous in the Books of Philoſophers; Platoniſts eſpecially. That very expreſſion is to be found in Plato, (or Works commonly adſcribed unto him:) not πτερορῥυεῖν onely and πτερὶ ἀποβαλεῖν: (which is the ſame in effect:) but even πτερὰ θρύπτεσθαι: alas contringere, as it is here. Some ſuch places here and there, may be found, where the Reader muſt take ſome time to conſider, (in what is Latine, eſpecially:) if he think it worth the while. I have ſaid as much as I think needful, and my leiſure will afford me at this time.

¶ Since this written, obſerving that p. 403, 404. the Latine there in both pages, is very full of faults, (far more there, than any where elſe that I have obſerved:) I thought it would not be amiſſe to correct thoſe two pages. The Reader may the better know what he hath to do upon ſuch occaſions, though I dare ſay he will not meet with the like again in the whole Book.

Some things to be corrected in the Preface: the Authour being then in a Journey when it was printed, and ſo his intended re-view being prevented by the quickneſſe of the Preſſe.

Beſides theſe Errata's: it is fit the Reader ſhould know that the written Copy of the Preface had many references to the pages of the Book MS. which becauſe they did not agree with the printed pages, the Printer thought inconvenient to ſet down: which nevertheleſſe hath bred ſome confuſion in ſome places; as p. 46. 47. and elſewhere: but may eaſily be rectified by the Table, at the beginning. Again, ſome marginal quotations are omitted, which may be ſupplied. P. 39. againſt the 3, 4. and following lines: [Treatiſe of Enthuſiaſme: *Ch. 4. and 6. of Rhetor. and Precat. The HOLY TABLE.

A TRUE RELATION OF Dr. DEES Actions, with Spirits.

Liber Mysteriorum (& Sancti) parallelus Novalisque.

Lesden MAY 28. 1583.

D. Is Dr. Dee, E. K. Edward Kellet. See the Preface.

Δ. AS J. and E. K. sate discoursing of the Noble Polonian Albertus Lascy his great honour here with us obteined, his great good liking of all States of the people, of them that either see him or hear of him, and again how much I was beholding to God that his heart should so fervently favour me, and that he doth so much strive to suppresse and confound the malice and envie of my Country-men against me, for my better credit winning or recovering to do God better service hereafter thereby, &c. Suddenly, there seemed to come out of my Oratory a Spirituall creature, like a pretty girle of 7 or 9 yeares of age, attired on her head with her hair rowled up before, and hanging down very long behind, with a gown of Sey, ...changeable green and red, and with a train she seemed to play up and down..... like, and seemed to go in and out behind my books, lying on heaps, the biggest .....and as she should ever go between them, the books seemed to give place sufficiently, dis.... one heap from the other, while she passed between them: And so I considered, and ..... the diverse reports which E. K. made unto me of this pretty maiden, and .....

Green and red.

Δ. I said, ... Whose maiden are you?

Δ. Sh. ..... VVhose man are you?

Δ. I am the servant of God both by my bound duty, and also (I hope) by his Adoption.

A voyce. ..... You shall be beaten if you tell.

..... Am not I a fine Maiden? Give me leave to play in your house, my Mother told me she would come and dwell here.

Δ. She went up and down with most lively gestures of a young girle, playing by her selfe, and diverse times another spake to her from the corner of my study by a great Perspective-glasse, but none was seen beside her selfe.

..... Shall I? I will (Now she seemed to answer one in the foresaid Corner of the Study) ..... I pray you let me tarry a little [speaking to one in the foresaid Corner]

Δ. Tell me who you are?

..... I pray you let me play with you a little, and I will tell you who I am.

Δ. In the name of Jesus then tell me.

Jesus.

..... I rejoyce in the name of Jesus, and I am a poor little Maiden, Madini, I am the last but one of my Mothers children, I have little Baby-children at home.

Proles ipsius Madini.

Δ. Where is your home?

Ma..... I dare not tell you where I dwell, I shall be beaten.

Δ. You shall not be beaten for telling the truth to them that love the truth, to the eternal truth all Creatures must be obedient.

Madini her six Sisters.

Ma. ..... I warrant you I will be obedient. My Sisters say they must all come and dwell with you.

Δ. I desire

Δ. I deſire that they who love God ſhould dwell with me, and I with them.

Ma. ..... I love you now you talke of God.

Dee. Δ. Your eldeſt ſiſter her name is Eſemeli.

Ma. ..... My ſiſter is not ſo ſhort as you make her.

Eſemeli. Δ. O, I cry you mercy, ſhe is to be pronounced Eſemeli.

E. K. She ſmileth, one calls her ſaying, Come away Maiden.

Ma. ..... I will read over my Gentlewoemen firſt.
My Maſter Dee will teach me, if I ſay amiſſe.

Δ. Read over your Gentlewoemen as it pleaſeth you.

Ma. ..... I have Gentlemen and Gentlwoemen, Look you here.

E. K. She bringeth a little book out of her pocket,
.....She pointeth to a in Picture the book.

Mad. ..... Is not this a pretty man.

Δ. What is his name?

Ma. ..... My ..... ſaith, his name is Edward, Look you, he hath a Crown upon his head, my Mother ſaith, that this man was Duke of York.

E. K. She looketh upon a Picture in the Book with a Coronet in his hand and a Crown upon his head.

Ma. ..... This was a jolly man when he was King of England.

Δ. How long ſince is it that he was King of England?

Ma. ..... Do you aſk me ſuch a queſtion, I am but a little Maiden? Lo, here is his Father Richard Plantagenet, and his Father alſo.

Δ. How call you him?

Ma. ..... Richard, Surely this was Richard Earle of Cambridge.

E. K. She turneth the book leaves, and ſaid.

Mad. ..... Here is a grim Lord, He maketh me afraid.

Δ. Why doth he make you afraid?

Ma. ..... He is a ſtern fellow, I do not know him what he is. But this was the Duke of Clarence. This was Father to Richard Earle of Cambridge. Lo, here is Anne his wife.

E. K. Turning over the leafe,

The ſame was heir to all Mortimers lands.
Edmund was her brother.
Lo, Sir, here be the wicked Mortimers.

E K. She turned over diverſe leaves, and then ſhe ſaid

Ma. ..... This ſame is Roger Mortimer.
..... My Mother ſaith this man was Earl of the Marches.
This ſame is his wife.

Monday à Meridie hora 4½ Junii 2, 1583.

Δ. We preſented our ſelves, ready for inſtruction receiving, and preſumed not to call my good Miniſter ſpiritual, but by humble prayer referred all to God his good pleaſure.

E K. The Golden Curtain which covereth all the Stone hangeth ſtill, but I heare a voice or ſentence thrice repeated, thus.

A voice ..... Sanctum, Signatum, & ad tempus.

Δ. The ſenſe hereof may be divers wayes underſtood, and more then I can imagine, but which ſenſe is to our inſtruction would I faine know.

A voice, ... Sanctum, quia hoc velle ſuum; ſigillatum quia determinatum ad tempus.

E K. Hard ſpeeches, but he could not perfectly diſcern them.

A voice ..... Ad tempus & ad tempus (inquam) quia rerum conſummatio. All things are at hand,
The Seat is prepared.
Juſtice hath determined.
The Judge is not yet willing.
Mercy thruſteth it ſelf betwixt the Divinity. But it is ſaid,
The Time ſhall be ſhortned.

E K. Saw no creature: But the voice came behind him over his head, till now: when he eſpied one ſtanding on the Table beſides the ſilke cloth on which the Stone ſtood; he ſeemed like a Husbandman all in red apparel, red hoſe cloſe to his legs, a red jacket, red buttoned cap on his head, yea, and red ſhooes. He asked E. K. how he did, and E. K. anſwered, Well I thank God.

Δ. By your apparel it ſhould ſeem you have ſomewhat to ſay concerning the Commons of this Realme, and not of high School-points, or Sciences. I am deſirous to know who ſent you? What is your meſſage? and what is your name? for a name you have peculiar as all Creatures elſe.

Δ. He pauſed a good while; whereupon I asked him if he conſidered my ſpeeches?

..... I conſider your ſpeeches, for I have left nothing behind.

E. K. He kneeleth down and ſeemeth to ſay ſomewhat, his ſpeech is quick, round, and ready. He ſeemeth to pray in a ſtrange Language. I perceived theſe words among many other, Oh Gahire Rvdna gepbna oh Gahire, &c.

His Countenance was directed towards the Stone.

..... Veſtra non mea facio.

E K. Now he ſtandeth up.

..... Haſt not thou ſaid, From whom comeſt thou? What is thy meſſage? [Δ. He looked toward me] And haſt urged my name? Saying, All things have a name. It is true ; for ſo they have becauſe they are. Haſt thou left any thing unſaid?

Δ. All things have a name, vide contra Tert. parte libri Eraconienſis de 30 Aeris exercitibus.

Δ. You rehearſe my ſpeeches not onely in general, but alſo in particular.

The will of God be done (to his glory) for the reſt.

The ſumme of our commanded obſervation.

..... My meſſage is from him, in whoſe name thou haſt deſired it, which hath ſaid lift up thine eyes, and look unto (behold I ſay) the ſum of my Commandments, 1. What I am, 2. Whoſe Miniſters you are, and (as it is ſaid before) 3. To what end and purpoſe it is.

Then ceaſe to plead when Judgement ſtandeth in place ; For all things are determined already. The 7 doores are opened. The 7 Governours have almoſt ended their Government.

Note 7.

The Earth laboureth as ſick, yea ſick unto death.

The Waters pour forth weepings, and have not moiſture ſufficient to quench their own ſorrows.

The Aire withereth, for her heat is infected.

The Fire conſumeth and is ſcalded with his own heat.

The Bodies above are ready to ſay, We are weary of our courſes.

Nature would fain creep again into the boſom of her good and gracious Maſter.

Darkneſſe is now heavy and ſinketh down together: She hath builded her ſelf, yea (I ſay) ſhe hath advanced her ſelf into a mighty building, ſhe ſaith, Have done, for I am ready to receive my burden.

Hell it ſelf is weary of Earth: For why? The ſon of Darkneſſe cometh now to challenge his right: and ſeeing all things prepared and provided, deſireth to eſtabliſh himſelf a kingdom ; ſaying, We are now ſtronge enough, Let us now build us a kingdom upon earth, and Now eſtabliſh that which we could not confirm above.

Antichriſt his ſaying in the ſpirit of Satan.

And therefore, Behold the end.

Sorrows.

When the time cometh, The ..... thy ſorrows ſhall be greater than the ſweetneſſe, the ſorrows (I mean) of that thou ſeeſt ; I mean in reſpect of the ſweetneſſe of thy knowledge. Then will you lament and weep for thoſe thou thought it were juſt men.

Labor.

When you earneſtly pray it ſhall be ſaid unto you Labor. When you would take Mercy Juſtice ſhall ſay, Be it ſo.

Therefore (I ſay) thirſt not overmuch : For fear leaſt thy capacity be confounded.

Neither move thou him which hath moved all things already to the end.

But do thou that which is commanded.

Neither preſcribe thou any form to God his building.

All things ſhall be brought into an uniformal Order.

Al. alasky.

Whom thou ſayeſt that thou haſt not yet confirmed, confirm with good counſel. It is ſaid I have accepted him.

Are not theſe News ſufficient?

Notes in Election.

It is ſaid, He ſhall govern me a people : of himſelf he cannot. Therefore let him believe, and ſecondly Rejoyce that the Angel of God hath ſo governed him. That in Election he ſhall govern him a people.

Deſireth he to hear of greater bleſſedneſſe?

O King.

He hath alſo ſaid: Then ſhall it be ſaid unto him, O King.

Vide tamen de ejus futuro caſu in actionibus de Lask.

It followeth conſequently that he is called, and that to a Kingly Office : For whoſoever is Anointed in the Lord, his Kingdom is for ever.

Pride.

Will he be the ſon of perdition? Let him then with his fathers put on the garments of pride.

Deſireth he news? Tell him thou haſt prayed for him; the Devil envyeth him, and his eſtate.

Tell him that I ſay ſo.

Say it is a ſhame for a Kings Son to commit theft ; and for him that is called, to do the workes of unrighteouſneſſe. Studieſt thou to pleaſe him? Give him ſharp and wholeſome counſel. For in him (I ſay) the ſtate and alteration of the whole World ſhall begin.

Wouldſt thou know from whence I came? Thou ſhalt.

But do it Humbly, it is not my part to meddle any further than my charge.

But as it is ſaid before unto thee, So ſhall it come to paſſe.

Moſes had a rod whereby he was known, and the hand of God approved.

Let him uſe therefore to carry the rod of righteouſneſſe about him.

Moſes 7. rod.

For we are ſeven : and in us is comprehended that rod wherewith Moſes wrought. As it is begun ſo I end: What ye ſee here is holy [pointing to the ..... and by him ſealed and for until the time.

Therefore uſe patience herein until the time that it is ſaid unto thee .....

Venite, videte, (& loquimini) Judicia mea.

He that ſaith thus (I ſpeak of my ſelf, and as concerning my meſſage,) is equal with the greateſt Angels, and his name is Murifri.

Murifri my Calender.

Thou haſt written my name, and I am of thy Kalender, becauſe thy Kalender is of God.

In the grounds of all thy Tables thou ſhalt finde my name.

△. If I might without offending you, I would move two Petitions unto you, one concerning the Soul, and the other concerning the body: Concerning the Soul, is for one Isabel Litter, whom the wicked Enemy hath sore afflicted long with dangerous temptations, and hath brought her knives to destroy her self withall; she resisteth hitherto, and desireth my helping counsel, which how small it is God knoweth. The other is of another woman, who hath great need, and is driven to maintain her self, her husband, and three children by her hand labour, and there is one that by dream is advertised of a place of Treasure hid in a Cellar, which this woman hath hired thereupon, and hath no longer time of hiring the said Cellar, but till Midsummer next. She, and this dreaming Maiden digged somewhat, and found certain tokens notified unto her: But so left off. I would gladly have your help herein, if it pleased God.

Mur. ....., I answer thee, I will come again soon, and thou shalt receive a Medecine which shall teach thee to work help in the first. The second is vanity, for it is not so, but to the intent that after great hope of this world hath infected the weaklings minde: Desperation might have the more open and ready entrance. But yet she shall be comforted for thy sake.

△. The praise be unto God.

I have said.

My name is also to be found in the same Table.

Form this upon a plate of lead: It prevaileth as a cure against such infections. My promise is done.

△. How is this to be used?

Mur. ..... Use it upon the body molested, adding the letters of her name in a small Circle on the back half, not the letters in their forms expressed, but the number of such letters.

△. We know not how to number her name in our letters.

Mur. ..... Take them out of the second Table (any Table else of the seventh will serve) so that thou take the numbers as thou findest them placed with the letters. △ The second Table did not serve, & therefore I used the seventh, where all the letters might be had.

△. How is this to be used about her body?

Mur. ..... As by discretion shall be thought best: It prevaileth sufficiently, so it be done, but thus far I teach thee, and this, as concerning nature.

The health of him which sent me be amongst you. Amen.

Wednesday a Meridie circa 2d. 1583. Junii 5.

△. E. K. Had been ever since nine of the Clock in the morning in a marvellous great disquietnesse of minde, fury, and rage, by reason his brother Thomas had brought him news that a Coma Commiſſion was out to attache, and apprehend him as a fellon for coyning of money. Secondly, that his wife was gone from Miſtreſſe Freemans houſe at Blohley, and how Mr. Huſey had reported him to be a coſener, and had uſed very bitter and grievous reports of him now of late; and that his wife was at home with her mother at Chipping Norton, whereupon, I conſidering his great diſorder and incumbrance toward him externally, and his greater offending of God with his furious impatience internally; and remembring the whole premiſes of God his ſervice to be performed by us two (if we would be dutifull ſervants to his Divine Majeſty) I was touched with a great pang of Compaſſion, both that any Chriſtian ſhould uſe ſuch ſpeeches as he uſed, or be of ſo revenging a minde and intent as he ſhewed himſelf to be: and alſo in reſpect of mine own credit to be brought in doubt, for embracing the company of ſuch an one, a diſorderly perſon: And thirdly, that the good ſervice of God might hereby be taken from our two executing, to our great danger, both in body and ſoul: Therefore to do my duty as a man reſolute (upon our uniting for Gods ſervice) to do for him as for my ſelf: I made God my refuge for comfort, counſel, and help in this great affliction, and croſſe of temptation.

Amicorum omnia communia.

Whereupon after my vehement and humble prayers for the foreſaid purpoſe, this voyce was heard of E. K.

I had (upon ſome reaſonable reſpect) ſet the ſhew-ſtone with the myſtery in it, on the Table by E. K. alſo.

A voyce. ..... Let the daughters of light

Take up their garments, let them open the windows of their ſecret Chambers, for the voyce of man hath ſaid.

Oh, ſhew thy ſelf to be a God; yea, perform that which thou haſt already promiſed, gather your veſtures together, for thoſe that are ſick have need of help, you are the children of pitty, and in the loins of compaſſion do you dwell: For I have ſaid, you are. And I have ſaid, my Determination ſhall not fail, although with the ſons of men my Determinations may be undetermined.

Note of Determination undeterminable.

Note tentations by the Biting worm.

Come gather up your garments, for the Cankers are ripe, and the Biting-worm ſeeketh to gnaw into the Lily.

He hath ſaid, Let me prove them, for they are not juſt: Yea, let me touch them, for they are unrighteous, I have granted him power, but without prevailing, I have given him weapons, but they are not ſharpned, his fingers ſhall defile, and yet not deface: For I have appointed him a night, and have prefixed an end thereunto, to the intent it may be known: That thus far I have ſtretched his mouth.

E. K. I have heard a voyce about the ſhew-ſtone very great, as though men were beating down of mud walls.

The thumping, ſhuffing, and cluttering is ſuch.

A voice. ..... Ariſe, I ſay, for I will be revenged againſt the ſcorning of thoſe; yea, of thoſe that are ſucklings.

Δ. After a great ſilence and pauſe, appeared one on the Table (without the skirts of the ſilke ſarcenet) like a woman having on a red kirtle and above that a white garment like an Iriſh Mantle, on her head a round thing like a Garland, green and like a Coronet under the Garland, but not perfectly to be diſcerned; on her breaſt a precious Stone of white colour, and on her back another precious Stone; both which Stones were ſet upon a Croſſe, in the very center of the Croſſe.

Δ. Your external apparel (you Daughter of Light) you perceive that we have ſomewhat noted: but by the power and mercy of the external Light, we truſt and deſire to underſtand ſomewhat of your internal vertue.

She ſaid ..... What do you think I am a Jewellers wife by my apparel?

Δ. We deem you to be the Meſſenger of him that hath for mankind purchaſed the Jewel of eternal Bliſſe, by the incomparable Jewel of his moſt precious Blood.

A voyce out of my Oratory behinde me.

..... Will you have this too?

Δ. After a pretty while ſilence, I ſaid, We expect the execution of the purpoſe for which you are ſent.

She ſaid ..... It is written that Pride was the firſt offence.

Githgulcag knew not himſelf.

Therefore he was ignorant.

E K. She is much fimbling about the Stone on her breaſt, and regarding it.

E. K. Now She talketh with other whom I ſee not, her talke is very ſhort and quick, but I cannot perceive what ſhe ſaith.

She. ..... Read what I have ſaid.

I read the former words.

She. ..... You will grant me that Pride is the greateſt ſin.

Pride

Pride was the cauſe he knew not himſelf.
Therefore Pride is the cauſe of Ignorance.
△. The Argument is good.
She. ..... Ignorance was the nakedneſſe wherewithal you were firſt tormented, and the firſt Plague that fell unto man was the want of Science.

E K. Now ſhe ſpeaketh to other again who appeare not, and they ſeem to anſwer her again.

She. ..... The want of Science hindreth you from knowledge of your ſelf.

E K. She looketh upon △. and ſmileth. Now ſhe ſpeaketh to the unſeen people again.

She. ..... Whoſoever therefore knoweth not himſelf, is proud.
△. God help us to know our ſelves for his Honour ſake.

E. K. She looketh upon △. and ſmileth.

She. ..... You have time enough, therefore we may take leaſure.
△. [I made ſpeed to write.]

E. K. She talketh again with her inviſible company.

She. ..... Pride is rewarded as ſin, Ergo the firſt offender was damned. What ſay you Sir? [ſpeaking to E. K.]
What difference is between your mind and Pride?

E. K. Wherein am I proud?

She. ..... In the ſame wherein the Devil was firſt proud.
Who glorified the Devil?

E. K. God.

△. God glorified not the Devil, but before he became a Devil he was in glory.
She. ..... The abuſing of his Glorification made him a Devil: So the abuſing of the goodneſſe of God toward this man, may make him a Devil. A Devil.
The works of the Spirit quicken; the doings of the Fleſh lead unto deſtruction. Art thou offended to be called a Devil? Then extol not thy ſelf above thy Election.
No man is elected by proper name, but according to the meaſure of his faith, and this faith is lively and hath a quickning Spirit in it for ever. Indeed thou art ignorant, and therefore thou art ſufficiently plagued: Why doſt thou boaſt thy ſelf and ſay, This I can do? Faith.
The Reeds pipe, but it is long of the wind, and herein thou ſheweſt that thou knoweſt not thy ſelf, for that thou art proud; pray therefore that thou mayeſt have underſtanding, and caſt away pride if thou wilt not be counted a Devil.
By true underſtanding you learn, firſt to know your ſelves what you are: of whom you are, and to what end you are.
This underſtanding cauſeth no ſelf-love, but a ſpiritual ſelfe-love.
This underſtanding teacheth no Blaſphemy.
This underſtanding teacheth no fury.
It teacheth a man to be angry, but not wrathful. Wrath.
For we may be angry, and not offend. Wrath is to damnation.
Therefore conſidering that Damnation was the end of the firſt, which was Pride, and Ignorance, the puniſhment of the ſecond (which is very loathſome.)
Pray unto God thou mayeſt avoid the firſt, and be unburdened of the ſecond.
Conſider by whom thou art counſelled, and of whom the counſel is: with us there is no cauſe of offence, neither is the counſel given with a weak mouth.
Wilt thou be well rewarded? Why ſtudieſt thou not to do well? Would'ſt thou be one of the choſen? ſtand ſtiff and be contented with all temptations.
Is God a God of Juſtice?

E. K. It is true.

Be thou therefore a juſt ſervant.
No man inheriteth the Kingdom of Eternity, without he conquer in this World.
No man can challenge juſtly a reward, without he be a Conquerour, or do the works of Juſtice.
Doth the Devil perſwade thee? Arme thy ſelf againſt him.
Doth the World not like of thee? It is for two cauſes; either for that thou liveſt well and not as a worldling, or elſe becauſe thy wickedneſſe is ſuch as that the World wondreth at it. If thou be in the firſt Rejoyce, For bleſſed are thoſe whom the World hateth; when they laugh at thy godlineſſe, Be ſorry and grieve thou at their ſinfulneſſe.
If thou offend in the ſecond flie haſtily from the World: Tell the World what thou haſt of hers, and let her be aſhamed that thou knoweſt her.
Is thy fleſh ſtiff-necked? Faſt and pray, it doth avoide temptation.
Be ſorry alwayes; For in this World there is nothing to rejoyce at. For ſin onely provoketh to ſorrow, whether it be of thy ſelf or of another. Be ſorry alwayes.

Be

Be stiff against temptations, for whosoever is not armed as I am, shall be vexed with the weapons of his adversary.

Her attire expounded. My Garland is Godlinesse, my Brestplate is Humility, and upon my back I wear Patience.

These do I wear to the intent I might shew you what you should wear.

The attire of spiritual creatures. But as these things are placed in their crosses, so do the crosses alwayes follow them that wear them.

Art thou punished as an Apostle? Rejoyce; it is a happy crosse.

Art thou vexed as a Tyrant? thank God it is in this World. For blessed are those that are punished here, to the intent their sins may be forgotten hereafter.

Good Angels. I perswade to the contrary; Be humble, seek true wisdom, then are you truely fashioned according to your Maker, and shalt rest with us, with Halleluja in Heaven.

I have counselled, I have done my message thus far.

A. Your counsel is perfectly good, and your message merciful. His name be praised and glorified that sent you. Amen.

As you were called hither, by the name of Daughters of Light: So this other day, there was one sent hither (of that blessed company) who was accounted a Daughter, and had six Sisters more: That Daughter her name was Madini; so of your name we are desirous to be informed, for distinction and instructions sake, in the trade of these mysteries.

She said. ..... It is good to know my name; to see whether it agree with my Doctrine.

E. K. What can you (for all your exhortation) accuse me of?

Indeed I thank you very heartily for your exhortation and good counsel; but how unjustly I am misused at Husey's hand, and so provoked to this extream affliction of mind and sundry unseemly speeches, be you Judge between Husey and me.

She said. Whosoever hath committed sin and is not reconciled, shall have the reward of a sinner. There is a double Reconciliation, the one is with God, the other with the Conscience. But this man is not reconciled in Conscience (repenteth not his wickednesse) thereby it followeth he cannot be reconciled with God: Ergo he must be rewarded as he is. The reward of sin is to be absent, or rather to be banished in this world from the society of God and his Angels.

Good Angels our keepers. So it falleth out to Regions and Countries, Cities, Kings and Subjects, Authorities and their Officers, when (I say) they are estranged with absence of their appointed and good keepers.

Therefore it proved that the Devil is most with him, and nearest with him.

Whom the Devil is a Lord of, he useth as his servants, and where his service may be greatest done, there is he most alledged. His subtilties are principal and great: And by these reasons I prove that John Husey, Husey is easily to be infected, either with envy, malice, slander, or dishonour of Gods word.

This is one of those Assaults that is promised should assault you.

Who is to be blamed, he that consenteth, or he in whom the procurement is? Thou didst consent and chuse him for a Companion. Be not therefore angry at his malice; for the fire that is, thou hast brought in with thine own hands.

To measure the Enemy his industry is impossible to look into, his subtiltie is more incredible.

The Reward of good life is great: But the filthinesse that sin carryeth with it in this World, and leadeth with it into the World to come, is most horrible.

Is it not said, That a skirmish shall be (and that great) but you shall be Conquerours? It is written, It is true and shall be never overthrown; so mighty is his strength that hath armed himself with it.

In the Serpents belly, there is nothing clean: neither with unhonest persons (ungodly I mean) is there any pure society: Light agreeth not with Darknesse, nor vertue with vice, therefore be you Our uniting. of one, and in one, that you may agree and have the reward of one.

Behold it is said, I will part bounds between the just and the unjust, I will suffer the Enemy to sowe discord to the intent that those that are my people may be separated and have a dwelling by themselves.

The necessity of Satan working against men. Peruse the Scripture, it is alwayes seen that the Spirit of God forceth Satan in spight of his head to separate the evil from the good by discord, and herein the Devil worketh against himself.

De futuris nisi jussi non pronuntiant boni Angeli. We good Angels keep secret the Mysteries of God; things that are to come we alwayes keep close with this exception, The form of our Commandment.

A Commission out for Kelly. Truth it is that a Commission is granted not onely to enquire of thee, but also to attach thee, and that by the Council.

If he go down he shall be attached, therefore tempt not God.

A. But if he tarry here and his being here so known as it is, it is likely that he shall be attached here to my no small grief or disgrace. What is your counsel herein?

1583. She said. ..... It is written misery shall not enter the doors of him whom the Highest hath magnified. DIXIT, & DICO, & DICTUM SIT. The world shall never prevaile against you.

The Book, the Scrowl, and Powder. A. In respect of the Book, the Scrowl, and the Powder to be communicated, What is your judge-judgement or mind, seeing when he was coming from Islington with them, he was threatned to be pulled in pieces if he came with them to me?

..... All that is spoken of, is in very deed, vanity. The book may be used to a good purpose. The Book found.

They were wicked ones. But as these things are the least part of this action, so are they not much to be looked after.

Δ. As concerning the Powder (I beseech you) what is your knowledge of it? The Powder.

..... It is a Branch of Natures life.

It is appointed for a time, and to a purpose.

Δ. As concerning the earthes of the Eleven places being with expedition.....

What is now to be done with them?

..... It was a foresight of God, if they had been there now they had utterly perished. The 11 Earths.

Δ. O Jesus, that is a marvellous thing.

..... Helas, that is nothing.

Δ. By nature they could not have perished in so short time.

..... I have said.

E. K. Tell us your name.

..... If you will remember my counsel, I will tell you my name.

E. K. Your counsel was by piece-meale told me, that I cannot remember it but in general.

..... You do, and have, and I am almost H A T H.

Δ. I understand you to be A T H, in sigillo Emeth.

A T H. ..... So am I in the number of Gods Elect.

Δ. Shall not I make meanes to Mr. Richard Young, as one of the higher Commissioners to do my companion here some good? Mr. Richard Young.

A T H. ..... Trouble your self when you need.

E. K. She spake this somewhat sharply.

Get your friends to signifie down good report of you.

Come not there in many years.

Δ. As concerning my writing of the holy Book, how shall I do, by reason of the perfect writing it in the Due Characters? seeing many words are written so, as the pronunciation, and the Orthographie do hardly seem to agree?

A T H. ..... You shall have a School-master sufficient to read unto you.

Δ. Where shall I begin?

A T H. ..... Let him lead you to that, who is within you.

Δ. As concerning Isabel Lister who is vext of a wicked spirit, how well have I executed that which was prescribed me; or how well doth it work?

A T H. ..... Friend, It is not of my charge.

Remember the true path that leadeth unto true honour, where there sitteth a True and Just G O D, who grant you his Direction and establishment of perfect life.

Δ Amen, Amen, Amen.

E. K. She is gone.

Junii 9. a Meridie hora 5.

Δ. Very long I prayed in my Oratory and at my Deske to have answer or resolutions of divers doubts which I had noted in a paper, and which doubts I read over distinctly, they concerned the preparation of things about the Table of practice, and other things above my Lamin and Stone; but answer came none, neither in the Stone did any thing appear; no, not the Golden Curtain, but the Stone was of his natural Diaphanitie. But I held on in pittiful manner to request some advertisement, if for any our trespasses or offences this unlooked for alteration from former dealing had hapned, &c.

At length a voice came from behind E. K. over his head, and said thus:

A voyce. ..... The judgements of our God are most profound and hard in the understanding of man.

There is silence above, let there therefore be patience amongst you. I have said.

Δ. Upon this answer I began to discourse of divers causes of this silence, and divers manners of silences; and in the end I became in a great and sorrowfull heavinesse, and fear of the wrath, or displeasure of God; conceived for some, our misbehaviour towards him since our last dealing, whereupon I prayed long at my Desk, standing for mercy, comfort, counsel, and some exposition of the former sentence. After a long time thus passing there appeared one in the very top of the frame of the shew-stone, much like Michael. Silence.

Who said, ... Write, for I must be gone.

Silence there is in heaven, for the Governours of the earth are now before the Lord, the doings of their seats are now disclosed, every thing is N O T E D. For that God will be righteous in all his doings.

There is not this day any one that governeth the people upon earth, but his government is diſcloſed, and his government is ſet open, and his faults revealed,

They without number cry, Lord, let thy vengeance come.

The earth ſayeth. Be it ſo.

Sathan. Sathan is before the Lord: He hath garniſhed himſelf with Garlands as a Conquerour, and what he ſaith is wonderfull.

Therefore ſhall the Lord open his mouth, and curſe the earth, and all living creatures. For Iniquity hath gotten the upper hand: Publickly the States of mankinde in the world are Viols ready. condemned.

We are all ſilent and ready with our Viols to powre the wrath of God upon them, when he ſaith, BE IT SO.

Therefore be you patient. For, our patience in an univerſal ſilence.

Yet awhile. We look for the mouth of Juſtice: But LO: The Lord ſaith unto the Lord, lift up thy eyes (O God.) Behold, the Dignity of thy workmanſhip, yet ſuffer for awhile.

1583. I have a people that will forſake their cruelty, and put off their Garments that ſtink of abomination, in whom thy name ſhall be magnified, and our glory in heaven more exalted.

But as thou wilt, ſo be it.

Behold, I ſpeak in body, becauſe I tremble, as at the force of thy great indignation: Notwithſtanding, we will what thou wilt.

If therefore theſe wonders be ſo great in heaven, wonder thou not at our ſilence: Therefore be patient, and ſay unto the earth? Why groaneſt thou ſo hard, or why is thy body ſo rotten: Haſt not thou juſtly deſerved theſe things for thy iniquity?

I ſay, if you be partakers of theſe ſecrets, how much more ſhall you be partakers of that ſweetneſſe, which is the eternal dew, and very bread it ſelf of life?

S O.

E. K. He is gone.

Δ. I prayed a pretty while after with thankſ-giving, &c.

Soli Deo noſtro omnis laus, poteſtas, & gloria in ſeculorum ſæcula, Amen.

Junii 14. 1583. Friday, a meridie, Hora 4½.

Δ. The golden vayl, or curtain appeared, covering the whole ſtone, whereas all other vayls and curtains before did uſe to cover but the more part, or thoſe things which were the ſtanding implements of the action for that time.

This appeared as ſoon as he looked into the ſtone.

I made long, and often prayers of thankſ-giving, calling for grace, mercy, and wiſdom: with ſuch particular inſtructions as I had written down the doubts requiring light, or reſolution in them, &c.

At length appeared a woman like an old maid in a red Peticote, and with a red ſilk upper bodies, her hair rould about like a Scottiſh woman, the ſame being yellow: ſhe ſtood aſide from the green Sarcenet belonging to the ſtone, and ſhe ſaid ..... God ſpeed my friends.

Δ. A good greeting to wiſh us ſpeed by him, Amen.

E. K. I never ſaw this woman before.

..... It may be you have ſeen me, but my apparel may alter my faſhion.

E. K. She ſeemeth to go in a great path before her very ſpeedily.

Δ. I pray you, whither make you ſuch a ſpeedy journey.

..... I am going home, I have been from home this ſeven-night.

Marie my maid had angered me on Thurſday night, with her undue ſpeech. Δ. Diſtance of place cannot protract time in your journey homeward.

..... Jeſu, now he will be angry with me, as he was with his maid. Δ. Every Action not yet effected, whether is it at home, or from home?

Δ. God grant you then to make ſpeed homeward, and to your home, and all we to the home where the higheſt may be well pleaſed.

..... So, ſo, you talk too wiſely for me.

All worldly wiſdom vain. Δ. God make me to talk wiſely indeed, and God take all vanity from my heart.

..... You may think me a vain huſwife to be going thus long: But by me you may perceive how vain all worldly wiſdom is. I am in a better caſe then many are, for though I be from home, yet am I going home, ſome there be that neither have home, neither can go home.

E. K. Now cometh a goodly tall aged man all in black, with a Hat on his head, he hath a long gray beard forked, he ſaith to the Maid, thus:

Old man..... Wihther go you maid?

Maid..... Belike Sir, you may be ſome kyn unto theſe men, for they are alſo deſirous to know whither I do go.

Old man..... Me thinks I ſhould have known you before?

Maid..... If you knew me before, you may the eaſier know me now.

[Old

[Old man] Where have you been? and if thy gravity were as good as thy ancient dissembling, I would tell thee.

Old man..... These words be very large, what is the cause thou wilt not be acquainted with me? (I never did thee harm) and I have desired to be acquainted with thee a long time.

Maid...... With counterfeit gravity I will never be acquainted, neither thy age, and thy fame, nor thy hairs, nor the soberness of thy countenance can move me to any acquaintance for that thou never delightedst in true wisdom.

Old man..... Then go your way like an Harlot.

Maid...... If wicked words do prove an Harlot, then thou hast judged thy self.

E. K. Now she goeth on forward, and the Old man is gone out of sight. There appeareth now a young man, sitting on the side of a Ditch, and to him she said, Maid...... What aileth you to weep?

Young man..... I weep for thy discourtesie.

Maid...... Thou canst not move my conscience: No, (I say) thou canst not move me to pitty.

E. K. She licketh his tears, and saith.

Maid...... Every thing else hath some saltness, but here is none.

Young man. ..... Oh I pray thee, do something for me.

Maid. ..... Oh, to qualifie these tears, is no other then to dry rotten Hemp with a mighty fire.

Young man..... I will see thee hang'd before I will weep any more.

Maid...... Every thing commonly teacheth of it self.

E. K. The young man went away stamping, and angry, and now she is come where a multitude of young Children are, there is much meat on a Table, and the Children being not high enough to reach it, pull'd the maid by the Cloaths, and pointed to the meat; she goeth round about the Table there is but one dish uncovered, and that seemeth to be like dew, she putteth her fingers into the Dish, and letteth the Children lick, and they fall down dead.

Maid...... Blame Justice and not me, for if the Children had ever tasted of this meat before they might have continued.

E. K. Now she meeteth a thin visag'd man very feeble, who staggered on his staffe, and he said.

Feeble. ..... Help me for Gods sake.

Maid...... I will do my best.

E. K. As she came toward the man, the man fell down; She heaveth him up, and again he falleth down, and she lifteth at him still.

Maid...... Good will forms, but the matter is not sufficient: This is long of thy self.

Feeble..... Oh, I say, help me.

Maid...... It is too late to help thee, I came this way many times before, and thou never soughtest help at my hands. It is written, he that desireth not help, till he be helpless, he shall be voide of the benefit of an helper.

E. K. The feeble man goeth away, and she departeth from him: Now she cometh towards a man going up an hill who had torn all his Cloaths off with brambles and bryars. There stand a great many of Mawmets, little ugly fellows at the top of the hill, who threw stones against him, and so force this climing man (or goer up the hill) to tumble down again to the foot of the hill. The skin doth seem to be off his hands and his feet, and they very raw, with his excessive travail with hands and feet up that hill; Now there appear men eating meat below at the foot of the hill, who offered him meat to eat; But he laboureth up the hill again, one of these men said, come let me bind up thy feet.

The Clymer..... Unto him that hath no wearinesse, there belongeth no sorrow.

E. K. She standeth and vieweth him.

The Clymer. ..... I pray you help me.
Maid. ..... It is impoſſible for thee to get up here.
Clymer. ..... Of my ſelf it is: I will never be of the minde. It is impoſſible.
Maid. ..... Come on, I will do the beſt I can.

E. K. She leadeth him over ſtones, and rocks.

Maid. ..... Thou wilt be knocked in pieces, ere thou come to the top.
Clymer. ..... Do you your good will, I feel no harm.

E. K. Now ſhe leadeth him in a place, where Springs, Quick-mires, and Bogs are.

Maid. ..... Surely thou art beſt to go down, for thou wilt be drowned.
Clymer. ..... I pray you help, I will go as long as I may.

E. K. He goeth forward, and ſinketh almoſt to the throat.

Maid. ..... It is deeper on the further ſide, thou wert beſt to go down again.
Clymer. ..... I feel the ground hard under my feet: I will not yet deſpair.

E. K. Now he cometh out of thoſe deep places, and he ſeemeth to come to a place like the bottom of a hedge, where ſtand ſtiffe thorns, piked upward, very ſharp.

Now come two, or three handſome fellows, and ſaid, Alas, let him tarry here and drink, we will lead him up another way to morrow.

Maid. ..... Farewell.
Clymer. ..... I pray leave me not ſo, let me go with you.
Maid. ..... I muſt needs be gone, I cannot tarry for thee.
Clymer. ..... I am yet neither hungry nor thirſty, and feel no wearineſſe: Why therefore ſhould I ſtay.

E. K. He goeth, as though the thorns prickt him, and grindeth his teeth for pain.

Now they are come to a fair place, and then ſhe ſaid to one.

△ Labor improbus omnia vincit.

Maid. ..... Fetch meat and drink and cloaths, and cure his wounds: For unto thee belongeth the felicity of this place: For neither from the higheſt to the loweſt is there any whom I pitty, but ſuch as this is.
Clymer. ..... I know not how I ſhall uſe theſe things.
Maid. ..... The true Heirs have alwayes diſcretion.
To thee it belongeth, and for thee it is prepared.
Uſe it therefore without offence as thine own.

E. K. Now both he and ſhe go into a Caſtle, and the doors are ſhut after them, and ſhe cometh out again.

Maid. ..... This is written for your underſtanding: Let therefore your eyes be opened, and be not blinde. Neither forget what here hath been opened.

△. We perceive that Felicitas via ardua eſt, multis obſita difficultatibus & periculis; ſed conſtantia & patientia perventur ad Felicitatis arcem, which we beſeech the Almighty God to grant unto us.

Maid. ..... Well, I will be going till you have ſupped: And then I will tell you more of my minde. It will be yet ſix, or ſeven weeks journey before I can get home.

△ Note 42. or 49. dayes, remaining till the firſt day of Auguſt next incluſive.

△. Sit benedictus Deus noſter nunc & ſemper, Amen.

After Supper we ſtaid awhile, being come to the place, and though nothing was ſeen, or heard, yet I ſpake, aſſuring my ſelf of the preſence of the foreſaid maid, though as yet to us inſenſible.

△. We would gladly know thy name.

GALVAH. Maid. ..... My name is Galua'h, in your language I am called Finis.

E. K. She ſuddenly appeared as ſhe ſpake this.

△. That [Finis] is Latin. Gal. ..... I.

Filia lucis. Filiæ filiarum.

△. You are none of thoſe that are called filiæ lucis, or filiæ filiarum. Gal. ... No.

△. You will not be offended, if I propound a doubt ſomewhat impertinent to our matter in hand, yet of importance for us to hear your judgement in the ſame. Tritemius, ſayeth that never any good Angel was read of to have appeared forma muliebri: I pray you to give us an anſwer to this ſo great a Clark, his words, which are to be read in his little book, Octo Queſtionum Maximiliani Cæſaris. ..... There Quæſtione Sexta. Sancti autem Angeli, quoniam affectione nunquam variantur ſemper apparent in forma virili. Nuſquam enim legimus ſcriptum quod bonus ſpiritus in forma ſit viſus muliebri, aut beſtiæ cujuſcunque, ſed ſemper in ſpecie virili.

An Angeli boni in forma fœminia aliquando appareant?

Gal.

Gal. ..... You think then I have ſome underſtanding.

Δ. Yea, God knoweth, I do.

Gal. ..... Firſt it is evident that the Spirits of God are incomprehenſible to thoſe that are their inferiours: For the higher order is incomparable unto God, And by degrees, thoſe that are their inferiours are alſo incomparable unto them. It followeth therefore, that in reſpect of that degree in Angels things are incomprehenſible.

Angeli ex ſe-ipſis neque mares, neque fœminæ neque ſunt.

Angelorum Miniſteria.

Angels (I ſay) of themſelves, neither are man nor woman; Therefore they do take formes not according to any proportion in imagination, but according to the diſcreet and appliable will both of him, and of the thing wherein they are Adminiſtrators: For we all are Spirits miniſtring the will of God; and unto whom? unto every thing within the compaſſe of Nature: onely to his glory and the uſe of man. It followeth, Therefore, conſidering that we miniſter not of our ſelves that we ſhould miniſter in that unſearchable form within the which our executions are limited: But if Tritemius can ſay, That woman alſo hath not the Spirit of God, being formed and faſhioned of the ſelf ſame matter, notwithſtanding in a contrary proportion by a degree; If Tritemius can ſeparate the dignity of the Soul of woman from the excellency of man but according to the form of the matter, then might his Argument be good: But becauſe that in man and woman there is proportion, preparation, of ſanctification in eternity; Therefore may thoſe that are the eternal Miniſters of God in proportion to Sanctification take unto them the bodies of them both. I mean in reſpect of the Form; For as in both you read Homo, ſo in both you find one and the ſelf ſame dignity in internal matter all one. But Tritemius ſpake in reſpect of the filthineſſe (which indeed is no filthineſſe) wherewith all women are ſtained; and by reaſons from the natural Philoſophers: as a man talking more of nature indeed then of him which is the Workman or a ſupernatural Maſter. He (I ſay) concluded his natural invention. In reſpect of my ſelf, I anſwer Tritemius thus: I am Finis, I am a beam of that Wiſdom which is the end of mans excellency.

Hic } homo.

Galvah.

Thoſe alſo that are called Filiæ and Filiæ filiarum are all comprehended in me, and do attend upon True Wiſdom; which if Tritemius mark, he ſhall perceive that true Wiſdom is alwayes painted with a womans garment; For than the pureneſſe of a Virgin, Nothing is more commendable.

Apparition in the forme of woman.

God in his judgement knoweth how Tritemius is rewarded

Tritemius rewarded.

If you think theſe arguments be not ſufficient, the one in reſpect of the firſt ground, and the other in reſpect of the meaſure of my name, I will yet alledge greater.

Δ. Theſe Arguments do ſatisfie me: But to have wherewith to ſtop the mouths of others who might uſe Cavillation upon ſuch matters, it were ſomewhat needful to have heard your judgement: Whereas indeed our own affairs in hand are rather to be followed at this preſent, and of greater Arguments or Inſtructions in this matter I truſt hereafter to have underſtanding: But as now I chiefly regard our Action in hand.

Gal. ..... Begin the Book next Tueſday.

My ſelf will be thy Director; And as my name is, ſo I will lead unto the end. All other things uſe, according to thy judgement and proportion of his Spirit that guideth you.

Gal. ..... I my ſelf will be the finger to direct thee.

Δ.

Gal. ..... The finger of God ſtretcheth over many mountains.

His Spirit comforteth the weakneſſe of many places.

No ſenſe is unfurniſhed where his light remaineth.

For underſtand what I am, and it is a ſufficient anſwer.

Δ. At the beginning to write the Book, ſhall I require your inſtructions?

Gal. ..... Do ſo.

The Mountains of the World ſhall lie flat; But the Spirit of God ſhall never be confounded.

E. K. She ſitteth on a rock, and hath done ever ſince ſupper.

Gal. ..... Ah Sirra I was a weary.

Δ. As concerning the Poloniſh Lord Albertus Laſcy whom we are certified to be of God elected to govern him a people, whom we are willed to love and honour, What have you to ſay of him? &c.

Gal. ..... Ask me theſe things to morrow.

E. K. She ſmileth and caſteth a light from her.

Smiling.

Gal. ..... I ſmile becauſe I ſpeak of to morrow; yea I ſeem to ſmile.

Δ. As concerning Iſabel Lyſter, I pray in what caſe is ſhe? in reſpect of the wicked ſpirit which long hath moleſted her?

A. L.

Gal. ..... Believe, For that is the chiefeſt:

What is ſpoken by us we give but our conſent to.

For he that ſpeaketh in us is to be asked no ſuch queſtion.

Note.

For when he ſaith, it is meaſured.

As it was ſaid before; The Hills and Mountains of the World may be made plain, but the Spirit of God never confoundeth.

Δ. He that is the end of all things, and the end of ends (unto whom all honour praiſe and thankſ-thankſgiving is due) bleſſe us, endue us with his graces, and abundantly power forth his mercy upon us.

△. Finis particularis: ſcilicet Iſtus actionis.

Gal. ..... Underſtand my name particularly, and not generally.
I ſpeak it to avoid errour.

Perſevere to the end.

△. Qui perſeveraverit fidelis (Deo noſtro) uſque ad finem hic ſalvus erit: which faithfulneſſe with all conſtancy and patience the Bleſſed and Almighty Trinity grant and confirm unto us for the glory and honour of his Name, Amen.

E. K. She is gone with a brightneſſe.

1583. Junii 15. Saturday afternoon, hora 6. △. After that the noble Albertus Laskie had been with me, and was new gone to London, I uſed ſome diſcourſe by prayer to God, and afterward proteſtation to Galuah in reſpect of her willing me to ask certain matters again this day which. . . . yeſterday were not anſwered: But very long it was, above half an hour, before any thing appeared, more then the Golden Curtain all over the Shew. . . .

At length appeared divers confuſed forms of divers Creatures, and then, by and by, vaniſhed away.

△. I prayed to God to baniſh all confuſion from us and our actions, and to ſend us lucem & veritatem, per unum & propter unum, & conſtantiam rerum....

Il. Then appeared he by whom (before) we were called Il, and ſeemed to ſcorn at E. K.

E. K. Here appeareth Il, and he ſeemeth to mock me.

Il. ..... That is a gird to you Sir for your fiſhing.

△. E. K. had ſpent all that afternoon (almoſt) in angling, when I was very deſirous to have had his company and helping hand in this Action.

△. Shortly after this, appeared Galuah and to be in a field cloſed round about with a hedge.

Gal. ..... Here is no way out.

Il ..... Come I will do ſomewhat for you; It is a ſtrange thing that wiſdom cannot find a way through a hedge.

Wiſdom.

E. K. This Il pulleth down the hedge.

Gal. ..... Go thy way, thou haſt done but thy duty.

Il. ..... Farewell Dee, Farewell Kelly.

Dee, Kelly.

E. K. He is gone.

Gal. ..... Thoſe that taſte of everlaſting Bankets, fare well, and deſire the ſame to others.

E. K. Now ſhe is come to a great Caſtle-gate, all of ſtone, with a draw-bridge before it. There is like a Greyhound graven or cut in the Stone over the Gate.

Note.

Gal. ..... It is very late, I will look if I can have my entertainment here. 1583.

E. K. She is gone in.

△. After a while ſhe came out again.

Gal. ..... Bee it ſpoken.
Curſed, defaced, and damned be this place.

A voice out of the Stone.

Gal. ..... And why? Becauſe they have puffed up their fleſh, follow their own imaginations, wallowing in their filthineſſe, as Swine that tumble in mire.
Behold it is too late with this people, I can get no lodging. O ye my feet, be a witneſſe againſt them, let the windes move the duſt to report their unkindneſſe.

E. K. Now ſhe goeth a long a great Way, like a common high-way; and the light of the Air about her ſeemed ſomewhat dark like Evening or Twilight.

Gal. ..... Yea though you have too much light, I have too little.
I did but over-hear you, when you ſaw me not.

△. [Note. I had ſpoken of too much light coming from the weſt window of my Study toward the Table, where the Shew-ſtone ſtood, when we began now to attend her coming, and thereupon ſhe ſpoke this.]

E. K. Her own garments caſt a light.

E. K. Now ſhe cometh amongſt a company of men having gowns furred with white, and ſome of them having Velvet Caps, and ſome Hats.

One of them ſaid to her, What art thou?

Gal. ..... I know not what I am my ſelf
Will you buy any pretious Stones of me?

E. K. She

E. K. She taketh out of her boſome a great many of precious ſtones uncut, or unpoliſhed.

E. K. Theſe men look on them.

Gal. ..... Truely, they are pure and good.

E. K. They ſay alſo; Surely they ſeem to be good, delivering them from one to another.

E. K. There appear two fat men; who ſaid, let us firſt get money before we buy ſuch trifles: beſides that, they have not their perfect form.

Gal. ..... I pray you, buy one of them of me.
Will you buy none neither?

E. K. She ſpeaketh that to them, who firſt praiſed the ſtones.

..... Tuſh, I pray thee go about thy buſines, doſt thou not perceive how they are found fault withall? Thoſe men.

Gal. ..... Tuſh, Tuſh, they be not cut for your faſhion.
Be it ſaid.

A voyce from the ſtone.

..... Their ſenſes are glutted with tranſitory vanities.
Gal. ..... Let them (therefore) periſh vainly, becauſe they are tranſitory.

E. K. Now ſhe cometh where ſhe muſt clamber up a wall, having ſteps in it of ragged ſtones; There is a fair building beyond it. There go many up thoſe ſteps: and when they are almoſt at the top, there meeteth them ſome, who take them by the hand, and help them up and over into the place. Then one of them that ſtood at the top of the wall (who had a furred Gown) and helping of men up, ſaid to her, Come away woman, wilt thou come up? This Parable, or Propheſie is divers times ſpoken afterwards in the troubles of England.

E. K. She ſaith nothing to him, but ſtandeth ſtill, and looketh away from him.

E. K. Again, that man ſaid to her, come away wilt thou come up?

Gal. ..... Unhappy are thoſe whom thou helpeſt: And whoſe breath hath infected many, your hands are too bloudy, for me to come anigh you.

E. K. Now come handſome women to the wall, and ſome ſaid, good ſiſter, I pray you come away.

Gal. ..... Your voluptuous father knoweth me not, for his daughter, I deny yo.....

E. K. Now come two, or three brave fellows with Rapiers by their ſides, and having hatts without bands, and their hoſen pinned up, and with no garters; theſe help up people that come, and one of them ſaid: Tarry a little, woman, and I will help thee ſhortly. The Attyre of the wanton youth of the Court.

Gal. ..... Fy upon you: your cloaths are infected with abominations of your Chamber, I will tarry time.

E. K. Now cometh a big ſtout man to the top of the wall, and a boy with a Crown on his head: He ſeemeth to be about 18 years old.

..... So it is, and pleaſe your Majeſty: Therefore let this way be razed. The ſtout big man.

E. K. He ſpake to the young King upon former talk between them which I heard not.

..... Be it done.

A voyce out of the ſtone.

E. K. The wall quaketh and falleth down: And ſome of the jolly fellowes, which were on the wall before, fell down, and other fellowes came and digged a great hole, or breach in the wall. The wall broken down.

Gal. ..... Thanks be to God: Now, here is entrance enough.

E. K. She goeth in.

The

The young man, or ſtriplin (with the Crown on his head) and the other big man embraceth her: His Crown is a Triple Crown; or three Crowns one upon another. He hath a little thing in his hand, which he holdeth cloſe, and over-gripeth, ſo that it cannot be diſcerned.

The big man. ..... Though thou haſt travelled as a woman, thou ſhalt now be known to be a man.

E. K. He ſpake to Galvah. They embrace each other. They fetch cloaths for her, and put upon her a black Gown, a mans Gown, as the Gown of a Counſeller.

Galvah tranſformed into a man. She kneeleth down like a man in form, her head and all.

E. K. Then the young King ſpake to her, ſaying,

..... What this Rod may do, work.

E. K. He giveth the transformed man a Rod; one half being bloud, and the other half white, the partition of theſe two being long-wiſe.

A voyce out of the ſtone. Quæ juſta ſunt faciet & meas menſurabit virtutes.
The transformed man. For untill it was appointed, I ſought it not.
Let us cleanſe the Court, and examine the multitude;
A voyce out of the ſtone. For errour is alwayes covered in many.
Curſed are thoſe that are judged by a multitude.

NOTE. E. K. All they that fell off the vvall, and they that vvould have helped her up, they come in bound hand and foot.

The tranſformed. ..... Root them out, O King, pitty no ſuch perſons, for thoſe be theſe that never had mercy on themſelves.

E. K. Novv cometh a woman out, having a Crown on her head: ſhe hath a long viſage.

The big man. ..... Nay, let her drink as ſhe hath deſerved.

E. K. The transformed man layeth down the Rod before him, and beginneth to vveep; and ſaid, Let it not be ſaid, but I pitty the anointed.

The big man. ..... Let her die, for ſhe hath deſerved death.

E. K. Other men about her lay hand on her, and pluck the Crown off her head.

The transformed man taketh up his Rod, and layeth upon the top, or Crown of that womans head.

E. K. The young King ſayeth unto her, What wilt thou?

The woman. ..... If it pleaſe you, pardon for my life and dignity.

E. K. The bigge man, and the young King talk together aſide, the vvoman holdeth her hands abroad, and knocks her breaſt? And a great company of them about her are hewed in pieces, by tormenters armed.

A voyce out of the ſtone. Adjuvabo.

E. K. The King and the bigge man come in again.

The transformed man. E. K. The King ſaid to the transformed man; Be it as thou wilt, Be you two joyned together. For I vviſh you both well.

E. K. The vvoman boweth down vvith obeyſance, and thanketh them.

E. K. The bigge man taketh the King by the hand, and the transformed man taketh the woman by the hands, and putteth her hands to the hands of the King, and the bigge man; they take each other by the hand, and kiſſe her.

E. K. All

E. K. All is now on the ſudden vaniſhed away, and the transformed man is returned again to her womans ſhape, and ſhe ſaid.

Gal. ..... Now I will go with you, Sir, your journey.

E. K. She ſpeaketh to you △.

To △. .... I will lead you, if you will follow me up.

But you muſt have broken ſhinns.

△. By Gods grace, and with his help I will follow you, and in reſpect of my ſhinns breaking, the joy of the conſequent effect will utterly take away the grief of the ſhinns breaking.

Gal. ..... And to you Sir, you were beſt to hunt and fiſh after Verity.

[△. She ſpake ſo to E. K. becauſe he ſpent too much time in Fiſhing and Angling.]

Gal. ..... Whom thou ſaweſt here ſhall govern over 21 Kingdoms. 21. Kingdoms.

△. If there be no myſtery in that ſpeech, the Conqueſt muſt be great, and the trouble great and ſtrange.

E. K. She goeth on her way along a lane.

△. We know not who ſhould be that King ſo ſhewed.

Gal. ..... Sure thy demands are fully anſwered.

Conſider thou what thou ſeekeſt,

And of whom thou ſeekeſt,

And by whoſe help.

Then look to that which is declared.

I will follow my office, for in thoſe things wherein thou art inquiſitive I have ſhewed the End. The End.

△. Truely the occaſion of my preſent asking you ſome queſtions, aroſe upon matter concerning this Noble Polonian, of whom you bad us yeſterday ask as this day.

Gal. ..... Vanity hangeth not at mine Elbow.

Believeſt thou that already ſpoken? ſpoken (I ſay) of him?

△. Yea forſooth, I do believe it.

Gal. ..... I ſay unto thee, His name is in the Book of Life: The Sun ſhall not paſſe his courſe before he be a King. His Counſel ſhall breed Alteration of this State; yea of the whole World. The Prince Alb. Laskie.

What wouldſt thou know of him?

△. If his Kingdom ſhall be of Poland, or what Land elſe.

Gal. ..... Of two Kingdoms.

△. Which I beſeech you?

Gal. ..... The one thou haſt repeated, and the other he ſeeketh as right.

△. God grant him ſufficient direction to do all things ſo, as may pleaſe the Higheſt in his calling.

Gal. ..... He ſhall want no direction in any thing he deſireth.

△. As concerning the troubles of Auguſt next, and the dangers then, What is the beſt for him to do? to be going home before, or to tarry here? Auguſt.

Gal. ..... Whom God hath armed, No man can prevaile againſt.

△. In reſpect of my own ſtate with the Prince, I pray how much hath he prevailed to win me due credit: and in what caſe ſtandeth my ſuite, or how am I to uſe my ſelf therein? The premiſes are an anſwer to this queſtion.

Gal. ..... I have told you that at large even now, and if thou look into thoſe things that are now told, and are now done.

△. Concerning Charles Sled, his noſe guſhing with blood twice yeſternight and this morning upon my charitable inſtructions giving him to vertue and godlineſſe.

Gal. ..... I know him not: nor any name hath he with us.

△. Meaneth he well towards me?

Gal. ..... Whatſoever a wicked man meaneth it is not well; but in that ſenſe it is demanded he meaneth well.

The evil ſpirit that poſſeſſeth him was caſt out of him, even at his noſe, at the preſence of thoſe that were preſent with thee. Charles Sled.

Gal. ..... Believe me we know not his name; Trouble me no more with him.

△. O Lord, though men be fraile, faulty, and filthy, yet thy mercies are moſt praiſeworthy (among all generations) of all thy doings.

Gal. ..... Hold thy peace, we are now to execute the Juſtice of God.

△. I ſpake a great while of the mercies of God and his Juſtice, and gave thanks for our Calling and Election into this bleſſed ſtate.

Gal. ..... I will take up my lodging for this night.

△. God grant me worthy of ſuch godly gheſts, God grant me a dwelling with you where his name is eternally praiſed, glorified, and ſanctified: To him all Creatures render thanks, honour, and glory. Amen.

..... Amen.

Voice out of the Stone. Δ. This voice out of the Stone being taken to be the voice of God, importeth as much as if God himſelf had ſealed to that as his will and decree, That all Creatures ſhould render thankes unto him and glory; fiant: Dignum & Juſtum eſt. Amen.

Tueſday Junii 18 An. 1583. ante meridiem circa 9.

Δ. I prayed firſt, and declared our attending this day the promiſe of God to be performed, &c.

Ga..... Are four hours yet to come? and I will be ready.

Are the works of wiſdom ſecret, until I have aſcended this Hill?

Is the Harveſt ready when the Corn is ripe?

Are the Labourers ready when their Inſtruments are prepared?

I have ſaid.

Note. All wiſdom is reckoned by the eternal Will; and until it be ſaid, there is no action tollerable; When the Sun ſhineth I will appear amongſt you; when it is ſaid Come, lo I am ready. The dayes of your fathers were bleſſed; but the hour when this Book ſhall be written ſhall be ſanctified, yea in the middeſt of intellectual underſtanding.

For herein is the Creation of Adam with his tranſgreſſion. The Dignity and wiſdom he had.

The Errour and horror wherein he was drowned, yea herein is the power ſpread of the higheſt working in all Creatures.

For as there is a particular Soul or fire inflaming unto every body (I mean reaſonable) So there is an Univerſal fire and a general brightneſſe giving general light unto them, which is but One, and ſhineth through the whole, yea is meaſured equally unto every thing from the beginning.

The life of all things is here known:

The reward of death to thoſe that are rewarded for life.

None are rewarded but according to their deſerts: of the which there are two kinds.

1. Theſe are rewarded with death for their wickedneſſe.
2. So are they rewarded with life for their conſtant living.

Amongſt the Angels there may be errour, and ſin may make them fall from the brightneſſe of their glory.

But to the Soul of man (being once glorified) ſin is utterly, yea moſt largely oppoſite: Neither ſhall that dignity ever be loſt, ſtained, or defaced, that is obtained here with the workes of righteouſneſſe and true wiſdom.

Whatſoever hath been from the beginning (ſince it was ſaid in Divine Determination, Be it done) is here incloſed.

Therefore ſhould this day be Hallowed and Sanctified before the Lord by you.

For if the Prophets, did worſhip this day of his aſcenſion, much more ought you (which have taſted of the firſt, and ſhall now taſte of the ſecrets of his Judgements) glorifie his coming: But with you Satan is buſie; His briſtles ſtand up, his feathers are caſt abroad.

Satan. Therefore watch and pray; For thoſe that go to Banquets put on their upper garments. Amongſt you therefore is no ſound belief; Neither do you conſider the ſcope of this bleſſednesſe: But ſuch is the greatneſſe and excellency of his foreknowledge, that he ſuffereth the enemy to carry a burden, yea ſometimes to preach upon a Stage: For it is ſaid, He ſhall triumph unto the end, and place himſelf here as he would have done above: Neither ſhall he be thruſt out of doors till the end be determined. Therefore watch and pray, and look about with diligence; for thoſe things ſhall be opened unto you which have not been diſcloſed unto the Holy Ones.

Oh, how hard a thing it is for fleſh to continue in the works of Juſtice!

Yea, oh how hard a thing it is for Wiſdom to be acquainted with a hotchpot of filthineſſe?

Cleanſe your garments, Lift up your hearts, and rent your faults in pieces, that there may be one heart with one conſent, and unto one end, unto him which is One and the End of all things: and to him for and in his truth, and for the greatneſſe of his mercies: To whom be praiſe for ever.

Δ. Amen.

E. K. All the while ſhe ſpake there came a bright beame from the Myſtical Stone to the body of her, and at the end ſhe mounted upward and diſappeared.

Δ. We ſet up the hour glaſſes to meaſure four hours juſtly after this anſwer and inſtructions.

Tueſday, After Dinner about one of the clock and ½ the hours expired, and we attended the mercy of the Higheſt.

Δ. At a great gladſome ſhining of the Sun (whereas it had not ſhined but a little and inconſtantly ever ſince his laſt words) one appeared on the corner of the green ſilk Sarcenet, by the Myſtical Stone, She was like a woman as Galvah in face, but her apparel was a mans gown furred with foynes, or, as Gentlewomen do wear upon gowns.

Δ. Upon the diverſity of your apparel we are to ask whether you be Galvah or no? or have you alſo, as I have done, put on your Holiday-cloths?

Gal.

Gal. ..... FEAR GOD.

E. K. She ſteppeth forward one ſtep.

Gal. ..... My Garment is called HOXMARCH, which in your ſpeech is called .....

Δ. Initium ſapientiæ eſt Timor Domini: we acckowledge it to be an old and a true Leſſon, and alſo the firſt ſtep of the path-way to felicity.

Gal. ..... What is fear?

Δ. Fear is of two ſorts: one is called filialis, the other ſervilis.

Gal. ..... Unto the Juſt all fear is joy; and therefore the beginning and entrance into quietneſſe. True quietneſſe and reſt is wiſdom; For the mind that knoweth hath the greateſt reſt and quietneſs. The Daughter of Diſpaire unto the wicked is fear.

This fear is the firſt that accuſeth unto damnation: But he that is perfectly wiſe, or hath taſted of wiſdom, knoweth the End.

And his fear is of the thing that is done. This is the true fear of God; and when we fear ſin, we do it becauſe we hate it.

When we ſtudy to do good, it is a token of our fear, in that it is a token we fear him, whom we love and for whoſe honour we ſtudy to do well.

This is all that may be ſaid of lively and unlively fear.

Touching the Book, it ſhall be called Logah: which in your Language ſignifieth Speech from GOD. Write after this ſort LOGAETH: it is to be ſounded Logah. The Title of the Book.

This word is of great ſignification, I mean in reſpect of the profoundneſſe thereof.

The firſt leaf (as you call it) is the laſt of the Book.

And as the firſt leaf is a hotchpot without order; So it ſignifieth a diſorder of the World, and is the ſpeech of that Diſorder or Propheſie.

Δ. I underſtand not this unleſſe it be the firſt leaf, being indeed the laſt, is of the wicked helliſh one, &c. vide poſt 4. Folio.

Write the Book (after your order) backward, but alter not the form of letters, I ſpeak in reſpect of the places.

E. K. Now a beame ſhooteth through him from the Stone and ſo through his head and out of his mouth, his face being from E. K. toward Δ.

..... Write the 49. You have but 48 already. Write firſt in a paper apart. 49

E. K. Said that Galvah her head is ſo on bright fire, that it cannot be looked upon: The fire ſo ſparkleth and gliſtreth as when an hot iron is ſmitten on an Anvil, & eſpecially at the pronouncing of every word. It is to be noted alſo that upon the pronouncing of ſome words, the Beaſts and all Creatures of the World every one ſhewed themſelves in their kind and form: But notably all Serpents, Dragons, Toads, and all ugly and hideous ſhapes of beaſts; which all made moſt ugly countenances, in a manner aſſaulting E. K. but contrariwiſe coming to, and fawning upon Galvah. It is to be noted alſo that by degrees came a ſecond beame, and a third beame of light into Galvah from the Stone, and all the three together appeared: the third participating of the other two.

Loagaeth ſeg lovi brtnc
Larzed dox ner habzilb adnor
Now Seas appear.
doucha Larb vors hirobra exi vr zednip taiip chinrvane chermach lendix nor zandox.

The ſecond beame came at the word Larb, pronounced; when alſo Frogs and Serpents appeared, &c. The third beame upon the word Exi pronounced. Note alſo, that the manner of the firy brightneſſe was ſuch, and the griſely countenances of the Monſters was ſo tedious and greivous and diſpleaſant to E. K. that partly the very grief of his minde and body, and partly the ſuſpecting the Creatures to be no good Creatures, neither ſuch greivous ſights neceſſary to be exhibited with the Myſteries delivering unto us, had in a manner forced him to leave off all: But I again with reaſonable exhorting of him, and partly the providence and decree Divine, wrought ſome mitigating of his grief and diſquieting.

Gal. ..... Theſe are theſe ſeven.

Δ. Bleſſed and praiſed for ever be He who is one and three: and whom mighty miniſters or governours do inceſſantly glorifie.

1583.

Gal. ..... Thy folly and weakneſſe is great, God comfort thee.

[Δ. He ſpoke to E. K. for his exceſſive diſquietneſſe and ſuſpecting of the verity or goodneſſe of Galvah.]

Δ. Note. Now the beames were all retired into the ſtone; again likewiſe all the Creatures and Vermine or ugly ſhaped Beaſts are all gone. We were willed alſo divers times to pray. At ſundry pangs of E. K. his grief and diſquietneſſe, ſundry ſpeeches were uttered by the ſpiritual Creature: among which theſe noted. Pray.

..... He that is angry cannot ſee well. From him that is perverſe, God turneth his face.

The hindrance of puniſhment, is the mercy of God, which imputeth not ſin unto them whom he hath Choſen; Therefore be patient, and reconcile thy ſelf to God. The Elect. Reconciliation.

E. K. I do it with all humility and ſincerity of minde, and beſeech God to help me with his grace; for of my ſelf I cannot do ſo, yet I am Thomas Didymas, I will believe theſe things, when I ſee the fruits of them.

Δ. He ſeemed yet again to doubt, whether this Creature and the reſt, (partakers of this action) were ſoundly good, and void of all halting, or abuſing us.

E K. How can you perſwade me that ye be no deluders?

Arguments to prove our Inſtructors to be good Angels.

Gall. ..... I will prove it by contrary.

The ſervants of darkneſſe have their Garments ſtained: their mouths ſtinck of blaſphemy, and lies, but our Garments are no ſuch, neither do our lips ſpeak any untruth: and therefore we are of God, for whoſoever is of the truth, is of God.

Moreover, the Devil is known by his works: for the ſpirit of God controlleth them, the ſpirit of God agreeth with us, and uſeth no controlment againſt it, therefore it is not Dauleſſe.

In one thing thou mayeſt know us differing from Devils.

Mercy.

The wicked ſpirits alwayes abhor this word Mercy.

But it is the Doctrine that we preach in reſpect towards you, we are not now (then) evil.

But this way teacheth hardneſſe, and is a ſtumbling block to the wicked: but the beauty of the Caſtle is not able to be expreſſed.

The attire before.

Happy are they, which are covered with the Pearls of Righteouſneſſe, and on whoſe head there is a Garland of godlineſſe: For unto thoſe belongeth to taſte of the Fountain of true wiſdom.

Is it not written of this book, that it teacheth nature in all degrees?

The judgement hereof is Intellectual.

And waſh your feet, and follow me.

Δ. Lord waſh thou our feet, or elſe we ſhall not be clean.

Gall. ..... How thou art God knoweth: But comfort your ſelves in this.

This Teſtimony victory.

That neither this Teſtimony can periſh, neither unto you can remain any ſlavery: Quia veſtra erit victoria, in him, and for him, to whom I leave you.

Δ. What ſhall I do with theſe 21 words now received;

Gall..... There are onely the words of the firſt leaf.

Δ. I pray, how ſhall I beſtow them, or place them.

Gall. ..... In them is the Divinity of the Trinity.

The firſt leaf of the book.

The Myſterie of our Creation.
The age of many years.
And the concluſion of the World.

Of me they are honoured, but of me, not to be uttered: Neither did I diſcloſe them my ſelf: For, they are the beams of my underſtanding, and the Fountain from whence I water.

Δ. I beſeech you, how ſhall I write theſe names in the firſt leafe.

Gall. ..... They are to be written in 5 Tables, in every Table 21 Letters.

Δ. How ſhall I place the 5 Tables upon two ſides: three in the firſt, and 2 in the ſecond, or one in the firſt, and 4 in the ſecond, or how elſe?

Gall. .... As thou ſeeſt cauſe.

Δ. Shall I write them in Letters of Gold?

Gall. ..... The writing hath been referred to thy diſcretion with collours, and ſuch things as appertain to the writing thereof. Upon the firſt ſide write three Tables, and on the ſecond two.

Δ. How, thus? ☰ Gal. .... Set them down, I will direct thy judgement.

Δ. When, now? ☲ Gal. .... Not now.

E. K. She is gone,

Δ. Deo Noſtro ſit Laus, honor, & Gratiarum actio perennis. Amen.

Wedneſday 19. Junii. Hora 2. a Meridie.

Δ. I made a prayer to God: and there appeared one, having two Garments in his hands, who anſwered.

..... A good praiſe, with a wavering minde.

Δ. God make my minde ſtable, and to be ſeaſoned with the intellectual leaven, free of all ſenſible mutability.

E. K. One of theſe two Garments is pure white: the other is ſpeckled of divers colours; he layeth them down before him, he layeth alſo a ſpeckled Cap down before him at his feet; he hath no Cap on his head: his hair is long and yellow, but his face cannot be ſeen; at the leaſt it was turned away-ward from E. K. continually, though E. K. changed his place.

..... You

..... You ſhall ſee my face, lo, it is white.

E. K. Now he putteth on his Pied Coat, and his Pied Cap, he caſteth the one ſide of his Gown over his ſhoulder, and he danceth, and ſaith,

..... There is a God, let us be merry.

E. K. He danceth ſtill.

There is a heaven, let us be merry.

Doth this Doctrine teach you to know God, or to be skilfull in the heavens?

..... Note it.

E. K. Now he putteth off his Cloathes again: Now he kneeleth down, and waſheth his head and his neck, and his face, and ſhaketh his Cloaths, and plucketh off the uttermoſt ſole of his ſhooes, and falleth proſtrate on the ground, and ſayed:

..... Vouchſafe (O God) to take away the wearineſſe of my body, and to cleanſe the filthineſſe of this duſt, that I may be apt for this pureneſſe.

E. K. Now he taketh the white Garment, and putteth it on him.

..... Mighty is God in his great Juſtice, and wonderful in his immeaſurable mercy: The heavens taſte of his Glory: The earth is confounded at his wiſdom. In hell they tremble at him, as at a Revenger. This ſheweth thee (O) to be a God, and ſtretcheth forth thy Glory from the Eaſt unto the Weſt; for thy Heavens are Statutes, and thy Creatures Laws: that thou mayeſt be accounted a God of Juſtice and Glory. Becauſe thou art a God, Therefore there is a Heaven: For unto the Prince of Righteouſneſſe, there belongeth a place of Glory; Into the which there entereth none that are defiled, neither ſuch as are blemiſhed with the ſpots of iniquity. Manus Hæc bona eſt..... E. K. putting forth his right hand, Hæc Autem mala ..... E. K. putting forth his left hand, Qui Habet aures intelligat.

E. K. Now he ſitteth down on the Desk-top and looketh toward me.

Δ. This Parable is in general, ſomewhat underſtood of us: but in particular, how it may be, or is to be applied, preſently we underſtand not.

..... Beware leſt error enter within the dwelling place of Righteouſneſſe. I have ſaid.

E. K. He ſeemeth now to be turned to a woman, and the very ſame which we call Galvah.

E. K. Now he is come down to the uſual place, on the Table.

Δ. I have aſſayed divers wayes to place the five Tables, on the two ſides on this firſt leaf; Is it to your likeing as I have done it, in the five little Triangles?

Gal. ..... As concerning the ſetting down of the five Tables, it is ſufficient as it is done.

The cauſe why I appeared thus, was that you might avoid error.

Δ. I pray you to ſhew us the means how that error was or is to incumber us.

Gal. ..... Whoſoever taketh ſervants of the wicked, to prove the Glory of God, is accurſed. But, O Satan, how many are thy deceits? Note.

Note, my Companion (E. K.) would have cauſed perſonal apparitions of ſome of the reprobate ſpirits, before the Prince Albert Laskie in my Study, thereby to ſhew ſome experience of his skill in ſuch doings: But I would not conſent to it: And thereupon Galvah gave judgement and warning of ſuch an error, of my Companion his intent, &c. A. L.

Gal. ..... Behold, it is ſaid, before he go from hence I will pour water into him; And my Angel ſhall annoint him, as I have determined: Hide therefore Nothing from him; For you belong unto him. Neither can fleſh and blood work thoſe things that I have Glorified in him (All things that are eſtabliſhed in God, are Glorified. I ſpeak this for thy underſtanding) Neither let your hearts be hardned; for the Earth is condemned, and theſe things ſhall come to paſſe. Credit is all that I ſeek (ſaith the Lord;) for when I come, I ſhall be ſufficiently believed. Note of A. L.

I take the God of Heaven and Earth to judge; and ſwear by him as a witneſſe, that theſe words are true, and ſhall endure unto the end. The general points of mans Salvation are concluded already; but the ſpecial gift belongeth unto God. God ſtrengthen you againſt his adverſary. An Oath. Note of General points, and ſpecial gifts.

Δ. Amen.

Gal. ..... Soon you ſhall know more.

Δ. This Prince would gladly know, Whether it ſhall be beſt for him, with the firſt opportunity, to be going homeward.

Gal. ..... It ſhall be anſwered ſoon, and what queſtions ſoever he alſo demandeth.

Δ. May he be here preſent at the action doing?

Gal. ..... Thoſe that are of this houſe, are not to be denied the Banquets therein. A. L. may be preſent at Actions.

Δ. May I requeſt you to cauſe ſome ſenſible apparition to appear to him, to comfort him, and eſtabliſh his minde more abundantly in the godly intent of God his Service?

Gal.

Gal. ..... If you follow us, let him be governed by us; But whatsoever is of the flesh, is not of us.

E. K. She seemeth to weep; for the water cometh forth of her eyes.

Δ. You perceive, how he understandeth of the Lord Treasurer his grudge against him; And perhaps some other also, are of like malitious nature: What danger may follow hereof, or incombrance?

Gal. ..... The sum of his life is already appointed, one jot cannot be diminished: But he that is Almighty can augment at his pleasure. Let him rejoyce in poverty. Be sorry for his enemies. And do the works of Justice.

A. L. poverty.

E. K. She seemeth to put the air over her, and so to enter into a Cloud of invisibility, and so disappear.

Δ. Deo gratias agamus.

Wensday after noon, circa horam 5. The Lord Albert à Lasky being present.

Δ. We attended of Galvah some instructions or discourse concerning the Lord Laskie.

E. K. At length appeared before the Lord Lasky (in the air) an Angel in a white Robe, holding a bloody Crosse in his right hand, the same hand being also bloody.

Δ. In nomine Jesu Christi Crucifixi, a te requiro qui Crucis Trophæum hic Gestas ut illa nobis significes, quæ sunt ad Christi gloriam, cui sit honor & Laus perennis.

E. K. Now he is come from before the Lord Lasky, and standeth here on the Table: he turneth himself to all the four quarters of the World; he kneeleth down.

He prayeth.

..... O God, Why should the people upon earth rejoyce? or wherein should the pleasures of their sensual delights be fixed? Why doth the Moon hold her course? or why are the Stars observing an order? Why are thy people thus scattered abroad? Because iniquity hath caught the upper hand. The Doors of our God are polluted with blasphemy, his Temples desolate, his Commandments violated, and his Glory accounted as nothing. But wilt thou suffer; or canst thou hold thy hand from thy great and mighty strokes? Most High God, Most Mighty God, Most Honourable God, have mercy upon thy people; respect the Creation, (the Creation I say) of those, wherein thou hast delighted. Suffer not the Serpent to extol his head above thy Altars, neither let thy holy Vessel be poisoned with his venome; For thou art Mighty and overcomest all: and who can rebel against thy Prowesse? Bend down thy mereiful eyes, Behold this confusion: look upon thy Temple and see the desolation thereof. And then in thy mercy (O) shew thy self to be a God, and such a merciful Governour, as hath compassion upon those that are diseased, yea even unto death. Grant this Camascheth galsuagath garnastel zurah logaah luseroth. Amen.

Δ. I pray you to declare unto us your name.

..... My name is Jubanladace.

Δ. If I should not offend you, I would gladly know of what order you are, or how your state is in respect of Michael, Gabriel, Raphael, or Uriel.

..... Jub. Unto men, according unto their deserts, and the first excellency of their Soul, God hath appointed a good Governour or Angel, from amongst the orders of those that are Blessed: For every Soul that is good, is not of one and the self same dignification; Therefore according to his excellency we are appointed as Ministers from that order, whereunto his Excellency accordeth: To the intent that he may be brought at last to supply those places which were Glorified by a former; And also to the intent, that the Prince of Darknesse might be counterpoised in Gods Justice. Amongst the which I am one which am the Keeper and Defender of this man present: which carry the Triumph and Ensign of Victories continually before him, as a reproach to my adversaries and his, and to confirm the dignity whereunto he is called by the presence of this Character.

E. K. Now he heaveth up the Crosse.

A. L. Judæi. Victoria.

A. L. An year to come.

Hindrance breedeth exception, and sin breedeth hindrance.

..... I have also sealed the same in his heart: For unto him belong great Victories, in the name, and for the name of his God. The Jews in his time shall taste of this Crosse: And with this Crosse shall he overcome the Sarazens, and Paynims: For I will establish one Faith (saith the Lord of Justice) That I may be known to be the same that I was first among all people. Moreover I will open the hearts of all men, that he may have free passage through them, and will not suffer him to perish with the violence of the wicked. I will hereafter visibly appear unto him, and will say, This is to be done. But a year is not yet come, and these things shall be finished. But (thus saith the Lord) I have hindred him, because he hearkned to the provocation of those that are wanton. And hath consented to those that blasphemed my name. Bid him look to the steps of his youth, and measure the length of his body; to the intent, he may live better, and see himself inwardly.

Δ. Note.

Δ. Note. At this Inſtant Tanfeld came raſhly upon us, into my Study: we thinking that the Study door had been ſhut; the Lord Laskie being gone out of my Study, the other way through my Oratory, to take Tanfelds meſſage from the Court, and having diſpatched him, reſted without: and Tanfeld having commendations to me, as he ſaid, from ſome at London, fearing leaſt he ſhould be be ſent away by and by, without doing theſe, came undiſcretly upon us, to our no little amazing, and great fearing his raſh opinion afterward of ſuch things, as he could not perceive perfectly what my Companion and I were doing: Hereupon, Jubanladace gave this ſentence, or declared this the fatal end of Tanfeld. This ſaw all ſaved the Lord Laskie.

Juban. ..... It is ſaid, He that entreth in thus raſhly, Lo five moneths are yet to come, and fiſhes of the Sea ſhall devour his carkaſe.

..... As before, whatſoever he taketh in hand ſhall proſper, for my names ſake. For thus it is ſaid, and theſe words are the words wherewithal I do annoint him; for than the comfort of the Higheſt, there is not a ſweeter Inunction. Look not for the marveiles of this World, as the wicked man in his heart doth; but ſtudy to pleaſe him with whom ye might rejoyce for ever. You ſons of men, What do ye ſeek after? Do ye hunt after the ſwiftneſſe of the winds; or are you imagining a form unto the Clouds? or go ye forth to hear the braying of an Aſſe, which paſſeth away with the ſwiftneſſe of the air? Seek for true wiſdom; For it beholdeth the brighteſt, and appeareth unto the lowe t. Cecill hateth him unto the heart, and deſireth he were gone hence. Many other do privily ſting at him; I cannot properly ſay ſting him; But (I ſay) I will pour down my wrath upon them, and they ſhall be confounded in the midſt of their own iniquity. Let my faithful live and be like the fruitful Vineyard. Be it ſo. A. L. his anſwering Miracula & ſigna non ſunt petenda à Deo. The Lord Treaſurer.

Δ. For his return homeward, What is your advice? perhaps he wanteth neceſſary proviſion, and money.

Δ. Whiles I was writing certain prayers to good Angels, and ad proprios noſtros Angelos for A. Lasky, there appeared one very big in the aire, all in a white Garment full of plaights, and tucked up very dubble, with a myterlike Attire on his head, and a croſſe on the forepart of it; He willed E. K. to ſpeak to me, and to tell me of his being there : But he refuſed, and expreſly denied it, partly by reaſon Galluah ſaid that he would not deal with us, but every ſeventh day (being every Monday) till the actions were ended : and therefore he ſuppoſed this Creature to be an illuder, and partly he urged ſome evident token, or proof of their well-meaning towards us in Act, &c. He went down, and ſtill this Creature followed him with a drawn ſword, requiring him to declare theſe words to me ; but E. K. a long while bad him declare them himſelf unto me, if he would : and ſaid, why ſhould he not, &c. At length my Companion came, appeaſed, and contented to hear what this Creature would ſay, who at length ſaid thus :

E. K. was yet ſomewhat repining to report modally this creatures good words.

Oratio.

Speritu & mente dico,

He covereth his face.

Sit mihi verus orandi modus : nam bonitatem Dei Laudo : O, Iram Patris meritus ſum, quia lumen ejus elongatur a me: Verum in nomine Chriſti remiſſionem delictorum meorum, & confirmationem in ſuo Sancto Spiritu exopto. Per te, Halleluja, reſurgam, me accuſo, me condemno : omnia male feci.

Now he prayeth ſomewhat in his own language.

Omnia per te (Pater) ſunt. Paratus eſto exaudire. Oculos ad Cœlos Elevare nolo, egeſtatem quia meam noſti. Quid differes Domine, Cor meum in melius Confortere? Vivus & non mortuus ſum : Igitur Credo in te. Exaudi me Antidotum mihi Sanctum monſtra, quia malum meum agnoſco. Mitte mihi auxilium tuum de ſede Majeſtatis tuæ : Et per Angelos bonos tuere me. Audi, Exaudi, O tu igitur Angelus meus adſis mihi. Defende me, nec trade Corpus & animam meam in manus inimicorum ; meorum ſed ſecundum magnam miſericordiam Dei, (per poteſtatem tibi traditam) me protege, adſit mecum prudentia tua, quâ Diabolum & Sathanicam fraudem vincam. Adjuva me derelictum, Confirma me debilem, Cura me ſanum, ſana me ægrotum : Mihi eſto ſpiritus ſuper humanam ſapientiam. Fac me fidelem Operatorem : Adduc tecum Angelos de Cœlis demiſſos Sanctos, qui me tecum in adverſis tueantur & ab omni Cuſtodiant malo, donec illa hora venerit, quam nemo evitare poteſt : Suſtinuit anima mea in verbo ejus. Amen.

Now he lieth proſtrate.

Not that every ſentence be uſed, ſome diſtinct in the bowing of his body, or lying proſtrate, or holding up his hands, &c.

He holdeth his hands upon high.

Glorifie God ye ſons of men, and praiſe him in the midſt of your wickedneſſe : For he is a God that ſheweth mercie to his people, and beholdeth thoſe that are afflicted : All honour, praiſe, and glory be unto him, now and for ever. Amen.

Δ. I beſeech you, what is your name, that this mercie of God may be Recorded, to have been beſtowed upon us by your miniſtery.

△. Upon the peruſing and examining, this prayer Gabriel revealed unto us, I found certain imperfections, and ſome doubts, wherein we thought it good to ask counſel, and require Gabriel's adviſe: That the prayer might be perfect, as he might well like of to Gods honour and our comforts. At the length: Nothing appearing to the eye, but the noiſe of a ſound about E. K. his head, and withall a mighty weight, or inviſible burden on his right ſhoulder, as he ſate in the green Chair, by the holy Table, or place: And unto certain places of the prayer, which I noted and repeated, thoſe words, and anſwers were by Gabriel given.

Gab. .... The Preface muſt be in, for if our hearts be not prepared unto prayer, our prayers are in vain.

Quid differs Domine, Cor meum in melius Comfortare.
Per te & in nomine tuo reſurgam; id eſt, Halleluja.

The firſt way is more effectual. Say Angele mee, but the other is more effectual, Cura me ſanum. Regard me, and look unto me, being whole.

△. As concerning the inſcription, which I have written before the prayer: I would gladly know, whether it be to your well liking of it.

Gab. .... Fiant omnia ad laudem Dei. My doings are of no ſuch regard: What I have done be it done, ſo that your additions be to the honour of God, it is ſufficient. The effect of his prayer is greater, then is the form. The former is greater then the forming. That is to ſay, he that hath formed it, is mightier then any virtue, wherein it is formed. Whereſoever, therefore the mind formeth it with you with perfect humility and conſent, there is alſo the former. As formed of him therefore, I leave you to the end of his workmanſhip, which continually formeth all things according to his own faſhion.

Sins, ... Your ſins have baniſhed me, from ſaying thoſe things I would.

△. O cleanſe our hearts, and waſh away our ſins, amplius lava me ab iniquitate mea & a peccato meo munda me.

O Lord, full ſorry I am for my ſins, and what ſatisfaction is ... required I would gladly know.

Gab. .... The offence was not thine. Every one muſt ſatisfie, or elſe he ſhall be damned.

△. Good Lord expound to us the myſtery of ſatisfaction.

Gab. .... When the Soul offendeth, and is conſenting to wickedneſſe, he is then to make a ſpiritual ſatisfaction, which is the end and perfect fruit of Contrition. For thoſe that are truely Contrite, do truely ſatisfie. Another ſatisfaction there is, which is external. This ſatisfaction is to be made for ſins committed againſt thy Neighbour: For if thou offend thy Neighbour, and do him wrong, or take any thing from him, by fraud, or violence, it is a great ſin. For this, thou canſt never be Contrite if thou make not ſatisfaction, not onely confeſſing it, but in ſatisfying his deſire that is offended, and that with ſorrow. This is true Doctrine, and ſhall never be overthrown by the ſpirits of falſe invention: which indeed is the firſt eye unto the Devil. If you may offend your brother, and be therefore accurſed: How much more ſhall you be accurſed, when you offend the meſſager of him that is your Father. Behold, he ſayeth not, I have once done amiſſe. God be mercifull to you, that his mercies might be the greater upon you. Be mindfull of my ſayings. NOTE. Good Angels are to be uſed reverently. E. And ſeeing you are the Mother of Madimi here, I beſeech you tell me your name here: as the order of all our doings are diſtinctly and orderly noted.

Δ. I beſeech you, how ſhall his proviſion of money from home ſerve his turn, or how ſhall he here have help for his charges bearing?

Mad. . . . . Your words make me a Childe. Thoſe that fiſh for Dolphins do not ſtand upon the ground. Thoſe that ſit in Counſel call not in the harveſt people, nor account not their works. He that ſtandeth above the Moon, ſeeth greater things then the earth: Is it not ſaid, The Lord will provide? I ſtand above the Moon, for that I diſpoſe his life from above the diſpoſition of the Moon. To ask what Jacob his ſervants did, was a folly; becauſe their maſter was bleſſed: A greater queſtion to ask how bleſſed he was, then to ask how many ſheep he had. Note the form of a child.

Δ. I am deſirous to know what you meant by ſaying, That my words made you a Childe.

Mad. . . . . Becauſe you ask me Childiſh queſtions. His good Angel ſhall reveal his Character unto him, and thou ſhalt ſee it, [pointing to E. K.] But take heed thou ſay truely; And uſe great reverence, or elſe the feet that love thee ſhall carry thy Carkas out of the doors. If he carry it upon him, it ſhall be a token of the Covenant between him and God. Reverence to good Angels. Pactum divinum.

Δ. The image, or ſimilitude thereof (mean you) made in pure Gold. Perhaps enamiled.

Mad. . . . . So thoſe that ſhall ſee his Standards with that ſigne in them ſhall periſh utterly.

Δ. You mean, if the ſame be painted, or otherwiſe wrought in his Banners and Penons, &c.

Mad. . . . . Let him uſe it as a Covenant, between God and him.

Δ. How ſhall he frame it in Gold, ſolid-wiſe, or Lamine-wiſe?

Madd. . . . . His own Angel ſhall reveal it.

Δ. Becauſe it hath been ſaid, that in the beginning of our Country troubles we ſhould be packing hence into his Country; What token ſhall we have of that time approaching, or at hand?

Mad. ....., Your watchword is told you before: When it is ſaid unto you, Venite, &c.

Δ. But (I beſeech you) to be ready againſt that watchword, hearing what is to be done, as concerning our wives and children into his Country.

Mad. ..... Miraculous is thy care (O God) upon thoſe that are thy choſen, and wonderful are the wayes that thou haſt prepared for them. Thou ſhalt take them from the fields, and harbour them at home. Thou art merciful unto thy faithful and hard to the heavy-hearted. Thou ſhalt cover their legs with Bootes, and brambles ſhall not prick them: Their hands ſhall be covered with the skins of Beaſts that they may break their way through the hedges. Thy Bell ſhall go before them as a watch and ſure Direction: The Moon ſhall be clear that they may go on boldly. Peace be amongſt you.

Note. Δ. When I came home yeſterday from the Court, and from London, and from the Lord Laskie, I found that E. K. was purpoſed to ride forth of Town, and intended to be away (as he expreſly told me) five dayes: Certain Companions and his acquaintance having ſo appointed with him, ſome tarrying for him in Mortlucke, and ſome at Brainford (as was perceived this day afterward, and as he confeſſed unto me.) Whereupon I thought good to ſignifie ſo much unto the Lord Laskie who meant to come and refreſh himſelf at my houſe, as he was wont before; either this day, or within two or three dayes after: Who alſo delighted in E. K. his company, &c. Hereupon about the time of E. K. his riſing I wrote theſe lines, intending to ſend them preſently to the Lord Laskie, that word might be returned of his intent before E. K. ſhould ride, I meaning and hoping to perſwade E. K. to tarry ſo long, and upon ſuch reſpect.

This Letter being now written, and not yet folded up, my friend E. K. was ready and came out of his Chamber into my Study; and I told him, that I was even now ſending word to the Prince Laskie of his rideing out, and return after five dayes; and ſo ſhewed him the Letter: who when he came to the phraſe, Quid ſit ipſa veritas, he was ſamewhat offended, ſaying, What ſecret meaning hath this, upon ſome of your two former conference? Truly (ſaid I) even ſuch as the circumſtance of the Letter doth import, that is; Whereas you ſaid that you intended to return within five dayes, or at the ſame dayes end, it is uncertain whether you will, or ſhall, return later or ſooner: and therefore Quid ſit ipſa veritas of your return, or intent to return, onely God doth know. He would by no meanes admit that my ſincere expoſition, but ſeemed ſuſpitious of ſome other undue conſtructions of thoſe former words; thereupon I took the Letter and tore it in three pieces, and ſent none: But in my mind referred all to God his diſpoſition, aſſuring my ſelf of God his moſt conſtant proceeding in his own affairs. Shortly after ſaid E. K. to me, Certainly here is a ſpiritual Creature in my right ſhoulder, who ſenſibly ſaith to me, Come away: So (ſaid I) did one ſay to Sowle, when they would have had him away to have drowned him, whom I ſtayed in this Study by force, and ſo hindered the Devil of his purpoſe then; as appeareth by that unhappy man yet alive. Nay ſaid E. K. they have told me that if I tarry here, I ſhall be hanged; and if I go with this Prince he will cut off my head, and that you mean not to keep promiſe with me; And therefore if I might have a thouſand pound to tarry, yea a Kingdom, I cannot: Therefore I releaſe you of your promiſe of 50 pounds yearly Stipend to me, and you need not doubt but God will defend you and proſper you, and can of the very ſtones raiſe up children to Abraham: And again I cannot abide my wife, I love her not, nay I abhor her; and there in the houſe I am miſliked, becauſe I favour her no better. To theſe, ſuch his words ſpoken in great pangs and diſquietneſſe of mind, I repoſed and ſaid, That theſe his doings and ſayings were not of God, and that by my whole proceeding he might perceive what confidence I repoſed in his dealing with the ſpiritual, our friends, ſeeing even to the uttermoſt penny (and more than my ability ſerved unto conveniently) I laid out ſtill about the ....ming of ſuch things, as were by me to be done, &c. Well, on the ſudden, down he went; upon his Mare, and away toward Brainford.

Brainford. After whose going, my Wife came up into my Study, and I said, Jane, this man is mervallously out of quiet against his Wife, for her friends their bitter reports against him behind his back, and her silence thereat, &c. He is gone, said I, but I beseech the Almighty God to guide him and to defend him from danger and shame; I doubt not but God will be merciful to him, and bring him at length to such order, as he shall be a faithful servant unto God, &c. E. K. his wives friends.

Note within three hours after, came E. K. up my Study staires unbooted, for he was come in a boat from Brainford. When I saw him I was very glad inwardly: But I remained writing of those Records as I had yet to write of Tuesdayes last actions. I have lent my Mare out (said he) and so am returned. It is well done said I, and thereupon he sate down in the chair by my Table where he was wont to sit: And it was ten of the clock then. He took up in his hand the Books which I had brought from London of the L. Laskie, written to him in his commendations, &c. And as he was looking earnestly on them, a Spiritual Creature did put the Book on the outside of the parchment cover, divers times; and once would have taken it out of his hands: Divers times I heard the strokes my self; At length he said, I see here the handsome Maiden Madimi, and have done a pretty while. Then said I to him, Why told you me no sooner? Whereupon I took paper purposely to Note what should seem Note-worthy as followeth.

△. Mistresse Madimi, you are welcome in God, for good, as I hope; What is the cause of your coming now?

Mad. ..... To see how you do.

△. I know you see me often, and I see you onely by faith and imagination.

Mad. ..... [Pointing to E. K.] That sight is perfecter than his.

△. O Madimi, Shall I have any more of these grievous pangs?

Mad. ..... Curst Wives, and great Devils are sore Companions.

△. In respect of the Lord Treasurer, Mr. Secretary, and Mr. Rawly, I pray you, What worldly comfort is there to be looked for? Besides that I do principally put my trust in God.

Mad. ..... Madder will staine, wicked men will offend, and are easie to be offended.

△. And being offended will do wickedly, to the persecution of them that meane simply.

Mad. ..... Or else they were not to be called wicked.

△. As concerning Alb. Laskie his Pedigree, you said your Sister would tell all.

Mad. ..... I told you more then all your Dog painters and Cat painters can do.

△. You spoke of William Laskie and Sir Richard Laskie his brother, of which William going into France, and then into Denmarke: and his marriage into Poland, came this Albert Laskie, now Paladine of Soradia, &c.

Mad. ..... Those were two pretty men for me to meddle withal. When you set your selves together, and agree together, I will make all agree together.

E. K. Will you Madimi lend me a hundred pound for a fortnight?

Mad. ..... I have swept all my money out of doors.

△. As for money we shall have that which is necessary when God seeth time.

Mad. ..... Hear me what I say. God is the unity of all things, Love is the unity of every Congregation (I mean true and perfect love.) The World was made in the love of the father. You were redeemed in the love of the Father and the Son. The Spirit of God is (yet) the love of his Church. Let (I say): For after it doth Triumph, it is not called a Church nor a Congregation: But a Fruitful Inheritance and a Perfect Body in Christ. Take the love of the Father from the World, and it perisheth. Take the love of our Redemption away, and we are dead. (I will not offend) put your instead of our. Take the light of the Holy Ghost, which is the love of the Father and the Son from the Church, and it withereth. Even so take love from amongst you, and you are members of the Devil; Therefore it is said unto you Diligite ad invicem. For love is the Spirit of God uniting and knitting things together in a laudable proportion. What dost thou hunt after? speak man, What dost thou hunt after?

△. we use to call it Ecclesia Triumphans. Note. The Angels were not redeemed.

[This was said to E. K. upon some secret judgement of Madimi in him.

E. K. I hunt after nothing.

The love of God breedeth faith; Faith bringeth forth (on the one side) Hope; and (on the other side) the workes of Charity. Lo'th u love God? Seekest thou to be among his Elect? Why dost thou not (therefore) love those things that are of God? Herein thou shewest the want of faith; Herein are thy bragging words confounded; for thou sayest, No man can accuse thee of evil. But thou hast no faith because thou hast no hope. Wilt thou say, that thou hast faith? Show it me by thy love: Whosoever (therefore) loveth not God, is accursed. Thou lovest not God, Lo, behold, thou breakest his Commandments. Oughtest thou not to love him? And hast thou not faith through the love in God? Truely thou oughtest so to do. Wilt thou let me see thy hope on this side; Let thy workes stand on the other side. And shew thy self to have faith that therein thou mayest love God, and be beloved of him: But if thou hast none of these, thou hast hate. If thou hate God, the reward reward thereof is great; but the greatneſſe is unquenchable fire. Whoſoever followeth not the Commandments, hateth God; If ſin be the breach of the Commandments, &c. Doſt thou love Silver and Gold? The one is a Theef, the other is a Murderer. Wilt thou ſeek honour?

E. K. No.

So did Cain. But thou haſt a Juſt God that loveth thee; Juſt and vertuous men that delight in thee; Therefore be thou vertuous: For thou ſhalt tread the World under thy feet: I promiſe thee, I have driven the Skullen-drab out of our Kitchen long ago.

Note this came to paſſe Anno 1589. when he was made Baron of Bohemia Anno 1590.

Δ. Do you mean worldly covetouſneſſe?

Mad. ..... Yea, and the firſt heavenly covetouſneſſe.

Carma geta Barman.

Δ. I beſeech you, what is that to ſay?

Mad. ..... Veni ex illo Barma.

E. K. Felt and ſaw a ſpiritual Creature go out of his right thigh.

Mad. ..... Where are thy 14 Companions?

Bar. ..... They dwell here.

Δ. [He that was come out, ſeemed a great handſome man with a Sachel of a Dogs skin by his ſide, and a Cap on his head, &c.]

Δ. O the hand of the Higheſt hath wrought this.

Mad. ..... Venite Tenebræ, fugite Spiritu meo.

E. K. Here appear 14 of divers evil favoured ſhapes: ſome like Monkies, ſome like Dogs, ſome very hairy monſtruous Men, &c. They ſeemed to ſcratch each other by the face. Theſe ſeem to go about Madimi and ſay, Gil de pragma kures helech.

Δ. What is that to ſay?

Mad. ..... Volumus hic in Noſtris habitare.

Δ. Quæ ſunt illa veſtra?

E. K. One of them ſaid ... Habemus hominem iſtum Domicilium noſtrum.

Mad. ..... The vengeance of God is a two-edged Sword, and cutteth the rebellious wicked ones in pieces. The hand of the Lord is like a ſtrong oak, when it falleth it cutteth in ſunder many buſhes. The light of his eyes expell darkneſſe, and the ſweetneſſe of his mouth keepeth from corruption. Bleſſed are thoſe whom he favoureth, and great is their reward; Becauſe you came hither without licence and ſeek to overthrow the liberty of God his Teſtament, and the light wherewithal he ſtretcheth unto the end, and for becauſe you are accurſed it is ſaid, I will not ſuffer mine to be overthrown with temptation, though he were led away, Behold I bring back again. Depart unto the laſt Cry: Reſt with the Prince of Darkneſſe there is none. Amen, go you thither. Et ſignabo vos ad finem.

The caſting out, and utter diſplacing of 15 wicked ſpirits, &c.

E. K. He ſealed them all in the forehead: the 14 and their principal, their ſealing was as if they had been branded. They ſunk all 15 downward through the floore of the Chamber, and there came a thing like a wind & pluckt them by the feet away.

E. K. Methinketh I am lighter than I was; and I ſeem to be empty, and to be returned from a great amaſing; for this fortnight I do not well remember what I have done or ſaid, Mad. ..... Thou art eaſed of a great burden ..... Love God, Love thy Friends, Love thy Wife.

E. K. Now cometh one with a red Croſſe in his hand and leadeth her away, and ſo they vaniſhed. We prayed the Pſalm of thankſgiving 14 of Roffenſis for E. K. his deliverance from Barma and his 14 Companions. Amen.

LIBER,

LIBER PEREGRINATIONIS PRIMÆ:

Videlicet

A Mortlaco Angliæ,
Ad Craconiam Polomiæ.

Saturday, Septemb. 21. 1583. Die Sancti Matthæi.

WE departed from Mortlack, about three of the Clock after noon: The Lord Albert Laſky, (Vaywode of Siradia, in Polonia) meeting me on the water, as we had appointed: And ſo brought night to London; and in the dead of the night, by Wherries, we went to Greenwich to my friend Goodman Fern the Potter his houſe: Where we refreſhed our ſelves, and thither came a great Tylt-boat from Graves end to take us in, (by appointment of me and Mr. Stanley) to go to our ſhips, which we had cauſed to ly ſeven, or eight mile beyond Graves end. To which ſhips we came on Sunday morning by Sun riſe: In the greater of them (being a dubble Fly-boat of Denmark) my Lord Laskie, I, and E. K. with my Wife and Children, &c. went: And in another ſhip (by me alſo hired for this paſſage) went ſome of my Lord his men, two horſe, &c. that ſhip was a Boyer, a pretty ſhip. With little winde we ſtraight-way hoyſed ſayl, and began our voyage in the ſhip.

This 22. day we were in great danger of periſhing (on the ſands, called the Spits) about midnight: We had (by force of winde contrary) anchored by them, and the Anchor came home, no man perceiving it, till the ſhip was ready to ſtrike on the ſands. Then, upon great diligence and pollicy uſed by our Marriners in hoyſing ſayl, and cutting our Cable, (to leave our ſhote anker) and committing our ſelves to the hands of God, and moſt earneſtly praying for a proſperous winde: It pleaſed the Almighty, and moſt mercifull God, ſuddenly to change the winds, which ſerved us to bear from the ſands, and to recover Quinborrough, back again.

There aroſe great ſtorming winds, N.E. almoſt.

The 23. day (being Munday) we came to the mouth and entrance of Quinburrough Creek, or Haven. And as we made to land in ſmall Fiſher-boats, the Lord Laskie, my Wife and Children in one boat, and I, with E. K. Marie, Elizabeth, and John Crokar, in another, it fell ſo out, that at the ſhips ſide, our Fiſher-boat his ſayl-yard and ſayl was entangled on the Mayn-yard of the Fly-boat (being ſtroke down) ſo that, in our ſetting from the ſhips ſide, the top of our Boat being faſt above, and the windes and ſtream carrying the Boat off below, it inclined ſo much on the one ſide, that the one half of the Fiſher boat (well near) was in the water, and the water came ſo in (by the intangling before ſpecified, not eaſily to be undone, or looſed) that my Lord, my Wife, and all that ſaw us thought that of neceſſity our Boat muſt ſink, and ſo, we to have periſht. But God in his providence and mercy had greater.. .... of us, ſo that we became clear; the Boat half full of water, ſo that we ſat wet to the knees, and the water with the billow of the Sea came ſtill beating in more and more: And in this mean trouble; one of our two Boat-men, had loſt his long Oare out of the Boat into the water; and ſo not onely we lacked the help of that Oare, but alſo by reaſon they would have followed the winde and ebb, for that Oar, (contrary to our courſe in hand, and not able to become by) with much adoe we conſtrained them with the ſayl, our one Oare, and the Rudder to make ſuch ſhift as they could to get to Quinborrough Town: And in the mean ſpace E. K. with a great Gantlet did empty moſt part of the water out of the Boat, elſe it muſt needs have ſunk by all mans reaſon. At length (to be brief) we came to the Town ſide, up the crooked Creek: where, when as the Maſter of our ſhip would have taken me out in his arms (ſtanding in the water with his Boots) he fell with me in the water, where I was foul arrayed in the water and Oaſe. God be praiſed for ever, that all that great danger was ended with ſo ſmall grief, or hurt.

The evident help of God at the very minute of danger deadly.

Friday 27. Of September we ſayled from Quinburrough, and ſo by the lands end into the main Sea, N. E.

Saturday

Saturday 28. Of September we fell on Holland Coaſt, and none of our Marriners, Maſter, nor Pilot knew the Coaſt: and therefore to the Main Sea again, with great fear and danger, by reaſon we could ſcarcely get off from that dangerous Coaſt, the winde was ſo ſcarce for that purpoſe.

Sunday 29. Of September we came into the Briel-haven, and there were like to ſtrike on ground: at length we came to an Ankor, and lay in ſhip all night.

Monday 30. Of September we landed, and went into the Briel.

Briela, Octobris 2. Mane Hora 9. Die Mercurii.

E. K. Nihil apparet in Lapide, neque Cortina, neque aliud quid. Oremus conſtanter, &c. Apparet Domus magna cum multis pinnaculis, valde elegantibus. Et pavimentum videtur eſſe multis innatis lapidibus diſtinctum & videntur multi eſſe gradus per quos aſcenditur: & videtur eſſe area viridis ex dextra parte, & ex altera parte eſſe vallis, & rivulus ex alia. Pars quæ verſus ſolem eſt, videtur quaſi noviter reformata. Et circa introitum eſt rotundum quoddam ædificium: feneſtræ non ſunt ſimiles noſtris, ſed quaſi eſſent Templorum feneſtræ.

A. L. Dixit quod videtur eſſe illa arx Regia, quæ Cracoviæ eſt.

E. K. Subito deſcendit ignis & per totum lapidem apparet. Jam venit Cortina ſolita ante domum iſtam.

E. K. Jubanladaa. h jam apparet ſupra Chryſtallum: & Chryſtallus videtur eſſe permagnus.

Jub. Deus numeravit & dies tuos & poſteritatem. [E. K. Reſpicit A. L.]

E. K. Jam receſſit a Chryſtallo verſus caput ipſius A. L.

Jub. Et a pectore tuo non cadet Capillus non numeratus. Omnia bene ſe habent. [Hoc dixit de ſtatu rerum A. L. apud Lask.] Ecce habes vim reſiſtendi: Ait contra legionem pugno.

Δ. Perditio te novit, & numeravit annos tuos, & incipi eſſe fortis: Quia illi eſt Poteſtas data, Infernus aperit os ſuum contra vos, quia ſciunt, quòd vos glorificati eritis in Deo. Ego vici quintum ſigillum, & mihi jam reſiſtitur in ſexto. Quæ Deus facit, non participant cum humano judicio. Ecce nunc Diſcipulos ſuos congregavit, & docet. O Cœlum & terra quam magnæ ſunt miſeriæ, quæ vexabunt unum & polluent alterum? Quia boni Angeli cadent cum illo & Cœli Chriſtum metuent. Sed illi ad tempus cadent, non in perpetuum. Antichriſtus.

Δ. Salvo judicio Eccleſiæ Catholicæ Orthodoxæ, videtur mihi quòd Job de ejuſmodi Angelorum timore, ſive caſu, & reſtitutione, ſive purgatione prophetaverit, Cap. 41 ubi etiam addit de miraculis ejuſdem: Sub ipſo erant radii ſolis, & ſternet ſibi aurum quaſi lutum. Antea dixerat. Cum ſublatus fuerit timebunt Angeli, & territi purgabuntur, &c.

Δ. O Deus quam terribile futurum eſt tempus illud, &c.

Jub. ..... Scribas Dei myſteria, & Deo gratias agatis pro veſtro ſalvo ſtatu: Quia mare illis abundabat contra vos, & multi perierunt. Ejus potentia prævalebat, & commutavit veſtrum curſum in locum illis incognitum: quia ab iliis non erat expectatus. Sed fugite ab hac terra, quia Maledictio Dei eſt ſuper illam. Cum illo eſt una veritas: Ille qui in duabus viis erat, non placet Deo. Qui ad finem uſque perdurat, quieſcit cum gaudio. Sed ille qui pedem non ponit inter Scorpiones non poteſt intrare ſuper Gozlach.

Δ. Quid hoc?

Jub. ..... Gaudium in vera ſapientia.

Jub. ..... Hoc noſtrum eſt Manna, quo alimur. Sed ego ſum ſanctificatus per Creationem, Inſtitutionem & ex Divina voluntate. Idcirco vos ſanctifico: non cum mea propria ſanctificatione, ſed illius Juſtitia, qui meam originem ſanctificat. Eſtote Montes in Fide, ſed quaſi infantes patientia. Facite quod Juſtum eſt, & ne oblivioni tradatis veſtram Juſtitiam.

E. K. Infinitæ quaſi locuſtæ vel Araneæ cum faciebus humanis illum circumvolitant, & quaſi ignem in illum evomunt.

Jub. ..... Et levavit ſe contra vos. [Tollendo Crucem ſuam.]

Jub. ..... Fiat Juſtitia ejus.

E. K. Jam loquendo, videtur minor & minor paulatim fieri.

△. De noſtro deceſſu ex Anglia quid tandem jam Regina & ſui conſiliarii ſtatuerunt?

Jub. ..... Aperit os ſuum, ſed liquor non eſt ſatis frigidus. Jam eſt intus calida, neq; reſtingui poteſt. Corda ſui populi do fall away. Her arms are weakened, her legs weaker, her ſhooes are full of ſorrow.

E. K. The furious Monſters aſſaile him again.

Jub. ..... Quis eſt, qui poteſt vivere, ſi tranſgrediatur preceptum Dei? Vel quid de illis judicare velis, whom God imputeth ſin unto?

E. K. They aſſaile him again, and he putteth his Croſſe toward them.

Jub. ..... Their miſery beginneth, and ſhall have no end, till he that ſitteth here do end it.

E. K. The Monſters aſſaile him ſtill.

Jub. ..... The wall muſt be broken down, and then ſhall It be ſaid. Happy art thou which haſt dwelt amongſt us. But if thou live righteouſly, and aſcend the ſlippery mountain, Then ſhall God be merciful to them for thy ſake. Becauſe thou mayeſt be beloved, where thou art now deſpiſed, and haſt vanquiſhed thy enemies, with the truth of vertue. He that entred into the loweſt hell, and ſhed his blood for your ſins, be merciful unto you, and give you peace; which is the ſpirit of Patience, that you may live, not like men, but as thoſe that do ſeparate themſelves from the world, to the true contemplation of God his mercies.

Angliæ bene erit propter △. ex mera Dei miſericordia.

E. K. Jam intrat in Caput, A. L. cum flamma ignis.

△. Omnis laus, honor, & gloria ſit Deo noſtro Omnipotenti vivo & vero. Amen.

Friday, Octobris 4. We came to Tergowd hora 3 à meridie: where we lay within the Town in the Ship.

Saturday, Octobris 5. We came by Harlem to Amſterdam, and lay before the Town all night in the Ship.

Tueſday Octob. 8. We ſailed from Amſterdam to Encuſen, and Edmond Hilton went with my goods by Sea toward Dansk.

Wenſday, Octob. 9. We ſet off from Encuſen early: but by reaſon of a contrary wind, we came very late to Herlinghem.

Friday, Octob. 11. We went within land in little Scutes from Herlinghem (by Frainker) to Lewarden.

Saturday, Octob. 12. From Lewarden, we came to Dockum (in ſmall Boates) about 3 of the clock after noon.

Sunday Octob. 13. Apud Dockum in Friſia Occidentali.

△. Diu Chryſtallus tanquam lapis nigerrimus apparuit. Tandem in ipſa lapidis nigredine, apparuit homo nudus Crucifixus ſuper crucem: ſed tamen non mortuus; Crucis partes infra manus, omnes ſanguinolentæ videbantur. Faſcia linea circumdabatur Corpus ejus, (a pectore deorſum) & fines ejuſdem faſciæ pendere videbantur circa genua: & ſanguinolenta apparebat: & ex quinque vulneribus (ut Chriſti erat) videbatur ſanguis guttatim cadere. Tandem diſparuerunt hæc omnia: & quaſi deorſum ſubſidere videbantur; & lapis clarus factus eſt, & apparebat Cortina aurea: ſubita erat hæc mutatio.

E. K. Jam videtur lapis eſſe valde magnus, & ante lapidem ſtare quidam magnus, (quaſi Michael) cum gladio ancipite evomente ignem ex utraque acie ejuſdem.

Nomen

Nomen Domini efferri legitimè, in illegitima Natione, illegitima facta, quia dereliquerunt statuta Altissimi. Hoc dicit Dominus; Ego sum Deus Justitiæ: & juravi & non est unus inter illos qui vivet, immo ne una anima. Quomodo Bestiæ esse devenerunt? de quibus scriptum est. Absq; notitia Dei: Homo ille factus est pecus. Vita illorum, qui devorantur, & talium suos ignis consumpsit sedebit in judico contra istam Nationem. These words were much worn out.

Blessed and Sanctified, and for evermore praised art thou..... Judge, which hast said, and Raignest for ever.

Δ Si multiplicati sunt inimici nostri, &c.

E. K. He is gone.

Δ. Si multiplicati sunt inimici nostri propter peccata nostra, ut difficilior nobis incumbat lucta, Misericordiam Dei imploramus ut ipse nostram etiam multiplicet fortitudinem, &c.

Gab..... Pluck up your hearts, bow your knees, & audite quæ dicit Dominus. Thus saith the Lord, If you will prevaile against the wicked, and rejoyce among the sanctified, you must observe and keep such commandments, as are ordained by the God of Truth, unto those that are partakers of his Covenant.

Ask Counsel of God; Remember it.
Be milde.
Fast and pray.
Be Charitable.
Use true Friendship in the service of God.
Persevere to the end.

E. K. Gabriel also noted these Commandments in a pair of Tables, after he had pronounced them.

Are not these Commandments necessary to be kept of all Christian men?.

Δ. They are undoubtedly.

Gab. ..... And must of necessity be kept of those that are faithful.

[E. K. He standeth as though he stood behind a Desk, and preached or taught.]

Gab. ..... Well thou sayest; Lo our enemies are multiplied, multiply thou therefore our strength O God. Nature is subject unto you for the name of the Lord, not as unto Kings, but as unto the Ministers of his eternal will, whereby your justification is settled above the works of Nature already; For, behold, you participate the mercies of God through his Son Christ Jesus, in us: in that we open unto you those things that have been sealed; even from the Just, for the which we are become slaves unto Corruption; shewing our selves in divers shapes, to the dishonour of our Creation: Yet are we quickned and revived, because we are become the finger of God: and you are sanctified, and withal justified, because you are touched with the finger of him that reviveth all things. Therefore, Rejoyce, Rejoyce, be Joyful and sing Praises unto God, and faint not: saying, Our enemies are risen up against us, yea, they are multiplied; for thus saith the Lord, and it is already spoken by the Holy Ghost.

[E. K. He maketh now great obedience or reverence.]

Fœlices sunt, quibus Deus spes est.

[E. K. He looketh now up unto a thing like a Throne.]

Et omne opus operatio Dei.

[E. K. Now there cometh a beam down into his head, and he is covered with a great thing like a white cloud.]

E. K. Now the Stone is all on fire. Now the fire ascendeth upward, the streaming beam stretcheth into his head still.

E. K. There appeareth a little woman a far off, and she is so clear and transparent, that there appeareth a man child in her; She hath a Coat as though it were Crimson, and hath a long little face, and hath a strange silk attire about her head. .... as... Videtur esse uxor mea.

Gab. ..... Go woman, thy grief shall be lesse than it hath been.

E. K. Habet multos tanquam parvos nigros canes post se. Now goeth one and tyeth their mouths with packthred.

Gab. ..... So God useth to give a snaffle to the wicked.

E. K. A great wind bloweth on Gabriel.

Δ. De Angliæ & meo privato statu cupio aliquid audire: tum ex pietate erga patriam, tum propter famæ meæ rationem.

Gab. ..... Quiescite parulum, & iterum venero. My Lord saith, Let my servants sit up, and take their rest, I will visit them forthwith in peace. Δ. All this while we had kneeled.

Δ. After

Δ. After a great quarter of an hour, he came again.

E. K. He appeareth now clothed, with all his garment hanging with bells of Gold, and flaming fire coming from them, with ſilveriſh flames. He hath hanging about his Crown as if they were ſeven Labells, the tops of which come from above, from an uncertain place and diſtance.

Gab. ..... Venito Morvorgran. E. K. He calleth with a loud voice.

E. K. Now cometh a big black man, with a white face, and after him hath 24. They ſtand in four rows, and in every row ſix.

Gab. ..... Let me ſee thy ſeale.

Mor. ..... Behold power is given to me: Neither is the liquor that thou miniſtreſt of any taſte with me; Neither ſhall I be overcome, for I have placed my ſeat here.

Gab. ..... But by whoſe permiſſion? Gag lah nai.

E. K. Now Morvorgran falleth down on his knees, and the reſt on their face. Medicina Dei, malis, Juſtitia vera.

E. K. They tremble that lie flat on the ground.

E. K. Morvorgran ſheweth to Gabriel on his own left breaſt a Character.

Gab. ..... For 19 moneths. Behold the will of God: Becauſe thou haſt conſpired and riſen againſt the Lord, in his choſen, and haſt ſaid; It is to weet thoſe that are ſubject unto thee, Let us riſe up againſt him, and perſecute his ſoul: let us ſecretly entrap him, for, without doubt, he is rich. And becauſe your conſpiracies are not of theft onely, but [alſo] of murder: Therefore I ſeal thee with a weaker power; And be it unto thee according unto the word of God, that judgeth Righteouſly. From evil unto worſe. From worſe unto confuſion. From confuſion unto deſperation. From deſperation unto damnation. From damnation unto eternal death.

Mor. ..... Curſed be that God, and defaced be his power; for he handleth us in unjuſtice, and dealeth with us without mercy; Becauſe he is not merciful nor juſt.

E. K. Gabriel goeth from me to one of the 24. and ſealeth them. Now they go all away; and he breaketh off the points of their Swords. They go by him.

Δ. Quis eſt iſte Morvorgran, & quo modo hæc nobis inſtituit inferre mala?

Gab. ..... Dockum, thou ſhalt carry this malice unto thy grave: But I have made weak thy ſtrength. Bleſſed be thoſe that entertain thoſe that are annointed in the Lord: for they alſo ſhall taſte of the oil of his mercy. I had care of you, ſaith the Lord, neither will I ſuffer you to periſh in the way; Therefore be thankful, and forſake the world; for the world hath forſaken you, and conſpired againſt you. But theſe things are nothing. Behold laſtly, thus ſaith the Lord.

E. K. Now cometh a ſalet or helmet on Gabriel his head, or an half ſphere; A great noiſe of many voices is heard as of Pillars that fell. Now that thing is taken off his head.

Gab. ..... Thus ſaith the Lord. The world on both ſides, ſhall riſe up againſt thee, and they ſhall envy thee.

E. K. Now cometh a beam from above (again) into Gabriel his head.

Gab. ..... Gna ſemerob Jehuſan gonſag vi cap neph Jehuſlach omſomna dedoilb.

E. K. Looking up, he ſaid thus,

Hoc eſt

Ne paveas repentino

terrore: & eruentes tibi

potentias Impiorum,

Laskie, Dominus.

[E. K. Now cometh about his face little things of ſmoke, and he putteth them from his face. He would open his mouth, and they come upon his mouth. They riſe out of a pit before him, innumerable. Gabriel ſeemeth to be as big as one of us.

[E. K. They ſwarm continually.]

Dominus

[Gab. ..... Adhuc D . . s laboro]

[E. K. Now cometh another ſtreaming beam down to him.]

..... Now cometh a bigger fire down on him.]

[E. K. Now they run headlong down into a great pit in the earth, and one pincheth me by the head.]

Dominus ille Abraham

E. K. Now cometh a fire down by the ſame beam that came into his head.

erit in latere tuo,

[Adjutor meus ;] E.K. Looking up.

& cuſtodiet pedem tuum ne capiaris

Spera igitur in dominum Deum tuum

For thou ſhalt overcome;

& erit tibi Victoria maxima, in Deo, & propter Deum, qui eſt Dominus & Deus exercituum.

E. K. Now the aforeſaid ſpirits invade Gabriel again.

Gab. ..... What I ſuffer, is not lawful for man to ſee ; Therefore Ceaſe for a while, and ſuffice nature : But return and hear of my commandment.

E. K. He is gone, but his Desk ſtandeth ſtill.

Sunday à meridie hora 2. Octob. 13.

Gab. ....., And hereby I teach you, that thoſe afflictions which you ſuffer in ſoul either for your offences towards God, or for the imperfections of your mindes, being void of brotherly charity toward your neighbours ; (And ſo from you generally hereafter, how great, or how many ſoever) ought not to be manifeſted or made open to the world : but perfectly ſhadowed in Charity, bearing your own infirmities, and ſo the infirmity of others with quiet and hidden minde. For the anguiſh of the ſoul is compared with prayer, dwelling in one houſe which ought to laugh with the World, and to weep towards heaven. For every ſin is noted, and the leaſt thing as well amongſt the Celeſtial bodies, as the Terreſtiall is perfectly conſidered of. For ſin hath his end, and his end is puniſhment. And ſo, contrarywiſe of Vertue, Wiſdom (in the one and twentieth Ent. . . ie or L . . . ,) His ground is upon mildneſſe, which mildneſſe purifieth the body and exalteth the ſoul, making it apt and ready to behold the heavens, receive glorious illuminations, and finally bringeth in the ſoul to participate, with us, not earthly, but everlaſting wiſdom. The Son of God was ſanctified in his fleſh, through mildneſſe, and was not of this world, becauſe he was the mildneſſe of his Father. Therefore be you meek : Be fervent in meekneſſe. Then ſhall you take up that Croſſe which Chriſt ſpoke of, following him : which Croſſe is the Compaſſion in mildneſſe over thy brethren, for ſin ſake : Not as worldlings do, looking, but not lamenting. The other part is in ſuffering mildly the afflictions of the world, and fleſh : Hereby you become Martyrs for that you mortifie your ſelves, which is true Martyrdom. He that forſaketh the world for the love of God, in his Son Chriſt, ſhall have his reward. But he that forſaketh himſelf, ſhall be Crowned with a Diadem of Glory. Thus ſaith the Lord, I am jealous over you, becauſe you have vowed your ſelves unto me. But great are the temptations of the fleſh, and mighty is his ſtrength where the ſpirit is weak.

But

But thus saith God: It is better to fill up the Soul with heavenly contemplation, and cœlestical food, to reign in heaven, and to be beloved of him: Then to pamper the filthy flesh, whose delight destroyeth both body and Soul. It is written, He that bridleth not his flesh, is given to riotousnesse, which is the sleep of death, and the slumber to destruction. But this is true abstinence, when contemning the world you fly the delight therein: refraining from pleasures of the body, Temperating the flesh, and making it weak, and that, for the Lord his sake. For the flesh and spirit rejoyce not at once. Neither can the full belly grone out true prayers. Feed therefore the Soul with the love of our society. And bridle your flesh; For it is insolent. One thing, I say, look to your servants. See, that in one house there dwell not delighters in vertue and holinesse, mingled with such as harbour vice upon vice: Whose drunkennesse is abomination, and whose diet stirreth up fornication. For wickednesse is amongst them: and they fear not God, neither do they abstain, according as the holy Ghost by his Church hath taught. Make them clean: Then shall you feel our presence amongst you. And we will all of us defend you from the rage of wickednesse. We delight in the God of truth, and in the worshippers of Justice. Thus sayeth the holy Ghost: Lo, I have made me a Tabernacle, where the God of Gods reigneth in Justice. And I will sanctifie those places which rejoyce in charity. Mingle therefore your Alms with charity. And let your prayers and fasting be mingled with Alms deeds. For he that prayeth and fasteth without mercy, is a lyar. Moreover, let your friendship be such, as is of charity, and not of this world: Neither for the worlds sake, but for the service of God: All friendship else is vain, and of no account. Charity is the gift of the Holy Ghost, which Holy Ghost is a kindling fire, knitting things together, through Christ Jesus; in the true wisdom of the Father: Which fire is of no small account, neither to be reckoned of, as the Heathens have done. For happy are those which are fed with charity: For it is the meat of us that are anointed, which is the son of God, and the light of the world.

△ Is charity the son of God?

Gab. ..... It is so: He that walketh in charity walketh in God; for charity is the will of the father, is his own delight, and illumination of the faithfull, through his Holy Spirit. The charity of the Church, is the Holy Ghost. But he that dwelleth in charity, dwelleth in the blood of the Lamb, which is the will of the father, which is the Holy Ghost. Blessed are those that dwell in charity. Persevere to the end: Not negligently, but with good will, which good will, is called fear. Which fear is the beginning of wisdom, the first step into rest.

Finis coronat opus. He that continueth to the end, receiveth his reward: But he that leaveth off, is a damned Soul. Many men begin, but few end. Neither is your justification by the beginning, but from the end. Paul was justified: Because he died the servant of God, and not for his preaching sake. He that dwelleth to the end, is the Childe of God: inheriter of everlasting life; and equal with joy himself: Not the joy of joyes, but that joy which God hath made equal with the joyes of his son Christ, in the company of the faithfull. Even in this place, many persons had conspired against you. But the strength of God hath sealed them: And they shall not be unpunished. For the Angel of the Town is sealed, and his seal is to destruction: Thrice cursed are those which dwell within his government. But you are safe, and shall be safely delivered from them.

England. In England, They condemne thy doings, and say, Thou art a Renegade. For they say, Thou hast despised thy Prince.

England. △ Destructio Dockum mihi concessa si cuperem, &c. What wouldst thou know of them? Cease till you hear the number of their destruction. Desire what plague you will (saith the Lord) upon this people, for their ungratefulnesse, and they shall be afflicted. For the Lord is angry with them: and he saith, Judge you this wicked people, their Town, Men, Women, and Children: And it shall be seen that the Lord, the God of Heaven and Earth, hath mercy on you.

△ Non nostra, sed Dei voluntas fiat, ad ejus nominis laudem & honorem.

Gab. ..... Bid the fires fly from Heaven, and consume them, and it shall be done: Or, say, Let the Earth swallow them, And they shall perish. For I have made Heaven and Earth (saith the Lord) and .... Justice is for my people. I am a flaming fire amongst you, and the Rod of Justice It is said, Heave up thy hands, and thou shalt be heard. The peace of him that is the spirit of wisdome inflame your mindes with love and charity, and grant you continuance to his glorie.

△. Amen.

Deo Æterno, Omnipotenti & Misericordi sit omnis laus, honor, & Gloria. Amen.

Tuesday 15. Octob. We made hard shift to get from Dockum to Angem by sun set.

Thursday 17. Octob. We came from Angem to Embden, going without the Isles, and coming in at Wester Emb. We came before the Town, by six of the Clock after noon: but could not get in at the Gates, and therefore we lay all night a shipboard, but my Lord A. L. went over to the lodging on the other shoar.

Friday 18. Octob. We came into the Town: My Lord lay at the white Swan toward the water-side, and I, and E. K. with my Children and Many at the three golden Keyes, by the English house.

Sunday 20. Octob. This day morning about eight of the Clock we went in a litte Hoy from Embden Embden toward Lyre, my Lord tarried at Embden. We came late to Lyre: and the ſame night we went from thence in a leſſe Scute by Styk-huſen to Oppen.

Munday 21. Octob. By nine of the Clock in the morning we came to Oppen: a very ſimple Village, and from thence we went ſtraight way to Oldenburgh.

Tueſday 22. Octob. From Oldenburgh, by Delmenhurſt, to Breame: and were lodged at an old Widow, her houſe, at the ſign of the Crown.

Saturday Octobris 26. Hora 12. ſcil. in Meridie. At Breame.

Δ. The Lord Albert Laskie, being at Styck-huſen behinde us, with the Earle John of Embden and Frieſland, &c.

E. K. The Curten ſeemeth to be far backward in the ſtone: and the ſtone to be clear between the Curten and the fore-part. Under the Curten I ſee the leggs of men up to the knees.

Δ. Then appeared one, and ſaid:

Il. ..... Room for a Player. Jeſus, who would have thought, I ſhould have met you here?

E. K. He is all in his ragged Apparel, down from the Girdle ſteed: But above he hath a white Satten Gerken.

Δ. By the mercies of God we are here: And by your will and propriety, and the power of God you are here.

Il. ..... Tuſh, doubt not of me, for I am I. L.

E. K. My thinketh that the gravity of this Action requireth a more grave geſture, and more grave ſpeeches. Bear with me, though I ſay ſo unto you.

Il. ..... If I muſt bear with thee, for ſpeaking fooliſhly, which art but fleſh, and ſpeakeſt of thy own wiſdom: How much more oughteſt thou to be contented with my geſture, which is appointed of him, which regardeth not the outward form, but the fulfilling of his will; and the keeping of his Commandments: which is God: whoſe wiſdom unto the world is fooliſhneſſe, but unto them that fear him, an everlaſting joy, mixed with gladneſſe, and a comfort of life hereafter: Partaking infallible joyes, with him that is all comelineſſe and beauty. How ſay you to this, Sir, Ha?

E. K. He turneth up his heels to E. K.

E. K. I do not underſtand your words: for becauſe I do onely repent your ſayings.

Il. ..... It is the part of him that is a ſervant to do this duty: Of him that watcheth, to look what he ſeeth: For the greateſt point of wiſdom, is, reverently, to conſider thy calling. It is ſaid, do that, which is appointed, for he that doth more, is not a true ſervant.

E. K. How can that be?

Il. ..... Speak when thy time cometh. Sir, here is mony: but I have it very hardly. Bear with me, for I can help thee with no more. Come on Andras, where are you Andras?

E. K. Now cometh one in a Gown to him. The Gown is bare like a prentice of London, a young man.

Il. ..... Did not I bid thee go yonder, and fetch me money.

Andras ..... Whither.

Il. ..... This is one of them that forgetteth his buſineſſe ſo ſoon as it is told him.

And. ..... Sir, I went half way.

Il. ..... And how then? Speak on, Speak on.

And. ..... Then being ſomewhat weary: I ſtayed, the rather becauſe I met my friends, The third day I came thither: but I found him not at home. His family told me, that he was newly gone forth.

Il. ..... And you returned a Coxcombe. Well thus it is: I placed thee above my ſervants, and did what I could to promote thee: and endeavoured dayly to make thee free. But I am rewarded with loytring, and have brought up an idle perſon. Go thy way, I will deliver thee to the Officer. The Officer ſhall deliver thee to the Priſon: and there thou ſhalt be rewarded. For ſuch as do that they are commanded, deſerve freedom: but unto thoſe that loytre, and unto ſuch as are idle, vengeance, and hunger belongeth.

E. K. He taketh him by the arm, and delivereth him to a man with a ſtaffe in his hand: and he putteth him in at a door.

E. K. Now Il himself goeth into a house, which all this while appeared on the left hand.

Il. ..... Come on.

[E. K.] Now he bringeth another by the hand.]

Il. ..... My thinketh you should be a fit man to do my message.

E. K. Now he whispereth him in the ear, and pointeth out h....

Il. ..... I warrant the man, be not abashed. A strange matter.

[Pointing to E. K.]

Il. ..... I have business in Denmark, and this fellow is afraid to go thither: Tell him, thou comest from me, and that I will come my self shortly. I know he will do so much for me, he hath had much acquaintance with me.

..... I care not, if I had some man to keep me Company.

[E. K.] This new come man said so.]

E. K. He whispereth again with this man in his ear.

Il. ..... These good fellows are not ready, or else they might go with thee. Go thy way in Gods name: See that you do your business. I keep such servants, as none in all the Countrey keepeth.

E. K. He keepeth no servants.

Il. ..... Meddle with that, you have to do with all. I pray this man, and that man, and every one deceiveth me. Good Lord, where should a man finde a true friend now adayes? I will go and tell the knave that he provide for himself. For it will be marvellous hard weather. You were best to do so, least you blow your Nails.

E. E. He speaketh to one within the house.

Il. ..... Thus you see me (Masters) how I am troubled with my servants. How now what aileth thee?

[E. K. There cometh a woman round about his house, and she seemeth to passe by him. She is in English Attire.]

Il. ..... I will know what aileth her to cry. What aileth thee?

Woman. One of my Children is dead.

Il. ..... Alas poor Childe: How can Children resist cold? she might have kept it warmer. Cold pierceth, where shot cannot enter.

Δ. This woman is not of our Company? I trust, None of our Children, shall perish in this cold.

Il. ..... Ha, A, your Children? you keep them warm: It will do them no hurt. Those that are warned, eschue danger to come: For many things are prevented by the quality of wisdom.

Δ. I trust, we shall safe arrive at the place appointed, in Cracow, or elsewhere.

Crotovia. Δ. But as concerning Vincent Seve, brother in Law to the Lord Albert Laskie, I pray you to shew us the truth of his state.

E. K. I see him walking in a street; and a thick man with him; And Gerlish seemeth to come after him. The thick man his beard is somewhat like my Lord his beard, he cometh after Vincent. Vincent hath a black satten Dubblet on, cut with crosse cuts; He hath a ruffe about his neck, a long one edged with black, or blue.

Note. Δ. I beseech you, I. L. to shew us what Town that is.

Il. ..... Speaking to him that sheweth it: for I shew it not.

Δ. O God.

Il. ..... I remember not the name of any such Town. Quem Deus non amat, non novit.

E. K. Now the Town appeareth again, the Sea runneth by it. There is an old rotten Church standing at the Town end. The Town seemeth to be 60. or 80. miles off.

E. K. It seemeth to be Embden in my judgement.

E. K. But Vincent and Gerlish seem not to be in one Town, or street.

Δ. I beseech you to say unto us whether A. L. be furnished with money, at Grave John his hand, so as may serve our turn, or no.

Il. ..... If I have not told you already, I will. You grudge at me.

[E. K.] He speaketh to E. K.

Il. ..... Judge

Il. ..... Judge my words with reason, and thou shalt finde them true, Touch them with understanding, and thou shalt finde them profound. My words are true, Because I am sent by Truth: Neither are we to speak gravely, when we take upon us the persons of Buyers and Sellers. Whosoever doth the will of his Master truely in this World, shall be laughed to scorn: But whoso speaketh worldly and sendeth out shadows, is accounted a pillar of the Earth. Happy are those which are not foolish, neither in works say, There is no God; Such request, such answer. Such earthly minde, such heavenly motions. Yet Heaven speaketh truth, and the Earth lyeth. This is not my office which I have taken in hand; yet because I have dealt with you as a worldling, I was the fittest to answer your worldly expectation. Note.

Δ. As you have dealt with us, not according to your office, but according to our worldly expectation: So now do we desire to understand somewhat according to our higher and heavenly expectation, of our doing the determined will of the Highest.

E. K. He is gone, and all the Stone as red as blood. Vide infrà.

Δ.

E. K. Now he is come again, and standeth in the fire.

Il. ..... Thus saith the Lord, I have taught you how to live, I have set you Statutes, and have wished you my Peace; Follow me, and I will be your God: For unto them that are wise, shall there be more wisdom given; But unto them that are become foolish, my wisdom is a . . . Supra in fine diei 13. Oct. & sæpe antea.

These five years to come, are the Deliverance . . . Yea, sorrow shall bring forth her Children. My Honour shall be defaced, and my holy Places pluckt. No man hath ever seen such a world: For Now shall they say unto the Mountains, Come and cover us, and unto the Waters, Swallow us up: for we know there is no God; neither is there any care of Mankind. I will plague the people, and their blood shall become Rivers. Fathers shall eat their own Children, And the Earth shall be barren: The Beasts of the field shall perish, And the Waters shall be poisoned. The Air shall infect her Creatures, And in the Deep shall be roaring. Great Babylon shall be built, And the son of wickednesse, shall sit in Judgement. But I will reserve two Kingdoms untouched, And I will root out their wickednesse. Yea, thus saith the Lord, From the North shall come a Whirlwind, And the Hills shall open their mouths: And there shall a Dragon flie out, such as never was. But I will be glorified by you, and by those that are not yet dead. And you shall have power, such as I will be glorified by. Keep therefore the Statutes which I taught you, Forget not my words: For unto those that look back, there is great woe. Happy are they that continue to the end. Amen. A Prophesie of An. 1584, 1585. 1586, 1587, 1588. From the North.

E. K. Now he is gone.

Δ.....

E. K. Now he is come again.

Il. ..... Thus saith Jehova: I am the beginning and the end, The root and life of all Righteousnesse. I say, (By my self) I am with you, And will blesse you in Righteousnesse. Cease therefore to move me; for I am Almighty, And inquire not of me, what I have determined; For Time groweth, and I am a Just God. Therefore Cease, Cease, I say; I in my self say Cease. Call not upon my name in defiled places; Least the wicked ones hear what I determin. I will visit you at your journyes end: I will testifie my promise to you. Be in haste therefore: And flie from sin; And flie the society of such as are accursed: For I am jealous over my people. Yea I will not suffer them to drink or taste of their vessels. Be [illegible] unto me a people, that I may behold my people: And I will be unto you both, A God for ever. Vide suprà. At our journeyes end.

E. K. Il. saith Amen, and falleth all in pieces, as small as ashes.

E. K. Now all is Clear, and the Curtain is come again.

Δ. Deo Omnipotenti sit omnis Honor laus & gloria, in secula seculorum. Amen.

Friday 1 Novemb. 1588. Mane At Breame.

Δ. Albeit we were willed (O Lord) to Cease: yet understanding the same warning to have been meant for Enquiring of thy Mysteries and secret Determinations, wherein we intend now not to deal, but in matters before and last moved, and wherein we were not fully satisfied; that now we may more expressely be certified, and that is of three things.

First for Vincent Seve. 1.

Secondly for Edmond Hilton, gone with the Ship toward Dansk. 2.

And Thirdly, as concerning help for money for the Lord Alb. Laskie. And herein we crave either the ministery of Jubanladæch, or of Il, or whom soever else it shall please thy Majesty to send. 3.

E. K. A man with a black Gown appeareth with a Cap, falling in his neck, with a big Book under his arme.

Δ. It should seem to be Aphlafben, my good Angel.

E. K. He hath a white Robe under the black Gown, which goeth all under his Gown, trailing behind him: but, the white Robe traileth not; his Gown hangeth on him, as though it were falling off his shoulders behind.

A. In the Name of Jesus, the King of Glory, are not you Aphlafhen my good Angel, by the mercy and power of God, so assigned?

E. K. He looketh very anciently.

..... Impire, Most high Glory, and thanks, throughout all Creatures, be unto thee (O eternal God) first . . . Secondly redeeming, and Thirdly sanctifying the World in his Creation, Now, and for ever: And as long as it shall be said Osanna in the Quire of the High God .... Amen.

A. ..... Amen, ... Amen. ..... Amen.

..... *Manifold are the Mercies of God towards man, whose baseness deserveth no such grace and most unspeakable blessing: But such is God; what he justifieth himself, in the strength of his mercy, and heweth his honour with his own holiness. For what is man, that can justifie himself? or that hath any thing, wherein his bowels can rejoyce? Wherein can he determine happiness to himself? Or how can he compare himself with the trees that are fruitful? If the life of man be sin, then is it hateful. But who is he that hateth it? But even he which is above, and is farthest from iniquity. Great, therefore (O man) are thy miseries, when naturally thou art, and loveſt to be hated of God, whose service is Justice, and whose delight Peace. Consider therefore the Mercies of God, through his loving kindness towards thy weakness: And acknowledge his Power which maketh those strong which have no force of themselves. Gather not up your own inventions; But be faithful servants, performing the will of him which sanctifieth you with obedience: for of dust you are become flesh, and of flesh the servants of sin; that at length you might be made free, through your own consents in the mercies of him which hath entred into your weakness, and weighed out his blood for your Redemption: Even he which hath payed the uttermost penny of your Ransome. And why? Not to the intent you should brag of your selves. But hath charged in condition you should maintain justice into the works of Righteousness. Unto whom is Heaven a seat? but unto such as are faithful servants: Wherein the Dignity of your Master is known, of whom it is said, Blessed are those that serve the God of Hosts. If any thing, now, happen unto you, that is the riches of your Master, Be thankful for it, and consider his liberalitie: And how much the more he openeth his Treasures to you, Be so much the more thankful; For unto such belongeth the ownership of more, and the reward of such as are ten times faithful. Happy are those to whom it is said, Thou good servant. Be no Gadders, for there is no house to the house of your Master. Take heed also, least you minister his bread, to such as are his enemies, and so, unworthy: for unto both these belongeth the reward of unfaithfulness. Be not high-minded, when you borrow your riches, lest the moths enter in and corrupt your garments: for Pride is the deph of sin .... Cease not to rebuke the dishonourers * as, o .... Neither maintain the honour of any other: For he that entertaineth you, hath sealed you for others, And hath strengthened you with Authority, The Rod of his Justice. Generally these things have been spoken unto you, and these Lessons are not yet to learn: But happy are those whom God sanctifieth; being unholy. And ten times blessed are the Temples wherein his Holiness dwelleth. True it is as thou sayest: Generally men are sanctified, the people of the Earth through all Nations, mystically: through the mercies of God: But where the sanctification agreeth not with the thing sanctified, there entreth wickedness. The Spirit of God is not sanctified in Hell, Neither is his holy Temple beautified with the feet of the unrighteous. It is written, Dogs honour not bread, neither defiled places things that are holy: For as Hell dishonoureth Heaven, in respect of unrighteousness: So, those that are wicked dishonour the vertuous, and such as are truely holy, by society: and they stink of their wickedness. For it is written, And Satan went from the presence of the Lord, leaving a stink behind him. The light of the Sun is taken from the Earth, by the congealed cloud. The sins of the people, and filthiness of places, are put between vertue and the things Sacramental.* Therefore, it is not true, that thou mayest lawfully call upon the Name of God in unhallowed places.

A. I crave pardon for my ignorance, and errour herein: But I required not to know of the heavenly Mysteries; Onely such things I demanded information of, which not onely were above humane power to answer, (and so might seem worldly mysteries:) but also the true good news of them, might, many ways, be comfort unto us and ours.

..... Behold in Israel, the rough stones are acceptable Altars, And the stinking Caves have been known unto the Lord. And why? Because the place was holy, neither this filthiness here, nor of any thing else created, hindreth: But the filthiness of the place and Country wherein they are defiled; for in pure places, the defiled are blessed. David sanctified Saul, with the presence of his Annointing, and his Harp spake out the wonders of the Lord. We come unto you here, because the will of God in you shineth: But the filthiness of this Country obscureth the beauty of our message. Not that it is obscured in us, but hindered through wick ..... from you. Therefore flee the company of Drunkards, and such as we ..... their own understanding.

[E. K. He holdeth up his face and hands to heaven-ward.

..... Drunkards and such as defile themselves are apt to know things worldly; not as wise men do:

do: but that the World may be a plague to their iniquity. Thou desirest pardon, and callest this businesse a worldly mystery. But the mysteries of this world are put under the feet of the faithfull, which (overseen through God) are generally comforted and directed. Then, therefore what care remaineth either o' the Seas, or o' the slimy Earth? where, on the one side, thou regardest the Ship, and on the other side Money. I say unto thee, God correcteth this world and the casualties thereof, lest those that are of thee, should blaspheme his name.

△. Blessed be his holy Name, and his Power magnified for ever.

..... Thy goods are safe, And the Earth shall provide for you. Be not you careful; for unto the just, yea even the hairs of his head are numbred. I am silent for the World; for it is not my propriety: But notwithstanding ask, and thou shalt not be denyed.

△. As concerning Vincent Seve, his state and being, we are very desirous to be informed.

E. K. Vincent Seve appeareth here, going down by Charing Crosse. There is a tall fellow with a cut berd with him in a skie-coloured cloak. Vincent hath a great ruff: This man waiteth on him with a Sword. He is going down into Westminster Ward: He is now talking with a Gentleman on horseback, who hath five men following him, with Cape-cloaks short, and mustaches; And he on horse back is a lean visaged man with a short Cloak and a gilt Rapier; his horse hath a Velvet foot-cloth.

E. K. In Vincent his forchead is written; Where power wanteth, rigor weakneth.

E. K. Vincent laugheth heartily; and sheweth two broad teeth before. He holdeth a little stick within his fingers crooking. On his left hand he hath a skar of a cut, on the nether side of his hand. Vincent hath a pair of bootes on, which come straight on his legs, and very close. A great many boats appear at White-Hall. One is graffing in the Garden there. Many people are now coming out of Westminster Church. The Gentleman on horse-back alighteth now, and goeth down toward the Court before Westminster-Hall. He goeth now up a pair of stairs; and there standeth a fellow with a white staff. Vincent is gone in with him; The servant walketh without. The servant goeth to a Waterman there. The Waterman asketh him, whether that be he; that is the Poland Bishop? The servant asketh him, what hath he to do? Now the servant goeth from the Waterman. Now cometh one down the stairs, and saith to the Serving-man, that his Master shall be dispatched to morrow. The servant saith, He is glad of it. Now all that Shew is vanished away.

Now come there two handsome men, they have Cloaks on their shoulders, and they have hats on like Tankard Crowns.

One of these said,

A ..... I understand by the King, that he beareth him great favour.

The other said,

B ..... But Kings when they become rich, wax Covetous. But do you think he will come this way?

A ..... Yea mary, if he be wise; for he shall find no better friendship than in Denmark. Here is the fellow, he hath brought a bag of Amber.

E. K. He taketh the fellow by the shoulder, and saith; Come away. He hath been an old doer.

E. K. Now they are gone, and that Shew

E. K. Now

E. K. Now is the first man in the black Gown come again.

..... Thus you see, the World answereth for the World. Be merciful. Flee privy leakes; for the Devil is ready at every corner. Be Humble and Obedient. That receiving the reward of true servants, you may rejoyce as Enheritors of everlasting freedom; The reward of such as are faithful to the end. God grant you may so be. Amen.

E. K. Now cometh the Vail again which all this while was gone behind the Stone.

A. Deo nostro Omnipotenti, misericordi, & justo sit omnis honor, laus, & gratiarum actio, nunc & in secula seculorum. Amen.

A. While we were at Bream, among many other things told and delivered to E. K. as he was by himself, by a spiritual Creature, I know not who, nor of how good estate, or what estate he was of: This parcel among them he held in writing, and imparted to me; And I thought my pains not ill bestowed, to keep the same in record here.

Ganilus that, in house most fiery fairer than the Sun,
Hath honour great, saith, give place, your former course is run;
Therefore first framed clouds unknown draw near with mighty storms,
Wherein such bodies lie obscur'd, or take ten thousand forms.
Your bellies strowting long disclose, and on the harlot earth,
Seem fair to man, as when the waves as Midwife help ... r birth.
Twice shall the Sun put on the heavens, and once look quarter way,
And working uncouth worlds, build up a City, where men say
The Holiest stood: And Beares bring in usurping fire at hand,
And people spread return, whose new built altars flaming stand.
Whilst such as strangers were Catesy cry, and bloody knife,
With privy shame defil'd bekyes, a thing n ... sometime rife.
From midnight unto noon, two parts and more shall slaughter feel,
And all the World from South, taste all, down force, of fire and steel.
Small wonder though the earth at shadows fighting nothing grieve,
When mighty Seas shall dry, and heavens lie, who can live?
That mortal eyes shall see a Temple built with precious Stones,
Or Creatures strange made new in sight, of old and long dri'd bones.
Or Angels dwell on earth: but I whose firy fingers can Unloose thrice sealed Books, and utter worlds unknown to man.
I see these curs'd wights, whose borders lead thy journey on,
Shall with the thirtieth moneth, be bought, or sold, or fully gone.
And England perish first with Moths long harbour in her skirts,
The Spaniard lose their King, and France rebel and fall by spirts.
And holy man ten dayes besieged at home, with these dayes whelps,
Till he at length made free by sudden force of vertues helps.
The Polish King hath played, and friendly man shall then bear sway, Amongst earthly friends, and such as hope of former faith decay.
At last wear highest Crown, if fall from vertue makes no losse,
And midst this coil to come in space of new come lay for tosse.
Then lo, Come other times most Holy, and a Kingdom shall,
From Heaven come, and things forthwith again to Order call.

Two years and a quarter, shall be An 1586. in January.

2 ½

Saturday 2. Novembris we rod from Bream, two great mile to a Nunnery called Odarhold.
Sunday Novembris 3. we came to Fure or Fureden.
Monday Novemb. 4. we came to bed to Harburgh.
Tuesday Novemb. 5. we came to Buxtenhaden, and there by 9 of the clock in the morning we took water in two great Skutes or Boats, Horse-wagon, and our stuff and all, and ferryed down the little water, till we entred the Elb, and so crossed straight over to Blanken nasen: there dined, and after dinner by coaches we came to Hamburgh, where my Lord lay at the Englsh house, and we at another lodging, a widows house.
Wensday Novemb. 6. we rid to Triticw 4 mile from Hamburgh, a little Village, having left my my Lord behinde: and alſo miſſing my Children and ſervants, which were gone before us an other way to my great grief: till by midnight, by ſending out meſſengers to liſten and enquire after them, I heard of them. I, my Wife, Rowland, Nurſe, and Myrcopskie, my Lord his man.

Thurſday, Novemb. 7. We came to Lubek, and were there at Inne, at the ſigne of the Angel, or rather St. Michael, at a Widow her houſe, a very honeſt Hoſteſſe.

Saturday, Novemb. 9. I received Letters from the Lord Albert Laskie, of the Engliſh mens ill dealing, and conſulting with the Townſ-men of Hamburgh for my ſtay, and conveying back again into England, &c.

Wedneſday, 13. Novembris, 1583. Mane hora 9½. At Lubek.

Per horam ferè, per intervalla, varias fecimus petitiones & ſæpe oravimus.

At length appeared a ſword, two edged, firy, or rather bloudy, and a bunſh of rags hanging at the top of it. The rags ſeemed of Woollen, and Linnen Cloath: like a bundle of Rags gathered out of a Taylers ſhop. The ſword ſtood upright in a manner, but leaning from E. K. his face, though it ſeemed to ſmite at E. K.

A voyce. So be it, (O Lord) for thou art mighty. Be it ſo unto them: For they have embraced an Harlot, and have forgotten thy jealouſie.

E. K. The ſvvord ſhaketh mightily. Many are the Harlots that ſvvarm upon the earth, and innumerable are their Children, and ſuch as they foſter. Their revvard is ready.

E. K. The ſword now ſhaketh again mightily.

..... He that entreth into the houſe of the wicked is defiled: but he that conſenteth with an Harlot is accurſed. He that delighteth in her ſecrets, ſhall be ſtabbed. And Leproſie ſhall dwell in his houſe for ever.

A. O Lord, I truſt, this reſpecteth none of us, in common ſenſe to be underſtood.

..... He that delighteth in light, loveth not himſelf, but deſireth the love of him, that illuminateth: But, thus ſaith God, I will not dally with you: Neither ſhall you handle me, as you have done. For, your Horedom, is wilfull: and your vanities worſe. But this I leave amongſt you, that you ſhall know that I am righteous. For, he that deſpiſeth me, is accurſed; and unto him that diſſembleth my faſhion, are miſeries without number. So, unto them, that enter into the horſe of bluſphemy, is vengeance ready at hand.

A. O Lord, what is this? Man is but earth, where the heavens dwell: neither are the works of man acceptable, but with righteouſneſſe.

E. K. There appeareth a man with a Bible about his neck, like a Doctor; and he ſtandeth miſerably in fire. And ſo likewiſe appeared divers other with Bibles about their necks, and they in fire likewiſe. Still come flames from the earth, and encreaſe the flames of theſe men about them. There appeareth, and endleſſe, ... me, moſt terrible with fire, and other moſt hideous ſhews..... They be ſuddenly gone away. And all theſe men be now no more in ſight.

A voyce. Happy are thoſe that ſee, and can remember. Bleſſed are thoſe that hear, and are not forgetfull.

A. Theſe words, and ſhews, O Jeſu, make evident what.....

E. K. All is gone, except the ſword which ſtandeth in a Cloud, and there cometh a hand and ſetteth a ſeal upon the ſword.

A voyce. I brought you from iniquity, to the intent you might be purified: But the more I cleanſe you, the more you are defiled.

..... I have offered of old, and it ſhall be told. I have promiſed, and it ſhall be performed. You have not kept my Commandments. And therefore you ſhall be plagued. He that goeth out of the way, ſhall receive the reward of errour. For ſtragglers, are ſpotted people. And none can be bleſſed, but ſuch as dwell in the Tabernacle of righteouſneſſe. But behold, I will tell it unto you but with greater hardneſſe. And I will make you know me, before I viſit you in kindneſſe. For thus ſayeth Sathan. Lo, they erre ſtill. Do Juſtice for thy glory ſake. They enter into the houſes of Idols: And laugh with blaſphemers. They are ſilent, when thy name is blaſphemed. Deal with them as a God: or elſe thou art not righteous. Therefore, be free from Sathan, that he may praiſe your righteouſneſſe. Yea, that he may ſay, as he hath ſaid. Let me touch them.

Untill

Untill then; I will be just. I will not forget this wickednesse, till you be made clean. For, behold, I have sealed it: and therefore it must be finished. For what is sealed of me, cometh to passe.

A voyce. He that dissembleth the image of Christ, is a liar.

..... Now cometh a grave man, all cloathed in white, with a Mytre upon his head.

.....*The God of peace is a comforting Medicine, to such, as delight in him. The peace of the world, is the image of God: God and man, which is Jesus Christ, the son of the living God: Which knit with the father in the spirit of truth, (proceeding from them both ..... everlasting will,) opened his mercies to his Apostles, repleni*shing them fully and mightily with the will of the father, to the comfort of the world: Which, made messagers thereof, have delivered to the Church, full and perfect Statutes (as the Will of him, whereunto she is united and married) to be kept inviolable, and without transgression. This Will, Covenant, or Decree, (sealed unto the end of the world in the number of the faithfull) whosoever breaketh, or dissembleth, is accursed, or damned. Therefore saith the word of God unto you: You have run astray, you have entred into the houses of Idols. I have brought you from fire, but you are entred into flames. And why? Because you defile your selves with the wickednesse of deceivers: Whose images you saw affirmatively, though not verily: Continually overwhelmed with daily, and inextinguible flames: Continuing even so long, as their errour is exalted; Yea, even in the professors thereof, to their eternal damnation. For as Christ, and his Doctrine is light and truth: So seem the impositions of Sathan to agree, or take unto themselves, shapes or likenesses of the true image of him that saveth: Whereby he trusteth in himself under the colour of meekenesse, into the companie of the faithfull: Devouring their Souls with ravening, dissembling, and false likelyhoods of truth, unable to be decided by man. Happie are those that believe them not: For he, even he it is, that is a liar, and is oldest in deceit. But as the father is eternal: So is the son eternal, which eternity of the father and the son, is the holy Ghost eternal, proceeding equally, as the finger of God, and spirit of truth, to the general workmanship of Gods determination knit together, three Persons. [E. K. He maketh a great reverent curtsie] in this omnipotency by spiritual illumination, and through the holy Ghost delivered unto the Apostles, as the pledge of God his mercie and promise, is alwayes certainly linked, joyned, and engraffed into the society of those that fulfill the will of the highest perfectly, and without errour, whose strength shall continue, and glorie branch out, even unto the end of this world, and beginning of comfort. Therefore, believe: For the spirit of truth worketh wonders, raiseth the dead, and hath power to forgive sins. Through the power of him, unto whom it is ma ..... For, as Christ hath all power in heaven and in earth delivered..... So hath he delivered all power in heaven and earth to his true Church. Therefore she cannot erre. For where power is without measure, errour hath no number: Believe not therefore those that lie: saying, The Church of God is infected with errours. For the offences of few are not counted errour, but unrighteousnesse: Neither can the ſtragling feet of a few drunken, bring infamy to the whole house.

△ Fortè, staggering.

..... It lieth not in my power to deliver you, or reconcile you from death and Hell: The tormentry and filthinesse of the world, and the wrath of God. But yet, (That Cloud, set aside) which is between me and you) I speak afar of to you, saying, The Justice of God, is vengeance it self: Neither hath it any contrary, but even in the midst, and Centre of it self: Which is the drop and liquor of his eternal, great, and incomprehensible Majestie of himself, his mercie: Which, even in the midst of Justice is found out, by sorrowfull repentance, and reconciliation: Not in that it is necessarie with God: But that it is a Medicine applicable, and most healthfull to the infirmities of that man, that coveteth to be healed, released, or recovered from his soares. This is it, that must comfort you. For, as Justice is the reward of sin, so is mercie the reward of repentance. But mercie is the Center of light: and Justice to be cast off, and shut within darknesse. Therefore, be not negligent.

△. This whoredom, how is it committed, or of whom?

..... I teach the..... Where thy habitation was, errour rained, God called thee from it: and delivered thee by many, but unknown wayes: means not to be uttered by man. These places also are shut up from the favour of God. For their obedience is counterfeited, and their prayers, out-cries. Therefore hath the Lord opened him unto you that invented the vanitie: that you might be partakers of his knowledge, and secret judgements of the wicked. Here also you entred, and are newly defiled: For the Devil entred in, and found him waking: And lo, he entred yet, and he was not asleep. But he was happie, being kindled with desire of God, else had the judgement of his bodie for this world been fulfilled. Wickednesse followeth him: and the spirits of evil counsel are at hand. You shall feel the sorrow thereof, and your family shall be discomforted. But pray unto God, that it fall not out, that Sathan goeth about: Neither that it come to passe, which he hath power to execute. For, this token signifieth your miseries, and it is a sign of that, which is given to execution.

I have said.

The peace of God be restored unto you.

E. K. Here

E. K. Here is the man again.

..:.... Two words and I have done. Nothing is plainer than that which is ſpoken: Nothing certainer than that which is appointed. Be you penitent, that God may be merciful. This is all I have to ſay. Waſh your ſelves, and I alſo will make you clean. Reſiſt you Satan diligently, and I will help you mightily.

Δ. O Lord that ſeal to the Sword and rags break off.

E. K. Now he is gone.

Δ.

E. K. Now he is here again.

..... This cloud is a ſeparation betwixt this, yea this glorified company and you. Look not for any light, whileſt this darkneſs is preſent. Behold, my mouth faltreth, and my lips are ſtayed: But pray you, and you ſhall not be rejected. For the ſtronger you be, the mercifuller is God, and the weaker is, and ſhall be, your adverſary. Love together; Serve God together: Be of one heart together. Alwayes preach God. I am tied.

E. K. He is gone.

Δ. Miſericordia & pax Dei ſit ſuper nos nunc & ſemper. Amen.

Friday, Novemb. 15. hora mane. Lubek.

E. K. The cloud appeareth, and openeth, ſo that the Sword may be ſeen.

Δ. O Lord deal mercifully with us, as thy children, to be corrected with rod or whip, and not with thy enemies, with ſword to cut or wound us. Let not Satan force thee to juſtice more mightily, than thy fatherly goodneſſe can incline thee to ſhew mercy upon us.

E. K. An hand cometh and nippeth off an inch of the top of the Sword, and ſome of the rags are fallen down; ſome hanging on the hilts of the Sword, and ſome are thruſt through with the Sword. Now the Sword is ſhut up again in the Cloud.

Δ. Have mercy on us, O Lord, and deal with us as thy younglings and novices.

E. K. Now come in an eleven, all like Noble men. One of them hath a regal Cap, and a Gown faced with Sables. The Cap is like a Polonian Cap, but trimmed up with rich Sables. Now cometh one and bringeth a very rich Chair, beſet vvith precious Stones: Four of the Company ſet dovvn this Chair, for that Principal man. He that brought the Chair vvent avvay. They all do lovv obedience to this principal. He ſitteth dovvn, and putteth his Govvn over. He is a goodlier man than the Lord A. L. The 4 pluck a thing like a Canopy over the Chair, and they put a round Cuſhion under his feet. This Principal ſpeaketh as follovveth.

..... Pluck up thy heart and be merry, pine not thy Soul away with inward groanings; for I will open unto thee the ſecrets of Nature, and the riches of the World, and withal give thee ſuch direction, that ſhall deliver thee from many infirmities, both of body and minde: Eaſe thee of thy tedious labour, and ſettle thee where thou ſhalt have comfort.

Δ. Thanks be given unto the Higheſt, now, and ever, of all his Creatures.

..... Why doſt thou . . . within thy thought: Haſt thou not need of Counſel?

Δ. Yes, God knows; for I am half confounded.

..... Then firſt d . . . with thy ſelf to reſt thee, for this Winter. Secondly open thy mind to deſire ſuch things as may advance thy Credit, and enrich thy Family: Reap unto thee many friends, and lift thee up to honour; For I will ſtir up the mindes of Learned men, the profoundeſt in the World that they ſhall viſit thee. And I will diſcloſe unto you ſuch things, as ſhall be wonderfull, and of exceeding profit. Moreover, I will put to my hands, and help your proceedings, that the World may talke of your wiſdom hereafter. Therefore wander not farther into unknown places, contagious, the very ſeats of death for thee, and thy children, and ſuch as are thy friends. If thou enquire of me where, and how. Every where: or how thou wilt thy ſelf. For thou ſhalt forthwith become rich, and thou ſhalt be able to enrich Kings, and to help ſuch as are needy. Waſt thou not born to uſe the commodity of this World? Were not all things made for mans uſe?

Δ. Will you give me leave to ſpeak?

..... What canſt thou ſpeak hereunto? Wilt thou thank me for this?

Δ. All thanks be unto the King of Glory, &c.

Δ. Is it your meaning that we ſhall ſtay here, and go no farther with the Lord Albert Laskie?

..... Yes, in the Summer; when it is more fair.

Δ. I beſeech you, Where would you, that we ſhould make our .... this Winter?

..... Where you will. Are you ſo unwiſe to go with him now. Let him go before, and provide for himſelf, that he may the better provid for you. The weather will be hard, and the travel unfit for children. If thou covet to live in eaſe, heap not up thy wives ſorrow.

Δ. I deſire to live in quiet, that my ſpirit may the better attend to the ſervice of God

..... Well, Tarry you, and my promiſe ſhall be quickly performed. I will not halt with you. How ſay you Sirs?

[E. K. He ſpeaketh to his Company, vvho make curſies, and ſay nothing.]

Δ. I beſeech you to appoint an apt place: This you ſee is no fit place.

..... I will ſtir thee up ſuch friends, as ſhall content thee. As for dwelling places thou ſhalt beſtow them. Well, you are contented.

Δ. Is it your will, that in this Town we ſhould part from the Lord Albert Laskie?

..... What ſhould you do elſe? Are you mad men? Will you run headlong into danger? wilfully?

Δ. I beſeech you, ſhall this be nothing prejudicial to our former doings, and order already taken and decreed for our going together?

..... What, is this contrary to reaſon? Well you are content.

Δ. As the will of the Higheſt is, ſo is mine and none other.

..... Sirha, do you ſee this ſword? I will be a ſurety for this (I warrant thee) alſo.

Δ.

..... Your brother is clapped up in priſon, How like you that? Your houſe-keeper I mean.

Δ. And why I pray you?

..... For that, that thou mayeſt be aſhamed of.

Δ. What is that?

..... They examin him: They ſay, that thou haſt hid divers ſecret things. As for thy Books, thou mayſt go look them at leaſure. It may be, that thy houſe may be burnt for a remembrance of thee too. Well if they do, ſo it is: if not, as thou wilt. I have told thee my phanſie, and given thee my counſel, offered thee my help, and deſired to do thee good: The choice is thine.

Δ. O Lord the Author of all truth, and director of ſuch as put their truſt in thee, I moſt humbly beſeech thee to conſider theſe premiſes, thus to me propounded. If they be true, and from thee, confirm them: If they be illuſions, and not from thee, diſprove them. For, hardly in my judgement, they do or can agree with our former precepts and order taken by thee.

A voice..... He that aſcendeth up to the top of the hill, let him believe: For until he come thither, let him do his labour.

O Lord, I doubt of theſe things, and promiſes of eaſe, wealth, and honour.

A voice..... Judge the Truth, by the laſt Action.

O Lord, What is that Action?

This Cloud (ſaid the voice of the Lord) is put betwixt us and you: What therefore may come between? Now judge you.

Δ. I ſuſpect the whole apparition of the eleven to be an illuſion. O Lord confirm my judgement or diſprove it.

A voice..... The Spirit of the Lord is not amongſt you.

Δ. What miſery are we then in? O Lord, Mercy, Mercy.

A voice..... Diſpute not with God, where whoredom is great.

Δ. O Lord, This whoredom we underſtand not.

A voice..... Pray daily, with repentance, that this cloud may be taken away, and this ſword diminiſhed. For the Seal cannot be broken, until Satan have done his uttermoſt; yea the uttermoſt of his malice. For it is granted him and he muſt ſtrike. But pray you unto God, that the ſword may be made ſhorter, or pluckt out of the hilt, that in ſtriking he want power. For your ſin is abominable, and a ſevenfold offence in the ſight of the Lord.

Δ. What this whoredom is (God knoweth) we underſtand not perfectly. If the Spirit of God be not with us, how can our prayers be acceptable?

A voice..... Thus ſaith the Lord, Turn unto me and be ſorry for your ſins, and let my Angels be witneſſe thereof. For I ſwear by my ſelf, that my Juſtice ſhall hang over you: And when I puniſh you next, I will raze you from the face of the earth. Therefore, Vow your ſelves unto me, and make your veſſels clean; for your habitations in my ſight are nothing: neither is the ſubſtance whereof I framed you acceptable. I am the Spirit of Truth and Underſtanding, and will not be daſht in pieces with worldlings; Neither uſe I to dwell in defiled places. For my Sanctuary is holy, and my Gates are without ſpot. And with me there dwelleth no unrighteouſneſſe.

Δ. Lord

A. Lord, is it thy will we ſhall go with Albert Laskie to Laſco?

A voyce. The Lord ſaieth, What I have ſaid, is true. Who rebuketh me, ſaying my words are untrue? The correction of him that reigneth is mightie; who hath numbred it? But to his deſtruction. Be you holy, that my hand may be weak.

A. O Lord, the fear of thy puniſhment aſtonieth my heart: and uncertainty of it in time, and place, doth alſo encreaſe my grief, &c.

A voyce. The fool ſaith in his heart: Oh, how great is thy puniſhment over me. Teach me the place of thy correction: And where thou wilt chaſtiſe me. Who is he that deſireth to meet God his vengeance, or the puniſhment of him that confoundeth the damned? Make your hearts clean, and wipe the ſin from amongſt you: And deſire to be forgiven, for miſerable are they that meet with vengeance, or that know the place where ſhe taketh up her Harbour.

A. Gloria, Honor, Laus & gratiarum actio perennis ſit Deo noſtro Omnipotenti: Nobis verò a Deo Patre, propter Jeſum Chriſtum in Spiritu Sancto, ſit Miſericordia, Pax & Conſolatio in via virtutis & veritatis. Amen.

Monday, Novemb. 18. Hora 9. Mane. Lubek.

E. K. There appeareth the Cloud, wherein the ſword remaineth encloſed.

A. O Lord, be mercifull unto us, and rigorouſly execute not thy Juſtice upon us, thy weaklings: Nor ſuffer Satan to Triumph, where thy glory is expected, &c. Converte nos Deus ſalutaris noſter, & averte iram tuam à nobis, &c.

E. K. Now cometh one in a white Coat, not perfectly to be ſeen, but as if he were ſeen through a Cipreſſe; and ſaid as followeth.

..... Who is he that leadeth out the Lion to prey? or who is he that lifteth up the feet of the young ones to devour? Who feedeth the ſmell of the roaring Bear, or hath taught him to remember the place of his recreation? Hath he alſo taught the fields, to put forth their voices: and the mighty Trees to flouriſh in pride? Are not the Hills glad when they bring forth Corn? When the Valleys rejoice with threefold waters. The beaſts of the wilderneſſe have they not known Caves: and unto ſuch as are made tame, is there not a ..... underſtanding? For, who is he that teacheth them, to make ſubject themſelves, which are ravening, or to bridle ſuch as are of their frowardneſſe? Even he it is, that looketh down from Heaven, and beholdeth the earth, and meaſureth with his feet, ſaying,

It is done.

Which entreth alſo into the houſes of men, and liſteneth to that which they call wonders. Which openeth the gates of his knowledge with his own finger; And which ſayeth unto you: How are ye become wiſe? Or from whence is your underſtanding, are your hearts become Caves to ſend out Thunders? Or why are your ſpirits thus vexed with holineſſe? Are you not a ſtiff-necked people, and ſuch as are deſpiſed? Are you not poor, and therefore hated. Since, therefore, you are become Baſtards, who teacheth your lips to ſpeak of my Church? Or hath taught you to urge me with mine own ſpirit?

Behold, I am mighty,

Becauſe I am the joy of the faithfull. For I am called the Temple of the Holy ones, and the beauty of Iſrael. The ſpirit of man crieth out, and pierceth into the Lord, as the ſwiftneſſe of an Arrow: And he heard them. Therefore, thus doth the winde of Cabon open her mouth, and ſweareth by the Jaſpar Pillar that ſtandeth in the Temple of Reconciliation, and it Thundereth, and is ſaid,

Be it done.

And behold, the doors open, and the Holy Altar is covered. The beaſts with many feet bring up burnt-offerings: And there is a ſacrifice that aſcendeth up, and it is a mighty winde, ſuch as hath not been ſince the beginning of dayes. Open your ears therefore, and prepare your ſelves to hear: For this..... is mighty, for it is of peace. My Juſtice (ſaith the Lord) is ſealed, and you have ſinned mightily: My arm is ſtretched forth, and I muſt be magnified: For vengeance is gone forth, and is appeared already. But who is he that reſiſteth the venome of the earth, or inſtructeth man to avoid the Darts of poiſon? He ſaith unto you. Thus it is, becauſe I have ſanctified you, and have made you holy to the earth: Therefore will I help you: But not as you deſire: For your prayers and unrighteous life ſhall become bands of yarn. And I will make a contention betwixt Sathan and you. If therefore you labour hard, and open fervent mindes, ſuch as are not of the world, and can binde this ſword and cloud of vengeance faſt from amongſt you: Be it ſo unto you, for it is your own righteouſneſſe. For Sathan hath reviled, and hath ſaid,

Then ſhalt thou ſee.

But ſo long as they are Holy, and become righteouſneſſe, they are become ſafe: but when they fall; Satan entreth in. For the power of righteouſneſſe is become a Conquerour, if it fight mightily. And Satan ſhall be confounded by a righteous judgement.

For I have decreed it: and by my ſelf I ſwear it.

I will be a righteous Judge betwixt you. Therefore, take heed you ſin not, nor go into death: For great is the fall of vengeance. Be not therefore defiled with the filthineſſe of the wicked: Note. Neither delight in ſuch as counterfeit truth. For I am one fire that judgeth all things. And I delight in people that are joyfull with one Banket. For thoſe that fill their bellies at the houſes of ſtrangers: Become enemies to me.

For I have ſaid,

My ſpirit is holy, and my annointed righteous. Let the earth riſe up, and continue in her wickedneſſe: Yea, let them ſay, we have found the annointed: But my continuance is truth, and they are become liars. For my ſpirit worketh, and behold, there are wonders in the ſight of men. And whereſoever I dwell, ſuch is my power. Be therefore of One houſe, that you may eat together: Leaſt you banket too much, and ſo become deceivers. I am one, and am known by One: And unto One, Which One I am married unto. (And I am mercifull) Whoſoever abideth not therein, is an Adulterer. Avoid you darkneſſe, for righteouſneſſe is preſent, and my ſpirit entreth. Bleſſed are ſuch as believe. Amen.

Even to the, Amen.

E. K. He is gone. There appeare ſome bands linked together, as Chaines about the Cloud.

Δ. Welcome be theſe bands.

E. K. He is here again; ..... and ſaith ..... eth.

..... Why are you become dull? Why are you yet ignorant? Seeſt thou theſe ..... [He pointeth, and ſpeaketh to E. K.]

E. K. I ſee them, I thank God.

..... Theſe bonds are your own righteouſneſſe: And as they appear before the Lord, ſo ſhall they binde vengeance together: But if you become weak you fall. But pray, that you fall not: For they are the dayes of ſorrow. The ſpirit of God is twofold; preſent Jah agian, and preſent Nah gaſſapalan. Therefore take heed. For, in the firſt, you are bleſſed: and it may return. But he that is filled with the ſecond, ſhall be drunken for ever. The firſt is power preſent, and a comfort inmeaſurable, glorifying, and ſtrengthning all things that are agreeable to it: But when they differ, it returneth. The other is the ſpirit of the firſt, and the ſecond, Almighty, and everlaſting, unmeaſurable, and inexplicable: drowning the will of man, that becometh ſtrong in the fountain of gladneſſe and underſtanding: true wiſdom her ſelf, and not returning. Pray, therefore, that you may be perfect: and that you may be ſeaſoned: For it is a ſalt that ſavoureth to the end.

The peace of God be amongſt you.

E. K. He caſt off his Cloudy Lawn, and went away. He ſeemed to be Raphael.

Δ. Yet we beſeech you more expreſly, and particularly to deal with us, &c.

..... It is ſaid, ..... It is written. ..... It is true.

Ceaſe.

Δ. Gloria, Laus, Honour, Triumphus & Jubilatio ſit Deo noſtro omnipotenti: Nunc & ſemper. Amen.

Wedneſday, Novemb. 20. Mane hor. 11½. Lubek.

Δ. As thou haſt of thy mercies (O Lord) given us ſome ſhew of thy favour bent toward us: ſo are we deſirous to underſtand how our Letters have wrought upon our friend his heart to joyn with us to call for thy mercies, pardon and help: for if they have, Then do we hope, our bands (of acceptable life) whereby to binde vengeance prepared and intended againſt us, ſhall wax more and ſtronger: by thy great mercy and help to thy well-pleaſing in thy ſervice hence forward.

E. K. The Cloud and bonds appear: But the bands appear fewer.

Δ. O Lord, is our ſtate ſince yeſterday become weaker with thee? And ſhall it ſo narrowly be exacted? Thy will be done, who art holy, juſt, and moſt wiſe, O God.

E. K. The bonds about the Cloud, now are onely two; which before were ſix, or ſeven. The bonds ſeem of a ſmoky aſhy collour, ſpirally going about the Cloud.

At length a voyce. ..... Judgement is the end of Juſtice: diſtributing and delivering alſo to every thing, ſeen, heard, or determined to his proper end uprightly. Are you able to deny this?

Δ. The end of our actions, words, and thoughts may ſeem twofold: One of us intended, and ment to be good: The other not depending upon our weening, but according to exact wiſdom, what is the end of the ſame; here deemed the proper end, if I underſtand right.

A voyce.

A voyce. Lo, judgement is the end of Juſtice in things that are handled uprightly: whereof you finde the Omnipotencie and Truth of him that judgeth Omnipotently: Which beholding your Combat, hath girded himſelf together, and beholdeth the Liſts, and he judgeth uprightly: For, he hath ſworn it. Arm not your ſelves therefore as weaklings: But provide as mightie and couragious Souldiers, for your own defence. I am without corruption (ſaith the Lord) and lean not with the windes of Baſannah.

Δ. O Lord, give me leave to requeſt thee, &c.

A voyce. But I am juſt, and judgement her ſelf. Enter not therefore into my holy places: Neither kneel down before my ſanctuaries; ſaying, the Lord hath Choſen us, He liveth, and it is true for ever. For I have ſaid, It may be undetermined. I will alſo ſee, whether you be ſtrong inwardly, or privily rotten. For with the world your weakneſſe is great. Whoſoever overcometh ſhall rejoyce. But I will be a God in my Covenant and will hold on my promiſe: Fight therefore as it becometh you, and caſt off the world. Make fleſh ſubject, and ſtrangle your Adverſary. For unto ſuch belongeth the entrance into my Chambers, and the uſe of my will, as the Horn of my glorie. For it is written, light dwelleth not in darkneſſe: Neither hath darkneſſe comprehended any light: For darkneſſe is the Cave of errour, and the reward of ſinners. Thus ſayeth he, which beholdeth your ſorrows: And it is a fight for many daies, which appeareth neither in the one, nor in the other: nor giveth he anſwer untill the end.

E. K. There is one come in like a Ghoſt, and he taketh all the hangings away, which beautified the place like to Curtains. Now all the ſides of the ſtone are darkiſh; and the Cloud ſtandeth in the very middle thereof. Now the bands ſeem brighter then ..... becauſe the place is ſo darkiſh.

Δ. O Lord, many daies Combat is aſſigned us. And foraſmuch as Militia eſt vita hominis ſuper Terram, we are now in a great uncertainty of our Combat ending.

E. K. There ſtandeth the number of 40. upon a great Labell, and nothing elſe.

Δ. This 40. (O Lord) what betokeneth it, dayes, weeks, or years? Well: Whatſoever it be, Bleſſed be the name of the Higheſt. Our God, King, and Father.

E. K.

Δ.

E. K. Now is one come in very brave, like a Preacher; I take him to be an evil one.

Δ. Benedictus qui venit in nomine Domini.

This Preacher-like Creature, ſayeth.

E. K. He ſaith nothing; Not ſo much as, Amen.

..... Are you ſo fooliſh to think that the power of God will deſcend into ſo baſe a place?

E. K. The power of God deſcending, deſcendeth to beautifie the place; And whatſoever he beautifieth, he doth it mercifully: And ſo through his mercy he deſcendeth among us, that put our truſt in his mercies.

..... It is true: But, unto thoſe that are righteous.

Δ. Chriſt his coming hath been to ſave ſinners. His converſation was among ſinners, halt, lame, blinde, and diſeaſed. So likewiſe: Now our frailty, or impurity will not exclude his preſence, or the Miniſtery of his faithfull Angels.

..... What, in this baſe manner?

Δ. Do you miſlike the manner?

..... Can any that hath any drop of wiſdom like it?

Δ. Are you wiſe?

..... Or elſe I could not ſee thy imperfections.

Δ. Which be they? Accuſe me.

..... What greater imperfection, then to imagine much more believe, that the Angels of God, will, or may deſcend into ſo filthie a place, as this corruptible ſtone is? Conſidering the clearneſſe, and bigneſſe of the aire, or the places that are prepared in mans bodie, for ſuch entrances.

Δ. Who cauſeth thee to come here?

..... Thy folly.

Δ. Art thou good, or bad?

..... I am good, or elſe I could not ſee the bad.

Δ. Ergo, thou art a lyar, for thou ſayd'ſt, No good Angel, would, or might come here into this ſtone.

Δ. Thus will God be glorified againſt wicked Satan, and his Miniſters. His fetch was very ry ſubtile: As, To bring in doubt all the Actions performed in this ſtone. What canſt thou anſwer?

E. K. He ſayeth nothing: Neither can he ſay any thing. He ſeemeth to be a very fooliſh Devil.

Δ. Mendacem oportet eſſe memorem. Now be packing hence.

..... I will abide here.

Δ. Where God will permit thee, there mayeſt thou be: But we will (as now) ceaſe: And we thank God highly of this comfort and victory: We beſeech him, that we may as proſperouſly overcome all other Diabolical aſſaults or ſophiſtical, or untrue perſwaſions: and all his Temptations. Amen.

Glory, Honour, power, and praiſe be to our Almighty and living God, the Lord of Hoſts, Jehovah, now and ever. Amen.

Saturday, Novemb. 23. à Meridie hora 1½. Lubek.

E. K. Here appeareth the ſame bad one, ſitting, who laſt appeared. The Cloud with the ſword appeareth at laſt: with two wreaths on one ſide; and two on the other, ſpirally. This Creature taketh the cloudy pillar, and throweth it from him divers times.

He ſayeth. Call as long as thou wilt, I will keep thee for ſeeing any more ſights here.

Δ. Or Lord, attend unto thy glory: Attend unto thy honour, regard the arrogancy of this Luciferine brag againſt thy younglings expreſſed.

Δ. And of the Lord, Alb. Laskie, &c.

..... He ſhall come to deſtruction, as thou and thine to miſerable beggery: Becauſe he hath conſented to them that are Miniſters of iniquity, ſpirits of falſhood.

E. K. He looketh on a bare book, when he ſaith thus.

..... The power of God entreth into the Soul of man, and doth viſit the Chambers of his underſtanding: openeth his will with power. The ſpirits of darkneſſe are ready for every place, and can deceive, ſaying, This is of God. Unto theſe you have liſtened: and have ſworn it as a Covenant between God and you. But I am come from God: and am entred indeed, and will make you hungry in your own fooliſhneſſe, that you may become wiſe. None hath entred here with power but I. And I will tarry here. And I will be a wall betwixt you, and your imaginations: and betwixt thoſe that have tempted you, and your weakneſſe. For thou haſt called upon God: and he hath heard thee, and I am he that ſayeth ſo unto thee. ..... Laws of ſalvation are ready, follow them. The way into darkneſſe is wide, and eaſie, and where light is, it encreaſeth joy. Be thou therefore warned by me.

Nay, I have ſaid.

Δ. Thou haſt ſaid here, That thou art God, is that true? For thou haſt ſaid, Thou haſt called upon God, and he hath hard thee: And I am he, that ſayeth ſo unto thee.

..... I ſee thee: And thy wiſdom is nothing: Make of me what thou canſt, I am the meſſager of God.

..... Avoid darkneſſe, avoid darkneſſe, avoid darkneſſe.

E. K. He plucketh down violently (in the ſtone) the Clouds, and all becometh light in the ſtone.

..... Ly here with thy fellows. Thoſe that are of wiſdom, let them underſtand.

Δ. O Sapientia patris æterni, illumina mentes noſtras, ut tibi ſerviamus in ſanctitate, & Juſtitia toto vitæ noſtræ tempore. Amen.

..... Carmathar, a Knight of the Rhodes, was thirteen years deceived with one that appeared (as he thought) in glorie & wiſdom in the image of Chriſt. Antony was beguiled in divers wayes. The Prophets & Apoſtles have doubted in many things; But becauſe they faithfully believed they were not rejected. Their hope became fruitfull, and they bleſſed with underſtanding from above. If ſo be alſo, you repent, and be ſorry in that you have yielded unto the inſtruments of wickedneſſe: and follow on, as they your fathers have done, you ſhall alſo become wiſe: But I ſay unto you, That which you have conſented unto is amiſſe, and falſe, worſe then errour it ſelf. For, where have you taſted anie fruit out of that Doctrine. How poor is the power, that hath been long told of in you. You have forgotten your own knowledge, and are become of ſeers, blinde: ſuch as grope their way. Such end, ſuch beginning. For the end hangeth from the beginning: and is become a means in it ſelf, to bring all things to paſſe. But neither the end nor beginning of ſuch things as you have handled hath been perfect, or probable: But a deceit, comprehending the image of falſhood: Yea, much more the traps and ſnares into wickedneſſe; which deſerveth deſtruction eternally.

If this may adviſe you, Be it ſo. If theſe examples and probable arguments be ſound, Then neceſſarily you ought of dutie to be counſelled by me: But I have opened my mouth and told you. Be it unto you, according to your diſpoſition.

Δ. Be it unto us according to the mercies and loving kindneſſe of the Higheſt; into whoſe hands we commit our ſelves, all our doings, and intents.

Δ. Sedebamus quaſi in triangulo, & ſe convertebat verſus A. L.

..... Thou, O man, awake, ſhake off forgetfulneſſe: Lift not up thy ſelf ſo much; But cloſe up thine eares againſt theſe deluded deluders, which carry thee headling into folly, and transform thee to a ſhadow: By whoſe counſel thou art become diſhonoured, and by whom thou ſhalt become a ſpot in the Book of Fame. Call to remembrance the Hiſtories of the whole World, Political and Eccleſiaſtical. Inquire of the Learned that have ſettled their judgements in the Book of God. Open thine eyes, and behold, if any of the Prophets or forefathers (men grounded in wiſdom and deep underſtanding) have yielded themſelves to this unrighteouſneſſe, believing lyars; conſenting to untruths, and laſtly diſhonouring the Name of God. Then call to minde thine own eſtate, thy flouriſhing of thy youth, and poſſibilities, wherein thou mayſt be made perfect. Which if thou truely do, Then baniſh this diſhonour to God and his Angles, liſten not to theſe S ..... erſity: For the Syrenes are awake, and their ſong is to deſtruction. I am ſent from God, as a Meſſenger to call thee home; for thou diſhonoureſt God mightily. Behold thou ſhalt be made contemptible, and become a laughing-ſtock. Thy honour ſhall be defaced, and thy poſterity ſpotted with ignominie. Moreover, ſuch as are thy friends ſhall ſhake their heads, ſaying, What wiſe man hath thus been overcome? What is he that is become fooliſh? Thou mayſt deſire it, and conſent, as before; But I am a ſtumbling block betwixt you, and will dwell in all Elements for your purpoſes.

E. K. He holdeth up his hands towards Δ and ſaith, .. Nay I have told him truth.

E. K. He hath now gotten him a Chair, and ſitteth down. Thou ſhalt be hanged, he ſaid to E. K.

Δ. If it be truth, then it is a token that God is very merciful unto us; and that we are in his favour highly, to give us this warning to avoid evil. Now reſteth the other part, How we ſhall attain to good, and wiſdom, from God; ſuch as by the true and perfect uſe of his creatures, we might do him ſome acceptable ſervice, with true obedience and humility, &c. Declina, à malo & Fac bonum. Pſalm.

E. K. One cometh to him, and ſaith ..... He goeth about to take you a lyar.

E. K. He goeth away, and cometh again.

E. K. This man which thus came and went away, and cometh again, is all in white; he hath a ſilver Crown on his head: he ſpeaketh as followeth....

..... Deny that you have done, Confeſſe it to be falſe; Cry you have offended, And let the Angels of God ſee you do ſo, (that they may carry up your prayers) ſo ſhall you become righteous; But why doſt thou write words of contempt againſt us? For One in our number is All; And we are, all, One. Believe us; for of our ſelves we have no power to inſtruct you, but to deliver you the Commandment of God. Rent your cloaths, pluck thoſe blaſphemous books in pieces; And fall down before the Lord: for he it is, that is Wiſdom. I have done for this time.

E. K. He is gone.

Δ. Quis eſt diſcretor Spirituum?

E. K. Now he cometh in again and ſpeaketh.

..... Oh, you are a Learned man. ..... Truth in the ſecond: He it is that diſcreetly judgeth all things. If his diſcretion be given to you, thank God.

Δ. Illi ergo Committemus hanc cauſam: ab illo hoc donum petentes & expectantes. Nos interim piè in Chriſto vivere intendimus.

E. K. He is become a great pillar of Chryſtal higher than a Steeple. He aſcendeth upward in clouds, and the little circle remaineth.

Δ. Gloria, laus, honor, & gratiarum actio ſit Deo noſtro omnipotenti Trino & uni, nunc, & in ſecula ſeculorum. Amen.

Tueſday Decembris 10. After Diner, we removed from Lubek, and the Lord Alb. Laskie went by Coach to Lord Chriſtopher, Duke of Meckelburgh.

Thurſday night we lay at Wiſmar. 11. Decemb. vel 12.

Saturday morning we came to Roſtoch. 14. Decembris.

Monday Decemb. 16. Mane horâ 10 ¼. Roſtoch.

E. K. He is here, that ſaid, he would dwell in omnibus Elementis, &c.

Δ.

..... I came from the fountain of light, where is no errour nor darkneſſe, and have Power, (becauſe it is given me from the Higheſt) Which, (Lo) is grown and become a mighty Rock. For it is ſaid of me, Behold I will viſit them that put their truſt in me, with a comfortable ſtrength in the time of need; For my Rock is an everlaſting ſtrength, and the Hills of my countenance endure for ever. If then I be the Countenance of God, and a piercing fire ſent out as a flame, not onely with his great mercy, but with his good will, and that towards you, overwhelmed, not caſt down, but almoſt for ever buried in a lake of ignorance, and inquenchable flame, ſuch as conſumeth with ignorance, deceit it ſelf, and a provocation too manifeſt, and apparent deſtruction: If I then with this meſſage (being the meſſage of truth) my ſelf a mean .... ſufficent Order for the publiſhment thereof, can, nor may ..... as of ... n I am) vehemently deſpiſed (the fruits of a good Conſcience, notwithſtanding ſtedfaſt) Then is he of no power of whom I am ..., becauſe it is written. Such as riſe up againſt my Spirit, I will deſtroy them in the midſt of the ſame fire, and will deliver their aſhes to the windes for a memory of their wickedneſſe. But he is juſt, and is without meaſure: knoweth what is, and what is to come, which hath thus ſaid of you. Behold their ignorance is greater, and they eſteem not truth. Lo I have heard them, in the midſt of their corruption; yet they are become faithleſſe: I miniſter unto them, but in vain; But behold their mouths are cloſed up with idleneſſe. O ye of little underſtanding, are you become ſo blinde, that you will not ſee? Are the windows of your eares made faſt againſt truth? Are your conſciences ſealed up, with a thrice burnt iron? Deſire you light, and yet refuſe it? Have you craved ..., and now deny it: yea utterly diſdain it?

Δ. That is not true.

E. K Now cometh a head behind him.

..... Lo the end ſhall become your comfort, if you liſten to the ſongs of my mouth: if not, everlaſting folly: and a reward of ſuch, as are weary to hear of Truth. Now I pinched him.....

E. K. This he ſaid looking behind him.

Δ.

..... Burn thoſe blaſphemous books of thine, and I will teach thee wiſdom.

Δ. Will you have me note down that ſentence ſo.

..... I will.

Δ. What blaſphemous books can I acknowledge, ſeeing I underſtand none? If they contain Sentence, make me to perceive it; that ſo I may compare it, with the Touchſtone of God his word, uſing the Talent of ſuch reaſon, as God hath given me.

.... I go, I go, I go.

E. K. Now cometh a great fire down, and there appeareth a great huge man, with a great ſword in his hand; fire cometh out at his eyes, and at his mouth. This terrible man ſaid,

..... Maledicti ſunt, qui jurati ſunt contra Nomen meum.

E. K. Now that wicked creature ſhaketh himſelf.

Δ. In nomine Jeſu Chriſti Redemptoris humani generis, Quis tu es?

[This was ſpoken to the man with the ſword.]

..... Sume vires.

Δ. Deus in adjutorium meum intende, &c. Miſerere mei Deus &c.

E. K Now the great huge one kneeleth down, and his face is (now) from meward; he looketh up toward heaven; he hath very long hair, to beneath beneath his girdle; his Robe is long and tucked up. Now he ſtandeth up.

..... Curſed are they: Curſed are they: Curſed is he for ever. I am, I gave thee power, and ſealed thee for a time: Power to uſe the vehemency of thine own poiſon; but not to touch my coat. Thus he ſaith, And (I am) thou art a lyar from the beginning, and the fountain of curſedneſſe. Damnation is thy dwelling place; Death is thy ſeat; Vengeance is the Crown of thy diſglory. Becauſe thou haſt entred into my ſeat: Haſt exalted thy brightneſſe, blaſphemed my name; wherein (in this Action) thou continueſt (No point of thy charge, nor of my permiſſion.) Be thou accurſed, weakened, overthrown, and defaced. Thou art vanquiſhed, Thy time is ſhortened. And why? I am. And I ſay thou fighteſt againſt me, and not againſt men. I am Juſtice, and the ſtrength of him that liveth, whom thou haſt felt, and ſhalt feel, world without end; Therefore Depart; Depart I ſay.

E. K. Now the ſword ſtandeth by him, with the rags that appeared before.

..... Vengeance, prepared for others, be thy reward: As it was delivered unto thee, ſo take it with thee; That the malice which thou ſheweſt to others, may heap up thine own deſtruction.

Jeovah, Jeovah, Jeovaſcah.

E. K. The wicked Tempter falleth down into a hole, and this high creature putteth the ſword and rags down after him. Now this great creature appeareth as ſmall as he uſed to do. And it is Michael.

Mic. ..... Veniat Lux Domini, & fidelium Conſolatio.

E.K. Now is all come in, as was before: The Vail, the feet of men appearing under, &c.

Mic. ..... Thus hath God dealt mercifully with you.

Δ. His Name be praiſed for ever.

Mic. ..... Thus hath Truth vanquiſhed darkneſſe. Even ſo ſhall you vanquiſh the World in him which is the Spirit of Power and Truth. For I have Sworn (ſaith the Lord) and will be merciful unto you: But ceaſe for theſe daies to come; for they were daies delivered: Let them be (therefore) unto you daies of Repentance: For the end of 40 daies muſt come: And this Doctrine ſhall be written unto all Nations, even unto the end of the World. The Grain is yet in the earth, and hath newly conſented with the earth: But when it ſpringeth, and beareth ſeed, The number ſhall be the laſt.

Δ. A dark Parable, to my underſtanding, is this.

Mic. ..... The tranſparent fire of Meekneſſe comfort and warm your ſouls, rectifie and make ſtrong your bodies, to the eternal comfort of the World to come; in the pilgrimage which you ſhall endure, with a heavy croſſe for the Teſtimonie of Truth.

E. K. A great many voices, ſay, Amen.

E. K. Now he is gone, and the golden Vail is drawn again.

Δ. Omnis laus, honor, Gloria, Victoria & Triumphus ſit Deo noſtro omnipotenti, Vivo & vero, nunc, & in ſempiterna ſeculorum ſecula. Amen.

Sonday, 22. Decembris, Mane, we went from Roſtoch toward Stetin.

Wenſday, 25. Decembris, on Chriſtmas Day morning, we came to Stetin by 10 of the clock.

E. K. I cannot ſee but an inch into the Stone. The Curtain appeareth, but more deep into the Stone At length cometh one very tall, in a long white Gown, all open, and his hair of his head hanging down to his legs. He hath wings upon his head, armes, back, and legs. He ſeemeth to deſcend from the Clouds, and upon Clouds which lie ſloapewiſe for his deſcending. He ſpeaketh as followeth.

..... The pureneſſe of humility, diſperſed through the inward bowels of man, is that, which is called (with you) Perſeverance. Which Perſeverance, beautifieth and eſtabliſheth in a true and ſtedfaſt Baſis thoſe things that are acceptable in the ſight of God, the workes of man. Hence ſpringeth juſtification, which .... with the love of God. Herein are you become like unto us, for that we are the image of Perſeverance, and the Glory of God. But in us it is dignified: In you it is, and muſt be imperfect: For nothing is of fleſh or blood, that receiveth perfection.

The Emanations from God, to, and into his creatures (which agree in the Center of the Earth as the knitting up of things) are eſtabliſhed: So that one jot of his Will neither can, nor may periſh, wax weak, or dwell in error: Which foreſeen from the beginning, carrieth in it ſelf the remembrance of all things to the end. Through which mercy and remembrance, you are become the ſervants of God: Not for your own ſakes; but in that it is the Glory of him, which hath called you to this exerciſe: Troubleſome to the World, but rewarded with Glory.

Our Calling or Exerciſe.

If therefore your imperfections riſe up and reſiſt the Will of God, ſaying, blaſphemouſly as you do, Let us ſeek other wayes, Then you are not counted perſeverers, neither are your works worthy reward: But humane reaſon can perſwade and give judgement againſt theſe follies, much more are they damnable, and deſerve correction in the voice and judgement of ſuch as are pure.

He that dealeth with the wicked is a lyar, and ſhall have his reward: But the end of comfort is in the pureneſſe of ſpirit. But O you of little wiſdom, you riſe up againſt the windes, and yoke your wits againſt the mountains: Nay you caſt your ſelves down headlong, where there is no mercy. For what blaſphemie is it to ſay, If it be the will of God, it muſt follow? Is not man ſubject to the bringing in of his own labours? And are not they allowed to his comfort, being brought in?

The ſoul of man is the Image of God, after his form, which keepeth within himſelf the power of his divinity in the heavenly Spirit, whereby he hath Authority to conſent with God in the workmanſhip of his Will and Creatures: Which Power being ſealed already, giveth unto man (as King of himſelf) to conſent to his own ſalvation, conjoyning and knitting himſelf together, either with perſeverance in the aſſured hope of mercy, or (with wilfull drunkenneſſe,) to the reward of ſuch as fall. Therefore, Become Holy. For the ſoul beautifieth, when it is beautified in it ſelf. Reſiſt not the Will of God, which is mighty on you: Be not obſtinate.

Be humble, Rejoyce not for this World: But be glad that your names are ſealed, and that you ſhall correct the World. Deſpair not through weakneſſe; for from whom cometh ſtrength? If puddles become Seas, the end is more wonderful: But yet greater when ſinners are called to the knowledge and performance of God his Will, thorough his mercies. Even as one day periſheth, and is not, although he hath been; Even ſo it is, and ſhall be the ſtate of this World. For the Earth muſt ſing O Sanna with the Heavens, And there muſt be One veritie. And Hieruſalem ſhall deſcend with an horn of glory to the end. The Sun and Moon ſhall be witneſſes, and wonder at their ſtay. The Kings of the Earth ſhall become proud in themſelves, and are unable to be tamed with man.

But I will yoke them (ſaith the Lord) with correction; And force them one to imitate anothers ſteps: Yea they ſhall tread the grapes alike; For in my Vineyard Corruption ſhall not dwell with Authority: Neither ſhall the Prince of Darkneſſe uſurpe my further honour.

E. K. He ſpeaketh much in a ſmaller voice than he did. I cannot perceive it.] He turned back and ſpake.

..... I ſpeak theſe things for your underſtanding, and that you may be ſtrengthened.

E. K. He turneth back again (as before) and ſpeaketh I know not what.

..... My dear brethren, therefore rejoyce in Comfort, and the image of Peace: and remain faithful, that you may be fed with that food that ſhall preſerve and alwaies reſt before the mighty flames of Zanzor: where there dwelleth no defiled Creature, nor any unrighteouſneſſe.

E. K. He turneth now back again (as before) ſpeaking. He ſeemeth now to lean againſt a Pillar of Copper, great and round: And he is become leſſe than he was. Now he ſtandeth on the top of the Pillar, Now he kneeleth down, his back being turned.

A voice ſaith to him ..... Swear ..... [1]

He ſaid ..... It is done.

He ſaid ..... The firſt voice openeth his mouth and ſaith [There is a great rumbling and rouſhings of falling of Towns or Houſes, as it were in the Stone.]

He ſaid ..... The will of God is ſealed in this Propheſie, and it ſhall endure.

A voice. ..... Swear ..... [2]

He ſaid ..... I have done.

He ſaid ..... It thundereth, and it is the ſecond voice. The effect of God his Will, is not of time; and therefore not to be known of man, till that moment and end of time ſhall appear, wherein it muſt be publiſhed, and finiſhed with power.

E. K. Now

E. K. Now it thumbleth again very terribly, as though a vvhole Town ſhould fall down into a great Valley.

A voyce ..... Swear. ..... [3]

He ſaid. ..... I have. ..... And it is the third, and the laſt voyce. All things that are crooked ſhall be made ſtraight. The winde of the heavens ſhall walk through all the earth. Wiſdom ſhall ſit in her Majeſtie, Crowned, in the top of an Hill, with exalted glorie.

It is the end.

E. K. Now all daſheth in a flame of fire, Pillar, and he, and all, and ſo flieth upward.

A voyce. ..... He that hath ears, let him hear.

Another voyce. It ſhall be. Amen.

E. K. Now the Curtain cometh before all, as it vvas at the beginning, this day.

A. O Lord, for thy great myſteries declared unto us (this day) we moſt humbly thank thee. But on our parts, there remaineth ſome matter. .... thy hands by ſome of thy good Miniſters, we deſire to have ſome advertiſement: as of the Lord Alb. Laskie. Secondly, of Vincent Seve, &c.

E. K. A very little Creature appeareth, and ſaith.

The little one. A word, and away. The hearts of Princes, are the ſecrets of the Lord: Such they are, as unlock the doings of this world.

A. Of A. L. his delay in coming (contrary to our deſire and expectation) I would gladly underſtand the cauſe, &c.

Note. Of A. L. and our ſeparating hereafter.

E. K. He is gone ſuddenly. This Creature ſtood betvveen the Curtain, and the forepart of the ſtone, it vvas one of the leaſt Creatures that ever I ſavv.

E. K. It thundreth in the stone. Of thee, [pointing to E. K.] thus sayeth the Lord.

Thou art flesh, and become stubborn. Thy judgement waxeth dull, and thy heart sealed: But I will unseal thee; and thou shalt be partaker: But (because thou hast offended me) not with power in worldly things, I will make thee a great Seer: Such an one, as shall judge the Circle of things in nature. But heavenly understanding, and spiritual knowledge shall be sealed up from thee in this world: For, thou art become stony, and hast cried out against my Saints. Notwithstanding, your life shall be together. Thou shalt be a workman of nature, looking into the Chambers of the earth: The Treasures of men. Many things are pluckt from thee, which were thine: But not from you, because I have promised hem.

E. K.

What is he, that bridled the windes, △. At your prayers? Or, who is he that preserved you from the bloudy imaginations of men, [and] hatreds of the world invincible? For, lo, the promise of the most highest shall be fulfilled.

This sentence is revoked afterward, and the stone dignified.

E. K. Now I see all those men, whose feet I saw before: And there sitteth One in a Judgement seat, with all his teeth fiery. And there sit six, on one side of him, and six on the other. And there sit twelve in a lower seat under them. All the place is like Gold, garnished with precious stones, On his head is a great stone; covering his head; a stone most bright, brighter then fire. Saturday, January 25. Ὁ κύριος ὡρας τὸ θανάτου διὰ τὴν τῶ E. K. ἀδικίας μεγάλης ἐναντίον ἐμοῦ. (i. e. Magnum adii vitæ periculum per iniquitatem E. K. contra me.)

Sunday, January 26. ..... Invisebam Bibliothecam Ecclesiæ Cathedralis.

Monday, January 27. ῥῆξαι κυμ οὖρας βρευες. (Rixæ cum uxore breves.)

Tuesday, January 28. We went from Posen.

Thursday, Jan. 30. We came to Konin Town, over the long and dangerous Bridge, with much cumber at one broken place, by reason of the huge Cakes of Ice, which lay there.

Satur-

Saturday, Februarii, 1. We paſſed the dangerous way of Ice, having 25 men to cut the Ice for our Coaches to come through above two Engliſh miles long: but for all that great help, we could not get to Vinew City that night, by reaſon of the great water and Ice hard by the Town, which was broken over the banks into the medows very deep.

Sonday, Februarii 2. We came over the great water, the Ice being moſt part (with that nights winde) driven away out of our paſſage.

Monday, Feb. 3. We came by Shadek to Lasko Town, and there were lodged in the Provoſt his fair houſe by the Church.

Prima Actio apud Lasko.

Tueſday Februarii 11. Stilo veteri, aſt 21. Stilo novo.

Δ. After our prayers of the 7 Pſalms, and my particular invitation and calling for God his help, and the miniſtery of his good Angels: After (I ſay) more than half an hour ſpace attendance; E. E. ſeemed and thought that he felt a thing about his head, as if it clawed with Hawks claws. It continued no long time. And toward the Eaſterly corner of my great Study above, ſeemed to E. K. clouds to appear, far off, as at a quarter of a mile diſtance. Then appeared a Sea, endleſſe one way, and a Haven mouth with a River which fell or ran into that mouth. And beſides that River doing down into the Haven, did another River appear by running into the Sea, without any Haven making or having. The water of this Sea, is not like Sea-water, but rather like Quickſilver. Now cometh a mountain, and ſwimmeth upon that main Sea. Now that mountain ſeemeth to reſt and ſtand before that River mouth, that is by the Haven.

A voice, ..., Meaſure me.

E. K. Now ſeemeth a great thing like a man to ſtand, with one leg in the foreſaid River, and with the other in the ſaid Sea, by . having a corner of the ··· id between his ſaid legs. His right leg is in the River, and his left in the Sea. His right leg ſeemeth gold, and his left leg lead. The mountain ſtandeth before him. His legs are like two poſts, of the ſubſtance of the Rainbow. He is very high: he hath a face, but with many eyes and noſes, but not diſtinctly to be diſcerned. His body ſeemeth to be red Braſſe. He ſtandeth with his arms abroad, and no hands appear. His right arme is of the colour of ſilver; His left arme ſeemeth to be black, twinkling. His head is much of the colour of that Sea wherein his left leg ſtandeth. Now beginneth a right hand to appear; a fair right hand.

A voice ſaid to this man, ... Meaſure the water.

He anſwered, ... It is 250 Cubits.

A voice. ..... Meaſure that foot of earth.

E. K. He pointeth to the mountain.

Anſwer. ..... It is a cube twice doubled in himſelf in a ſtraight line.

E. K. One ſpeaketh behind me, ſaying.

..... Meaſure the Sea alſo.

Anſwer. ..... It is 750. Cubits.

E. K. He now ſtoopeth to it, and taketh of it in his hand.

He ſaith..... The fourth in the third, and three in himſelf ſquare. The age of Nature.

E. K Now all is gone, all is clear, and nothing appeareth.

3. in 4. efficiunt 12. & 3. & 3. in ſe efficit 9. Nunc 9. in 12. efficiunt. 108.

Δ, At length after this, E. K. heard from the foreſaid corner of the Study, the noiſe, as of a Ship toſſed and jolted of the waves of the Sea. After that E. K. ſaw one that ſtood all covered in a white cloud by the Eaſterly corner of the Table, above the Table in the Air. He ſaid.

..... Beati ſunt, quibus veritas, ſpes, & conſolatio eſt: & quibus luminaria majora inſerviunt, in fortitudine & potentia æterni & Omnipotentis Dei.

E. K. Now the cloud covereth him, and abideth.

E. K. Now he cometh out of the cloud, and ſtepeth three ſteps forward ward, and the cloud ſtandeth behind him, like a garment ..... At length he ſaid.

..... Then is their bleſſednesſe, eternal life.

E. K. I never ſaw him before: He is covered with a red Purple Robe, ſuch as my Lord, here, uſeth; but made ſomewhat like a Surpleſſe. His head is covered with feathers like Down: His face is like a childes face: His neck is bare: His legs are ba.... moſt white: His garment cometh not but to the ſmall of his leg. He ſtandeth upon a white great round Table, like Chryſtal, all written with letters, infinitely. On the middle of the Table is a great ſwelling or pommel of the ſame ſubſtance the Table is of. Upon that pommel he ſtandeth. He hath nothing in his hands; neither can his hands be diſcerned. His Robe hath no ſleeves.

He ſaid. ..... Non poſſum diutius videri: Servus ſum Altiſſimi: Novi Terram in paradiſo. Spiritus ſum SAPIENTIÆ: Nomen meum eſt NALVAGE.

E. K. He maketh a croſſe upon the place vvhere he ſtandeth.

Nal. ..... Beatus Pater: Beatus Filius: Beatus Spiritus Sanctus. Bea...tu...t Menſuratio rerum & ſubſtantiarum omnium viſibilium & inviſibilium, verus & ſanctius eſt Deus in promiſſis ſuis & veritas ejus, Talis eſt.

E. K. Hereupon he ſhevveth a round Globe.

..... Cælum, Mundus, Angelus, Homo, Nihil, & non nihil, & omne quod eſt, vel erit, Nihil eſt niſi ſplendor, Gubernatio, & unitas Dei: Quæ a Centro formata eſt reformata eſt, ab initio ad tempus menſuratum, & in perpetuum, Laus tibi in Cælo, Laus tibi in Terra, Triumphus tibi in inferno, ubi non eſt Laus, nec Gloria. Quæ jam infuſa ſentio, doceo: Sed modo, lingua, & ideomate prædicto.

E. K. He turneth round when he ſpeaketh.

Nal. ..... Omnis Caro maximè eſt ſibi applicabilis, in natura & perfectione ſua. Igitur revelanda ſunt Myſteria Dei, non ut audiantur, ſed ut intelligantur.

E. K. Now cometh a great ſmoak: now I ſee nothing: now he is gone.

[E. K. I ſee no body.]

E. K. Methinketh that two ſpeak, or elſe this voice giveth an eccho.

..... The unpatient and troubleſome ſpirits of indignation, wrath, blaſphemy, and diſobedience, continually contend, bear arms, and ravenouſly run wilfully, againſt thoſe that are the.... Meſſagers and Angles of the Dignified and Triumphant Glory: which is now the Miniſtery of him that is Dignified in his Father: To the honour and glory of thoſe that are humble and faithful in obedience. Yea thoſe wicked ones keep open wars againſt God, and his Annointed in Heaven and Earth, onely for the ſafeguard and true keeping of ſuch as love God, and follow his Commandments, rejoyce in Truth, and are viſited in Righteouſneſſe.

Dark ſpeeches to the fleſh: but words mixed with humane underſtanding; wherein briefly I will manifeſt the envy between the wicked (in reſpect of their enviouſneſſe) and thoſe that are juſtified in Heaven; which fight in the government of mans ſoul in the Creatures of God: Not in that they know they ſhall overcome: But in that they are envious and proud from the beginning.

Their contention is evidently amongſt you, which are joyned in the ſervice of God: Not as Deſervers, but as Choſen; whoſe veſſels and power, are beſt known unto God.

E. K. One ſtandeth on my left ſhoulder and ſaith.

Siniſter. ..... Doſt thou not hear, how like a fool he ſpeaketh, without all reaſon? Thou art a ſpirit of lying. Thou art one fartheſt from the glory of God. Thou art a ſower of lyes, and a teacher of falſe doctrine.

E. K. Thus ſaith he on my left hand.

Siniſter. ..... Speak, for I have power over thee. Canſt thou deny it?

Dexter. ..... Thou thinkeſt ſo, becauſe thou hadſt power: But the brightneſſe thou hadſt, is turned into iniquity. True it is, thou hadſt power to baniſh the wicked out of Paradiſe: But me thou knoweſt not; becauſe thou haſt not baniſhed me. In reſpect of thy dignification (which ſprang with power) I ſay with the Hallelujah: But in reſpect of thy fall, Thus ſaith the Lord; Poſui tenebras à tergo meo.

Siniſter. ..... Fy upon God, that ever he created me.

Dexter.

Dexter. ..... Even thus, do they seek continually to enter into the weakest vessel: of envy, not to triumph; for they know they shall not: but they hinder the time with man, wherein they may offend his conscience.

E. K. I hear howling and lamenting.

To E. K. Dexter..... Such are those of whom thou seekest aid and comfort: Those that appear unto thee, have sought thy soul; And the fruit of them, is according to their destruction. Believe them not. It is said before. Thou dealest with devils. What reward shall he reap, that fighteth against the Highest? Or taketh part with such as are banished from Righteousnesse? Much more shall his punishment be, which seeketh help of those that are dishonoured. For dishonour ..... to imperfection, and is become a monster for destruction.

It is written .... Nothing can stand before the Lord, that is imperfect; Much more that imperfection weakened, which obeyeth the imperfect. Leave, for the kingdom of Righteousnesse is at hand, And thou must vow. Hear the Lord, That thy sins may be forgiven thee: For the Propheſies of the Lord are not uttered to the world, with the seales of the wicked. Therefore become holy, that thou mayest augment the benefit of God bestowed amongst you; and render it to the world, as the message of truth, with thanksgiving. Meum est pauca dicere.

Δ. Sed quis sis, Nescimus, an non idem Naluage, qui nobiscum prius egisti hodie?

Nal. ..... I am.

E. K. Why call you those Devils, with whom I deal; not offending my conscience, but intending to do good to my self and my neighbours? If you be of God, where is the fruit of your doctrine? &c.

Nal. ..... If they were not Devils and enemies of truth, they would praise and honour God in his Messengers of truth. But because these Actions are true, and the truth of them shall be the destruction of their kingdom; Therefore deviliſhly and enviously they resist the will of God, Denying the power; Blaspheming his truth, and infecting his vessels.

' Devils. This Doctrine what it teacheth. In our Doctrine there is nothing taught but the state of the world, here, and to come. The propheſies of time, and the knitting up of God his mysteries, opened from time to time, to those that are his sanctified: as testimonies in the Creation and Operation of his Creatures; whereof this doctrine is a part. The Prophets in their times were not ignorant by revelation of the good will of their Creator. The Apostles in Christ his Kingdom, were made partakers of the mysteries to come, of the state of mans salvation; and ending of this combat, which is in that day, when all Creatures shall receive their reward. The Church of God is alwayes garnished and furnished with spiritual Revelations: as a Mansion or Dwelling-place of the Holy Ghost.

These latter dayes, and end of harvest must have also Labourers: For no Age passeth away, but through the hands of God, who maketh the end of his doings known to the World: To the end, the World may consent unto him in Glory. So that this Doctrine, is the mysteries of the word of God, sealed from the beginning, now delivered unto man, for that Reformation which must be in One unity established unto the end. The very part of that Circle, which comprehendeth the Mysteries of the Highest, in his Prophets, Apostles, and Ministers yet to come, which are alive, and shall bear witnesse of eternal Comfort.

Reformation. Note this Circle.

The fruit of our Doctrine is, that God should be praised. For of our selves we seek no glory: But we serve you to your comfort, teaching you the will of God, in the self same Christ, that was crucified; sold and died in the Patriarchs, and published to the World by his Disciples, and is now taught unto you, in the remission of sins .... greatest in the World, for the end of all things. The very key and entrance into the secret mysteries of God, (in respect of his determination on earth) bringing with it reward in the end of eternal glory, which is the greatest Treasure. Those that tempt thee, do it in respect of the fear they have of the power of God, springing in thee.

Let this suffice. The World is vain in respect of eternal joyes. Heaven and Earth passeth away: The reward of the Righteous endureth.

E. K.

Nal. ..... What do you see imperfect, in all that hath been delivered?

Δ.

Nal. ..... You have 49 Tables: In those Tables are contained the mystical and holy voices of the Angels: dignified: and in state disglorified and drent in confusion: which pierceth Heaven, and looketh into the Center of the Earth: the very language and speech of Children and Innocents, such as magnifie the name of God, and are pure.

Δ Infra, in libro Cracoviensi, Aprilis 21. dixit hanc linguam nunquam fuisse revelatam. Let these two places be reconciled. Wherein, the Apostles understood the diffuse sound of the World, imperfected for mans transgression. These Tables are to be written, not by man, but by the finger of her which is mother to Vertue [Δ. Madimi said her mother would write them, An. 1583.] Wherein the whole World, (to flesh incredible) all Creatures, and in all kinds, are numbred, in being, and multitude. The measure and proportion of that substance, which is Transitory, and shall wax old.

These things and mysteries are your parts, and portions sealed, as well by your own knowledge, as the fruit of your Intercession.

The

The knowledge of Gods Creatures.

Unto me are delivered five parts of a time: Wherein I will open, teach, and uncover the ſecrets of that ſpeech, that holy myſterie. To the intent the CABALA of NATURE, in voyce, ſubſtance of bodie, and meaſure in all parts may be known. For there is nothing ſecret, but it ſhall be revealed, and the ſon of GOD ſhall be known in POWER, and eſtabliſh a Kingdom with righteouſneſſe in the earth, and then cometh the end. Five parts of a time.

For the earth muſt come under ſubjection, and muſt be made pure. That death may be ſwallowed in his own Kingdom, and the enemy of righteouſneſſe finde no habitation. The word of God endureth for ever. His promiſes are juſt. His ſpirit is truth. His judgements inſcrutable. Himſelf Univerſall. He it is of whom you labour. The promiſes of God in this earthly Noble man ſhall be fulfilled. Salomon uſed the places of honour, and was exalted. Regnum Chriſti futurum in terra.

Thus ſayeth the Lord.

I have ſealed him againſt hatred; and have made his ſeat open. Let him therefore ariſe up, that the people may ſee him. For mortal men have places of honour, and in their own Courts, they come to be exalted: Who is he that made the earth, and dignified him with a living Soul? Even he it is that exalteth, and in whoſe hands the Kingdoms of the earth are ſetled.

Behold, the fifth time ſhall come, (in reſpect of the parts of time) and it is the day, that hath been promiſed. Then ſhall your eyes be open. Then ſhall you ſee.

A voyce. Stay there.....

Nal. I obey.

E. K. Now I ſee him paſſe away over the Chriſtalline Table, which is round like a Cart wheel, having a great knop in the middle.

Δ. As concerning our ordering of the Table, and the reſt of the furniture, we are deſirous to know, what is now to be done: ſeing, now we are come to the end of this firſt journey.

A voyce. Be it thy charge. I will put to my hand.

Δ. Mean you it to be my charge to order theſe things, as my imagination ſhall be inſtructed, by God his favour.

A voyce. It is ſo ſaid before.

Δ. Gloria, Honour, & gratiarum actio Deo omnipotenti Deo noſtro Domino & Patri Noſtro: nunc, & in ſempiterna ſeculorum ſæcula. Amen.

Tueſday, February 18. a Meredie hora 3. Lasko. Stylo veteri, aſt 28. ... Die ſtilo novo.

Δ. After ſome prayers made, E. K. ſaw (as he thought) Nalvage ſtanding at my left hand.

Δ. In nomine Jeſu Chriſti Redemptoris noſtri, Eſtis vos Nalvage?

Nal. Tu dicis.

E. K. The lower part of him is in a Cloud: but all his upper part is out, he hath a thing like a Pall hanging down behinde him from his head; He hath like a round . . . of boane in his hand, he ſeemeth to be as farre as the Church. And I ſee him, as well winking as directing my open ſight on him.

Nal. What is it you require?

Δ. The expoſition of the time delivered to you in five parts.

Nal. Read it. Δ. Filio præcedente.

Δ. I read, and when I came to the place, that death may be ſwallowed, &c. Nalvage ſaid as followeth.

Nal. That is the laſt Conqueſt. Go forward.

Δ. In reading?

Nal. I.

Δ. I read to the end.

Nal. The finger of the higheſt peruſeth nature amongſt you by himſelf, and in her own motion. Through which action things become, that were not (by Generation:) And in the ſame time vaniſh, as though they were not (by corruption.) A year it is; Wherein nature looketh with many eyes through..... dwelling places: unto ſome as a Nurſe: and to the reſt as a ſtep-mother. And ſo it is meant in the Scriptures. For, a time is an year, purpoſed by determination in the judgement of God; which is not known to man, how, or when it ſhall happen. Another year is a time, eſtabliſhed, and preſently delivered, as the preſent judgement of God. This is that I ſpeak of. A time is an year. The parts are known amongſt you.

E. K. I never heard any ſpeak ſo leiſurely.

Nal. Now look to your underſtanding. I ſpeak of two years. One appointed in the judgement and determination of God to come, and unknown to man. The other the time of the judgement of God (and before determined) now preſent: Notwithſtanding, before determined. There is difference between an year myſtically promiſed, and unknown: and the time that is myſtically promiſed and known. Annus myſticus ſumitur dupliciter: Unus, qui eſt Tempus cognitum Deo, & homini non revelatum: Tempus, hoc dicitur, apud Deum. Annum nos illud computamus. Aliud eſt præſinitum, cognitum Deo & Angelis, & revelatum homini: & Annus eſt præſens. This laſt is the year I ſpeak of.

E. K. He ſpeaketh a language to me unknown, and looketh ſomewhat on one ſide.

Δ. What are your parts of that year?

Nal. March, April, May, June, July, Auguſt. ..... In illo autem die, invenietis Chriſtum. The words of this Doctrine muſt agree, and times.

E. K When come you with the reſt of your words?

Nal. As it is given me, ſo I give it unto you.

A great unpatience.

[Δ He was thus interrupted by E. K.] --" Muſt end their courſe in the promiſe of God: " [In] Theſe weeks are the fruits of my labour to be known, For I muſt unfold unto you, and " open the ſecrets of this myſtical, and Delivered ſpeech: Whereby you may talk in mortal " ſounds with ſuch as are immortal: And you may truely know the nature, and uſe of God his " Creatures. Therefore, be diligent in hearing, and Receiving. For the courſe of man is con- " trary: But the determination of God moſt certain.

Cabaliſtical in reſpect of the receiving.

You are anſwered.

..... Mean you theſe Lenten weeks, or the weeks of all the fore-reherſed moneths?

..... Of my whole appointed time.

E. K. He ſtandeth higher up.

..... May we (with ut offence) require your.....at all times, as our caſe requireth?

Nal. Your labour is my readineſſe.

..... You ſee I have an Ague: What is your counſel therein?

Nal. I have to counſel you (from God.)

Δ. Bleſſed be the Fountain of counſel, and of all goodneſſe.

E. K. He ſheweth an houſe and ſix, or ſeven on the top of it with Torches: They are like ſhadows.

..... In the name of God what may this mean?

E. K. Theſe ſhadows go up and down the ſide of the houſe, thruſting their Torches into the ſides of it. The houſe is like this very houſe. They go round about the houſe. There are eight of them. They have claws like Eagles. When they ſit, they are like Apes. They ſet a fire on it, and it burneth mightily; Now your wife runneth out, and ſeemeth to leap over the Galery rayl, and to ly as dead. And now come you out of door, and the Children ſtand in the way toward the Church. And you come by the yern doors and kneel, and knock your hand on the earth. They take up your wife; her head waggleth this way and that way. You look up to heaven ſtill, and kneel upon one of your knees. The ſtone houſe quivereth and quaketh, and all the roof of the houſe falleth into the houſe, down upon the Cheſts. And one of theſe baggage things laugheth. The houſe burneth all off. Your wife is dead, all her face is battered. The right ſide of her face, her teeth and all is battered. She is bare-legged, ſhe hath a white Peticote on. Now the apparition is all gone.

Marie ſeemeth to be pulled out of a pool of water, half alive, and half dead, her hair hanging about her ears. They hold her up. Now they carry her out at the Gate. You ſeem to runne in the fields, and three, or four men after you. You run through waters. All diſappeareth, And now Nalvage appeareth again. He ſeemeth to have wept.

Δ.

Nal. ..... God

Nal. ..... God giveth you warning that you may eſchue them.

Δ. And how ſhall I eſchue them?

Nal. ..... Thus ſayeth the Lord. Behold, I have ſealed thee for my ſelf: for my people, and for my ſervant. Therefore ſhalt thou not periſh; No, not the leaſt hair of thy bodie. Fear not, be ſtrong in faith. For I come ſhortly. Hearken therefore to my voyce, I ſay, therefore hearken to my voyce: For the ſpirits of wickedneſſe, and confuſion have riſen up againſt thee: If therefore they prevail againſt my purpoſes; Then ſhall it be no world: Neither are there any heavens. But, this place is not for thee; yet, if thou wilt, be it unto thee. I will ſeal deſtruction, both for a time and for ever. Be mighty therefore in me.. All the earth rageth in wickedneſſe. And ſinne ſmelleth thee ready now to creep out of his hole. If thou move thy ſeat, it ſhall be more acceptable. For, even this year ſhalt thou ſee the beginning of many troubles: And the entrance of this LASKO, into the bloudy ſervice of the world.

E. K. He ſeemeth to ſpit fire, and ſo vaniſh away.

O Jeſu Chriſt, we have committed our ſelves into thy hand; and do ſubmit our wills to thy government. What ſhould this mean of terrible deſtruction threatned to my wife and maiden? And as it were frenzie, to light on me for ſorrow. Theſe things cannot well agree with our former aſſured protection.

E. K. I ſee a little wench on the bench, all in white, ſhe ſayeth.

Mad. Sir, will it pleaſe you to hear me?

Δ. The verity is moſt acceptable to me alwayes.

Mad. ..... You will not be deſtitute of an houſe. Will you believe me; For I am your true friend MADIMI. Here ſhall be the end of your turmoil. Be of good cheare.

Δ. By Auguſt next?

Mad. ..... Yea ... Next.

Δ. Perhaps my Lord his furniture of money will not be ſuch, as to ſerve for our carriage anew, &c. Beſides that, I would wiſh Keſmark to be redeemed, before he ſhould come to Cracovia: Perhaps then with the people, his credit would be greater.

Mad. ..... Thoſe that become Kings, care nothing for Farm-houſes.

Δ. I would that needleſſe coſt, here beſtowed, had been ſaved: or that you had told us this ſooner.

Mad. ..... Silence now, is my beſt anſwer.

Δ. Do you know, (O Lord, what ſay I?) Have we had any name of NALVAGE, heretofore in our Tables or Books expreſſed?

Mad. ..... What have you written, that have you written. He is a near kinſman to my Mother. We call him, with us, Fuga terreſtrium.

Δ. We beſeech God, that all intermedling, and ſaucineſſe of the wicked in theſe Actions may ceaſe. You know how one clawed him, here, on the head, as with Eagles claws.

E. K. She is bigger than she was.

Mad. ..... I am a little grown.

Δ. As concerning a medicine for my Ague, I would gladly . . . And as concerning the wife of our dear friend, the Lor . . .

Mad. ..... I pray you, bear with me at this time: I am as willing to answer you (when light cometh again) as you to ask me. You may consider of many things, I can answer them briefly. Such blessing as my Mother bestoweth on me, such I give you.

Saturday, Februarii 22. 1584. ante meridiem. Lasko. [Martii 3. Stylo novo.

Δ. The questions needful to be required of Madimi.

1. Good counsel for my health recovering, and confirming.

2. If the Pedestal (for the holy Table) being here made, shall be carryed with us to Cracow, rather than to make a new there: both to save time, and to have our doings the more secret?

3. What is your knowledge and judgement of A. L. his wife, in respect of her life past, present, and to come; for we doubt she is not our sound friend?

4. It is our very earnest desire, that the Danish Treasurer in England, in the ten places, (seised on by E. K.) might be brought hither, very speedily: whereby A. L. might redeem Keysmark and Lasko lands, morgaged: and also pay his debts in Cracow, and about Cracow.

For, else, neither can he come with any credit, to Cracow, (as he is willed) neither can he come to us, there, so commodiously, and oft, as our conferences may be requisit. And thirdly, the day of Keysmark forfeiting (without the Emperour his favourable help) draweth nigh: as in April at St. George his Day next.

Δ. And by your speech of England, you give me occasion to enquire whether her Majesty doth cause my rents to be received, by my Deputy assigned or no?

Whether her Majesty, or the Council, do intend to send for me again, into England or no?

And as concerning the red p . . . . which E. K. found with the book in England, what it is: And what is the best use of it, and how that use is to be practised or performed?

Δ. after these Questions written, and a little our praying to God for his light, verity, and help, and to send Madami, according as she willed me to note many things, for that she could answer them briefly: we used silence a while; . . . ath she appeared on my right hand between me and E. K.

..... Blessed be his name that in truth, and for the truth, sendeth his Ministers to instruct them that love Truth. .... Even so ..... Be not pierced too much with sight of me. [to E. K. for he looked mervallously earnestly on her.]

E. K. She seemeth more bright than she was, And to . . . and to stand in a more bright place.

Mad. ..... All honour be to him that liveth in Heaven and in Earth, and is mighty in all places. Amen.

1. ..... Your health.

E. K. Now she is gone to the place on the Cushions on the bench, where she stood yesterday. She doth now as young children do, playing with her coats;

coats; and at length ſitteth down on the Cuſhions.

Mad. ..... Even as ſpiritual and dignified illuminations, from aſcenſion, and by deſcending, work the will of God, determined in all Creatures, diverſly, according to the meaſured purpoſe of the Higheſt, in diſperſing his will upon and into every one, particularly; whereby ſome become wiſe, one in this, another in that degree; other ſome mighty in works, whereby health and help, comfort and joy, is given to the faithful: Even ſo, aſcending, doth Hell infect, ſometime with error, and ſometime with infirmities: So that from Heaven ſpringeth health, from below infirmities of body and ſoul. Where'by we find two immediate powers, bringing forth two properties, The one Comfort, with Joy; The other Infection with ſorrow.

Two immediate powers.

But this may be objected: Hath it not been ſeen, that the wicked cure diſeaſes? and reſtore health? Whatſoever is of death, is ſorrow; which is the ground of ſpiritual and b dily infection ſo that evil cannot work good. How can it therefore be that the dead revive, or reſtore health? The cure therefore of all ſpiritual infection (I mean the infections of ſuch, as are ſpiritual is in reſpect of his weakneſſe, and not of his ſtrength; Becauſe Satan infecting, may become weak (whereby he cannot prevail) and ſo give health, by reaſon of weakneſſe: Otherwiſe, with power, bringing death all manner of wayes.

△. E. K. thought a thing, whereunto ſhe anſwered. . and he ſaid . . . my thought: ſhe anſwered .... in my degree, thoughts .... known to me. I, than an .. .. ſhe is of God and in God, tha.... the thought of man.

E. K. She . . . I hear . . . a buz. . . eare.

..... Theſe two immediate and ſupernatural properties are ſo dignified in Creation and Determination, that the good Angels cannot cure, or help ſuch infirmities, as are brought in by the ſubtile infection of the wicked themſelves: Unleſſe in body the immediate power of the ſecond Perſon in Trinity be adjoyned in the aid and cure of the infected body; which is the true Phyſitian. And as he took upon him man his frailty, ſo he is chief Governour over the ſame in all degrees.

If the ſoul be infected, the Angels have no power to . . . it or make it clean: but by the will of the Father which is the Holy Ghoſt, deſcending through the Angels into the propriety of the Church: whereby the Diſeaſe is cured. Therefore, conſidering, thou art infected, not naturally, but by ſpiritual and wicked inflammation, ſtirring up thy body unto infection. We that are good Angels, cannot miniſter help unleſſe we feel the immediate power of him which is the ſecond, and the water of Life. Notwithſtanding, as we know how the infection grew, either locally or really: So can we find contrary places and things for comfort.

When Herod was infected by the Devil to kill very Chriſt the Son of God; His purpoſe was not altered by contradiction to the Devil, but by the foreknowledge of God, which appointed Egypt for his ſafeguard. So it is ſaid unto thee, It is thought good thou ſhouldſt reſt at CRACOVIA; for it is a place ſanctified, both in fore-determination, and now. Therefore uſe the Sabbath, and reſt from labour: Reap now, and eat the fruit of thy labour; Preſſe the Vine, that thou mayeſt drink, and be comforted: For the promiſes of God, are not in vain; Neither are the Heavens fruitleſſe. For as it is ſaid, Thou art not bound, but for the ſervice of God: Neither ſhalt thou be enriched by Princes: but ſhalt enrich them. Fleſh may ſpeak vainly, and be without comfort: But the promiſes of God, ceaſe not, neither become uncertain.

This year to come, is of great blood-ſhed: prepared to ſtop the mouth of the Earth, which gapeth for ſorrow. Therefore thou muſt be ſeparated, that the promiſes of God may be fulfilled: which cometh (not at your requeſt, but at his Determination) moſt abundantly.

Theſe Boords need not, The paviment ſhall ſerve; for it is neither the Earth, nor mans hands, (but the Finger of him that liveth,) that provoketh.

Behold .... That the power of God might be known, therefore he hath choſen thoſe that are not regarded, to the intent, it may be ſaid: Lo, This is of God. .. Haſt therefore, and ſtay not, for thy warning is great.

Thoſe that are wiſe (to ſin) in their fleſhly imaginations, are deceivers of themſelves: Which with us are not to be accuſed, but rather unknown. For the Kingdom of Heaven is divided from Hell: and thoſe that are of Hell, are unknown from us. For as . . . and . . ., naturally, know not, one another, ſuch, and ſo it is of us.

Sit tibi ſatis quod illam non novimus, neque virtutem ullam deſcendentem ab illa vidimus. Neither is the power of God in him, for his own ſake: but for the Spirit *that God hath planted in him. For we have known him, and again have forgotten him. And yet we underſtand him. But (I teach thee a Myſtery) by irradiation into him: and not by reflexion from himſelf. MENSIS MYSTICUS SAOBATICUS, Pars prima ejuſdem.

Tueſday morning, Anno 1584. Aprilis 10. ſtilo novo Gregoriano.
CRACOVIÆ.

AFter our divers prayers and conteſtation of our humility, obedience, and credit in theſe Actions: and being come now to Cracovia, the place ſanctified, whereunto we were willed to make haſt, &c. At lenth appeared Nalvage.

E K. He hath a Gown of white ſilk, with a Cape with three pendants with taſſels on the ends of them all green: it is fur, white and ſeemeth to ſhine, with a wavering glittering. On his head is nothing, he hath no berd. His phyſiognomy is like the picture of King Edward the ſixth; his hair hangeth down a quarter of the length of the Cap, ſomewhat curling, yellow. He hath a rod or wand in his hand, almoſt as big as my little finger: it is of Gold, and divided into three equal parts, with a brighter Gold than the reſt. He ſtandeth upon his round table of Chriſtal, or rather Mother of Pearl: There appear an infinite number of letters on the ſame, as thick as one can ſtand by another. the table is ſomewhat inclined on one ſide: he ſtandeth in the very middle; his garment covereth his feet: his breaſt ſeemeth ſmooth as the down remaining of a Swan, when all the feathers be off, ſo is his neck, &c. He is lean and long-viſaged.

Δ. The infinite mercies of God be on us: and the light of his countenance ſhine on us; and his favourable countenance be on us.

Nal. ..... Amen, unto him that is, and was, and liveth for ever.

E. K. He looketh earneſtly on his table, and turneth him to view it.

Nal. ..... All things are in order. Thus ſaith the Meſſenger of him which is the God of Wiſdom. Is your worthineſſe ſuch, as you can merit ſo great mercy? or are your veſſels cleanſed, and made apt to receive and hold the ſweet liquor, pure underſtanding it ſelf?

Δ.

Hath the Sun entred into your bowels, or have you taſted of the night-dew? Where are your wedding Garments; or after what ſort do you provide for your marriage? Unſeaſoned you are and withered fleſh, partakers of thoſe things which make you holy: through which partaking and the ſecret providence of him that is the Higheſt, you became dignified to the end, and are ſufficiently waſhed for the time of entrance. O ſtiff-necked people you deſerve nothing, and yet you have the hire of ſuch as labour. But, what, can corruption be partaker of thoſe things that are incorruptible? or man, which ſavoureth in himſelf, can you ſavour alſo of the Almighty.

O you weaklings, O you of no faith, O you Cankers of the earth; Where is the ſhame you have; Where are the tears you let fall; Where is the humility you are taught to? Nay you are ſuch as ſay in your hearts; if the Spring be fair, the Harveſt is like to be good: If theſe thing come to paſſe, it is the finger of the Lord. But ſuch is your imperfection, ſuch are the fruits of the fleſh, and the vanity of mortality.

Notwithſtanding, conſider that you are ſervants: Do therefore the will of your Maſter. You are become free: Be faithful and thankful to him that is the giver of liberty: Nay you are become children: partakers of the counſel of him that ſitteth and ſeeth, and ſaith I am. Therefore be ſober, faithful, and waver not, for the inheritance of your Father is great: your freedom is without recompence, and your Maſter the King of Juſtice.

Where are the people, or in what generation did they dwell, that hath been thus acquainted and drawn into familiarity with the true Servants and Angels of God? Unto whom have thoſe myſteries been opened. Is it not ſaid, of thoſe that are ſanctified, The Lord appeared unto them in a viſion: But he cometh to you when you are awake: Unto them he came unlooked for, unto you he cometh requeſted. Ariſe up therefore, and be not forgetful what the Lord hath done for you; for the things of this World are not, until they be done, neither is there any thing aſſured, but by the end.

The End maketh all.

It was ſaid unto Abraham, And I will deſtroy them. He believed it; but he asked not, when. Great is the reward of Faith; for it giveth ſtrength: But thoſe that are faithful are not of this world. Notwithſtanding, you have ſaid, (as it was ſaid by the Diſciples to Chriſt, when they were yet unpure, and blind) When ſhall theſe things come to paſſe? Lord, what is meant by this, or that? Simple Faith excelleth all Science. For, Heaven and Earth ſhall periſh in their corruption: But the voices of the Lord, much more his promiſes, are become Angels for ever: For as the Sun begetteth in the earth, and is father of many things that live in corruption and have end: So is the God of Heaven, the bringer forth and begetter of things celeſtial with life and for ever. For why, Dixit & factum eſt, Every Idea in eternity is become for ever, and what is thought, is become a living creature. I teach you a myſtery.

Faith.

When Faith.

Idea.

As the tree in ſappy life, watering her ſelf throughly, bringeth forth the ornaments of her own beauty: So the ſpiritual part of man being good and dignified, burniſheth himſelf, with his ſound and faithful thought: I mean the glory and ſhew of his own beauty; for the ſoul of man groweth, either with beauty to ſalvation, or with diſhonour and filthineſſe, to damnation.

I have done my Commandment. I have as a Schoolmaſter warned you, and as a friend counſelled you: I will alſo teach you.

Nal. ..... Audite mei fratres patienter.

The God had in his ſecret judgement reſerved in his Almighty boſom, the image and form of all things, univerſally, looked down upon the Earth; for he ſaid, Let us now go down among the ſons of men: He ſaw that all things grew contrary to their creation and nature; either keeping their dignities and ſecret vertues ſhut up in obſcurity, or elſe raſhly periſhing, through the imbecility and frowardneſſe of ignorance: So that it was ſaid, Behold, I delight not in the World: The Elements are defiled, the ſons of men wicked, their bodies become dunghills, and the inward parts (the ſecret chambers of their hearts) the dens and dungeons of the Devil: Therefore I will draw my ſpirit from amongſt them and they ſhall become more drunken, and their ignorance ſuch as never was: No, not ſince the fall of heaven.

Antichriſtus. For, lo, the time is come, And he that is the Son of Unrighteouſneſſe, is and liveth: Unto him ſhall there be given ſtrength and power: and the Kings of the Earth ſhall become mad: yea, exceeding mad; yea even in the third mind: yea, and that in the deſires of their own imaginations; and I will build my Temple in the Woods, yea even in the Deſert places; and I will become become a Serpent in the wilderness: for I have tucked up my garments and am fled away, and She shall mourn on the Mountains without comfort. in the wilderness.

Lo, the Thunder spake, and the earth became misty, and full of fogge, that the Son of man might sleep in his own confusion. The second Thunder spake, and there arose Spirits, such as are for South-sayers, Witches, Charmers, and Seducers: and they are entred into the holy places, and have taken up their seats in mine. Woe be unto the earth therefore: For, it is corrupted. Woe unto the earth, for she is surrendred to her adversary: Woe be unto the earth, she is delivered into the hands of her enemy. Yea, Woe be unto the seas of men, for their vessels are poysoned. But even then said the Lord. I, I will be known in the wilderness, and will Triumph in my weakness.

And lo, he called you, and you became drunken, and filled with the spirit of God: And it was said Descend, for he calleth, and hath called: and Raphael that brought up the prayers descended: and he was full with the power, & spirit of God: and it became a Doctrine, such was never from the beginning: Not painted, or carved: filed, or imagined by man, or according to their imaginations, which are of flesh: but simple, plain, full of strength, and the power of the holy Ghost: which Doctrine began, as man did, nakedly from the earth: but yet, the image of perfection. This self-same Art is it, which is delivered unto you an infallible Doctrine, containing in it the waters, which runne through many Gates: even above the Gate of Innocency, wherein you are taught to finde out the Dignity and Corruption of nature: also made partakers of the secret Judgements of the Almighty to be made manifest, and to be put in execution. Which knowledge in you is to be made perfect. two wayes, by power, mediate, and immediate. Immediately from God, in respect of his will, and secret Judgements, as unto the Apostles. By means and tradition, as from us, opening the substance and body of nature, according to our own image, which is the thing I have now in hand. I am therefore to instruct and inform you, according to your Doctrine delivered, which is contained in 49 Tables. In 49 voyces, or callings: which are the Natural Keyes to put those, not 49 but 48. (for One is not to be opened) Gates of understanding, whereby you shall have knowledge to move every Gate, and to call out as many as you please, or shall be thought necessary, which can very well, rightly, & wisely, open unto you the secrets of their Cities, & make you understand perfectly the contained in the Tables. Through which knowledge you shall easily be able to judge, not as the world doth, but perfectly of the world, and of all things contained within the Compasse of Nature. and of all things which are subject to an end. Raphael. This Doctrine. 49 Keyes, or calls, and their use.

But behold, this charge of mine is tied unto time: Therefore be diligent to learn, diligent to hear, and that with patience: For it is neither a free School, nor a School of continuance. For as my power is not given unto me beyond the first day of August next, so have you no strength to learn after, becaufe I am the staff of your Doctrine. Note. take time while time is, for time will away. A guft next.

Nal. ..... I am for the comfort of the world, and not for the hindrance: Thus sayeth the Lord To them that have Harvest let them reap, and unto such as have labour let them work. As for me, I am tied to time, and am ready at all times: For I measure not your night, nor day.

A. Thanks be unto the highest

Nal..... Cease now with me, for no more descendeth.

Soli Deo Honor & Gloria.

After-noon, the same Thursday. .... After some short Ejaculations of prayers to God, there appeared a great black mainy Dogge: with whom I would have nothing to do, but expect Nalvage. He said, that he was Nalvage. We rebuked him as an Hell-hound. At length he departed, and Nalvage appeared; but brighter then to day. An illuding wicked spirit.

Nal..... Have you those things I told you of to day?

A. We have them in record and minde.

Nal..... Read them.....

A. I did read them.

E. K. He laugheth, ha ha, ha, &c. a great laughter: He hath also a Table, but seemeth not to be like the former Table of Nalvage. There are ten, or eleven divisions in this Table, as was not in the former Table.

A. If thou art Nalvage, proceed in the Doctrine of wisdom, if thou art not Nalvage, depart in the name of Jesus.

..... I have free will, and therefore I will be here.

A. Now I doubt nothing, but thou art a deceiver. [Audite:] The ignorance of the wicked becometh dust: which shewing it self is swept out of doors, and thrown on the Dung-hills. A voyce on the one side.

E. K. Now appeareth one like unto Nalvage.

Nal..... Even so is it of the [ ] for thou hast opened thy blasphemy: and being discovered, art become more accursed: Therefore since thou art accursed, thou art not dignified; but become a Vessel of iniquity: And therefore hast no free-will. For, free-will either is, or is in state to be dignified. Therefore, as dust I wipe thee out: and cast thee into that Lunghill, which is the place of the greatest woe: the Lunghill, and the reward of the unrighteous. And, because Free will.

thou

thou hast thrust thy self into the Judgements of the Lord : and hast heard the secrets of the Almighty : Therefore I seal thee tanquam truncus in Infernum.

E. K. He striketh him with an yern, like a pair of tongs; in form of a Mould to cast Pellets in : griping his brain and underchaps, and so he fell down and disappeared : and in his place came Nalvage.

E. K. Nalvage maketh curse toward the four quarters of the world.

Nal..... My Us is as good as thy Um.

E. K. In his heart thought that it might be, that now one Devil mastered another, and thereupon said Um.

E. K. He is now accounting again on his Table as he did before.

Nal. .... Unto this Doctrine belongeth the perfect knowledge, and remembrance of the mysticall Creatures. How therefore shall I inform you, which know them not ?

Δ. Mean you as Babyon Bobovel, &c.

Δ. You mean the mystical Letters, wherein the holy book is promised to be written : and if the book be so written and laid open before us, and then you will from Letter to Letter point, and we to record your instructions : Then I trust we shall sufficiently understand, and learn your instructions.

Nal. .... Also in receiving of the calls, this is to be noted : that they are to be uttered of me, backward : and of you, in practise, forward.

E. K. They kneel, as though they were in confession one to another, and .... about half a quarter of an hour.

Gabr. .....) after me.

Prayer.

O beginning and fountain of all wisdom, gird up thy loines in mercy, and shadow our weakness; be merciful unto us, and forgive us our trespasses: for those that rise up saying there is no God, have risen up against us, saying, Let us confound them: Our strength is not, neither are our bones full of marrow. Help therefore O eternal God of mercy: help therefore O eternal God of salvation: help therefore O eternal God of peace and comfort. Who is like unto thee in altars of incense? before whom the Quire of Heaven sing, O Mappa la man hallelujah: Visit us O God with a comprehending fire, brighter than the Stars in the fourth heaven. Be merciful unto us, and continue with us; for thou art Almighty: To whom all things of thy breasts in Heaven and Earth, sing glory praise and honour, Saying, Come, Come, Lord for thy mercy sake. Say so unto God kneeling.

△. I repeated it, kneeling, and E. K. likewise kneeling.

E. K. They both kneel down again, and put their foreheads together: Gabriel seemeth to sit in a chair on the one side of Nalvage about 30 yards off, on Nalvage his left hand. Nalvage standeth.

Gabr. ... standing said.

..... Thus saith the Lord, Who is he, that dare resist invincible strength: Seale up the East, seale up the South, Seale up the West: and unto the North put three Seales.

E. K. Now sitteth Nalvage in a Chair aside from his round Table, the Table being somewhat before him.

Nal. ..... Name that I point to. [To E. K. he said so, as concerning the Letters.

E. K. He flung like a thin brightness out of the Stone upon E. K. he hath his rod, which he took out of his own mouth.

E. K. He smit the round Table with his rod; and it whirled about with a great swiftness. Now that which before seemed to be a circular and plain form, appeareth to be a Globe and round Ball; corporal, when it turneth.

Note theſe three degrees.

Be you therefore diligent that you may enter in, not as ſpoilers, but as ſuch as deſerve intertainment in the name, and through the power of the Higheſt. For great are the mercies of God unto ſuch as have faith. This is therefore the key of the firſt ſeven, according to the proportion of the firſt Creation. No more for this time.

Faith.

A key of the firſt ſeven.

A ſign alwayes to make an end.

A ſign to make an end.

E. K. He drew a Curtain before the Stone, of white colour.

The ſame Saturday, after Noon, hora 3 ½ 4.

The white Curtain remained about half an hour after my prayer to God, and ſome invitation to Gabriel and Nalvage, at length the Curtain quaked as though wind blew it.

E K. Me thinketh that I hear a ſtir within the Stone. At length they appeared.

E. K. They have very eyes which twinkle as other mens eyes do, and * therefore I ſee them with my external eye, not within my imagination, as....

* I had diſcourſed ſomewhat with E. K. of the manner of skrimges.

Gabr. ..... as I think.

..... There are two kind of viſions, the one by infuſion of will and deſcending, the other by infuſion by permiſſion and aſcending. The firſt is the image of the Will of God deſcending into the body, and adjoyned to the ſoul of man, whoſe nature is to diſtinguiſh things of his own likeneſſe, but ſhut up in priſon in the body, wanteth that power; and therefore being illuminated by ſpiritual preſence, inwardly, ſeeth now in part, as he ſhall hereafter do in the whole.

E.K. he ſpeaketh hollowly.

But note, that every viſion is according to the ſoul of man in power: and ſo is received of him that ſeeth. The boy of man feeleth nothing ſpiritual until he be of incorruption: Therefore uſeth no ſenſe in and illumination. The other is to be found out by his contrary.

E. K. Here is a Devil that derideth theſe inſtructions, and ſaith, you may know his vertue by his wiſdom: he never went to School.

He.

Gabr. ....

Gab. ..... I know what he is: Power is given to me to resist him, but not to touch him. He hath ascended, and begotten him a son, wherein the people of the earth shall be accursed. As those that are in prison shut up from light, and the use of the day comprehend not any thing, but that which entreth unto them by permission, or free will, so is the Soul of man shut up from all light, except that which entreth by the will, or sufferance of the highest. Note. As Paul Antichristi.

But as obedience is the tryal of dignification, so are the Ceremonies appointed by God, the witnesses of justification. For he that violated the outward Law was accursed: But the very end of Justice to salvation is the obedience, and submission of the Soul. How can it be that the earth and elements shall bear witnesse against man in the day of Judgement, but in the perverse use of them, contrary to God his Commandments. He is a slow School-master, and of small understanding, The wicked spirit said.

Gab. ..... Cease, for the conflict is great, and must have judgement of the Lord.

Δ. Sall I joyn my prayers with yours to our God, to drive away this wicked scorner, and contemner of your ministery?

Gab. ..... Not so, you know not the secret judgements of the Lord herein. The white Curtain was drawn.

Δ. Deo Nostro soli Omnipotenti sit omnis Laus, Honor, Gloria, & imperium in secula seculorum. Amen.

Sonday, Aprilis 15. Mane Hor. 7½.

After a few prayers necessary, and invitation to Gabriel and Nalvage for their instructions.

..... Our instructions shall grow most plentifully amongst you. But give place to time, for this is the voyce of the highest. Be holy and righteous in the works of your hands, and keep alwayes the Sabbath of your Redeemer hereafter: For even yet, the Serpent is amongst us. For even yet the Serpent is amongst my holy ones, and endeavoureth to cut you asunder. Therefore I say be holy even in the works of your hands, for he thinketh to prevail against you: But let your houses be swept clean, that when the spy entreth, he finde nothing to feed on. A voyce out of the stone. Sabaoth. The Serpent laboureth to part us asunder and hopeth to prevail.

Δ. We ceased and gave our selves to the Sabbath: considering, intending hence foreward to visit the Church and Assembly, to pray and meditate on God his service.

Solus Jesus Christus est Triumphator contra mortem & Diabolum, Dominus Noster & Deus Noster. Amen.

Monday, 15. Aprilis. Mane, hora 6. Cracoviæ.

Δ. After a short prayer to God for remission of sins, and sending of his graces, and his good Ministers assigned for our instructions: and for the avoiding away of the great enemy, &c. who held conflict against Gabriel, &c. The white Curtain appeared still drawn before in the stone for an hour.

E. K. There appeareth a face standing upon two Pillars, the Curtain yet remaining drawn: The face is fiery, and hath very great teeth. The Pillars are like Marble spotted gray, and the ground of the Pillars colour white. He said, the works of the highest are become a stumbling block, and have entred into the breasts of a woman, and he is become angry. But when she thinketh her self happy, she shall stumble, where she would not, and become sorrowfull without comfort.

E. K. This face and Pillars became a great water swelling upward, and so vanished away.

Δ. After about an hour, the Curtain was opened. All appeareth as before: Gabriel sitteth in his Chair, and Nalvage kneeleth.

Nal. ..... Pray, for the mercy of God.

Δ. I prayed divers prayers of God, & help against the wicked enemy, yet present, and molesting us as he was permitted.

Pray, for thou shalt not be heard? So, well said, fy upon him.

Δ. This Devil rayled against God.

Δ. Thy judgement light on this wicked Rebel for this blasphemy, O God.

Gab. ..... Move not, for presence of power is great.

Nal. ..... Number the words of the first Key.

Δ. I have counted them, and they seem to be 88.

Nal. ..... There are not so many.

87 △. Where have I miſreckoned, I pray you? Perhaps Poamalzod is to be but one word, and ſo are 87.

E. K. There is a great Croſſe over all the ſtone that is red: Not onely over to be impreſſed through the ſtone.

Nal. ..... Number the words in thy own language.

△. I have numbred them, and they ſeem to be 169.

△. While I numbred, the great red croſſe went away: and ſhortly after came in again into the ſtone as before.

Gab. ..... Move not, for the place is holy. You have Zurza ds Gono in the Call: the ſd is too much.

△. I will then put it out.

△. I finde Zurza Adna ds Gono.

Nal. ..... That ds is too much. I pray you, what is then the number of them, of you allowed?

Nal. ..... 86.

△. Making alſo Poamolzod one word? in that account?

Nal. ..... Set down.

Tuſ-

Tueſday, Aprilis 17. Cracoviæ.

After divers Ejaculations appropriate to the action, and the Curtain of white water yet remaining, E. K. thought divers times that he ſaw through the white Veil, and ſtone and all, nothing appearing therein. E. K. immediately fell into a new doubting of the verity of theſe actions, and ſaid he had a Viſion by a good Creature the laſt night, who ſaid theſe Creatures with which we dealt, would no more appear unto him. Hereupon he ſaid that both the laſt dayes skorner, and theſe our inſtructors were all Devils: and that he would no more fit to receive A.B.C. And ſo by Letters, any Doctrine of theirs, unleſſe they would otherwiſe expreſly, and lively deliver a plain rule thereof: With many other arguments to diſprove the verity of our Actions, whereupon he ſaid, that John your boy can well enough deliver you their Letters, and ſo you need not me, &c. I referred all to God, his will, and mercies: For, as I had at his hands onely, and by his order, and for his ſervice required wiſdom and true knowledge, ſo do I not doubt but God will, according to his accuſtomed goodneſſe, provide for me, that is beſt for my vocation here in earth, &c.

E. K. He roſe, and went away: and left me alone in my Study, appointed for theſe actions.

Deus in adjutorium meum intende, Domine ad adjuvandum me feſtina. Gloria Patri & Filio & Spiritui Sancto, ſicut erat in principio & nunc & ſemper & in ſeculs ſeculorum. Amen.

Thurſday, Circa 9.

As I was in my upper Study, and had gathered the holy words of the ſecond and third call, and had conferred them with their Engliſh delivered alſo unto us: E. K. came up the ſtairs, and ſo went into his Study, and came out again, and as he was going down the ſtaires I opened my Study door, and ſaluted him: He thereupon came up again, and came into my Study: And there I ſhewed him what I had done; and how I had ſome underſtanding of thoſe holy words, their ſignifications by reaſon of due applying the Engliſh to the word Chriſtus, intending thereby to have induced E. K. to like the better of the manner of our friends, due, and Methodical, proceeding with us, and told him that unleſſe of this ſtrange language I ſhould have theſe words delivered unto us Letter by Letter, we might erre both in Orthography, and alſo for want of the true pronunciation of the words, and diſtinctions of the points, we might more miſſe the effect expected: But as on Tueſday laſt, ſo now again he ſaid, our Teachers were deluders, and no good, or ſufficient Teachers, who had not in two years ſpace made us able to underſtand, or do ſomewhat: and that he could in two years have learned all the ſeven Liberal ſciences, if he had firſt learned Logick, &c. wherefore he would have no more to do with them any manner of way, wiſhed himſelf in England, and ſaid that if theſe books were his, that he would out of hand burn them, and that he had written to my Lord (by Pirmis) that he took our Teachers to be deceivers, and wicked, and no good Creatures of God, with many ſuch ſpeeches, and reaſons (as he thought) of force to diſwade himſelf from any more dealing with them: But willed me to uſe John my Boy as my Skryer, for that theſe ſpiritual Creatures were not bound unto him, &c. I anſwered unto all theſe parcels and reaſons, as time ſerved declaring my perfect truſt in God, that ſeeing I have many years deſired, and prayed for wiſdome (ſuch as theſe Actions import) at his hands, and by ſuch means as to his Divine Majeſty ſeemeth beſt, that he would not either miſlike my prayer, or abuſe my Conſtant hope in his goodneſſe and mercy: Therefore I concluded that I referred all to the merciſull will of God, and doubted nothing at the length to be ſatiſfied of my requeſt, and prayer made unto him. So he went from me this ſecond time.... God lighten his heart with knowledge of the truth, if it be his Divine will and pleaſure.

Note, Permis went on laſt Wedneſday morning, and had received our Letters after noon, on Tueſday laſt: But on Monday before the wicked Prince of darkneſſe did what he could to hinder our proceeding.

On Thurſday, Tabius (brother to my Lord Laſkie his wife) brought news to Cracovia, that my Lord Laſkie was coming to Cracovia ward. Emericus came from Keſmarke, and returned back again. Tabius rode from Cracovia toward Keſmark.

Saturday, Aprilis 21. à Meridie.

After our prayers made, appeared ſhortly Gabriel and Nalvage. E. K. propounded ſix queſtions orderly, which had bred great doubt in this fantaſie, and requeſted their anſwers.

Δ. He would have our ſpiritual friends to promiſe him the performance of the Prints.

Gab. ..... If we were Maſters of our own doings, we might well promiſe: But we are ſervants and do the will of our maſter. But let me ask thee one queſtion:

Doſt thou not think that all things are poſſible with God?

E. K. I do ſo, and I know ſo.

Gab. ..... Then is there no cauſe why thou ſhould diſtruſt. Let him that is a ſervant, and is commanded to go, go: and let not the earth riſe up, and ſtrive againſt the plowman. What ſin is it, if the creature riſeth up, and ſaith in his heart, Let the Lord make a Covenant with me, conſidering he is a bond man?

[E. K. They ſeem, both the voices at once, to come to my eare.]

None but he that becometh diſobedient, and refuſeth his Maſter.

Δ..... [Δ would do ſo.

Gab. Nal. ..... Theſe things, that is to ſay, this Doctrine, delivered by us, is of God, and of his mercies granted unto you, which cannot be in vain: and therefore to be performed; for the ſecret determinations of God are unknown unto us.

He never heard of any man that would ask, if God would perform his promiſes.

E. K. By Auguſt next?

What if it were a hundred Auguſts? you may be a weary before Auguſt next, as the Children of Iſrael were of their Manna.

E. K. Why joyn you numbers with theſe letters, and added none with thoſe of the former Table.

Numbers. Numbers Formales. Vulnus.

Brother, what is the cauſe that all the World is made by numbers? The Numbers we ſpeak of, are of reaſon and form, and not of merchants.

Δ. I beſeech you as concerning the powder whereof he thinketh that he hath made due aſſay of it, as if it ſhould have been the Philoſophers Stone, and ſo affirmed to be, by the miniſter of this action? I beſeech you ſo to anſwer, the thing, as his reaſon may be ſatisfied.

Δ. They gave no anſwer hereunto, but proceeded in the former matter of Numbers.

Note the property of this Method and Language.

Gab. ..... Every Letter ſignifieth the member of the ſubſtance whereof it ſpeaketh. Every word ſignifieth the quiddity of the ſubſtance. The Letters are ſeparated, and in confuſion: and therefore, are by numbers gathered together: which alſo gathered ſignifie a number: for as every greater containeth his leſſer, ſo are the ſecret and unknown forms of things knit up in their parents: Where being known in number, they are eaſily diſtinguiſhed, ſo that herein we teach places to be numbred: letters to be elected from the numbred, and proper words from the letters, ſignifying ſubſtantially the thing that is ſpoken of in the center of his Creator, whereby even as the minde of man moved at an ordered ſpeech, and is eaſily perſwaded in things that are true, ſo are the creatures of God ſtirred up in themſelves, when they hear the words wherewithal they were nurſed and brought forth: For nothing moveth, that is not perſwaded: neither can any thing be perſwaded that is unknown. The Creatures of God underſtand you not, you are not of their Cities: you are become enemies, becauſe you are ſeparated from him that Governeth the City by ignorance.

E. K. Whether is this Language known in any part of the World or no? if it be, where and to whom?

Adam.

Gab. ..... Man in his Creation, being made an Innocent, was alſo authoriſed and made partaker of the Power and Spirit of God: whereby he not onely did know all things under his Creation and ſpoke of them properly, naming them as they were: but alſo was partaker of our preſence and ſociety, yea a ſpeaker of the myſteries of God; yea, with God himſelf: ſo that in innocency the power of his partakers with God, and us his good Angles, was exalted, and ſo became holy in the ſight of God until that Coronzon (for ſo is the true name of that mighty Devil) envying his felicity, and perceiving that the ſubſtance of his leſſer part was frail and unperfect in reſpect of his pure Eſſe, began to aſſail him, and ſo prevailed: that offending ſo became accurſed in the ſight of God; and ſo loſt the Garden of felicity, the judgement of his underſtanding: but not utterly the favour of God, and was driven forth (as your Scriptures record) unto the Earth which was covered with brambles: where being as dumb, and not able to ſpeak, he began to learn of neceſſity the Language which thou, E. the intent that the proportions may agree in themselves: for it is written, Wisdom sitteth upon an Hill, and beholdeth the four Winds, and girdeth her self together as the brightnesse of the morning, which is visited with a few, and dwelleth alone as though she were a Widow.

Thus you see there, the Necessity of this Tongue: The Excellency of it, And the Cause why it is preferred before that which you call Hebrew: For it is written, Every lesse, consenteth to his greater. I trust this is sufficient.

E. K. As concerning the power, What is it?

Gab. ..... That it is, that it is, for the knowledge of it may lead you to error.

Δ. This answer offended greatly E. K. and thereupon he left off, and would receive no more at their hands. God make him patient, and a favourer of this Action as soon as it is needful that he should be.

Δ. Laudetur, magnificetur & extollatur nomen Jesu Christi in omne ævum. Amen.

Note on Tuesday after Noon, circa horam quartam, as we two sat together, E. K. said that he thought upon the matter, Et quod jam vellet duas horas mihi concedere singulis diebus ad recipienda illa, quæ illi tradere vellent. Ego autem illi & maximo Deo gratias egi, quia hanc esse mutationem dextræ excelsi factam verè judicavi; nam ante prandium rigidissimus erat in contraria opinione & sententia. 24. Aprilis, this after noon.

Wensday, Cracoviæ, Aprilis 25, Mane, hora 7.

The Vail appeared as at first almost. After half an hour Gabriel and Nalvage appeared, after my manifold prayers and discourses.

Δ. Two keyes we have received by the mercy of the Highest and your ministers, the rest we attend, according to the merciful will of the Highest.

Gab. ..... Move not from your places, for the place is holy.

Δ. Shew a token O Lord when thy will is, whereby to perswade thy merciful dealings with us, and the presence of thy faithful Ministers.

Δ. The frame of the Stone gave a crickling, no hand touching it, or otherwise any mortal or worldly thing moving it. I heard it very certainly, and to E. K. it seemed the found of a bunch of keyes, as if they had quickly been shaken and strongly. Note.

E. K. Gabriel sitteth, and Nalvage standeth.

Gab. ..... My Brethren hearken to my voice, for I am the true servant of the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, the dignity whereof is sufficient both for the verity of the Doctrine, and the confirmation, and perswasion of your mindes: for as God is the Father of the Faithful, so he sheweth himself unto the faithful: whereby you may prove the great comfort and consolation: that you may justly gather of the mercies of God, as touching your Election.

For at what time hath God appeared unto the unrighteous? or where do you read that ever he visited the reprobate? For the reprobate hath no visitation, but in the rod of Justice:

But you may rise up among your selves, saying lo, we are froward, we want faith. An objection.

True it is, the acts of faith, but not the roots of faith. But I say unto you, that the power of God in his Election, is the Basis of mans purity and acceptation. Answer.

But here there is a Caveat.

That man imagining his Predestination and perfect Election, justifieth not himself; for whersoever this is found, or this Doctrine preached amongst you, either simply in man, or publickly in Congregation, it is the sure sign and token of their perpetual ignorance and confusion: For the Will and Power of God belongeth not to our measure (for it was the cause of rebellion amongst us) much lesse among men, which are fighting yet for the Glory of their reward. Behold it is a sin in him that judgeth of his brothers Conscience; Much more is it a threefold error, to form the imaginations of sin, by whose imaginations they are.

Be not proud therefore of the gifts of God, but become humble; Neither justifie your self in respect that this is the word of God delivered unto you for your own selves: But the more you receive, be the more thankful; and the more you be in the strength of God, the more use you the pureness of humility.

Of whom it is said, Behold my Spirit hath entred, yea into my servants, and they are become humble and meek in the sight of men: But if we be the servants of the God of Abraham, then are we the spirits of truth and understanding, for our faith is dignified in the sight of the heavens, and we are become mighty in the power of the Almighty. Therefore ought we to be believed. Good Angels.

Now if you will confesse your selves to be the children of Abraham, then must you also accept of our Doctrine: For the meat whereby Abraham lived, is the same food we minister unto you: of whom it is said, He believed God, and it was counted unto him for righteousnesse. Even so do you, that that you also may be righteous, wherein do you differ from Abraham? Were you not barren? Who hath made you fruitfull?

A Covenant. Did God make a Covenant with Abraham? Even so he doth with you. Did the Lord in his Ministers appear unto him? so doth he, and will do unto you. Were the sins of Sodom (the fifth that perished) imported into Abrahams bosome, as the secret determination of the Lord? Are they not manifest unto you (even by the same God) as touching the time and corruption of this world? Doth he not up in the morning, and beheld the confusion, and headlong Ruines of the wicked? And shall you not also see the ruine of him that is the son of wickedness. Yes, unless you hinder your selves. For the promise of your God is without exception. Be mindful therefore of your selves, and consider your calling: That you may be still blessed in him that is the God of Abraham, your Father.

The Keyes. In these keyes which we deliver, are the mysteries and secret beings and effects of all things moving, and moved within the world.

Divine Operation. In this is the life of MOTION, in whom all tongues of the world are moved, for there is neither speech, nor silence that was or shall be to the end of the world, but they are all as plain in it, as in their own nakedness. Despise it not, therefore ....For unto them that are hungry, it is bread, unto the thirsty drink, and unto the naked clothing: A Serpent it is of many heads invincible. Believe therefore, that with him you way be wise: that your humility may be such, as may be numbred in the world. I have said. Nal. Move not, for the place is holy.

E. K. What mean you by that sentence or phrase.

Nal. It is of two parts, the first in respect of the spirit and presence of him that is holy: present and teaching. Secondly in respect of your consent, which is obedience, for obedience confirmeth the will of God in man, and the will of God confirmeth mans salvation; wherefore it is said, move not: and why? because the place is holy. Move neither in mind, neither in body, for obedience is the conclusion, and confirmation of your separations from the Devils. Sacrifice is accepted, but obedience is better. You are surely answered.

E. K. I like your answer well.

Oratione Dominica & aliis

Precibus ad Deum finitis, pro luce & veritate, in hanc formam, Omnipotens, sempiterne, verè & vive Deus noster, mitte nobis spiritum sanctum & veritatem tuam, ut sapienter, fideliter & constanter tibi serviamus, omnibus diebus vitæ nostræ. Amen.

The white Curtain, or veyle, appeared very long.

Δ. It fell so out by the wonderful providence of God, that E. K. and I quietly considered these actions, generally, & the contrary spirituall informations given to him, apart by himself; (& sometimes, while we were receiving our instructions, by our Schoolmasters) of which contrary power, some would rayle on God, and blaspheme his Majesty horribly, as may appear by the record of some late Actions; But this was our conclusion, that we both desired the verity, and that so, as best might please God, in the manner of coming by it.

Note, arbitrement of God required.

Δ. Be Judge, O Lord, between us, sending us the verity of the judgment, for the glory of thy name, for as much as they which impugne these proceedings, do (to E.K.) as it seems perfecter, and more wise and fruitful then our Schoolmasters, which I took to be the true and blessed Angels, &c.

E. K. Now is the note pluck't aside.

Δ. About an eleven of the Clock.

Δ. Blessed be the highest, who is Almighty.

14. Dies mensis Sab.

Gab. Danida, a mighty Prophet (not the least upon the earth) opened his mouth, and said, Behold, there shall a Whale come from the East, the fourteenth day of this Month, S A B.

E. K. They seem to speak both together.

Gab., Nal. And he entred into the field, and he met with a Merchant, and he said unto him, Thou art not for me: for thy intent dwelleth in the world. He went further, and, lo, there was a field of all kind of people, diversly recreating themselves in their own pleasures: and he yet said, Lo, these are not for me: and he went on; and, lo, he saw, A N D I T W A S A N A K E D M A N.

Gab. Nal. Mark, [to E.K.]

E. K. So I do.

Gab. Nal. In his hands were divers things; mosse, leaves, flowers, and herbs; and he wondred, saying, Why art thou naked? and he said, Lo, I am old, and am without Garments, and these are the things wherewithall I will be clothed. And the Prophet talked with him, and told him of the Whale.

E. K. They speak both together, that I cannot discern their voyce.

And he commanded him to kneel, and he lifted up his hands to heaven and prayed within himself; and he said also unto him, I am a Prophet, rise up, I will blesse thee in the name of my prophesie: and, lo, he took him by the hand, and went forward: and the way was rough, stony, and very sound: and, as they went, they found men, huge and big, monstrous: and the Prophet said, These please me not: and, as they talked on the way, they overtook a little child, And the Phrophet ask't him his name, and he answered, He was a man : and he said, Thou pleasest me, for thou mayest be a man.

A Hill.

There was a Hill, and they ascended, and, after a while, the child became weary, and sate down, saying with himself, This hill is troublesome, I am not able to keep company with them; and the Prophet, missing him, went back, and found him sitting. And he began to weep, saying, Whither will you lead me? But the Prophet comforted him, and said: Now thou seest, thou art not a man. And thus he did, ascending sundry times; and, lo, it was the top of the hill, and the Sun was hot and clear in the midst of the day. The Prophet said unto the child, look to the Centre of the Sun, and so he did, stedfastly.

Pen, Ink, & Paper.

And the Prophet said unto him, Now I have experience of thee, and I know thou wilt be a man; And he said unto him, that was naked, Here are Pen, Ink, and Paper.

Orient.

And lo thou hast one that can see far off, and he shewed him the Seas: saying, look unto the East: and he told him of the Whale, and of his coming, and of many mysteries.

But the man answered him, saying, I am naked, the ayre is sharp, and I have no food: How can can I therefore STAY so many dayes? and he said unto him, Sit down, and note, untill this Child become a man. Note untill.

Feed by comfort. For the Whale shall be thine, in whose belly is a Chest swallowed of great value, and they were contented. Behold, the people of the countrey were rich, and had conquered many Nations, so that he was a Monarch in the world; this Monarch was skilfull in all Sciences, and knew all things to come, and he called his Counsell together, and said unto them. Monarcha mundi & sui subditi.

Lo, thus it is; the cause why I have made those mighty banks, and have drawn my people from the lower places and the Sea, is for that, I fear a Woman: which, if he land in my Kingdomes, will be my destruction, and they told him what the Prophet had said, and he began to rage, and was puffed up with anger, and he opened his books THE SECOND TIME; and his eyes were opened, and he understood that the Prophet had ascended unto the top of the mountain, and had taken with him a naked man, and a child: and he said to his Ministers, Ascend, and bring me the child, for I will examine him, and know the Prophets meaning, and he apparelled him richly, and gave him much, but he prevailed not. And he said within himself, Ascend again they shall, and bring down that man.

And the servants ascended, and they found a Marble stone, and they were angry among themselves, saying, Is this a man? And lo they came unto the King, and said, Thou sendest us forth, but we found a mighty stone not able to be moved. Where is it therefore that thou wilt have us seek that man; But he said within himself, I will overcome the child, and he took him by the hand, and led him into his Orchard, where he opened unto him the secrets of his books, so that he became skilful. But, lo, the Prophet arose, and, as he walked towards the Hill, to comfort them whom he accounted his friends, he espied the child apparalled strangely, and in company with strangers: A marble stone. Strangers. and he opened his mouth, and began to propheſie, saying.

The King hath risen up against himself, for he hath CHOSEN THE CHOSEN, and hath opened the secrets of his own Kingdom to his destruction, and he stretched forth his hand, and said unto the child, Come with me: and he was unwilling, for his pleasures were great. And he lifted up his voyce and said: and he SWARE, And, lo, he came with him even unto the mountain: and the Prophet said unto him, When thou wast a child, I led thee, but now thou art become a man. stretch forth thy leggs, and labour, and he was unwilling.

Thus, whilst they were talking, they that waited upon him were at his feet armed, saying, come with us, for we are strong enough to deliver thee.

But the Prophet said unto them, GOE back and tell your King, that I found him on the way, and a stranger, and I had pity on him, and I took him for my own. Therefore strive not, for justice must prevail. And they began to stagger as drunkards, for they knew it was true. And the Prophet said, Now come with me, I will yet lead thee: and they ascended. The Prophet held up his hands, and SAID, I SEE, and behold, he that was naked arose: and said, I SEE ALSO.

And the Seas arose, and a great tempest, and broke down the banks: and entred on the earth, doing much harm to the people of that Kingdom: And, lo, there arose a wind the SECOND: and there were four beasts, such as are in the world, and were never known. And they came swimming, and so landed on the Hill. And the Prophet said, Arise, draw out your swords and kill them, and so they did. Maris inundatio cum tempestate. Ventus.

Behold, the blood of them vanished into aire, and the flesh became earth: The entrals of them wasted away with the waters: and their bones burned with a mighty fire. The second wind arose, and there were five Crowns: in the midst of them sate the Father of life, with a golden head: whose Feet bathed themselves in due and sweet Manna: and the Prophet said, Put forth your hands: and they did so: But lo they were afraid, for he that stood in the midst of the Crowns, was full of beauty. Ventus 2. Pater vitæ.

And the Prophet said, Fear not, come with me; and he opened unto them the secrets of the Crown, for in every one of them was a golden sentence. And the secrets of the Hill began to shake, and there was a great Earthquake. Mysteria 5 Coronarum.

The third wind arose: and the twelve Cedar trees that were never corrupted, came and planted themselves in twelve places of the Hill, and they brought forth strange fruits, not as Cedar trees do. Ventus 3.

The Prophet said, Gather, for I know you hunger, that you may be refreshed. While they thus talked, the fourth wind arose, and, behold, all the mountain was a flaming fire; and there were five Earthquakes, such as were not since the beginning of the world. Ventus 4. 5. Terræ motus.

The Prophet took them up, for they were become as dead. And suddenly The Firmament and the waters were joyned together, and the Whale CAME, like unto a legion of stormes: or as the bottomless Cave of the North when it is opened: and she was full of eyes of every side. The Whale came.

The Prophet said, Stand still, but they trembled. The waters sank, and fell suddenly away, so that the Whale lay upon the Hill, roaring like a Caves of Lions, and the Prophet took them by the hands, and led them to the Whales mouth, saying, Go in, but they trembled vehemently; He said unto them the second time, Go in: and they durst not. And he sware unto them, and they entred in, and he lifted up his voyce, and cried mightily, Come away, and, lo, they stood before him richer then an Emperours Throne, for unto him that was naked, were clothes given: unto him that was a child and a man, were 12 gates opened. And the Prophet cried mightily, and said, This Whale cannot die; and lifted up his voyce again and said: Within this Whale are many Chambers, and secret dwelling places, which I will divide betwixt you on the right side (unto the which was a child, and The Whales mouth.

The rest are not to be spoken:

This I take to notifie to us the judgement and arbitrement of God between us, in respect of our Petition to his Divine Majesty now made, whereby we may be assured what to judge of the Creatures which do deal with us in this action, and of the impugners, or diswaders of the credit of it. This I take to be sent and delivered unto us, of the meer mercy and providence Divine regarding his own glory, and the sincerity of my hope and confidence, which I put wholly in him, and alwayes will.

Monday Cracoviæ, Aprilis 30. Mane hora 6 ½.

Oratione Dominica finita, & precatiuncula pro prospero successu A. L. (jam apud Keismark, queritantis & petentis jus suum hereditarium, & aliis brevissimis ejaculationibus, pro prospero successu in hac actione tandem post semi horam apparuerunt.

E. K. Now they are here: and Gabriel is all full of glory, he seemeth to light all places.

Δ. O the mercies of God encreased, though his determination be all one

E. K. Now he is as he was before: and in the time of this his glorious apparition, Nalvage kneeled down, somewhat regarding towards Gabriel.

Gab. ..... Give unto him that hath his basket open: But from him that is not ready, depart.

B L R A H I C A V N H D L

E. K. There appear here, 7 other like Priests, all in white, having long hair hanging down behind: their white garments traile after them: having many pleits in them. Me think that I have seen one of them before, and upon that creature appeareth a B upon his cloathes, an L in another place, an R upon his other shoulder, another A upon his other shoulder. There is an H upon his breast; there is an I upon his head, and a C upon his side on his garment; and an A under his waist behind: The Letters seem to go up and down enterchangeably in places. There seemeth an V on him, also an N, a D.

Now cometh a tall man by, all in white, and a great white thing rowled about his neck, and coming down before like a tippet. They all in the Stone (being 9) kneel down unto him.

The tall man said ..... Take this Key, and power: ascend and fill thy vessel, for the River is not pure, and made clean.

E. K. Now he is gone (that said this) in form of a great Millstone of fire.

An Hill. E. K. Now they go up a Hill, with a great Tankard, as it were, of Bone transparent; Now he openeth one door, he, I mean, that had the Letters on his back.

1. There appeareth a Partridge, but it hath one leg like a Kite: This Partridge seemeth to sit on a green place under the gate, one leg is much longer than the other, being like a Kites leg. This Partridge seemeth to halt.

He biddeth one of his Company take it up. There goeth a bridge to the top of that Hill, all upon arches, and under it goeth a River.

He taketh the Partridge and pulleth all his feathers, and they fall into the River: He cutteth off the longer leg just to the length of the other. They about him cry, O just judgement.

Now he turneth him off over the Bridge, and he flyeth away, for the feathers of his wings were not pulled.

2. He goeth on, and cometh to another gate; and there the third man unlocketh it, as the second next him unlocked the first Gate; he himself having the Key first delivered him, as above is noted. There appeareth a thing like a Kite, all white, very great, it hath a fowl great head, he seemeth to be in a very pleasant Garden, and flyeth from place to place of it, and beateth down the Rose trees and other fruit trees. The Garden seemeth very delicate and pleasant. They go all into the Garden: and he saith, Thou art of the Wilderneſſe, thy feathers and carkase are not worthy the spoil of the Garden.

Now the Kite scratcheth and gaspeth at this man; but he taketh the Kite and cutteth her carkase in two equal parts, from the crown of his head, and throweth one half over one side of the Bridge, and the other half over the other side, and said, Fowles must be devoured of Fowles. The rest say, O justitia divina, clapping their hands over their heads.

3. Now

3. Now the next in order openeth another Gate (going up upon the ſame Bridge ſtill.) The reſt of the building from the Gate inward, ſeemeth very round and bright: yet there appear no windows in it. It is a frame, made as though the 7 Planets moved in it. The Moon ſeemeth to be New Moon.

There ſtandeth Armour, and this man putteth on, all white Harneſſe. He ſeemeth to kick down the Moon, and her frame or Orb; and ſeemeth to make powder of all; For there is no mercy here, ſaith he.

4. Now another of them goeth forward to another Gate, and openeth the Gate, and goeth in; there appear an infinite multitude of men.

There ſitteth a man cloathed like a Prieſt, having a great Crown on his head: here are many preaching in this place. He goeth to that Crowned Prieſt, and he taketh away divers patches of the Veſture which he had, and the patches ſeemed to be like Owls, and Apes, and ſuch like.

He ſaith ..... A King is a King, and a Prieſt is a Prieſt.

He taketh from the reſt their Keyes and Purſes, and giveth them a Staff and a Bottle in their hands. He goeth from them. He putteth all that he took from them in a houſe beſide the Gate, and writeth on the door, Cognoſcat quiſque ſuum. He wrote Cognoſcat.

Now they proceed to another Gate, and another of them opened that Gate. The Bridge continueth ſtill, aſcending upward. Now there appeareth (that Gate being opened) a marvellous great Wilderneſſe.

There cometh a great number of naked wilde men to him. He ſhaketh that Gate with his hands, and it falleth in pieces, one falleth on one ſide into the River, and the other falls on the other ſide into the River,

..... Let both theſe places be made one. Let the ſpoil of the firſt, be the comfort of the laſt: For from them that have ſhall be taken, and unto them that have not ſhall be given.

6. E. K. Now he goeth, and the laſt of his Company openeth another Gate; he is longer in opening of that Gate, than any of the reſt.

There appeareth a buſhy place, and there runneth a great River on the very top of the Hill, and a great Gate ſtandeth beyond the Hill, and a very rich Tower all of precious Stones, as it ſeemeth.

Here he filleth his Tankard in the River, and holdeth his hands up, and maketh ſhew as he would return.

He ſaid ..... This was my coming, and ſhould be my return.

E. K. Now they appear ſuddenly before the firſt Gate, and there the Principal man diggeth the earth, and putteth ſtones and brambles, and leaves aſide. There he taketh out a dead carkaſe, and bringeth it to a fire, and ſtroketh it: a very lean carkaſe it is; it ſeemeth to be a dead Lion; for it hath a long tail with a buſh at the end.

He ſaith ..... Come let us take him up, and comfort him; for it is in him.

Now the Lion ſeemeth to ſit up and lick himſelf, and to drink of the water, and to ſhake himſelf, and to roar. The man taketh of the ſegs

or or flags by, and ſtroketh the Lion as he would make his hair ſmooth.

Now the Lion is become fair, fat, and beautiful.

He ſaith ..... Tarry you here, till I bring you word again; for I muſt follow the Lion into the Wilderneſſe.

E. K. Now all they are gone, except the two our School-maſters, Gabriel and Nalvage.

Gab. ..... This is the Judgement of God this day. Happy is he that hath judgement to underſtand it.

Δ. Thou O Lord knoweſt the meaſure of our judgement: Give therefore light, underſtanding, and the grace to uſe thy gifts duely.

Gab. ..... Liſten unto my words, for they are a Commandment from above. Behold (ſaith he) I have deſcended to view the Earth, where I will dwell for ſeven dayes, and twice ſeven dayes: Therefore let them be dayes of reſt to you. But every ſeventh day, I will viſit you, as Now I do.

E. K. He ſpeaketh as if he ſpake out of a Trunck.

Δ. I underſtand that this reſt is, that every Monday, for three Mondayes elſe next after other, we ſhall await for our leſſons, as now we receive, and that we may all the reſt follow our affairs of ſtudy or houſhold matters.

Gal. ..... It is ſo, for one day ſhall be as a week: But thoſe dayes you muſt abſtain from all things that live upon the Earth.

Δ. You mean on theſe three Mondayes, enſueing next.

Gab. ..... You ſhall cover this Table with a new linnen cloth.

E. K. Pointing to the Table we ſat at.

Δ. Moſt willingly.

Gab. ..... Moreover a new Candleſticke, with a Taper burning.

Δ. Obediently (O Lord) it ſhall be done.

Gab. ..... And the Candleſticke ſhall be ſet on the midſt of the Table betwixt you two.

Note ..... That a day may become a week, and a week as many years.

Gab. ..... For I have put on my upper garment, and have prepared to enter, and it is ſhortly: and not yet.

E. K. Now he hath plucked the Curtain, as if he had pulled it round about the Stone; and it ſeemeth full of little ſparkes like Stars.

LIBRI

LIBRI MYSTICI APERTORII CRACOVIENSIS SABBATICI, An. 1584.

Saturday Cracoviæ, 7 Maii, Mane, hora 6.

After prayers, appeared Gabriel and Nalvage, with the Table, and Gabriel with his Dart in his hand. Moreover there appeared the like furniture of Table with a white Cloth, a Candleſtick, and Taper on it, with a Desk and Cuſhions (which I had cauſed to be made with red croſſes on them:) alſo E. K. himſelf and I appeared in the ſame Stone. In effect, all things as we had before us, after half a quarter of an hour, that ſhew of our furniture, and our ſelves, diſappeared.

E. K. Gabriel ſtandeth up, and ſpeaketh as followeth.

..... A mighty City was built on the top of a mountain, in the which dwelt many thouſands. Round about the Hil', ran a freſh River, which was the onely comfort of the Town: for, of it they drank, their wives, their children, their man-ſervants, their maid-ſervants, their camels, horſes, mules, and all the beaſts of their fields. The beginning of which River was a Spring, which was unknown to the City, by reaſon of the . . yth from whence it deſcended. It came to paſſe, that a Serpent groaned for her time, and lo, ſhe brought forth: and . . . were ſuch as her ſelf: and ſhe lifted up her head and leaned upon her twice writhen taile: and beheld the Sun ſtedfaſtly, (for her envy was toward that City) and ſhe ſaid within her ſelf: My children are yet young, the time grew, and they became big: and ſhe went unto the Spring, and ſmiled and ſaid with a laughing voice, The Earth is fal'en into thee, thou art choked: but hearken unto my voice, Thou ſhalt receive comfort: But ſhe would not. And ſhe lifted up her voice and roared; for ſhe was full of craft and deceit. And ſhe ſaid unto the ſhingles, through the which the Spring runs (or rather ſyeth) Thou art full of emptineſſe, and void places. Let my children (therefore) hide themſelves within thee for a ſeaſon: and they were contented; And ſhe departed willingly, and ſaith within her ſelf: Now I know I ſhall be Lady of the City.

And after a few years, the young Serpents became great; ſo that the one half of their bodies dwelt within the Shingles, the reſt troubled the paſſage of the Spring: So that the Spring groaned; for, the injury that was done againſt her, was great.

A great miſery, for the Hill is become deſolate without the water, and the City and the beaſts periſh for want of drink; for the people groan, and are full of ſorrow.

This City and Serpents are 60.. now, and judgement muſt be had, betwixt the Shingles and the Spring. for between lieth the life and death of the City.

Thus ſaith the Lord unto thee [pointing to E. K.] Gird up thy ſelf, and ſit down, Conſider both parts, and give judgement: for thy mouth ſhall this day be the judgement of the Lord.

E. K. Do you mean me?

E. K. As the Lord hath put the Authority of Judgement into my hands, ſo I beſeech him to give me wiſdom and underſtanding to judge right. And becauſe the judgement hereof is committed to me, I ſuſpect ſome other myſtery to lie hidden in this my judgement required: But if it ſhall pleaſe God that my friend here, Maſter Dee ſhall give me his adviſe, I ſhall think my ſelf well ſatisfied.

..... Conſider with your ſelf (ſaith the Lord) and give judgement againſt the Shingles, for the fault is plain. Conſider two points, the neceſſity of the Spring, that it muſt come that wayes: and ſecondly, the health of the City.

E. K. My judgement is that the Shingles and Serpent ſhould be removed away by an Earthquake from the place which they encumber and let, that there may be a fit new place, and courſe for that Spring, to the relief of that City as before it was.

..... Be it so as thou hast said, for it is a just judgement.

Now hearken, what the Lord saith. The people and City of the Hill, is the world, which are from time to time by the mercy and spring of Gods wisdom, relieved . . quenched : according to the extremity and necessity of their thirsting : But the people and City are such as are of the Temple and Church of God, which drink of his mercy to their comfort. The Camels and other beasts are the people of the Earth, which delight in sin, and in their own imagination, which also are relieved with those that are of the City : but the diversities of their bodies, doth cause the diversity of the ends of their comfort. The Hill wherein the Spring is, signifieth his Prophets, and such as are drunken in the Lord : Through whom, inwardly the mercies and will of God and of the Highest are open from time to time, according to the secret will and determination of such as are within the City of his Electi. But the frailties and affections of their flesh and outward man, are their fond imaginations and loose Shingles wherein the Serpent, the old Devil, hath harboured her children the spirits of darkness and deceit, which alwayes resist the Will of God, and are put between the mercies of God and his people. Moses, Daniel, Esdras, all the rest of the Prophets : Christ his twelve, Paul the Messenger of God, they did all hurt the Congregation of the Faithful in their flesh, until they gave sentence against themselves (as thou hast done) with amendment of life : for who is worthy to know the secrets of our God, but he that delighteth in righteousness, is obedient, full of faith, and the spirit of understanding ? Be it therefore unto thee as thou hast said. Let the Shingles and Serpents be separated, that the Fountain may feed as before. All the trash that thou hast of the wicked, burn it.

E. K. I do not know, they are wicked.

..... Their doings with thee, are the hindrance of the Will of God, and therefore they are wicked.

..... Thou hast given judgement against thy self : Take heed thou offend not thy own soul.

A. Send down thy Spirit O Lord, and illuminate E. K. his heart with perceiving of his wrong opinion, &c.

E. K. If Moses and Daniel were skilful in the Arts of the Egyptian Magicians, and were not thereby hindred for being the servants of God, Why may not I deal with these, without hindrance to the Will of God?

..... Darkness yeilded unto light : the Greater excluded the lesser. The more a man knoweth wickedness, the more he shall hate it, being called back. The more they knew the shadow, so much more they delighted in the body : For the doings of the Egyptians, seem, and are not so. The doings of the Lord are, and continue ; for as the Painter imitateth the gestures of man in his faculty, so doth the Devil the substances and things created and made by God.

Stand up and look into the whole World, into her youth, and middle age, for they are past. Where are the monuments that Satan hath builded ?

E. K. Hath Satan builded any monuments?

..... Yes : Hath he not builded him a Fort upon the whole Earth ? Hath he not the victory over the Saints ? Dwelleth he not in the Temple of the Highest ? Triumpheth he not in the Cities of the whole World ?

Yes. ..... But without comfort, are his victories : without pleasure his dwelling places. For he knoweth his time is at hand. He that now giveth freedom, shall become bound ; And unto whom the whole World is as a Garden, shall there be no one foot left. Therefore are all his pleasures vanity : all his Triumphs smoak, and his Authority, nothing indeed, but a meer shadow : For that that is not, cannot be ; where, it is said of the Lord, it shall not be. Neither can truth, light, or wisdom, ascend from the Earth, but descend from the Heavens.

Compare the Earth, (into the which the Devil is thrust as into his dwelling) with the Heavens, which are provided for the holy. Consider the pain of the one, and the pleasure of the other : The seat of Gods Justice, and Fountain of his Mercy : The Cave of Darkness, and the Diadem of Light. And then cry, wo, wo, wo, unto such as erre, and whose lives are but shadows : For their felicity is such, as from whence it came ; and their reward is all one, with the spirit and prince of Darkness.

Compare fond knowledge, with true wisdom, Thy spirits of lying with us, that are the voice of truth : The vanity that they lead thee into, and the reward of our message : And say within thy self, peccavi. Wilt thou be perswaded by experience ? Consider thy imprisonments, thy affliction and shame of body. Consider the love of a few, and envy of a multitude. Weigh with thy self the vanity of thy life ; Thy rash foot-steps, All that happned unto thee, by the society, and (as thou thinkest) comfort ; but indeed the stinging pricks of thy enemies

His life ned.

..... Since, we came into thee, (sent from the Lord, and calling thee, to God) thou hast been delivered from them ; from a place full of fornication, and the wrath of God : exalted to the skirts of worldly honour ; and hast been satisfied for the necessities of this World. Holy is the money that is gotten righteously ; but accursed are the evils that are reaped with wrong.

All

All which things thou haſt by us in bleſſedneſſe, and in the knowledge of the will of God, above all men. Beſides our continual preſence with thee, to the comfort of thy Soul. Even theſe things are of us, and of our God. Which ſware unto Abraham, and dwelleth in the Temple of righteouſneſſe. Now, therefore let experience be a Judge betwixt us and them.

But, this ſayeth the Lord. I deal with you as a Childe: But the veſſels that I muſt uſe, muſt be pure and clean. Pure veſſels.

A. Cleanſe thou us, (O Lord) Cor mundum Crea in nobis; Crea.

Gab. ..... They that are incredulous believe not the Lord, but drive away his ſpirit: But where a grain is, it becometh as a mountain. The Lord is upon the earth: Take heed thou ſweep thy houſe clean, for unto him that is naked, ſhall there be Cloathes given: But he that is covered already, ſhall be made bare. Incredul.

Conſider with thy ſelf: for the Lord ſpeaketh not once more, till thou haſt fulfilled thy own judgement.

E. K. I will be contented to bury them in the field, and not to uſe them, or come at them: and that I will ſwear upon the Bible to perform: and if they be earthly, I will commit them to the earth: and ſo ſeparate thoſe ſhingles from the place near the ſpring: and in this manner fulfill my own judgement: For, I will not be obſtinate, but commit all things to the end. His own judgement is to be fulfilled.

Becauſe thou art content to bury them; and withall, upon faith in the promiſes of God, to abjure them in ſimplicity of heart, and external uſe... ſimply, as a true meaning before the face of the higheſt: The Lord accepteth it, and it ſhall be ſufficient.

Further, thou haſt 27. Confirmations of ſin, and conſent with the Devil, which your intention calleth Characters, whereby thoſe ſeven and twenty, (like unto their mother) are become familiar and pleaſant with thee, they muſt be brought before the Lord: and offered into his hands. For ſo long as they are, the wicked alwayes vex thee: For the Obligation burnt, the condition is void. Theſe muſt be buried with the reſt. Characters.

[E. K. Which reſt?]

..... But muſt be brought, and burnt here before the preſence of God: That, the cauſe diminiſhed, the effect may periſh.

E. K. I will be contented to bury them likewiſe, beſeeching the Almighty to accept of my intent herein, as of the reſt before ſpecified.

..... He is contented; but let one be burnt. You may ſuffer one to teſtifie the diſcredit of the reſt. It is but according to the grounds of thy own Magick.

E. K. I do not underſtand your meaning herein.

Gab. .... Radius partis, may be ſicut totius Corporis.

E. K. I underſtand not that, alſo.

Gab. ..... Magick worketh effect in things abſent, that it doth in their parts, being preſent.

The wicked kill the body abſent, but the garment preſent: ſo are all of one confederacie, diſgraced by the confuſion of one. Thou art contented to bury them all, upon the confidence, and ſure hope of the promiſes of the God of light, and to bring one as a confirmation of thy promiſe to teſtifie thy obedience as concerning the whole: which one burnt and abjured, may be a teſtimony to the Angels, that thou art obedient for God his ſake, and for his teſtimony and truth. But this you ſhall burn with Brimſtone only. Whoſe aſhes ſhall be kept as a teſtimony, till the reſt be alſo conſumed. This you ſhall do the next Monday at the riſing of the Sun. That the number of the time may be of one bigneſſe. For, before Auguſt ſhall thoſe Keyes be delivered unto you: which give entrance, yea, even into the privy Chambers of wiſdom, whereof you ſhall have 14. the next Monday. And this dayes action is not the leaſt amongſt them. Glory be to God, and obedience unto man. △. I doubt that I miſheard ſomewhat. One burnt, and abjured obedience. ...ence.

E. K. The Curtain is drawn.

A. We are deſirous to know whether thus, this dayes action ſhall be finiſhed: and whether we ſhall faſt ſtill as was preſcribed.

Gab. ..... Detract not from the day, that, which is commanded.

A. We are very deſirous to underſtand of the preſent eſtate of the Lord Albert Laskie: for as much as we were willed to go with him, and he linked to us in ſome part of our actions: To underſtand of his ſtate, would be to our great comfort.

Gab. ..... It needeth not, for the world her ſelf is at hand.

A. Verily, I underſtand not that ſpeech: Is he coming back again? What, We are commanded we know: And further then our Commandment is errour. He is in his hand that knoweth how to uſe him.

E. K. I ſee a man climing over a Hedge, and as he clammereth over the ſtakes break, and he falleth down. Now he is going up between two Trees into a Medow-ward. Now he hath both the boughs in his hand, ſtanding ſtill on the ground. Now he goeth lower, there is a gap, and through that he is gone into the Medow ..... ſo it is of Laskie ..... ſaid a voyce.

△. This is dark: it may pleaſe you to give ſome light.

..... This is more then enough for the matter.

Ceaſe to ask theſe things here, where it is ſaid, no impure thing ſhould enter.

△. Gloria, laus & honor Deo Noſtro Omnipotenti, Patri, filio & ſpiritui Sancto, nunc & ſemper. Amen.

△. Note, at this preſent was one come, and in the houſe (of whom we underſtood not till he was gone:) whom the Lord A. Laskie had ſent to certifie us, that firſt he was in ſome cumber and hindrance. Secondly, how Fabius (his brother in Law) and another had given him counſel, very raſnly to proceed: But leaving that. Thirdly, by the gap and open way with eſtate of the Commons, or Citizens, by their great Zeal, and favour that he obtained his purpoſe. This (in effect) we underſtood at the Meſſager his return after noon. Which marvellous exactly did anſwer to the former ſhew.

May.

Remember that on Saturday after noon, the Chancelour came to Cracow, with 60 Coaches in his Company and train: he bringing in a cloſe Coach (covered with red) the Lord Samuel S. Boroskie Priſoner, whom he took on Friday night before, at his ſiſters houſe, being ſeparated from his Souldiers and ſervants, &c.

Saturday, 14 Maii, Mane hora 6 Fere. † Cracoviæ.

Orationem Dominicam fudimus, &c. Mitte lucem tuam & veritatem, O Deus, &c.

△. E. K. Said, he had done that with the traſh ſpecified, as he thought would be acceptable to the Lord: And as concerning one of the 27 Characters he had left it with me, ever ſince the laſt action, to be burnt at this dayes action, and it layready by me.

E. K. Our inſtructours appeared at the very firſt looking of E. K. into the ſhew-ſtone.

△. Will you that I ſhall now execute this burning of the Character here as a ſacrifice (to the higheſt) of our humility and obedience?

Gab. ..... Not as a ſacrifice, but as a victory.

△. Shall I then do it, I pray you? As with the conſent of my yoke-fellow, and ſo all one to be taken as his action.

..... He that doth righteouſly offereth up a ſacrifice.

Nal. ..... It is true, that he that is obedient, and doth well, is accepted with the Lord.

E. K. I did take ſacrifice to be onely with bloud.

Gab. ..... This is a ſacrifice, becauſe it is done righteouſly.

E. K. You ſaid, Not, as a ſacrifice, but as a victory.

Gab. ..... He that overcometh his enemy rejoyceth not for friendſhip ſake, but for victory. The friendſhip toward God is obedience. He that obeyeth God, is a friend unto himſelf. God needeth not the love, or friendſhip of man. Therefore you rejoyce with God, who overthrew them, and thereby comforted. For he that dwelleth in the Lord is comforted.

Thou openeſt thy mouth, and ſayeſt before the Lord. The ſpirit of God hath deſcended.

△. Gloria Patri, &c.

△. He noteth ſome ſecret diſcourſe, meditation, or prayer, and alſo action of E. K. as I conjecture.

And he hath entred into judgement with me, and I am condemned. But where Juſtice dwelleth, dwelleth alſo mercy. For, my Idolatry is forgotten before the Lord.

E. K. Have you committed Idolatry?

E. K.

△. He ſpeaketh in your behalf Maſter Kelly.

..... I will therefore open my mouth, ſaying, I have erred. I will open my mouth alſo, and confeſſe my ſins. And, I will vow unto the Lord againſt the wicked. And I will ſay unto the Lord. Lo, here are the ſpoils of the bloudy blaſphemy. Behold, O you Angels, a blaſphemy, and againſt the higheſt. Behold, the wickedneſs of Alcendam.

Gab. Art thou contented to consent hereunto?

E. K. What I have done with the rest, God, and they (if they be of God) know: upon the foresaid conditions I am contented to have this Character to be burnt. Let it be burnt.

Δ. I burnt it immediately, with the flame of brimstone, and brought the burnt black coal or cinder thereof to the Table, and laid it on a paper.

Now O Lord, darknesse is confounded, let thy light shine in us, and thy truth prevaile.

Gab. It is well. Δ. Blessed be the name of the highest: whose mercies are infinite, Oh, a sweet and comfortable sentence.

E. K. Now Nalvage turneth round, as he was wont.

Gab. Move not, for the place is holy.

E. K. Now Nalvage putteth down his rod to the Table, he maketh a crosse upon the Table reverently.

Nal. All things go forwards, Let us go F O R W A R D also. Δ. In the name of Jesus. Hor. 7.

Fleſh can never be throughly mortified but with death. Think not, that the Lord is as the Sun, that keepeth his continual watch through the heavens; which becauſe he is made for a time, is alſo tied to time.

He that ſitteth and judgeth, keepeth no courſe; but a continual performance of his long-before providence: For he that uſeth him otherwiſe, ſhall be rejected: becauſe his [Δ.] dwellings are not in the manſions of the faithful. Lift up your ears therefore; for thus ſaith the higheſt:

Who ſmiled at the ruin of Pharaoh? Who rooted the wicked out of their ſeates? and made them become vineyards for my people: yea the ſtiff-necked generation? Who threw down the Towers of Babylon, and the great Harlot? Who dwelt upon the Earth, and became fleſh, to pay for your wickedneſſe? Who tumbled the ſtone from the Well, that the Sheep might drink? Even he it is, that gave all theſe their times. He it is, that is as able to make you underſtand, as thoſe, that caſt into the waters, and ſaid, Let us draw up our fiſh: which alwayes dealeth with the weakeſt: To the intent he might prove himſelf the ſtrongeſt.

Δ. E. K. read this prayer devoutly, and I joyning my mind to his pronunciation thereof kneeled by.

This prayer was misswritten in this place place, it should have been written the 22 of May following.

Domine Jesu Christe, Deus salutarium nostrorum. Cujus nomen sit benedictum hodie & quotidie: qui ascendisti super Cælum Cæli, ad dextram Dei patris: denuo venturus ad judicandum in nubibus, cum potestate magna, & majestate mirabili, educ nos vinctos in peccatis in fortitudine justificationis tuæ: ut dealbemur per remissionem peccatorum super nivem; adeo ut beneplacitum sit tibi habitare in nobis, & nos in te. Amen.

Δ. Ex Psalterio post 67 Psalmum.

Tuesday Cracoviæ, Maii 22. 1584. in Whitson-week, Mane circa 7.

After our sitting, and some prayer used, appeared a very little Creature, on the Cushion, by the Stone: saying, Put out your Candle; for you shall have nothing to do, to day.

Illudet.

Δ. What is your name that we may alledge your message for our excuse: seeing we were bid yesterday to labour to day.

E. K. He is gone.

Δ. After that about half an hour, there appeared our Instructors, as before time.

Gab. ..... Move, move, move not, for the place is holy.

E. K. Gabriel standeth up, and after a while said.

Obedience. ..... The heavens are called righteous, because of their obedience. The earth accursed, because of her frowardnesse. Those therefore, that seek heavenly things, ought to be obedient; lest with their frowardnesse, they be consumed in the end, burnt to ashes with fire, as the Earth shall be for her unrighteousnesse.

Faith. Therefore, be you obedient, and full of Humility; using the instrument of righteousnesse, (which is faith) That you may be partakers of the celestial comforts; which are the hire of such as forsake their frowardness. It hath been said unto you, ... Measure not out Gods building. It hath been said unto you, ... Continue to the end. It hath been also told you, ... That the Determinations of God are not as yet established upon you.

* Vide 1. Reg. cap. 2. Fuit revelata determinatione Dei sepe in the Levit: Videetiam. Oseæ. xiiij. 3 Reg. m cap. 2. ut confirmet Dominus sermones suos, &c. &c.

For it is written, It may, again be * undetermined I speak this for your instruction: For many have the power of God, but not unto righteousnesse: as was evident amongst the Jews in the choice of their Kings. In the very house of God, amongst those that entred into the holy place. For, all that the Prophets annoynted were not good. Not, that they were evil in the time of their anointing, but because their In-unction, and the dignity of their office was defiled in them in the end, through their own frowardnesse. The High-priests also were chosen in righteousnesse, and by the spirit of God: but they became Rebels in the holy house: and such as of whom it is said, Altissimus autem fuit scandalum illis. Even so my brethren may it be with you.

Δ. Jesus defend us from that inconvenience.

For although, it hath pleased God, to shew himself unto you, yet are you not ashamed to say: If the harvest cometh not in, at the time appointed, I will become a runnagate.

For what? But Euge (my brethren) Hath the Lord need of you? It needeth not be told you; you know the contrary. Then it followeth, you have need of God. But for what? and why? That your souls may overcome this World, overcome the body, to the dignity of an Angel.

And because you are miserable, and turned out to the field, full of brambles and misery, leane, naked, and unarmed, to fight against him, that resisteth against the might of God. Consider these last two, and then answer your selves, for the rest.

Care. Promissi mei non immemor. I give you a short warning. God will fulfil his promises: And (as he hath said) by this August, you shall understand.

1. How to know and use God his Creatures, good and bad.

Note the second Instruction or Gift of the Highest. The Actions the greatest. 2. But when, and for what, is the gift *of the Highest, and shall be fulfilled in you (*If you will be obedient) when it pleaseth him: even with a sound from his own mouth, saying, Venite & audite.

For these Actions are twofold: Consider it, if you can: and they are the greatest, because they are the last, and contain all that hath been done before them. Which if you consider well, and to what you are called; you shall perceive, that the Judgements of God, are not a Tennis-ball.

Move not from place. Thus much I thought to warn you my brethren. Have a little patience for the Action. He that stirreth from his place shall find the reward of it.

Thursday Maii. 24.

Δ. Because E. K. came not, (according as it was bidden yesterday) to follow the Action : I went to his Study door, and knocked for him : And I requested him to come ; and he refused so to do, and gave me a short and resolute answer, That he would never more have to do with these Actions. I asked him the reason why : He would give none : But earnestly I pried to proceed. I told him that his words * yesternight (that he could not this day desire) did very much grieve me, &c. whereof he made small account. So I went into my study again, and committed the Cause to God.

* Those words he spake after the Action ended more than an hour in the Chamber before my Study of practice.

After half an hour and less, he came speedily out of his Study, and brought in his hand one Volume of Cornelius Agrippa his works, and in one Chapter of that Book he read the names of Countries and Provinces collected out of Ptolomeus (as the Author there noteth) Whereupon he inferred, that our spiritual Instructors were Coasters to give us a description of the World, taken out of other Books : and therefore he would have no more to do with them. I replied, and said, I am very glad that you have a Book of your own, wherein these Geographical names are expressed, such as (for the most part) our Instructors had delivered unto us :

us: and that, according to the Tenor and form of my requeſt to him, ſo to have them expreſſed: for our more perfect information, by thoſe known names; to underſtand thoſe 91 unknown and unheard of names, of ſeven letters every one: whereby they (our Inſtructors I mean) are very greatly to be thanked, and to be deemed (in all reaſonable mens judgements) moſt friendly, and far from coſenage, or abuſing of us: And farther I ſaid, that I my ſelf, had here ſet down on a paper, all the 91 names together orderly, as we received them, and that I had here brought the deſcription * Geographical of the whole earthly Globe: and alſo Pomponius Mela ſet forth in Engliſh with the Chartes thereunto belonging, fairly deſcribed by hand: To the intent he might ſee the verity of their words yeſterday delivered unto us: for the performance of my requeſt made to them, on Tueſday laſt in this form of words, as the Book hath it recorded thus;

91. Names of the world or earthly habitation.

* Gerardus Univerſal Chart of the World.

Δ. As you gave us a taſte, or warning of Italia and Britania, ſo, if it be thought good to you, we are deſirous to underſtand of the reſt, the Application to ſuch names as we underſtand.

Whereby you may perceive (ſaid I to E. K.) how your reaſon is marvellouſly confounded by your wilful phantaſie: For ſo much as, wherein you would find fault, in our ſpiritual Inſtructors doings, Therein they have done that which I requeſted them: as appeareth; and that to the intent, of known Countries we might underſtand which Angels had the government: for ſuch purpoſes, as occaſion might offer or require our practices to be tryed in.

This (quoth I) is to groſſe your error, and to wilful your wrangling: But I do in narrower points peruſe and conſider their words and doings; In which though ſometimes my writings (after your declaration) hath been amended by them, yet the occaſion of miſwritting for the moſt part, hath been either in your miſreporting what you ſaw and heard, or in my wrong hearing, or writing: and ſometime by the ſpiritual preſent correcting of my writing, and ſometime longer after, &c.

But for all this, E. K. remained of his wilful intent; and ſo departed to his Study again: And I committed God his Cauſe, into his own hands, care and ordering, as may be beſt for his honour and glory. So be it.

GOD. Gabr..... God is a spirit essential and in himself: Essential and working by himself: Essential in all works, and dignifying them by himself: So that the beginning and ending of all things, that are already, or are in him already, and to come, is placed in the fountain, and well-spring of all life, comfort, and encrease: Whereby we see, that the heavens and the mighty powers therein from the highest unto the lowest, things that shall have an end, and the earth with all that she bringeth forth; yea, the lower parts (though after another manner, and by another course) do all hang, and are established, in and upon the unspeakable power in the providence of him. How, therefore can the Heavens run awry? Or the earth, (for the Elects sake) want a comforter? Or the lower places look for comfort? If it be so (therefore) that the heavens cannot erre: Or if the power of God be so mighty, and so full of prevailing; If in the house of light there be no darknesse, or from the Heavens can descend no wickednesse. (And why? because they are dignified in the power of God.) What is he that should live, and distrust the Lord? But herein, The power and quality of the

And to vex the Lord himſelf: which cannot be vexed at the wickedneſſe of the Devil. Even for this cauſe, ſayeth the Lord unto you: How long will you wallow in wickedneſſe? How long will you be drunken with folly? How long will you riſe up againſt the Lord and againſt me? * Saying, And if this be* the power of God, Are theſe the Meſſagers of the higheſt? Is this the will of God? Or can it be, that he hath care of the earth? But theſe are the blaſphemies of your mouth. But I ſee, I muſt differre my ſelf for a time, and muſt raiſe up a Table where there ſhall eat more worthy. Conſider what it is to deal with Devils: Is it not to take part with Rebels? Is it not to be Traitors againſt the annointed in his own Kingdom? Is it not a greater ſin then the ſin of the Devil? For why, The Devil ſinneth in himſelf, and therefore had his fall. But your ſin is in your ſelves and by the Devil, and therefore it is the greater. But, as it is ſaid before, Where is there a moniment upon the earth that the people have raiſed up, in the remembrance of wickedneſſe? Many there be that ſay, Lo, there is Hieruſalem. Lo, there was the Lord buried. Lo, there the floods divided themſelves with all the reſt; in remembrance of the Lord: But none there is that ſay, Lo, in this place the wicked have riſen up and prevailed. Therefore to cleave unto the Lord is good, and to follow a ſenſible Doctrine, which bringeth with it ſelf the loathſomneſſe of wickedneſſe, and the study to do well, that the wicked may be confounded. Alas! let the whole earth riſe up, [thruſting up his hand] even this hand, can gather them all together: what therefore can the Lord do when he frowneth? O unreaſonable Creatures, and worſe then beaſts, more ignorant then the beaſts that graſe in the Mountains: Are you not afraid of the power of God, when it becometh a skourge? For, doubt you not, to deal with thoſe that are wicked? (you of no faith) wherefore hath the Lord made the earth, but to be glorified in the creatures thereof? And what is he that glorifieth God on earth but man? Think you [not] (therefore) that the Lord hath not care of his people? Think you that there is a Seat upon earth, wherein he hath not hidden the might of his free power? Doth Satan get a Soul that he is not privy of? Believe, O you of little Faith, for it is the power of God, it is the Key of the whole world, which is the Key of mans conſcience: If he lock not the door, but depart and leave it open: Wo be to that Soul, for the Prince of darkneſſe entreth, and is poſſeſſed to the eternal woe of his dwelling place. If, therefore the earth be a Cave unto him that made it, (as appeareth by his Prophets, and by the Son of God) What are you? Or how empty are you? .... Said I, Cry you; It repenteth me that I made this people. Let me raze them out, and make a people of * them. This Idolatry was the cause, from time to time, that you became Captives, and of Inferiours, Runnagates, and without a Master. Unto you also, thus saith the Lord (not you my Brethren, I say that are here) More than the love of a father is, is the love of God toward you: For, into what of the Gentiles, hath the Lord shewed himself? Where dwell they, or where have they dwelled, into whose houses have the Angels of the Lord descended, saying, thus and thus, doth the God of Heaven and earth mean to deale with the World.

* To Moses Exod 32. B Deut. 9. C The Jews.

The unmeasurable love of God toward us A. L. A. E. K.

Think you not, that this is more than love? Look therefore narrowly into your selves: Uncover the doings of your life, and secret Chambers: Enter into judgement with your selves. Unto thee I speak. [To E. K.] Hast thou not run astray from the Lord, and committed Idolatry?

Exhortation to patience and amendment of life.

A. He told E. K. of his faults, which E. K. would not expresse to me, and I desired him to listen to them, and to do as it appertaineth to a Christian, &c.

Gab. ..... But thus saith the Lord, I am a pure Spirit that participateth not with the defiled: neither can I enter in mercy into that house which is defiled. A great saying, my Brethren: For hereby you are monished to make your consciences clean, to open your selves in pureness, to the Lord, that he may enter into you with comfort. For, so long as thou dealest with wicked spirits, will the Lord keep back his hands: and thou keepest back the Lord. For shall it not so fall hereafter? Lo, is not this man known to have dealing with the wicked? And (as the foolish voices of the people are) Is not this he that can constrain the wicked? with further arguments, by repetition of thy doings. Well, if thou wilt be the Minister of God; If thou wilt go forward in his works; If thou wilt see the happy times that are to come, thou must abstain from evil, and thou must sweep thy house clean: Thou must put on thy best garments, And must become humble and meek. Let not thy life be a scandal to the will of the Lord, and to the greatness of his works: For the power that is within thy soul (in respect of his essential quid,) is of great force and ability to perform those things that proceed with power: which is the cause that the wicked ones abhor them; for they fear themselves, when they see the seal of thy Creation.

God.

The Lord kept back.

The chief Lesson.

The essential Characterisation of E. K. his soul, and to the cause of his election.

This is therefore the Cause, that God finding thee (as he passeth by, by his Angel) fit in matter, but, my brother (God knoweth) far unfit in life. O Consider the dignity of thy Creation; Consider that the affection of God toward thee, is more than love. See how he beareth with thy infirmity, from time to time. O, I say, (yet) Enter into judgement with thy self: And consider, that thou art now at a Turning where there lieth two wayes: One shall be to thy comfort, The other to thy perpetual wo. Let not good ground bring forth weeds, lest it choke her self.

Alter fine. Of God his finding thee fit in matter, unfit in life.

A. We will call unto God for his mercies, graces, and help, &c.

O, consider, my brother that the appearing and works of the devil are but of necessity. That is to say, that he not is good, by resisting of the devil may manifest and make plain to the powers and spirits of Heaven, the strength of his faith, and assurance of his Hope: and so, necessarily, by the promise of God, inherit everlasting life, to the which he is elected. To the wicked, that because of their disobedience and partaking with them, that are the Angels of darkness, (even those that strive against the Lord) they might worthily be damned: according to the necessity of God his judgement. See, therefore they appeare unto thee, either for the greatness of thy wickedness, or else because they suspect thee to be elected. If thou, therefore think thy self elected, despise them; If thou therefore think to be a spirit dignified, and in glory, Then be faithful in the assurance of hope, and resist the devil: that we may testifie thee, before the heavens, and before the God of justice.

The necessity of the Devils doings.

NOTA.

Conversio E. K. ad Deum, abdicatis omnibus Diabolicis experimentis, &c.

Nihil apparuit hodie.

Albeit the like had never happened to us, (that I remember :) but that either Cloud, Vail, or some Voice was perceived by E. K. Yet this † doing we not onely took patiently; but E. K. used many good reasons to prove, that servants ought to attend so long, as it pleased their Master to have them await his coming to any place, to them.

† Unaccustomed abience and silence.

And that, about our own affairs we are contented to use patience for a long time, but to await the Lord his coming or message, is a time better spent, than in any humane affairs, &c.

He very plainly, and at large made manifest his conversion to God from the practices with wicked spirits: Yea, that he was ready to burn whatsoever he had of their trash and experiments. That he would write in a book the manifold horrible Doctrine of theirs, whereby they would have perswaded him

..... That Jesus was not God.
..... That no prayer ought to be made to Jesus.
..... That there is no sin.
..... That mans soul doth go from one body, to another childes quickening or animation.
..... That as many men and women as are now, have alwayes been: That is, so many humane bodies, and humane souls, neither more nor lesse, as are now, have alwayes been.
..... That the generation of mankind from Adam and Eve, is not an History, but a writing which hath another sense.
..... No Holy Ghost they acknowledged.
..... They would not suffer him to pray to Jesus Christ; but would rebuke him, saying, that he robbed God of his honour, &c.

And so. of very many other most blasphemous Articles and Points of Doctrine, whereof more shall be spoken in another place.

This forbearings of our Instructors presence, I did expound or conjecture to be done greatly for the honour of God, many wayes, if the same were recorded somewhat near to the very manner of the thing as it was: for so, should appear to the posterity, how truely it had been said before, that he should be converted to God: How truely God did prepare E. K. his soul to be a vessel cleansed, and so made apt for his visiting of him, in mercy and comfort.

The matter made apt.

whereby the life of E. K. (now being amended, and his dealing with the wicked cleanse left off) should not be a scandal to the will of the Lord, and to the greatness of his works: as was noted unto us in the last Action.

Also I said, that not onely his Conversion recorded should be a more evident argument of his so oft repeated Election: But his patient attending this present day, ([△] two hours and a half, and taking all things in such sort as became an humble and patient servant,) will be a more sure and evident argument that it was no light pang, such as he hath made outward shew of diverſe times before, but a very harty and ſincere converſion, ſuch as without all doubt, will be found very acceptable to the higheſt.

Moreover, he declared that about nine, or ten dayes paſt, he did intend to have gotten away ſecretly by the help ſpiritual of thoſe, with whom he had ſo long dealt: And therefore that till now, he dealt hypocritically.

But, whereas they to fore were ever accuſtomed to threaten him Beggery, (a thing which he moſt hated and feared.)

That now he careth not if he ſhould have want; yea, he took it neither to be ſhame, or ſin to beg: and that he now made more account of God his favour and life eternal, then he doth of all tranſitory wealth and riches, and to be entangled within the danger of theſe wicked ſpirits their ſnares, with all.

Alſo he now perceived his great errour wherein he was of late, when he would for an aſſured temporal maintenance have forſaken the dealing with the wicked, and ſo more willingly would have followed theſe actions without repining: Saying now, that he is no perfect Chriſtian, who for money muſt be hired to forſake the Devil and his works, &c.

And as for the iſſue of theſe actions he would never either doubt, or miſlike, howſoever they fell out; aſſuring himſelf: That God would do all things beſt, and for his honour, &c. Many other his ſayings very glodly I omit, thinking theſe ſufficient here.

Or else.

The conversion of E. K. here made manifest.

3. That great Caveat before noted, (on Saturday Junii 2. last past) may have some forewarning of this our patience to be used, after our Conversion unto God: The words then recorded are these:

This Action shall never come to passe, untill there be no remembrance of wickednesse, or Hell left amongst you: And yet, after, for a time you must have patience. For, your Offices are above a Kingdom.

To conclude; whatsoever, with God, is known and used as the true cause, we are contented: Nothing doubting of the goodnesse, and wisdom, and power of God to perform his promises and Covenant made to, and with us, for our services to be used to his honour and glory.

Most willingly, and patiently we will attend the will and pleasure of the highest herein. Intending hence forward (by the help of God) not to give our selves over unto, nor easily to be inveigled, or allured of the temptations of the world, the flesh, or Devil.

For which our disposition of minde, and all other benefits received from above, we render most humble, harty, and entire thanks to the Almighty, most glorious, and blessed Trinity. Amen, Amen, Amen.

Munday, Junii 18. Mane, hora 8. Cracoviæ.

Δ. After the Lords prayer, and some other peculiar prayers and thanks-giving, for the exceeding great mercies shewed in the Converting and Reforming of E. K. & my promising to record the Act thereof, as well as God should give me grace: and also craving earnestly for comfort to be given to A. L. being somewhat oppressed with pensiveness to see his own subjects, and servants to triumph against him in his low estate from high, and all for lack of money and wealth, &c.

Suddenly appeared a mighty long, and big arm and hand in the aire, to catch at the shew-stone: and E. K. meaning to save it from him, put his hand on the stone, and immediately the stone was out of the frame, we know not how, and lay by on the Cushion, &c.

Post mediam horam ab initio.

And then soon after appeared Gabriel, in all manner as he was wont, and on the right side of the stone (that is against E. K. his right hand) as he was wont.

Δ. Gloria Patri, & Filio, & Spiritui Sancto, sicut erat in principio, & nunc, & semper, & in secula seculorum. Amen.

Gab. ..... The comfort and peace of the Father, Son, and holy Ghost be amongst you, quicken and confirm you.

Δ. Amen.

E. K. I pray you what was that, that would have snatcht the shew-stone?

Gab..... Let his house come, that his iniquity may be seen.

This seemeth to be Guano Castle in Littaw, where the King now is.

E. K. I see many houses, and besides them a fair House, separated by it self, the House is of stone and wood, and a square thing in the end of it, like a Turret. The houses of the Town are low wooden houses, small: There appear in that odd house fellows in red Coats, like Poland Coats. Now I see a bigge man sitting within the house afore the window: and the house is hanged with Turkie Carpets, and there is wrought in one of the Carpets (just afore the door) a man on horse-back, with a sword in his hand: and the man is like the man I saw at Mortlack with a Wart on his cheek: There stand by him two boyes, they have red Coats on, one of them is a little fair boy: There standeth a man by with a sword, which he delivereth to him that sitteth, and he looketh on it, being gilt and graven on it, and layeth it down on the Table.

The Arms of Littaw.

Δ: There seemeth to be Magical Characters.:

Gab..... This is a sword, wherein he putteth his trust, but it shall fail him.

E. K. Now

E. K. Now that man calleth the lesser boy to him, and the boy thereupon runneth along a Gallery. Now that man with the Wart goeth out after, strouting himself, and no body with him: Now he calleth that lesser boy to him, and maketh signe to him, smiting one hand on another, and drawing it under his throat: as though he threatned the boy, unlesse he kept secret. Now he cometh to a door and knocketh, and one like an Italian letteth him in. There he hath in the corner a frame of wood, and a great stone in the middle of it (of about 16 Inches square) and there is a fire on that stone, on the middle of it. Now he taketh that engine, or frame with the fire between him, and that man (like an Italian) and carrieth it into another Chamber. There they have a dead mans hand. Now he taketh out of his Casket a black box of yern (as it should seem by the blackness of it) The box is about a foot long. Now he hath set down the box, and the same is open, and therein appeareth an image of wax of blackish colour, like shooemakers wax. There is one like an Angel, made of red stuffe, standing at the head of the image, holding like a Skarf over the face of the image. The image is marvellously scratched and rased, or very rudely made with knobs and dents in the legs of it.

Now he looketh four wayes: And speaketh (the man with the Wart on his face.) The man with the Wart invocateth.

The house aforementioned seemeth to stand without the stone, and beyond the stone. Note, because no wicked power can enter within this stone.

Now they poure bloud out of a Bason upon the fire, and lay the hand upon it: and it frieth in the fire.

Now he, and the Italian-like man, have put on Apparel, black, like Gowns: each of them, and the engine seemeth now to be set in a Chimney. Close without any slit, but where their arms are put out.

Gab. .... Be it, as it was.

E. K. There be six smokes, like six men standing about them: and they go like smokes out at a window, and there standeth one like a Gyant man, and he taketh them, and windeth them up as they come out at the window. Now all that shew is vanished away. Δ. Fumi quasi sunt spiritus qui venerunt, vocati ante.

Gab. ..... This is the cause that Lasky is poor. This is the seventh image that he hath scraped so.

Δ. As it is the seventh, so (I trust) it is the last.

Gab. ..... This is three years four moneths, and ten dayes, since they begun; so long hath the Angel of the Lord been ready, for thy safe-guard, (O Lasky) standing at the window: and ready to binde up mischief prepared against thee. Δ. Ergo, An. 1581. 6. Februarii incepe-runt die Lunæ. The Angel standing at the window, winding up the 6. smokes.

This mischief shall light upon his own head.

But if thou remain my servant, and do the works that are righteous, I will put Solomon behinde thee, and his riches under thy feet.

Be therefore comforted in me: for the breath thou breathest is mine, and the body that thou dwellest in, is the work of my hands.

The earth from whence thou camest is mine also.

It is I, therefore, that cast down, and none but I, that raise up again.

E. K. All the stone is become full of a smoke.

Gab. ..... Art thou sure that the Sun shineth? [pointing to Δ.]

Δ. I am as much as my eye may judge. A. L.

Gab. ..... So sure it is, that he shall reign: and be the King of Poland.

Δ. Alwayes I understand a condition, if he do, &c.

Δ. The will of God be done, to his honour, and to the comfort of his Elect.

Gab. ..... Make haſte for your journey.

Δ. O Lord, the man is ready (in manner) but hability wanteth: and to ask thy help herein, we dare not, but as thy will is, ſo be it.

Gab. ..... To talk with God for money is a folly, to talk with God for mercy, is great wiſdom.

Δ. Lord, this mighty arm and hand, which here appeared, and would have ſnatched at the ſtone, what was it, and who ſent it?

Gab. ..... It is a wicked power, which the Kings Enchanters have ſent amongſt you, but he hath his reward for returning.

Δ. What was his intent, I beſeech you? and I marvel that his Enchanters were able to deteſt any of our doings to the King.

Gab ..... The King knoweth not your doings.

Δ. I beſeech you, as concerning the 48 leaves, being commanded to be bound, and to be ſilvered; what, if I cauſed ſeven white leaves to be bound before, and ſeven behinde, for the more aptneſſe for the binding?

Note. Gab. ..... Uſe thine own judgement. God will appear no more unto you, untill you take your journey.

Δ. We believe, The Lord will perform his promiſes.

Gab. ..... According to your faith be it unto you.

The white Curtain. E. K. Now he hath pulled a white Curtain about the ſtone, and the ſtone is dark.

Δ. Semper laudetur qui Trinus & unus eſt, Omnipotens & ſempiternus. Amen.

Wedneſday, Junii 20. à Meridie. 1584. Cracoviæ.

Δ. It is firſt to be noted, that this morning (early) to E. K. lying in his bed, and awake, appeared a Viſion, in manner as followeth: One ſtanding by his beds head, who patted him on the head gently, to make him the more vigilant. He ſeemed to be cloathed with feathers, ſtrangely wreathed about him all over, &c.

There appeared to him [E. K.] four very fair Caſtles, ſtanding in the four parts of the world: out of which he heard the ſound of a Trumpet. Then ſeemed out of every Caſtle a cloath to be thrown on the ground, of more then the breadth of a Table-cloath.

Out of that in the Eaſt, the cloath ſeemed to be red, which was caſt.

Out of that in the South, the cloath ſeemed white.

Out of that in the Weſt, the cloath ſeemed green, with great knops on it.

Out of that in the North, ſpread, or thrown out from the gate under foot, the cloath ſeemed to be very black.

Out of every Gate then iſſued one Trumpeter, whoſe Trumpets were of ſtrange form, wreathed, and growing bigger and bigger toward the end.

After the Trumpeter followed three Enſign bearers.

After them ſix ancient men, with white beards and ſtaves in their hands.

Then followed a comely man, with very much Apparel on his back, his Robe having a long train.

After him came five men, carrying up of his train.

Then followed one great Croſſe, and about that four leſſer Croſſes.

Theſe Croſſes ſeemed not to be on the ground, but in the aire in a white Cloud. The great Croſſe ſeemed to be of a Cloud, like the Rain-bow. Theſe Croſſes had on them, each of them ten, like men, their faces diſtinctly appearing on the four parts of the Croſſe, all over.

After the Croſſes followed 16 white Creatures.

And after them, an infinite number ſeemed to iſſue, and to ſpread themſelves orderly in a compaſſe, almoſt before the four foreſaid Caſtles.

Upon which Viſion declared unto me, I ſtraight way ſet down a Note of it; truſting in God that it did ſignifie good.

After noon, as E. K. ſat by me, he felt on his head ſome ſtrange moving: whereby he deemed that ſome ſpiritual Creature did viſit him; and as we were continuing together, and I had red to E. K. ſome rare matter out of Ignatius Epiſtles, Policarpus, and Martialis; ſome of the Sacrament, and ſome of the Croſſe, a voyce anſwered, and ſaid, That it is true, that the ſign of the Croſſe is of great force and vertue.

After this, the ſpiritual Creature ſeemed to E. K. to be very heavy on his right ſhoulder, as he ſat by me in my ſtudy: And as E. K. conſidered the numbers of ſuch as he had numbred to paſſe out of the four Gates, (it is to wit, 1.3.6.1.5.) The ſpiritual Creature ſaid, the number 16. is a perfect number, conſiſting of 1.3.6.1. and 5. He ſaid further more, God the father is a ſtanding Pillar.

Δ. Upon which word I asked him, if I ſhould write ſuch matter as he was to ſpeak. And he anſwered to E. K. at his right ear.

..... If thou wilt. Δ. His voyce was much like unto a mans voyce, not baſe, nor hollow.

..... Divi-

..... Divided with a ſtraight line, is one and two.

A. What is to be divided with a ſtraight line?

..... The Pillar.

A. In the name of Jeſus, who art thou?

..... The ſervant of God.

A. Art thou ſent from God, with good tydings or meſſage?

..... What I am he knoweth, of whom I bear witneſſe.

A. What is your name, either as you are notified among the bleſſed Angels, or called by of any mortal man? If you be of Verity, and ſo of Charity, you cannot miſlike my ſpeeches.

E. K. He ſayeth nothing.

A. Belike he is not ſent unto us by God: for if he were, he would do his meſſage.

..... I am AVE.

A. This AVE is one ex filiis filiorum, of whoſe order Rocle is, vide ſup. lib. 2. & 4.

A. If you be AVE, In the name of Jeſus, ſay, that all wicked Angels are juſtly condemned: and, that, by the mercy of God, in the merits of Chriſt, mankind, elect, is to be ſaved.

Ave. ..... *The * viſitation of God, is twofold:* [1.] In reſpect of his ſecret will and purpoſe: and in particularity. And in that he hath [2] ſealed us, with the good will of mankind to their comfort. But if I be a ſcandal to the word, then am I not of righteouſneſſe: But my righteouſneſſe is of the world: Therefore, That I viſit you of my ſelf, can be no offence. Thoſe that are, and die in wickedneſſe, are diſhonourable, and far from the mercies of God: For it is written, I am a God to the living. Therefore, do I diſhonour them: ſuch (I ſay) as are wicked.

* E. K. and I ſaid now in our talk togethe, That God would not viſit us but at the dayes of journey taking (as was laſt affirmed) Therefore whatſoever came before was to be doubted as an illuſion. He therefore anſwereth firſt our doubt, and then to my requeſt he maketh anſwer.

The mercies of God, (which is the true Manna) comforteth the comforted, and giveth hope of amendment, of ſuch as run aſtray, are ſinners, and may return: Therefore, I ſay, The mercies [of God] (which is the Fountain and ſweetneſſe of the love of God) is a thing moſt bleſſed, moſt holy, moſt to be deſired in Heaven and Earth, and of me, the creature and ſervant of God, to be reverently ſpoken of, and required: For, it is the food wherewith we live: even the very bread wherewith we are rejoyced. Thus much, thou haſt required. Miſericordia Dei.

A. I did ſo: for ſo, is his Juſtice againſt the impenitent, and his mercies to his Elect teſtified truely.

Ave. ..... Have patience: I will return after a few moments.

A. Hereupon, (in the mean ſpace) we conſidered the premiſes: and liked very well of the ſcandal, or offence, avoiding: Becauſe it was laſtly (Junii 18) ſaid, God will appear no more to you, until you take your journey.

And ſecondly he anſwered my requeſt of God his Juſtice againſt the wicked Angels, and alſo of his mercies towards mankind.

A. About a quarter of an hour after, there ſeemed a thing to come again on E. K. his right ſhoulder: and (as before) he cauſed his ſhoulder to be very warm where it lighted on. Note this manner of a thing felt warm on the right ſhoulder.

A. Benedictus qui venit in nomine Domini. Hallelujah.

E. K. Amen

Ave ..... The place is ſanctified.

A. Sanctus, Sanctus, Sanctus, eſt Dominus Deus Zebaoth.

Ave. ..... I, in the favour of God, conſidering (and by force of his ſecret love toward you) how Satan purpoſeth, yet, and daily to overcome you, thought good, (through the mercies of God) to prevent his malice, and the effect thereof.

A. O bleſſed, be thou, our God of mercies and all comfort.

Ave. ..... That, (although, yet, the Harveſt be not) the Vineyard might yeild ſome fruit: whereby God might be glorified, and you, (in deſpite of the world) revived and comforted, might rejoyce, and ſhake off *the preſent cares to come. For if thoſe that be unworthy, can ſeem to be lifted up, and to enjoy the fruits of the Earth, by the Tempter: Much more ought the true ſervants of God, to feel his fatherly goodneſſe. 2. I will ſeal up the mindes of men: and they ſhall become barren towards them?

The malice of Satan provoketh his own confuſion when he thought to prevail. So God ſuffereth his to be proved that the affliſted might be comforted, and the afflicter confounded.

For this cauſe: That he might waken the Lord, when he is aſleep: That thoſe that truſt in him, might be comforted. He hath ſealed the Earth from you, and I will open it unto you; He hath ſaid, you ſhall be poor: But I ſay, you ſhall become exceeding rich.

Governours of the Earth.

Ave. ..... This was the cauſe that I appeared to thee, E. K. this morning. Now therefore hearken unto me: for I will open unto you the ſecret knowledge of the Earth, that you may deal with her, by ſuch as govern her, at your pleaſure; and call her to a reckoning, as a Steward doth the ſervants of his Lord.

A. Omnium bonorum largitori, Omnipotenti Deo, sit æterna laus, gratiarum actio, honor omnis, & Jubilatio. Amen.

Junii, 22, 23. Note.

On Friday, and especially Saturday, E. K. had great Temptations not to credit this Action, and was said unto by a voice, how our Instructors would use cavillation of our disordered life, to forsake us, and not to perform, according to our expectation of the former promises to be performed by them.

A voice said, likewise, to him, that A. L. should not go to the Emperours Court, for lack of money: for he should get none here. Likewise, it willed him to go up into his Study and he would shew him all the effect of our Instructions received. E. K. complained to me how he was thus greivously molested by such means, and almost brought in despair. But I comforted him as well as I could (my self being inwardly, most sorrowful) and made my moane to God by prayer when I was alone: for him, and our Cause. Moreover he could not be perswaded by me that good Angels would undertake to help us to any relief by money or treasure: affirming that it appertained to the wicked ones: seeing they were the Lords of this World; and the kingdom of God was not of this World, &c. .... Said, that the wicked were in the world, and of the world: but the Elect were in the world, but not of the World.

Si de Mundo essetis, Mundus quod suum est diligeret: quia vero de mundo non estis sed ego elegi vos de mundo, propterea odit vos mundus. Joan. cap. 15. C

Ergo dedi eis sermonem tuum, & mundus eos odio habuit, quia non sunt de mundo, sicut & ego non sum de mundo. Non rogo ut tollas eos de mundo, sed ut serves eos à malo. De mundo non sunt: sicut & ego non sum de mundo, &c. Joan. cap. 17. C

To be of the world, was to be in love with the trade of the vanities of this world, and to follow them: And that money and riches were things indifferent: good, if they were well used; and evil, if they were evilly used: And that, Bonis omnia cooperabantur ad bonum; Therefore the godly (as the Patriarchs and many now adayes) might have money; but to use, not abuse it: and that such is our case and necessary request to God, &c.

Sunday, Cracoviæ, Junii 24. à Meridie horam circiter tertiam.

A. Note, while at my lodging (by Saint Stephens) I was writing the Note, (on the page going next before) of the Tentations of Friday and Saterday: E. K. was at my Lord A. L. his lodging (at the Franciscan Fryars, where he lay at Physick) and at the same time, this happened, as followeth;

As my Lord A. L. and E. K. sate together, conferring and consulting of our affairs, of Gods mercies, and of sundry tentations of the spiritual enemy, and afterward, as the Lord A. L. was reading Rofensis psalm. de Fiducia in Deum, suddenly, upon E. K. his right shoulder, did did a heavy thing seem to sit, or rest, whereof he told the Lord A. L. And afterward was this voyce uttered by that Creature in Latine.

I asky, veniet tempus, cum tu portabis versum sedecimum, illius Psalmi undecimi, in vexillo tuo, & vinces inimicos tuos.

Then A. L. sought in Davids Psalter for the eleventh Psalm, and sixteenth verse thereof: and while he was so about that Psalm, The voyce said that he meant not that Psalm of David, but the eleventh Psalm of Roffensis: which Psalm the Lord A. L. was then in reading to E. K. and was about the verse, Hic labor ac dolor, &c. being the sixth verse.

By and by after, the voyce said in English.

—— Trust thou in God.

Hereupon the Lord A. L. did read forth that Psalm of Roffensis, and when he came to the sixteenth verse thereof, being Si ambulavero in medio tribulationis, me custodies adversus inimicos tu . . .

Manum tuam extendes, & dextera tua me salvabis.

Thereupon the voyce said: Put to the first line of the next verse: And that was Domine tu omnia pro me perficies.

And as he would have read further, the voyce willed him to stay at those words, and said as followeth:

Vide Anno 1585. Junii 12 Cracoviæ.

—— I swear unto thee by the true and living God, that this shall come to passe.

Then E. K. said unto the Creature: In the name of God, Who art thou? And he answered in Latin, and said, Ego Sum AV E, cras plura audietis.

Δ. Gloria, laus, honor & gratiarum actio perennis sit Deo Nostro, omnipotenti & Misericordi. Amen.

Munday 25. Junii, Mane hora 7. Cracoviæ.

Δ. Orationem Dominicam pronunciavimus, & aliquot alias oratiunculas ex Psalmis, &c. After we had sit awhile together conferring of Ave his Vision, &c.

Ave. A voyce said, bring up the shew-stone.

Δ. I had set it down on the Table, behinde the Cushion with the Crosses, for I had furnished the Table with the Cloath, Candles, &c. as of late I was wont: Hereupon I set up the stone on the Cushion.

E. K. There appeareth in the stone, like a white Curtain all over the stone: After awhile it was drawn, and layed on the back-side of the stone, on a heap together.

Δ. Ave. Now here standeth one in a white Garment, with a white Cerclet about his head like a white smock, I remember not that ever I saw this Creature before, his Garment is tucked up.

Δ. Ave. ..... Who is he that is rich?

Δ. The Lord of all.

† Four. ..... He it is that openeth the † store-houses, not such as fly away with the winde, but such as are pure, and without end.

Δ. Blessed be his name for ever.

.....To the pure in spirit, and such as he delighteth in. Amen.

Δ. Da verbum tuum in ore me, & sapientiam tuam in corde meo, fige. Dixit Dominus, Invoca nomen meum, & mittam vobis verbum quo fabricavi terram, & respondebit de se, & testimonium dabit de se, ut in testimonio vincat malos.

E. K. Now is there fire come, and hath consumed this Creature all to pieces, and he is fall'n down to ashes.

Δ. Quasi figura ce terra renovanda. Now he riseth up, and he is brighter then he was before.

..... So doth the glory of God comfort the just, and they rise again with a threefold glorie.

Δ. A place was made.

E. K. Now he spreadeth the aire, or openeth it before him, and there appeareth before him a square Table.

Now

Now he taketh off the Table a black Carpet.

Now he taketh off a green Carpet.

Now he taketh off a white Carpet.

Now he taketh off a red Cloath.

The Table of the Earth.

△ He taketh off the coloured cloaths in due order, reſpecting the four parts of the World.

And now the Table appeareth to be made of earth, as Potters Clay, very raw earth.

E. K. The Table hath four feet, of which two touch the ground, and two do not: The feet ſeem alſo to be of the earth. The Table is ſquare.

E. K. On the left corner (fartheſt from E. K.) did a T appear on the Table: Out of the top of this T do four beams iſſue of clear collour bright.

..... That part [pointing to that T] of the Table of the earth of thoſe that govern the earth: that is are governed by the ſeven Angels that are governed by the ſeven that ſtand before God, that are governed by the living God, which is found in the Seal of the living God, (Tau with the four) which ſignifie the four powers of God principal in earth, &c.

..... Move not, for the place is holy, and become holy.

..... I ſaid not ſo, he ſaid it, that beareth witneſſe of himſelf. Unto this, obey the other three Angels of the Table.

E. K. On the other farther corner of the Table (on E. K. his right hand) is a Croſſe like an Alphabet Croſſe.

This Croſſe, and the other T do ſeem to lye upon the Table, in a dim dunniſh, or a sky colour. All the Table over ſeemeth to be ſcribled and raſed with new lines.

..... The earth is the laſt, which is with the Angels, but not as the Angels, and therefore it ſtandeth in the Table of the ſeven Angels, * which ſtand before the preſence of God in the laſt place, without a Letter, or number, but figured by a Croſſe.

The Earth.

* Vide 1582. 20. Martii. lib. 2.

..... It is expreſſed in the Angle of that Table, wherein the names of the Angels are gathered, and do appear, as of Michael and Gabriel.

△ I remember, there is an Alphabetary Croſſe.

E. K. Now in the corner of the Table, on the right hand to E. K. appeareth another Croſſe, ſomewhat on this faſhion †. and there appear'd theſe Letters and Numbers.

Vide lib. 3. Anno 1582. Aprilis 28.

..... It is in that Table, which conſiſteth of 4. and 8.

E. K. In the laſt corner of this earthly Table appeareth a little round ſmoke, as big as a pins head.

E. K. Now is all covered with a miſt.

E. K. Now I hear a great voyce of thumbling and rumbling in the ſtone.

E. K. Now all waxeth clear again.

Now hoveringly over the Table, appear infinite ſort of things like worms, ſometimes going up and ſometimes down; theſe ſeem ſomewhat brightiſh.

Over theſe higher in the aire, appear an infinite ſort of ſmall, little, blackiſh things, bigger then Motes in the Sun, and they go up and down, and ſometime come among thoſe worm-like Creatures.

Enoch. ..... The Lord appeared unto Enoch, and was mercifull unto him, opened his eyes, that he might see and judge the earth, which was unknown unto his Parents, by reason of their fall: for the Lord said, Let us shew unto Enoch, the use of the earth: And lo, Enoch was wise, and full of the spirit of wisdom.

And he sayed unto the Lord, Let there be remembrance of thy mercy, and let those that love thee taste of this after me: O let not thy mercy be forgotten. And the Lord was pleased.

50. Dayes. And after 50. dayes Enoch had written: and this was the Title of his books, let those that fear God, and are worthy read.

The title of Enochs books, expounded into English. 150 Lions, or wicked spirits seducers. Counterfeiting. But behold, the people waxed wicked, and became unrighteous, and the spirit of the Lord was far off, and gone away from them. So that those that were unworthy began to read. And the Kings of the earth said thus against the Lord, What is it that we cannot do? Or who is he, that can resist us? And the Lord was vexed, and he sent in amongst them an hundred and fifty Lions, and spirits of wickednesse, errour, and deceit: and they appeared unto them: For the Lord had put them between those that are wicked, and his good Angels: And they began to counterfeit the doings of God and his power, for they had power given them so to do, so that the memory of Enoch washed away: and the spirits of errour began to teach them Doctrines: which from time to time unto this age, and unto this day, hath spread abroad into all parts of the world, and is the skill and cunning of the wicked.

Wicked Magicians. Hereby they speak with the Devils: not because they have power over the Devils, but because they are joyned unto them in the league and Discipline of their own Doctrine.

For behold, as the knowledge of the mystical figures, and the use of their presence is the gift of God delivered to Enoch, and by Enoch his request to the faithfull, that thereby they might have the true use of Gods creatures, & of the earth whereon they dwell: So hath the Devil delivered unto the wicked the signs, and tokens of his error and hatred towards God: whereby they in using them, might consent with their fall: and so become partakers with them of their reward, which is eternal damnation.

Devils Characters. These they call Characters: a lamentable thing. For by these, many Souls have perished.

The mercy of God to Dee. To △. Now hath it pleased God to deliver this Doctrine again out of darkenesse: and to fulfill his promise with thee, for the books of Enoch: To whom he sayeth as he said unto Enoch.

Let those that are worthy understand this, by thee, that it may be one witnesse of my promise toward thee.

The wicked power expelled out of the earth. Come therefore, O thou Cloud, and wretched darkenesse, Come forth I say out of this Table: for the Lord again hath opened the earth: and she shall become known to the worthy.

E. K. Now cometh out of the Table a dark smoke, and there remaineth on the Table a goldish slime: and the things which hovered in the aire do now come, and light down on that slime, and so mount up again.

He said. ..... Non omnibus sed bonis.

E. K. He taketh the smoke and tieth it up.

..... I tie her not up from all men, but from the good.

Now cometh a dark Cloud over all again.

△. A pause.

E. K. Now it is bright again.

He said. ..... Fiant omnia facillima.

..... Number.

E. K. I see lines and scribblements (as before) going athwart the lines.

E. K. I count thirteen lines downward.

..... Stay there.

E. K. I count twelve this way overthwart.

E. K. In the just middle of every square are little pricks. The Table seemeth to be eighth yards square.

E. K. Now come upon these squares like Characters. They be the true Images of God his Spiritual Creatures. NOTE. Characters.

..... Write what thou seest.

E. K. I cannot.

Δ. Endeavour to do your best, for he that biddeth you do, will also give you power to do.

E. K. Did his best, at length fire flashed in his face, and shortly after he said, I perceive they be easie to make, so that I tell the squares, by which the lines do passe, and draw from middle prick to middle prick.

Δ. At length E. K. finished the Table: he said that these seemed to be yellowish Gold.

E. K. You heard one here say, I write my own damnation. A wicked power tempting E. K.

..... He might have said, you write his damnation. Pray, and write as many more lines.

Δ. After awhile E. K. did with great ease finish the four parts of the Table.

E. K. The stone is become dark.

A voyce. .... Cease for an hour.

Δ. May we passe from our places as now?

..... I.

Δ. After a little hour past we returned, and as we talked of the premisses, he said.

..... Lose no time.

Δ. He said in the stone being clear again,

..... In the name of God, be diligent, and move not for the place is holy.

..... Take the first square: write from the left hand toward the right, you shall write small letters and great.

Say what you see [to E. K.]

E. K. Now all is in a whitish cloud covered.

E. K. Now all is clear.

..... Make the first figure upon a clean paper, and thereto adde the simple letters: Then shall you hear more. Thou must make the squares of the first part of the Table unto every square and his letters.

Δ. I have made the squares of the first part, and set in the letters.

Thou hast in the middle line o r o i b A h a o z p i. There are 6 lines above, and six below. That line is called linea Spiritus Sancti: and out of that line cometh the three names of God, from the East gate, being of 3, 4, and 5. letters, which were the armes of the Ensignes that were spoken of before. Oro, ibah, aozpi, I said before, that God the Father a mighty pillar divided with a right line.

Linea Spiritus Sancti. Oriens.

The 3 names of God in Banners.

The Father himself, without the line.

The Father and Son by addition of the line.

These two lines beginning J A i d a r &c.

That is the great Crosse that came out of the East gate.

East.

Δ. With that line of the Holy Ghost?

..... I.

Thou hast in the upper left angle in the second line a r d z a.

Thou hast that maketh the crosse downward: first i, then the same d, o, i, g o.

Δ. Will you have six letters downward?

..... I.

So thou hast the three other crosses in their angles.

Δ. Will you give me leave to repeat them, for fear of erring?

I L a c z a, the down line of six letters, and p a L a m the crosse line.

..... It is so.

Δ. Now to the other on the left side below.

the down right line. Now the crosse line, is O i i i t.

Here those Crosses have ten faces.

Ten faces on the Crosses.

Δ. One letter is reckoned twice which is in the center of the Crosse: and so should seem to be eleven.

..... This

..... This is true knowledge.

△. The last crosse is thus, his down line is a O u r r z

△. The Crosse is a L O a i.

△. So have I the 4 Crosses attendant on the principal Crosse.

..... Here thou mayst see the cause, that Pilat wrote with 4 letters.

△. How doth the cause appear?

..... For above every crosse, standeth 4 letters: Not that Pilat knew it, but that it was the fore-determination of God.

△. Another pronouncing of it. The 4 Angels over every crosse of the 4. attendant crosses.

They are thus to be read. In the upper left angle thou hast r z l a: pronounce, urzla: by this now the first Angel appeareth. z l a: go then to the first r, and pronounce it zlar. That was the first letter of the first Angel, is the last letter of the second: as of the first r, was the first letter of the name, as r z l a, that r is now the last letter of the name of the second Angel, beginning at z, as z l a, and so back again to the r.

△. So that the third beginneth at l, whose last letter is the first of the second name, and is called Larz, and so of the last: as a r z l, to be pronounced arzel.

△. So that you have, of those 4 letters, 4 Angels names, here thus gathered out: but how are they to be used?

The use.

..... Let it be sufficient that you know these names. I will teach you to use them.

4 Angels over every crosse.

△. Shall we labour by like order of every the 4 letters over the crosses to make 4 such names?

..... They are also to be made.

△. I do know assuredly that there is very much matter in this Table.

Solomon his knowledge. Six Seniors.

..... It is true: for hitherto, stretched the knowledge of Solomon.

..... Now for your six Seniors: whose judgement is of God the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost. In the line De Spiritu Sancto, you have Abioro of six letters: The second name of the second Senior is of 7. as, A (the same, ascending) Aaix a if the third, as the second, in patre & filio, H c mord A.

How to make the Seniors of 7. letters.

Again in Spiritu Sancto, haózpi. The fifth, in patre & filio descendens hi pot ga. The sixth, A V to Tar. If you will make them of 7 letters (because two of them, are but of six) that is, when the wrath of God is to be encreased.

Note.

The encreasing of names with a letter.

Then whereas you say, Abioro, say Habioro; and where you say Haozpi, say ahahozpi. Thou hast haospi, before h is A; take that unto it and it maketh Aha ozpi. And so they consist all, of 7 letters.

b a T a—— i——

Thou hast b the fifth, in the left part of the line, de Spiritu Sancto: thou hast a the sixth, (the first part of the line de patre & filio descending.) T the sixth in the second part descending. a The first in the second part descending, or the second ascending.

Thou hast a the fifth, in aozpi.

i The sixth, and V the sixth, ascending in the part descending of the line de patre & filio, the second and first part. Put the A or the h that stand in the Center, to it: Thou hast Bataiva or Bitaivh. You must take but * one of them, either the A or the h. A, comiter, and h in extremis Judiciis.

A or H.

* To make the end of this word.

△. So I see when the contract A, and when the contract H must end this word: That is the mighty Prince whose traine was holden up in the East.

The King his name East.

To morrow.

..... Spare me now, I will open you more secrets to morrow, I am secretly called away: but you shall find me the true servant of God.

E. K. Now he spreadeth the white Curtain over all that was laid on an heap behind.

Characters or Notes.

..... Yet one thing ere I go. Those Characters or Notes (for, so call them) are the parts of the whole Earth, as you may find in those names * I delivered you before; To the intent you may work all the World over at one time. Now, my love rest with you.

E. K. Now he is gone.

△. Have I now made this crosse of uniting all the 4 parts or Angels together, as you like of?

Wicked Angels whose names are of 3 letters. 4. Angels above every of the lesser crosses. Ergo, 16 such in every of the 4. principal quarters.

The letters that joyne those names, which may be put before the [△ 4.] names of the four Angels of the four crosses in every angle, (as well from the right, as the left,) is the name of God, whereby these Angels, are called and do appear.

In the first square of the right side thou hast r. beginning the name of the Angel Urzla: put e to it, and it changeth the sound, into Erzla. Erzla is the name of God that governeth, Urzla.

Ave. ..... It is so.

Δ. I understand not well, your account of 16 Angels for medicine.

Ave. ..... Are there not four principal Crosses? Every Crosse hath also four. The first of every four are the Crosse of medicine, so that there be sixteen.

Ave. ..... One book of perfect paper. One labour of a few dayes.

Forte, For the. Their promise. The calling them together, and the yielding of their promise, the repetition of the names of God, are sufficient.

I have given you Corn : I have given you also ground. Desire God to give you ability to till.

Δ. We will pray for his help that is Almighty.

..... I am free before God. Catch that catch can.

Be it now as it was before.

E. K. He mounteth up into the aire, and is gone.

Δ. When would you that I should prepare that book, and what call you perfect: and how many leaves would you wish me to make it of?

..... Your book is not of my charge.

Δ. Lord, as thou hast dealt mercifully with us hitherto, and hast given us the understanding of many secrets, so in respect of this strange dealing with us, and leaving us of Ave, we are desirous to know some cause: and therein we require that Madimi may be sent.

E. K. She is here in the stone.

Madi. ..... How do you?

E. K. She maketh a low curtsie.

Δ. I declared our admiration of Ave his so sudden departure, aud required her opinion of the cafe.

Mad. ...., Surely Sir, I cannot tell : but I will go see if my mother can tell.

Δ. He that is the Creatour of all things, be mercifull unto us, and lighten our hearts with true knowledge, as our trust is in him.

E. K. She went away, and came again after a little while.

Mad. ..... My mother sayeth, you should have been at the Emperours.

Δ. But you see it is impossible to get thither without some good provision of money made by our great friend A. L. I pray you, what can you say of Ave?

Mad. ..... My gentle brother, Ave is a good Creature : indeed you might have made more of him.

Δ. I beseech you to give us some Declaration of Ave his last words.

Mad. ..... There is no word unperfect : My brother Ave his nature is to be plain and short.

Δ. I pray you to say somewhat more plainly of Ave his last words.

Mad. ..... If it were the commandment of my mother, I could do it. But this is the good will of my brother toward you.

Δ. As your brother hath done this of his good will, so do I desire you of your good will to do, or say somewhat to our comfort.

Mad. ..... Sir, I pray you, pardon me. I may not meddle with Ave his doing. I have nothing to say to you, but I know my Mother hath much to say to you

As the mighty thunder cometh, so cometh the promise of God.

Rodulphus the Emperour now.

If the Emperour (my mother sayeth) do any thing against Lasky, or hinder, (she answereth in earnest) there shall be an Emperour.

A. L Earnest is means to be Emperour: vide 22 Sept. Prage.

Δ. Make your sentence more perfect.

Mad. ..... Therein lieth a mystery.

A Mystery.

My Mother, my Sisters, Ave, I, my self, and the rest of us will not be from you in your need.

A comfortable promise.

Δ. Now is our need, as we have declared.

Mad. ..... Sir, Content your self: For, yet a season, you must have patience. God blesse you, for (as yet) I feel nothing to say to you.

Misericos, clemens & pius est Deus Noster : Cujus nomen sit benedictum, Nunc & semper. Amen.

Note. About seven of the Clock this afternoon, E. K. came again up into my study: and seing me reading, and considering this Action, began to finde talk of it, and willed me to assay the practise of it if I understood it : And, to be brief, by little and little fell to this issue, that he confessed himself to be very sorry that he was so far raging in words as he was this day.

day. Nay, (said I) any man living, else, would have found just cause of comfort, and to give thanks for AVE, such speeches to him, as he used unto you upon true compassion, and no skoff, &c. But you by and by called him Devil, and raged on further against Michael and Gabriel, and the heaven'y powers with most horrible speeches, &c. He became very penitent, and acknowledged that he had offended God: and said, that surely it was of the Devil, for he did not remember his words: but he is sure that they were not decent, and beseeched God to pardon him: And so did I, and was very glad of this his reforming himself, and we (being off (before) called down to supper) were going out of my Study: and as he was almost at the door to go out, he said to me, I feel a very heavy thing upon my shoulder: and it is warm withall: Whereat I put to the door, and we sat down again: Verily thinking (as it was) that it was the presence of AVE, whereupon I said unto the Creature.

NOTA. Penitentia Dei grata & acceptabilis in Christo.

Note this manner of a heavy thing on the shoulder, and warm withall.

△. In the name of Jesus, Ave art thou there, he answered immediately after as followeth.

Ave..... Because thou [E.K.] hast acknowledged my honour again: I will also acknowledge my help toward you: But where man curseth the Heavens, what holy Creature can abide? Or where Satan is brought into possession, by free will of man, what good Angel is he that departeth not?

△. O Lord, confirm thy mercies upon us from henceforth.

Ave. ..... As concerning your Action, The Heavens bear witnesse of it. Yea, yesterday did the good Angels contend with the wicked: and there was a great conflict betwixt them; and that about the love of God towards you, and your Action. But I will visit you again in the morning, and will perform my good will in God toward you. But thou must pray often if thou wilt avoid temptation. God be mercifull to you, forgive you, and strengthen you to the end.

△ There was a terrible storm of thunder and rain, toward the end of our yester-dayes Action: which, I said, was somewhat more then natural.

△. Amen, sweet Jesu, Amen.

△. When all was thus ended, I delivered to E.K. my Psalter book (with the short prayers annexed to every Psalm) where he himself very devoutly, and penitently prayed three of them, and I hearing also of them, gave my consent in heart to the same prayers.

Mr. E.K. Penitently prayeth.

△. To God onely be all praise, honour, and glory, now and ever. Amen.

△. Gloria Patri, & filio, & spiritui sancto, &c. Amen.

Ave. ..... In the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the holy Ghost.

△. Amen.

..... Now, what is that, that is hard to you?

4. First, whether the Table (for the middle Crosse of uniting the four principal parts) be made perfect, or no.

Ave. ..... Thou hast found out the truth of it.

△. I think a mystery did depend upon the choice of the three names, Lexarph, Comanan, and Tabitom.

Ave. ..... That is not to our purpose.

△. You bad me chuse out of the Tables the Characters of fewest Letters, and I found them to be O A ɥ A J A, and ⅂, you said they are eight, you said there are eight in four: I know not what this meaneth.

Ave. ..... You must make up the name Paraoan.

△. It is the second part of the 22 aire.

△. What shall become of the L averted?

Ave. ..... It may be N, or L.

△. What must I now do with that name?

Ave. ..... In Exarph there wanteth an L. which L. is of more force then the N. and therefore it is set in the Tables. As far as that N. stretcheth in the Character, so far shall that Countrey be consumed with fire, and swallowed into Hell, as Sodom was for wickednesse. The end of all things is even at hand: And the earth must be purified, and delivered to another.

△. So is not one letter superfluous, or wanting in the Tables.

A Prophesie of things at hand.

NOTE. Nova Terra.

The Heavens shall be 77 times above themselves. And the earth shall bring forth without Tillage: Prophets speak of dayes, [as] presently, that * are far off. But we speak of dayes that are hard at hand. For, immediately after your being with Cæsar, shall the whole world be in sudden alteration. Battails and bloudshed great number: The Kings of the earth shall run unto the Hills, and say cover us.

* Were.

Rodolphus Cæsar.

Nota Initium malorum inflare.

Δ. O, Thou mighty God of Hosts: be our strength and comfort.

Anti Christ. ..... When you hear the peoplesay, Lo, there is a man-child that doth great marvails, (which is even at the door threshold.) Then, then shall you see the calamity of the earth.

A. L. But let Lukie, the servant of God do as he is commanded: And what goodnesse soever he craveth shall follow him, for the Lord hath spared him among the Kings of the earth.

Money, provision. Let him provide for this one journey: He shall not need to provide for the rest: For, he that hath all, hath provided for him.

In Constantinople 1595 15. Septemb. The fifteenth day of September, that shall be twelve moneths, shall you set up the signe of the Crosse; even in the midd'st of Constantinople.

Δ. Thy will be done, O Lord, to thy honour and glory.

Ave. ..... In this Kingdom shall be much bloudshed, and the one shall cut anothers throat. And as the Lord hath promised, so shall it come to passe. Poland. Promissio confirmata de A. L. fortè.

Ave. ..... Now to the Table.

Δ. Of the Principal King of Bataiva, or Baataiva, (using the last a twice) I doubt of the perfect writing of it.

Ave. ..... Is it not written? It is all, most easie, and in gathering thou canst not erre.

24 Seniors. The 24 Seniors are all of one Office: But when thou wilt work in the East, thou must take such as bear rule there; so must thou do of the rest.

Note, This diversity of working. Δ. Do you mean the estate, in respect of any place we shall be in, or in respect of any earthly place, accounted alwayes the East part of the world, whersoever we be?

The four plagues, or quarters. Ave..... The East and West, in respect of your Poles. What will you else of me?

Δ. Whether these four Tables be joyned in their right places, or no.

Ave. ..... They be.

Note, of the Letters in the black Tranversary. Δ. Of the Letters in the Transversary of the wicked their black Crosse, I know no use, as of m o t i v a t; nan, &c.

The book. Ave. ..... Thou shalt know, when thou writest thy book.

Δ. I desire you of the book to say somewhat more for the fashion, paper, and binding, &c.

Ave. ..... Thou mayest use thy discretion.

Δ. You mean (I trust) the book that you bid me to prepare: For, the other is not for my writing.

A perfect master ready. Ave. ..... It is not. I my self will stand with you, and shew how to practise.

Δ. Blessed be God for his ready help.

Δ. I will prepare the book (by the grace of God) with all speed.

The Offices of all the four quarters. Δ. As concerning the Offices, vertues, and powers of the three other quarters of the Table, what shall we think of them?

Ave. ..... They are all as the first.

The twelve names of God in the twelve Banners. Δ. Note. Thou hast three names of God, out of the line of the holy Ghost, in the principall Crosse of the first Angle, so hast thou three in the second, &c.

Four dayes. Four dayes (after your book is made, that is to say, written) must you onely call upon those names of God, or on the God of Hosts, in those names:

Fourteen dayes. And 14 dayes after you shall (in this, or in some convenient place) Call the Angels by Petition, and by the name of God, unto the which they are obedient.

Obedient. White linnen vestures. The 15 day you shall Cloath your selves, in vestures made of linnen, white: and so have the apparition, use, and practice of the Creatures. For, it is not a labour of years, nor many dayes.

E. K. This is somewhat like the old fashion of Magick.

Garment and book onely once to be used. Ave. ..... Nay, they all played at this.

You must never use the Garment after, but that once onely, neither the book.

E. K. To what end is the book made then, if it be not to be used after?

Δ. It is made for to be used that day only.

Ave. ..... What will you else?

Δ. As you best know: we need instructions; yet necessary for us.

Ave. ..... Very few.

Ave. ..... It is a stem with fruit, but it wanteth leaves.

E. K. What mean you by that?

Fruit than leaves. Ave. ..... There be more leaves then fruit, and in many actions there be more circumstances then matter.

Δ. But here is onely marrow, and no bones, or flesh.

Δ. As concerning the great multitude that E. K. saw in the Vision standing after the sixteen Angels, next the Gate, you made no mention in your Description of the Vision: Therefore I would know what they are.

Ave. ..... They be Ministers and servants.

..... There

E. K. * Aliter, Sendenna, as E. K. said.

There shalt thou see thy old Sondenna,* and many other wicked ones, that thou hast dealt with-all. Hereby shall you judge truly of wicked Magick. God be with you: I will be ready, when you need me.

△. Æterno & omnipotenti Creatori rerum omnium, visibilium & invisibilium sit omnis laus, honor, gloria, & gratiarum actio. Amen.

△. Of this wicked Sondenna, E. K. by & by after this Action said. Seeing his name is come to be known (and not by me: for I had received the Sacrament with Mr. Miniver, of whom I had him, never to bewray or disclose his name) I will tell you somewhat of him. He appeareth in many forms, till at length he appear in a Triangle of fire, and being constrained to the Circle, he taketh form (as it were) of a great Gyant, and will declare before for a month to come which spirits do orderly range: which by name being called, will do their offices, with a few other circumstances used, &c. This, indeed was one, of whom I made most account, &c.

△. 1. Remember, I have not yet heard any thing of the 5 Princes which held up the traine of the chief King.

2. Neither any thing of the Trumpeter which went before all.

3. Neither of the letters in the Transversary of the black Crosse.

4. Also of * Docepax Tedoand, being referred to Cilicia, Nemrodiana, and Paphlagonia in the late exposition of the places by vulgar names: and before in the naming of them by the names of Creation they were applyed to Italia and Britania: One of those is to be doubted of.

5. We are desirous to know the Etymologies of all the names of God which we shall use, either to God himself, or to the Angels.

6. We require the form of our Petition or Invitation to be made to the Angels.

7. Of the 20 (and more) diversities or corrections of this principal Table, we require your censure, which diversities I have (by conjecture) so made or amended.

8. Whereas I was [△]willed to call 14 dayes, the Angels which are to be used: so would I know whether also I should summon the wicked heer e recorded (out of the black Crosse, having their off-spring) likewise 14 dayes.

Doubts.

At length appeared a face, very great, with wings about, adjoyned to it; afterward he seemed to be in a great Globe of fire.

..... Hearken to my voice.

Modesty, patience, and humility of heart and body, doth belong to these Actions. Tell me how many Thunders the Lord hath in store for the wicked.

Note.

△. O Lord, we know not.

..... Were you ever in the secret caves of the Earth?

△. No, Lord, never.

..... Then tell me how many windes the Lord hath prepared for an yeat?

△. Neither that can we tell: We are not of the Lord his Council in these things of his providence.

..... Can you tell me none of these questions?

..... Can you tell what shall become of your selves?

△. God onely knoweth, and no creature but by him: for all things are kept uncertain until the end.

..... You beget children, know you the hour wherein they shall be born?

..... You begin labour, can you tell what point of time you shall end in?

△. God only is the Fountain of all wisdom and truth.

..... Well, then I see, you are drowned in ignorance and know nothing.

E. K. He turneth round very swiftly,

..... Even as the Adder leadeth out her young ones, the first day one foot, (out of her hole) not because they should eat, but because they might acquaint themselves with the air, and her subtlety. Note this similitude well.

The second day, one yard and more: she encompasseth her hole, and windeth to and fro, and teach-them to creep; and so five or six dayes, till they know how to move and stir their bodies.

After the seventh day, she leadeth them further, and faineth deceit, striking the ground with her tail, as though it were the sound of some one at hand: And then gaping, beginneth to hisse, and stir-reth up fear unto her young ones, so that they enter into her mouth. And thus she doth till they be 12 or 13 dayes old: Then she leadeth them a stones-cast, and exerciseth them both with fear, and hiding themselves; And when they sleep (being young and wearied with labour) she stealeth from them and maketh a noise amongst the leaves and small stones, with the moving of her hinder parts:

To

To the intent she might see what shift her wormes can make, which stirred up with fear, and missing their mother, fall learn to couch themselves in the Chymnes of the earth; At length, after silence, the mother thrusteth out her self, and doubleth her tongue (with the sound whereof she useth to call them) They come together and rejoyce, wreathing themselves diversly about her body, for joy: She for a recompence, suffereth them to hang upon her back, and so waltereth to her hole; where she gathereth the leaves of the earth: and after she hath chewed them small and tender, with her teeth, and mingled them with the dust, she spueth them out again, and beginneth to lick them by little and little, as though she hungered, which she subtlely doth, that her wormes might eat and forget their hunger ...

Finally, in 20 dayes, they become big, and as skilful in the property of their kind . . . she (I say) leadeth them out into a fertile place, and full of dew, and full of bushes, and places apt to cover them, where they feed, dwell, observe their craft, and at last forsake their mother. Even so, it is with you; So the Lord, (the true Serpent and worme) leadeth you out from day to day, accordding to your strength: and as you grow, to the intent you might, at last be brought unto the pleasant dew, and food of his mercy, which is Triumphing true wisdom.

Triumphing true wisdom.

But this the Lord feareth of you; that, as the wormes did, so you will forsake your mother.

△. Forsake us not, O God, Confirm thy graces in us, and we shall not forsake thee.

The nature of the Serpent, is, not to forsake his young.

△. O Lord we depend onely on thee, and without thy grace and continual help, we perish.

NOE. The Lord told Noe *long before, the Flood would come, he believed him: Therefore he is safe in both worlds. I, as the messenger of God, am as one that say, Cave, Take heed that you become not son in laws, though you passe the fire, Take heed you look not back: for if you do, you shall not see the flood, neither shall the Lord put a vail betwixt you and vengeance, neither (I say) shall the promises of God come in your dayes. If God had taken you up into the heavens and placed you before his Throne, and told you the things that are to come, you would believe: But that you cannot do.

The Lord is merciful, he descendeth into your houses, and there telleth you what is to come, where you may understand: But you believe him not. Therefore saith the Lord of you, I fear you will forsake your mother: But if you do it, I say, if you do it, I will make of the Mothes, men, that shall testifie my name.

H.

E. K. I ever told you I do not believe them, nor can believe them, nor will desire to believe them.

Faith. Obedience. Humility. ..... If you be faithful, you be able to comprehend: If you be obedient and humble, The Creatures of Heaven shall abide with you: Yea the Father and the Son, and the Holy Ghost shall make his dwelling with you. If you persevere, even with faith and humility, you shall see the wicked dayes that are to come, enjoy the promises of God, and be partaker of those blessed days that follow: For wonders unheard of, in, and of the world, are at hand. You are warned, The Spirit of God rest with you.

A Caveat.

△. Amen.

△. O Lord, shall we continue in this wavering or stiff-necked willful blindnesse, and frowardly keep out thy mercies and graces by our fleshly sense, and unreasonable perswasion against the verity of thy true Ministers?

The wicked spirits are vile slaves. Ave .... No man calleth upon the name of God in the wicked: They are servants and vile slaves.

Δ. We call upon the name of Jesus in the expulsing of devils, saying in the name of Jesus, &c.

Ave. ..., That In, is against the wicked. No just man calleth upon the name of God, to allure the devil.

Δ. Then they are not to be named in the first summoning or invitation.

Ave. .... At no time to be called.

E. K. How then shall we proceed with them?

Ave. .... When the Earth lieth opened unto your eyes, and when the Angels of Light, shall offer the passages of the Earth, unto the entrance of your senses, (chiefly of seeing) Then shall you see the Treasures of the Earth, as you go: And the caves of the Hills shall not be unknown unto you: Unto these, you may say, Arise, be gone, Thou art of destruction and of the places of darkness: These are provided for the use of man. So shalt thou use the wicked, and no otherwise.

The Treasures of the Earth. Our words to the wicked that keep Treasure.

Δ. This is as concerning the natural Mines of the Earth.

Ave. .... Not so, for they have nothing to do with the natural Mines of the Earth, but, with that which is corrupted with man.

Δ. As concerning the coined they have power to bring it.

Ave. So they may: that they keep, and no other.

Δ. How shall we know what they keep, and what they keep not?

Ave. .... Read my former words; for thou dost not understand them.

Δ. I read it: beginning at the first line on this side, when the Angels of Light, &c.

Δ. I mean of coined money that they keep not; How shall we do to serve our necessities with it?

Ave. .... The good Angels are Ministers for that purpose. The Angels of the 4 angles shall make the Earth open unto you, and shall serve your necessities from the 4 parts of the Earth.

Δ. God make me a man of wisdom in all parts, I beseech him.

Δ. Note I had spoken somewhat of my part in Devonshire Mines: and of the Danish Treasures which were taken of the Earth.

Δ. These our Questions being thus answered, now I refer the rest to your instruction intended.

Invocations to be made. Ave. .... You have the corn, and you have the ground: Make you but invocations to sow the seed, and the fruit shall be plentiful.

Δ. It

△. As concerning our usage in the 4 dayes in the 14 dayes, we would gladly have some information.

Ave. ..... You would know to reape, before your corn be sown.

△. As concerning a fit place and time to call, and other circumstances, we would learn somewhat.

Ave. ..... You would know where and when to call, before your invocations bear witnesses of your readinesse.

△. Then they must be written in verbis conceptis, in formal words.

Ave. ..... I —— a very easie matter.

△. What is the Book you mean that I should write?

Ave. ..... The Book consisteth [1] of Invocation of the names of God, and [2] of the Angels, by the names of God: Their offices are manifest. You did desire to be fed with spoones, and so you are. The Book.

△. As concerning Bataiva, or Baataivh, I pray you not to be offended though I ask again, what is the truth?

Ave. ..... The word is but of six letters, whereof, one is on the left side, one on the right, two above, and two under; A and H are put to.

△. He meaneth of the left side of the square center of the principal crosse: not perfect square, but heteromeces.

△. Sometimes or communiter, A, and in extremis Judiciis H as I was taught before.

△. So that the word is Bataiva, or Bataivh.

E. K. I think he be gone; for he made a sign of the crosse toward us, and drew the white Curtain.

△. As we sate a while and talked of the Calls received in the holy Language, and not yet Englished, there was a voice.

..... You shall have those Calls in English on Thursday. And so ask me no more questions. The Calls to be had in English on Thursday next.

△. Blessed be our God alwayes, for his mercies: his graces be with us, now and ever.

E. K. Gabriel standeth up.

Gab. ..... Dictum est sæpe vobis, perseverate usque ad finem.

△. God give us that ability.

Gab. ..... And why is it said so? but because you shall have many temptations and afflictions: after which come consolation and comfort.

If the Smith prove and temper his Gold by fire, his intent is to excell in the work that he hath in hand: that thereby it might be tryed, refined, and made apt, to the end wherein it shall be used: Much more, think you, doth the God of wisdom, forge, try, and beat out, such as he intendeth to use in the execution of his divine and eternal purposes. How therefore can you find fault with the Lord? How can you say, he dealeth not justly with you? when he suffereth you to be proved to the uttermost. If you pay the uttermost farthing, are you not become free? If you feel affliction and temptation, and withstand it, are you not the more pure? the more justified? for the Vineyard and Harvest of the Lord? O yes, my Brethren; for the more the wise man is afflicted, the more he rejoyceth; And the greater his adversity is, the more he prospereth.

Is it not written? No man cometh to the Lord but he is justified, purified, and accepted. Whence therefore (if you seek to come before the Lord, that is to say, to appear, to be blessed) shall your justification or purifying arise? Of your own nature it cannot; for you were born sinners: But by Christ you may: In whom you are justified, through patience, and resisting temptations. True proof, and touch of man: But me thinketh I hear you say, O, if we were rich, or of ability. True it is, for the dust of the earth many men excel you: But in that you speak with God, in us his Angels (that is to say Messagers) you are not onely happy (which happinesse the others want) but you excell all the creatures of the Earth. Our great Priviledge with God.

O my Brethren, their joy is a bitter-sweet: But the comfort that you have, is eternal, is sweet, and a food for ever. Therefore, if you will be eternal, and in perpetual comfort with joy, despise the world for the worlds sake: and delight in God for his mercies; which if you truly do, Then can no Tempest prevail, no affliction come amisse, nor no burden be too heavy for you: For it is written, Gaudium beatorum est Christus: Cui Mundus omnia mala fecit.

O my Brethren, be contented, and suffer the world: for as Christ in vanquishing her, did prove himself the Son of God: So shall you in resisting her, at last overcome, and be accounted the sons of Dee. God in Christ, of whom you are a follower. John Dee, be of comfort, for thou shalt overcome.

△. God be praised therefore.

E. K. And what do you say of me?

△. If I prevail, Satan shall not have his will of you: for

Gab. ..... But unto thee [E.K.] saith the Lord, Take heed, how thou meddlest with hell, lest it swallow thee.

Have patience, a time.

E. K. They be gone out of sight.

△. In the mean time we read over the premisses twice, to our great comfort.

E. K. Now they be here again,

Now is a Cloud over them, all white like a smoke.

A voice..... Move not, for the place is holy —— By a great hollow voice.

E. K. Why should it be holy.

△. —— The Court is, where the King is: So where the Lord is present, the place is accounted holy, and is so.

E. K. Now they be out of the Cloud.

△. After this, they made another pause: longer than before.

E. K. When shall we practice Ave his Calls, &c.

Gab. ..... My brother, thou hast least care: Thou draweſt both of God and man. That is promised thee, shall be payed thee; and that which is to come, thou shalt be partaker of.

His fee of A.L. of 400 Dollers yearly. [△. To E. K. for he hath no care neither for meat, nor drink for him and his, neither is he destitute of 400 Dollers yearly pension, and is to have some help by Art.]

Nal. ..... Say the first word of the Call.

Gab S dia. △. Sapáh It is the fifth, for 4 being Englished.

E. K. He holdeth up all his hand, and on his thumb standeth written —— and on the fingers orderly very big letters.

Ave. ..... If the words or truth of our testimony and message, were, or were contained within the capacity of man, Then might the Devil thrust in himself, and dissemble the Image of Truth: But because it is of Truth, and of him that beareth testimony of himself, it can neither have affinity with the flesh, nor be spoken of in this sense.

Lo, thus, deceitfully, hath the Devil entred into man.

Δ. Blessed be the Lord of all truth.

Ave. ..... Therefore seeing the word is not corruptible, Those that minister the word, cannot dwell in corruption. I speak not this, without a cause, my brethren.

Δ. I pray you to proceed, accordingly, that we may know the cause, if it be your will: or else leaving this Caveat unto us, to proceed to the matter wherein we required your helping hand to correct or confirm, or to do that which is behooful.

Δ. We vaunt nothing of any our doings, nor challenge any thing by any perfection of our doings.

Ave. ..... Shall the hireling say, I have laboured hard? or doth the good servant think he meriteth his wages? It is not so But you do so; Therefore you are neither worthy of your reward, nor the name of faithful servants.

Δ. No Lord, we challenge nothing upon any merits; but flie unto thy mercy, and that we crave and call for.

Ave. ..... You do wickedly and injustly: yea you credit the Lord, as you do your selves: your faith is the faith of men, and not of the faithful.

Many things have I said unto you from the beginning, (saith the God of Justice) which you have heard, and not believed: But you tempt me, and provoke me; yea you stir me up to be angry with you.

Δ. If thy Anger shall be on us, beside the sorrow of this world, tentations of the fiend, &c. Then are we not able to endure.

..... Answer not me, and hear what the Lord saith unto thee: Satan laugheth you to scorn; for he saith unto the Lord, standing before him, *Are these they whom thou deliveredst from the perils of the Seas, and from the hands of the wicked, whom the windes were a comfort to, and thy Countenance a Lanthorn? Could not the same Lord, consume that wicked monster and seller of his people, (which tarryeth for a time) with the fire of his mouth? Yes, but that he hath given all things a time. Those that are righteous are often times taken away because of temptations that are to come: But the wicked are suffered to continue, because they might be more heavy, and sink deeper: But, (for love) I say unto you, my brethren, Flee the mischiefs that are to come, and go forward in the service of the Highest, that you may enjoy the promises that are made you, and be partakers of the happy dayes to come.

Note of the death of the righteous now and then.

Flee.

Take heed of whoredom, and the provocations of the flesh. For why? these things that we say, are not without their cause. You have but ten dayes to tarry (if you will follow my counsel) But if you linger any longer, you may drink of a Cup that you would not. Wherefore doth God warn you, but that he would be just with you? Hath he not the whole Earth to serve him? Believe me, by the testimony we bear, that the good Angels weep over you; for, as you are particularly called, so have you your particular and unaccustomed temptations. But pray unto God, that you may prevail. Nititur enim, omnibus modis, Sathanas ut vos devoret.

But to-dayes.

Particular Temptations.

It is said unto you, If you provide for this Journey, &c. That word is as sure as the strongest rock in the world. Considering that you were warned by the same Spirit (whereof I speak) being witnesse of himself, and by us, which bear witnesse of him; Give ear, gird up your selves, and be gone: For, even at the very doors, are mischief. After a while I have somewhat else to say unto you.

Provide for this Journey.

Spiritus Sanctus.

Be gone.

E. K. He covereth all with the white Curtain.

△. We read and considered these premises somewhat diligently.

△. Afterward, [Ave] he came again, and (after a pause) said as followeth.

Ave ..... My brother, I see thou dost not understand the mystery of this Book, or work thou hast in hand But I told thee, it was the knowledge that God delivered unto Enoch. I said also, that Enoch laboured 50 dayes. Notwithstanding, that thy labour be not frustrate, and void of fruit, Be it unto thee, as thou hast done.

Enoch.

The Book confirmed.

△. Lord I did the best that I could conceive of it.

Ave..... I will tell thee, what the labour of Enoch was for those fifty dayes.

△. O Lord I thank thee.

Nal. Ave. It is a kind of slate stone.

He made, (as thou hast done, thy book) Tables, of Serpasan and plain stone: as the Angel of the Lord appointed him; saying, tell me (O Lord) the number of the dayes that I shall labour in. It was answered him 50.

50 Dayes labour.

Then he groaned within himself, saying, Lord God the Fountain of true wisdom, thou that openest the secrets of thy own self unto man, thou knowest mine imperfection, and my inward darknesse: How can I (therefore) speak unto them that speak not after the voice of man; or worthily call on thy name, considering that my imagination is variable and fruitlesse, and unknown to my self? Shall the Sands seem to invite the Mountains: or can the small Rivers entertain the wonderful and unknown waves?

Enoch his prayer to God.

Can the vessel of fear, fragility, or that is of a determined proportion, lift up himself, heave up his hands, or gather the Sun into his bosom? Lord it cannot be: Lord my imperfection is great: Lord I am lesse than sand: Lord, thy good Angels and Creatures excell me far: our proportion is not alike; our sense agreeth not: Notwithstanding I am comforted; For that we have all one God, all one beginning from thee, that we reverence thee a Creatour: Therefore will I call upon thy name, and in thee, I will become mighty. Thou shalt light me, and I will become a Seer; I will see thy Creatures, and will magnifie thee amongst them. Those that come unto thee have the same gate, and through the same gate, descend, such as thou sendest. Behold, I offer my house, my labour, my heart and soul, If it will please thy Angels to dwell with me, and I with them; to rejoyce with me, that I may rejoyce with them; to minister unto me, that I may magnifie thy name. Then, lo the Tables (which I have provided, and according to thy will, prepared) I offer unto thee, and unto thy holy Angels, desiring them, in and through thy holy names: That as thou art their light, and comfortest them, so they, in thee will be my light and comfort. Lord they prescribe not laws unto thee, so it is not meet that I prescribe laws unto them: What it pleaseth thee to offer, they receive; So what it pleaseth them to offer unto me, will I also receive. Behold I say (O Lord) If I shall call upon them in thy name, Bend unto me in mercy, as unto the servant of the Highest. Let them also manifest unto me, How, by what words, and at what time, I shall call them. O Lord, Is there any that measure the heavens, that is mortal? How, therefore, can the heavens enter into mans imagination? Thy Creatures are the Glory of thy countenance: Hereby thou glorifiest all things, which Glory excelleth and (O Lord) is far above my understanding. It is great wisdom, to speak and talke according to understanding with

One Creatour of all things.

LIBRI

[△] Kings : But to command Kings by a subjected commandment, is not wisdom, unless it come from thee. Behold Lord, How shall I therefore ascend into the heavens ? The air will not carry me, but resisteth my folly, I fall down, for I am of the earth. Therefore, O thou very Light and true Comfort, that canst, and mayst, and dost command the heavens ; Behold I offer these Tables unto thee, Command them as it pleaseth thee : and O you Ministers, and true lights of understanding, Governing this earthly frame, and the elements wherein we live, Do for me as for the servant of the Lord : and unto whom it hath pleased the Lord to talk of you

[△] There were no Kings in Enoch his time ; Consider therefore how to ask this doubt of this phrase prophetical In Samuel I find cap. 8. that unjudged Nations had Kings long before Samuel his time. Therefore there might be some in Enoch his time : or he prophesied of them.

Behold, Lord, thou hast appointed me 50 times ; *Thrice 50 times will I lift my hands unto thee. Be it unto me as it pleaseth thee, and thy holy Ministers. I require nothing but thee, and through thee, and for thy honour and glory : But I hope I shall be satisfied, and shall not die, (As thou hast promised) until thou gather the clouds together, and judge all things : when in a moment I shall be changed and dwell with thee for ever.

* Ave. That is to say, thrice a day.

These words, were thrice a dayes talk betwixt Enoch and God : In the end of 50 dayes, there appeared unto him, which are not now to be manifested nor spoken of : he enjoyed the fruit of God his promise, and received the benefit of his faith. Here may the wise learn wisdom : for what doth man that is not corruptible ?

Thrice a day.

[△] I have not that I may say any more unto you : But believe me, I have said great things unto you : If you will have me hereafter, I will come.

△ ——.

..... Consider well my words, and what I have now said unto thee : for here thou mayst learn wisdom, and also see what thou hast to do.

△. I will, if it please you read over some of these Invitations which I have made and written here in this Book.

Ave. ..... You may not use that word Obedientes.

△. You spake of a first word to call, and of a second to constrain.

Ave. ..... It signifieth, it urgeth them more in God. I have said.

△. Note, what is meant by the name of God that was said to constrain, being the second names of two before given.

What is meant by the phrase or word Constrain, in respect of good Angels.

E. K. He is gone, and all covered with the Curtain.

△. All honour, praise, and glory, all thanks and power, is due to our God and King. So be it. Amen.

Monday, Julii, 9. Manè hora 7. three quarters, † Cracoviæ.

Orationibus quibusdam finitis ad Deum & deinde ad Gabrielem & Nalvage, &c.

E. K. As soon as he looked, he found the Stone covered with the white Curtain.

△. A pause of a ¼ of an hour : In which space I used sundry ejaculations to God, and his good Angels.

△. This day was appointed, we attend therefore your instructions. At length they appeared not, but used a voice.

A voice. ..... This day, but the Sun declining the fourth hour.

△. Your meaning is, that at after noon, at 4 of the clock.

The voice. ..... As thou hast written ——

△. The will of the Highest be done. Amen.

Monday, A Meridie, hora 4.

△. As E. K. was saying to me, that he thought that the Angels might tell the certain day and times of things to come, and that Angels could now fall no more, &c. Of such things touching Angels ; suddenly a voice was heard, as followeth.

A voice. ..... Herein will I talk with you, my brethren.

E. K. Gabriel onely appeareth : neither Nalvage nor the Table appeareth. He sitteth in a Chair, and with his fiery Dart.

Gabr. ..... The Prophets inspired with the Holy Ghost, were assured of the coming of their Messias, of their Christ : But what day, or in what year was not of mans understanding. Christ himself opened unto his Disciples his death, and the manner thereof ; but the day and hour he never disclosed.

De secundo adventu Christi.

closed. So likewise the Scriptures speak of the coming of Christ, but the day and hour, the Son of man knoweth not. But because in time to come, and for this action, (the message of the highest) And assured, and infallible Doctrine, (in respect that God appointed y n no certain time) is necessary. For, for this cause you waver my brethren: and may lose the benefit of God his favour, and mercies. O weaklings examine the Prophets, look into the doing of the Apostles: There alwayes went a promise before the end: But the end was the benefit and fruit of the promise. Some alleadge Paul, some Peter, some Daniel: But in this case shall you alleadge the sayings of God, spoken in the spirit of truth by me Gabriel, the servant of the highest. God, for three causes hideth the end, and the very time of his heavenly purposes. As after a little silence you shall shortly hear.

E. K. A cloud covereth him.

E. K. Now he appeareth again.

Gab. ..... First, by reason of his own inexplicable Est & non est esse, which is without the circumference, strength, capable vertue, and power of man, his intellectuality, whereby he appeareth to be verily one God, and incomprehensible.

Secondly, because Lucifer with his yea sayers, (damned justly) should never taste of his light, nor understand his secret judgements: which he would, and might do, if they were delivered to mans imagination, and discourse: Because it is within the circumference and compasse of his Creation. Consider of these two.

E. K. Now he is covered in a white Cloud again.

Δ. The first reason, or cause we do not sufficiently understand, or conceive.

Deus est esse, Sanctis Deus.

Non est esse, Impius Deus.

For, In the judgement day, God in his son, Christ, shall shut up his perpetual and everlasting Justice, wrath, and anger, with Hell and damnation. Leaving them, and forsaking them, and in no case to be called their God. Fratres [ne] non habebunt Deum. But they shall be without a guide, and without a Centre. Hereby you may understand, Esse & non est esse. To the purpose.

Thirdly, that man firmly perswaded of things spoken of by God above his capacity to come, and unknown, might worthily in the strength of faith, and through the effect of his promises merit his favour in Christ, and receive eternal salvation, justly before God and his Angels. These are the three causes.

Δ. This last cause, if it would please you to make more plain, it should greatly enform us and confirm us.

..... These are the three onely causes, that the ends of God his determinations are secret.

1. In the first, that God might appear omnipotent.

2. In the second, sealed up in himself from the knowledge of such as have rebelled to their destruction.

3. In the third, that man might justly be made worthy of the places prepared for him.

Wednesday following.

Nalvage is called away, and cannot be in Action with you till Wednesday. Then shall you have the Calls that you look for. And to enter into the knowledge and perfect understanding of the 49 Gates and Tables if you will.

Δ. O Lord, thy will and mercy be shewed upon us.

Gab. ..... But understand that it is a labour, the hardest and the last.

Δ. Violenti nihil difficile: God strengthen our will and faith.

Gab. ..... I have nothing else to say unto you. But God be mercifull unto you, and forgive you your sins.

Δ. Amen.

Gab. ..... And that you go hence, make haste.

Δ.

E. K. He is gone.

Δ. Gloria Patri, & filio, & spiritui Sancto sicut erat in principio, & nunc & semper, & in secula seculorum. Amen.

If he had been turned out to a blessed place, then can you not aptly say he was turned out, for he that is turned out goeth to dishonour: Even so* Adam, *from innocency through his fall, was turned out to corruption into a prison prepared for him before, if he offended. Rolandus pene mutus.

1584. Remember that on Saturday, the fourteenth day of July, by the Gregorian Calender, and the fourth day of July, by the old Calender, Rowland my Childe (who was born Anno 1583. January 28. by the old Calender) was extreamly sick about noon, or midday, and by one of the Clock ready to give up the Ghost, or rather lay for dead, and his eyes set and sunck into his head, &c.

I made a vow, if the Lord did foresee him to be his true servant, and so would grant him life, and confirm him his health at this danger, and from this danger I would (during my life) on Saturdayes eat but one meal, &c.

Remember on Wednesday night the eighteenth of July, as I walked alone about nine of the Clock in the evening, in the Chamber before my Study, (above) in divers places of that Chamber appeared flashes of fire, and did not lighten abroad.

Munday, Julii 23. Mane Circiter 8. † Cracoviæ.

Oratione Dominica finita.

Δ. I read Mapsama his first words of the book to be prepared of 48 leaves to be silvered, and would gladly know what I was now to do. By and by at the first looking into the stone.

E. K. There appeared ten Pikes, all black on the ground in a Circle as it were, and 1 in the middle, a great Pike, standing up. And Vera, falsis, falsa, seemed to be written in the middle of that Circle, somewhat blacker then all the rest, which seemed to be as new molten Pitch.

A voyce. ..... Qui non in 7. vivant in undecimo.

Δ. I made a short discourse to God of my sincere, and just dealing, hitherto of the book of Enoch, written, of the book to be silvered, how hardly I can get it performed to my contentment: (the books being laid on the Table, that of Enoch, and that as it were silvered) &c. I craved therefore the exposition of this dark shew, and as yet nothing pleasant, or plain: My conscience is clear, and I trust in the Lord his mercies.

E. K. After this appeared a man all black, naked all over.

..... O thou that art just, and hast a clear conscience, answer me.

Δ. In the name of Jesus.

Be gone. ..... Who commanded thee to be gone?

..... I take the Commandment to have been from God.

..... Thou hast broken the Commandment of God.

Δ. I can in no case yield thereunto.

..... You have dishonoured the Lord: which is just in the bottom of his own breast, and gave you warning, and commanded you to go: which is the Lord of Heaven and Earth.

Δ. O Lord, my first charge was in these words: Thou shalt go from hence with him to the Emperour: It was also said that he should make provision for this one voyage, and for the rest God had provided. So that seeing I was to go with him, and he hath not yet provided (doing what he can) what shall I say, or do?

..... True it is, thou hast had the victory, and thou, and thy Children have tasted mercy. Thou art one of those, that when I command thee to leave nothing with life, yet thou savest the fatlings to offer before him that abhorreth such sacrifice.

Δ. Lord, I know no such act of mine: The Lord be mercifull to me. For when it should come to such a case, God knoweth, I would spare none.

..... O thou just man [shaking his head] thou art become a Saul.

..... Wherefore did God (answer me) take the Kingdom out of Saul his hands?

Δ. It appeareth in the Bible, because obedience was better then sacrifice.

Reg. 1. cap. 15. ..... Even so, if thou hadst been obedient, thy obedience had been regarded. But I say unto thee, the Lord oweth thee nothing for thy labour: he hath payed thee to the uttermost.

As

As for Lasky, I will give him over to the spirit of errour: and he shall become more poor, so that his own Children shall despise him. A. L. His plague threatned.

But it shall not come to passe in these dayes: For I will keep my promise with you. You do the Commandment of Princes, and Lords, and Makers: But when the God of Justice (without your desert) entertaineth you, and placeth you, and dwelleth among you, (which is able to give you all things) commandeth you to go, and that for your own profit, you think it nothing to offend him. Δ. O most mercifull and just God.

But true it is, That, Obedience pleaseth the Lord for therein, his Creatures glorifie him most. All Worship, all Honour, all Love, all Faith, all Hope, all Charity, all the knitting together of the Heavens consisteth in Obedience. For if you had been obedient, the very stones of the earth should have served your necessity. For the Lord will not be found a lyar. Obedience.

Δ. O Lord, be mercifull to me: I could not do thy Commandment in going without A. Laskie, and him I was not able to cause to goe without provision: And to our judgement he seemeth marvellously to be carefull to make provision: but still he hath hinderance.

..... Thou (heares thous) the Lord forgiveth thee: but from henceforth, he commandeth thee that thou open not the secrets and the judgements, which the Lord shall open unto thee of the times to come, unto Laskie. Dee, Is pardoned. No more secrets of God to be opened to A. L.

Δ. I pray you to say somewhat unto us, as concerning this book to be silvered: Else what shall I do, if I have not direction herein, the case being so hard.

..... As concerning the book, when thou art at the end of thy journey it shall be told.

Δ. Misericordias Domini in æternum Cantabo, Amen. Hallelujah. Amen.

After a great hour attendance. At length appeared one all naked, black, and about the stone a Circle of black.

He said. ..... Were you not commanded to go after ten dayes?

Δ. It is true.

..... And what followeth?

Δ. I appeal unto the mercy of the highest, for that I have not offended upon wilfulnesse.

..... Say what followeth.

Δ. It followeth that we may drink of a Cup, which we would not, &c. And also we were willed to provide for this journey, which provision onely now is made for us two, and not yet for A. L. himself.

..... Thus sayeth the Lord, I have stretched out my hand, and you have hindred me.

I have brought things unto their course, but you have thrust your selves between.

When I appointed you 10 dayes, did I not also tell you that the earth was mine. 10 Dayes.

Am not I the God of heaven and earth, by whom you breath. The same which also forsaketh not my people in the time of need.

I have opened my wings, but you have refused my cover.

I have brought in madnesse into the house of the unjust, but you have prevented my judgement. Δ. Fortè. Madnesse procured in the K. and he is now recovered.

And because you have done so, and have trusted more in the mallices of the world then in my power.

[Δ. Lord we have not done so: to our knowledges.] Δ. A scourge to follow unto us: Lord be merciful.

..... Therefore shall you drink of a Cup that you would not: but it shall not fall in these dayes, but in the dayes to come.

[E. K. The fire cometh out of his mouth as he speaketh.]

Moreover,

..... If you go, it is: if you go not, it also shall be.

[Δ. Make that dark speech plain, for I need you not.]

Δ. We were willed to go, but with this condition, that Laskie should make provision.

.....I have not sealed this sin unto thee [Δ.] but yet I have measured out a plague, and it shall light upon you all. But unto Lasky I have sealed it, and it shall be heavy. A. L.

E. K. Doth not A. L. use all the means he can for provision making.

..... The time shall come when I am, and will appear unto thee in a Vision, and of seven Rods thou shalt chuse one, unto you both I speak: For I will not let passe my dishonour unpunished, neither will I sell my name like an hireling.

Notwithstanding, in the midst of my fury I will be mercifull unto you, when you think I have forsaken you, then shall the Rod break in pieces.

Δ. Lord

△. Lord deal with us, as we have juſt cauſe to put our truſt in thee, not onely in the principal ſtate of our ſalvation, but alſo in this Action.

..... You go: I will not forſake you. And what I have ſaid, that I have ſaid. And it is a living ſpirit, and ſhall bear witneſſe of it ſelf. For, great is the God of Hoſts in power, and in all his works, and words moſt juſt.

△. Lord, is it thy will that we ſhall go before this A. L. toward Prage?

..... If you tarry it is, and if you go, it ſhall be.

△. Lord make that plain unto us?

Thus ſayeth the Lord, if you tarry, it is becauſe I am, which am ſtrength, and triumph againſt mine enemies, and ſo againſt the enemies of thoſe that put their truſt in me: And ſhall be, becauſe I am juſt, and becauſe it is.

For, that I am, I am, and my ſpirit is juſtice and truth: which before, was, is, and ſhall be, and after, world without end.

△. Lord, ſhew us the light of thy countenance, and be not wrathfull againſt us any longer, be a comforter unto us in our journey to be undertaken.

..... Move me not, for I am gone.

E. K. He is gone.

△. Miſericordia Domini ſit ſuper nos, nunc & in ſempiterna ſeculorum ſecula. Amen.

ANNO 1584.

On Wedneſday the firſt day of Auguſt, at afternoon (hora 3.) we entred on our journey toward Prage, in the Kingdom of Beame, whither we came on thurſday ſevenight after, by three of the Clock, that is exactly in eight dayes.

We came by Coach, I, E. K. and his brother, and Edmond Hilton, ſo that we came to Prage Auguſti 9. by the new Calender: but by the old July 30. two dayes before Auguſt the old Calender.

Miſerere Noſtri Deus Noſter neque in eternum iraſcaris nobis.

PRAGE 1584.

Auguſti 15. Wedneſday, we began on the day of the aſſumption of the bleſſed Virgin Mary: in the excellent little Stove, or Study of D. Hageck his houſe lent me, by Bethlem in old Prage. Which Study ſeemed in times paſt (Anno 1518.) to have been the Study of ſome Student, or A-- skilfull of the holy ſtone: a name was in divers places of the Study, noted in letters of Gold, and Silver, Simon Baccalaureus Pragenſis, and among other things manifold written very fairly in the Study (and very many Hieroglyphical Notes Philoſophical, in Birds, Fiſhes, Flowrs, Fruits, Leaves, and ſix Veſſels, as for the Philoſophers works) theſe verſes were over the door.

Immortale Decus par gloriaque illi debentur
Cujus ab ingenio eſt diſcolor hic paries.

And of the Philoſophers work (on the South-ſide of the Study) in three lines, uppermoſt was this written.

Candida ſi rubeo mulier nupta ſit marito: Mox complectiuntur, Complexa concipiuntur. Per ſe ſolvuntur, per ſe quandoque perficiuntur: Ut duo quæ fuerant, unum in corpore fiant: Sunt duæ res primo, Sol cum Luna, tamen in imo, Confice, videbis, fit ab hiis lapis quoque Rebis.

Lunæ potentatu, peregit Sol Rebis actu: Sol adit Lunam per medium, rem facit unam. Sol tendit velum, tranſit per ecliptica Cælum: Currit ubi Luna recurrit hunc denuo ſublima. Ut ſibi lux detur, in ſole quæ retinetur. Nec abiit vere, ſed vult ipſi commanere: illuminans certe defunctum corpus aperte: Si Rebis ſcires, quid eſſet tu reperires. Hæc ars eſt cara, brevis, levis atque rara. Ars noſtra eſt Ludus puero, labor mulierum; ſcitote omnes filii artis hujus, quod nemo poteſt colligere fructus noſtri Elixiris, niſi per introitum noſtri lapidis Elementati, etſi aliam viam quærit, viam nunquam intrabit nec attinget. Rubigo eſt Opus, quod fit ex ſolo auro, dum intraverit in ſuam humiditatem. And ſo it ended.

Prage. Prima Actio, Anno 1584.

Wedensday, Augusti 15. Mane horam circiter 9.

△. We thanked God for his safe bringing us hither, to the place appointed by him : We desired him to direct us, as the rest of our Action requireth : And thirdly, for the Book with silver leaves, to be prepared, we required instruction, as we were promised.

Anon after E. K. his looking into the Shew-stone, he said, I see a Garland of white Rose-buds about the border of the Stone : They be well opened, but not full out.

△. The great mercies of God be upon us : and we beseech him to increase our faith in him, according to his well liking.

E. K. Amen

E. K. But while I consider these buds better, they seem rather to be white Lillies.

△. The eternal God of his infinite mercies, wipe away our blackness and sins, and make us pure, and whiter than Snow.

△. 72 Angels. E. K. They are 72 in number : seeming with their heads (alternatim) one to bend or hang toward me, and another toward you. They seem also to move circularly toward the East : but very slowly. In the middest of this Circle, appeareth a little fire, of the colour of yern, hot; ready to melt : from which fire to every one of the said lillies, is a fiery beam extended; which beam toward the end, is, of more whitish fiery colour, than it is near the center.

A voice..... E. K. A voice cometh shouting out from the Lillies, saying, Holy, Holy, Holy : and all the lillies are become on fire; and seem to tumble into that fire. And now they appear again distinctly, as before : And the fire remained in the center still : and the emanation of beams, came from it, still to the foresaid lilly buds.

E. K. I hear a sound, as though it were of many waters, poured or streaming down in the clifts of great Rocks and Mountains : The noise is marvellous great, which I hear coming through the Stone : as it were of a thousand water-mills going together.

Another voice..... Seemeth to pray over, & quo modo est.

A voice..... Male & in summo : & mensuratum est.

E. K. I hear a great roaring, as if it were out of a Cloud, over ones head : most perfectly like a thunder.

Another voice..... The Seal is broken.

△. Vide Apocalypseos, cap. 16. sed videtur quod non sequenter ordine, veluti quis ex textu judicaret; Ast non asseritur hîc effusam esse et amisi sæpe & olim vindicatam requirebant illæ quæ sub altari sunt : nondum illis erat concessum, &c. Sic hic dici potest.

Another..... Poure out the sixth Viol! that the earth may know her self [Viola Sexta.]

These are the dayes of wo, that are spoken of.

E. K. Now I see beyond like a Furnace-mouth, as big as 4 or 5 Gates of a City. It seemeth to be a quarter of a mile off : out of the Furnace-mouth seemeth a marvellous smoke or smother to come. By it seemeth to be a great Lake of pitch : and it playeth or simpreth, as water doth, when it beginneth to seethe. There standeth by the pit, pit, a white man, in a white garment tucked up: his face is marvellous fair; he ſaith very loud.

E. K. Now there cometh out of the Lake, a thing like a Lion in the hinder parts, and his fore part hath many heads, of divers faſhions: and all upon one trunk of a neck. He hath like feathers on his neck. He hath 7 heads: Three on one ſide, and three on another, and one in the middle: which branch from the neck is longer than the other, and lieth backward to his taile-ward. The white man giveth him a bloody Sword: and he taketh it in his forefoot.

The white man tyeth this Monſter his 4 legs with a chain, that he cannot go, but as one ſhackled, or fettred. Now he giveth the Monſter a great hammer, with a ſeal at that end where the hammer ſtriketh, and the other is faſhioned like a hatchet.

The white man ſaid. ..... A horrible and terrible beaſt .....

E. K. This the white man ſaid with a loud cry.

A voice out of the little fire. ..... Seal him, for two years of the Seven: For, ſo long is his power.

The Stars, with the Earth, even to the third part, are given unto thee: The fourth part thou ſhalt leave untouched.

E. K. The white man taketh the hammer, and ſtriketh him in the forehead of that head which is in the middle, and lieth down backward toward his taile.

E. K. Now all this viſion is vaniſhed away. The Stone is clear.

E. K. Now Madimi appeareth, and ſhe ſeemeth to be bigger than ſhe was.

Madimi. ..... The bleſſing of God the Father, the Son, and (in the Father and the Son) of the Holy Ghoſt, in power and comfort reſt upon you, take hold of you, and dwell with you, that you may be apt to receive the comfort of my childiſhneſſe? and the reward of ſuch Innocents, as my voice beareth witneſſe of. You both, the Spirit of God, ſalute you: which alwayes comforteth the Juſt, and is the ſtrength and ſtay of ſuch as are Elected: of whom it is ſaid, Mittam illis Angelum, in Adjutorium.

A. Are you Madimi (in the name of Jeſus) that I may ſo note of you?

Mad. ..... I am Madimi, and of that order, wherein the wonders of God are wrought with power, with you, as my words are: with my ſelf, as my creation is. Madimi eſt ex ordine poteſtatum.

*Lo, as I have often * promiſed you, ſo in the time of your neceſſity and grief, I viſit you.*

A. Thanks be to the Higheſt.

Mad. ..... Not as the friends of the world do, but as a comforting ſpirit: exalting the ſervants of God, and cheriſhing them with celeſtial food: But my mother is at hand, which openeth unto thee, the will of God. Believe me, many are the woes of the world, and great are the ſorrows that are to come: For the Lord prepareth his Rain-bow, and the witneſſes of his account: and will appear in the heavens to finiſh all things: and the time is not long. Mater Madimi. The Rainbow. Apocalipſ. 4.

Bleſſed are thoſe that believe; for faith ſhall flee from the Earth, and her dwelling places ſhall be in caves, and unknown mountains, and in parts of the Earth which the Lord hath kept ſecret for ſuch as ſhall triumph and rejoyce in the Judgement to come. Faith ſhall hardly be found on the Earth.

1. Wo be to women great with child, for they ſhall bring forth Monſters.

2. Wo be unto the Kings of the Earth, for they ſhall be beaten in a Mortar.

3. Wo be unto ſuch as paint themſelves, and are like unto the Prince of pride; for they ſhall drink the blood of their neighbours, and of their own children.

4. Wo be unto the falſe preachers, yea ſeven woes be unto them; for they are the teeth of the Beaſt.

He that hath ears, let him hear. Seven Woes.

5. Wo be unto the Virgins of the Earth, for they ſhall diſdain their virginity, and they ſhall become Concubins for Satan, and deſpiſe the God of Righteouſneſſe.

* Vide 26. Junii.

6. Wo be unto the Merchants of the earth, for they are become abominable: Behold, they are become the spies of the earth, and the dainty meat of Kings. But they are foolish: Yea, they shall fall into the pit that they have digged for others Mater Madimi. 7. Wo be unto the books of the earth, for they are corrupted; and are become a wrasting stock, and firebrand to the conscience.

Stay a season, for my mother cometh.

Δ. We read over the premisses, and so conferred of the verity and weight of them. And all this while Madimi stood still in E. K. his sight (as E. K. told me:) But because we were willed to stay, I moved no question: but wished to have some understanding, how my wife and children (at Cracovia) did. Hereupon Madimi said as followeth.

My wife tempted to destroy her self.

Mad. ..... Hear what I say unto thee [Δ.] The King of darkness whetteth his teeth against thee, and rampeth with great rage to overwhelm the world upon thee: And he seeketh the destruction of thy household, and thereby thy overthrow: The life of thy Children; yea, he tempteth thy wife with despair, and to be violent unto her self.

Δ. Why with despair?]

..... But his lips are sealed, and his claws made dull: that when he would bite he cannot: And where he scratcheth the bloud followeth not.

Madami, my friend.

But hear what thy friend sayeth unto thee: Both in her self, and by him that moveth her to speak; As thou art the servant of the God of victory, so shalt thou triumph in the God of stretchforth and Conquer. Δ. Madzilodarp. Thy wife, thy children, thy servants, and more then that, such as favour thee, even the coverings of thy house; are under the protection and defence of such as are of power: against whom, neither the rage of such as raign, neither the fury of Authority (though it hath the help of Satan) can prevail. For why? God hath care over thee: But thy faith is sowewhat lower. Take heed of Satan, he will joyn himself unto thee. But beware of him. For, sin keepeth back the power of God, which is oftentimes deferred for another season: Yea, even for the wickedness of one Soul.

This name of God is in the 26th. principall Call, beginning Vi-vial part. Salman salt, &c.

Satan his Traiterous insinuation to be taken heed of.

A. L. Lasky I look for, but I see not: Behold, I wrast my eyes after him, and cannot finde him. Peradventure he hath hid himself behinde some Mountain, or is crept into a Cave: for he appeareth not.

Δ. I beseech you, what is the cause thereof? Is he not gone from Cracovia?

Mad. ..... Sin is the greatest Mountain, and he rejoyceth when he pleaseth himself: and in the fury of his flesh creepeth into a Cave from us.

At one instant Madimi seeth all the world over.

Lo, I look for him, and cannot see him, yet see all the world over, It is a sign that God is not with him.

Δ. I beseech you, is he not gone from Cracovia yet?

Mad. ..... I tell thee, I see him not; I can say nothing of him.

Δ. Lord, our coming hither was to come with him.

Mad. ..... Therefore brought I thee hither, that thou shouldst not tarry with him. Knowest thou not that God is marvelous in his works? Hast thou not heard of his secret judgements? If thou hast, Think he hath care over thee.

My wife, children, and household must be moved to Prage.

For also, thy wife and children, and the rest of thy household must be moved hither.

Δ. When, I beseech you?

Mad. ..... Let that be my charge to answer thee.

E. K. Now here appeareth a little fire like the same, which appeared before: but it hath no beams from it, as it had before.

Mad. ..... Hic & hæc, est Mater mea. [E. K. Pointing to the fire.]

Mater Madimi. E. K. She falleth down on her face prostrate: Now she riseth again. This fire entreth into her mouth, she is waxen of higher stature then she was, she hath now three faces.

Trinity.

Δ. Now it is the vertue of the Trinity in her so represented.

Mad. ..... I. And I have a few things to say, and I say.

E. K. I hear a marvellous noise, as of many Mountains falling.

Mad. ..... Arise, and believe. The time is come, that of the foolish I will make the wise. And of such as are sinfull men, my anointed: if they encline their ear unto my voyce.

If.

E. K. The noyse is marvellous: And which of the mouths doth speak, I cannot discern.

Mad.

Mad. ..... Firſt, thou ſhalt write unto Rodulphus, as I ſhall enſpire thee. Then ſhalt thou go unto him, ſaying, That the Angel of the Lord hath appeared unto thee. —— RODOLPHUS.

[E. K. A great noyſe ſtill.]

And rebuketh him for his ſins. [I never heard any ſuch noyſe: it is as if half the world were ruſhing down an hill.]

Mad. ..... If he hear thee: Then ſay unto him, He ſhall triumph, Fear thee not. If he hear thee not: Say, that, The Lord, the God that made heaven and earth, (under whom he breatheth, and hath his ſpirit) putteth his foot againſt his breaſt.

△. Either E.K. ſpake not this, or I omitted to write it at the firſt. V. 1. 263.

And will throw him headlong from his ſeat.

Lo, thus (I ſwear unto thee) I will do. If he forſake his wickedneſſe, and turn unto me: His ſeat ſhall be the greateſt that ever was, and the Devil ſhall become his priſoner.

Therefore enquire not any more now, but ceaſe: For this is the marvellous beginning of this laſt time.

The marvellous beginning of this laſt time.

E. K. Here is Madami.

△. Bleſſed be the God of Heaven and Earth, who regardeth the ſincere intent of his ſilly ones.

Mad. ..... *When ſeed time is paſt, who ſoweth his Corn? Or, what is he amongſt men that calleth back the Sun a minute? △. Precibus ad Deum fusis, ex more nostro, &c.

1. I propounded: If the letter written for Rodolphus, were as it should be?

2. Secondly, because we were willed to invite the good Angels, for the book writting, I asked how we should invite them?

3. As concerning our wives, and my familly sending for: I required, when that should be done?

△. Quickly apparition was made.

E. K. Here is Uriel.

△. Welcome be the light of the Highest.

VRIEL. ..... Wo be unto the world: for her light is taken away. Wo, wo be unto man, for the eye of light hath forsaken him. Wo, wo be to the understanding of man, for it is led out, with a threefold spirit, * the spirit of errour and ignorance. And wo be unto such as believe not the glorious and supereminent light of this Testimony: for they are not written with the life, neither shall their portion be with the living.

* Aliquid deest forte.

The Spirit of Pride.

This Testimony to be believed upon greatest pleasures.

Thus saith he that is a mere stone, (which sitteth between the seat of light and darknesse) whose wings are great, and more than mighty: wherewith he gathereth the Stars, and the powers that hang upon the firmament of the first and lesser light: placing them and powering them, in the Spirit of Truth; and through his own power, the power of the word, whereby all things are, and are comprehended: in that he is as well in the heavens of Glory, Chastity, and Message, as also in places unknown to us.

Heavens of Glory, Chastity, Angels.

Behold, those that dig into Nature with dull Mattocks, and dull Spades, are such, as of every congealed substance can imagin, but not judge: are foolish, and of the world: whose imaginations, are become the instruments of vanity, and the piercers of him which is the father of ignorance. Wo be unto them, for their disputations and doctrines, are dogma's and dull. Wo, wo unto them, for they are such as please themselves, and are become fathers to many lewd children: of whom it is written, They are become stiff-necked and proud, and the followers of their father. Therefore have I gathered my self together, and am hidden from them; because they are proud and haters of innocency. These teach not unto you a doctrine, neither are you partakers of their Baskets; for the Spirit of God, is plain, pure, and most perfect. These breath not upon you, neither are the Ornaments of your Garlands enterlaced by these: But by him are you lifted up, that is the God of Justice, and the Discloser of his own secrets: and the headlong drawer of things to an end.

God to us is the Discloser of his own secrets.

Therefore believe, and dream not with the world: For the world shall perish, and all her adherents: and shall be cast into the pit of wo everlasting. Read the Scriptures, and understand them: but wrest them not, with the wicked. Look into the simplicity, and nakedesse of God his Promise.: View the innocency of some that received them, And let not the wickednesse of those that the Lord made vertuous, go out of your remembrance. But so Triumpheth true power, so gathereth he himself together to discomfort the Serpent: Of the lightest he maketh the heaviest, and of the weakest the strongest: And in the weakest vessels, worketh he his mercy. And why? behold, let the world, in her proud imaginations, in the ornaments of her pearls, and most pretious wits, should brag, saying, I can compare with the Lord. Hear my voice, for it is of God. The world bringeth forth no good thing, neither are the doings of man accepted; but where the spirit of humility dwelleth. Out of the depth of darknesse hath God made light: And lo, the light is great, and the darknesse comprehendeth it not. So, in the weakest will he be exalted.

Humility.

The Spirit that speaketh unto you, is he that hath a Tower to build, a strong Tower and a mighty; yea such a one, as hath not been from the beginning: No, not from the beginning. Great is the foundation thereof; for, it is of Iron; But greater are her walls; for they are of Diamond. Most great are her Turrets; for they are the seven Heads, that behold, judge, and gather: And they are made of Truth, the Spirit of Eternity. Unto the laying of every stone, are you made privy. And for this Tower are you provided.

Uriel hath a Tower to build &c.

△. and E. K.

1. For lo, the first hath appeared, and shewed himself mightily.
2. And the second hath redeemed, and overcome Satan.
3. And lo, the third appeareth, and shall visibly shew the power of God to all Nations.

Primus Filius Spiritus Sanctus.

For Now cometh the Desolation of the World, And the fall of her pride. And this is the last Rod that measureth, and shall be broken: For it is said, Now will I hear you from under the Altar, Now will I revenge the blood of your brethren.

Desolatio de qua Propheta loquitur est. Apocalyps. cap. 18. F.

O you ignorant, and of weak faith: Know you not the times that are to come? O you that spit out the meat of comfort: yea when it is put lovingly into your mouths. Why are you sorrowful? Why rejoyce you not, that the God of Justice is girded, and hath whetted his sword, upon a thousand thousand Mountains of fire? Why laugh you not the world to scorn? and deride her fornication? Weep not upon her; for she is accursed: Neither wonder at her; for she will be more wonderful.

You

† Fear not.

You have received this Doctrine in Chambers, and in secret places: But it shall stand in the great City: and upon 7 Hills, and shall establish her self in truth: Purifie the walls, and sweep out the dust and cobwels (the works of the venemous) that it may be cast into the River, and brought into no remembrance.

Yea, it shall sit in * Josaphat, in Judgement, against the wicked, and shall become a fire engendred in the cave of Thunders. Therefore, When you are commanded, lift up your heads, and † fear not: for whom, the Heavens shall fight.

When* I gave my laws, they were not secret; *neither was the place unsanctified. An Election or Choice offered to △. RODOLPHUS Imp.

But I will give thee the choice: Chuse therefore, whether thou wilt banket Now: because I have promised thee: Or tarry, till I see the time more convenient; For lo, if Rodolph. hearken unto my voice, He shall wonder, and rejoyce with thee: And I will exalt him, above the Kings of earth.

Stay a while: I come again.

△. After he had stayed a while, and read over the premisses, and talked of the manner of the Choice or Election offered: and the dealing with Rudolph: we thought good to beseech God to regard his promise, for his glory and honour, and we most humbly to thank him that he would offer a choice to me a man of no worthiness, nor wisdom: therefore most desirous to be entred speedily into the School of Wisdom, wherein we might grow, and attend the opportunities of any thing to be done or said by us; So that (if it were his will) we were, and are desirous now to be visited, as his most merciful promise importeth.

A Vision.

E. K. Now Uriel is here; he hath a Chair, and is set down in it: It is like a Throne..

Here I see a green Hill: and I see thereon three men, like learned men, in Gowns of puke-colour: they have Hats on their heads. Uriel hath in his hand a thing like a rolling-pin (of half an ell long) of Gold.

The Garden of Comfort.

I see beyond the men, a very fair Park, enclosed with pale, piked, &c. I see Roses and Lillies, and goodly Flowers in one part of it, and fair running waters in it, and little Hills, and all manner of Birds: And in the middle of the Park, is a turret, and in the top of that, a round thing like a Stone, which giveth light all the Park over: but without the Park pale, it is duskish or dark. These three men stand together upon the pitch of the bank of the Hill that goeth down toward Uriel.

There appear three diverse fair wayes to the Park, two from the Hill where the men stand, and one from the place about Uriel.

1. I see one man walk in the Park, und he picketh Flowers, and putting them to his mouth, they smoke, as the smoke of the snuff of a candel when the candle is put out.

2. I see likewise another man gathering of Flowers there, and he would put the Flowers to make them stick on his Coat, but they will not hang on but fall down, it is so bare.

3. I see a third man, who hath his Robes all belayed with lace of gold, great and small, and divers pretious Stones, and on his head a wreath like a Garland, very broad beset with very beautiful pretious Stones: and he trimmeth himself all over with the flowers of the Park or Garden, Now the three men are come from the Hill, before Uriel his ſeat.

..... I moſt humbly beſeech you that I may have acceſſe into the Garden of Comfort.
Uriel. ..... You ſhall: I am contented. 1. One of thoſe men ſaith

E. K. Now they three go toward the Garden of Comfort: they point one to another, and ſeem to talke one with another. They go in the path which leadeth from him [Uriel] toward the Park.

Uriel. ..... Theſe are Wiſe men, for they ſhall eſcape the danger of the [△] firſt and the ſecond, and ſhall live as the [△] third in comfort and pleaſure: For behold, Thoſe which have entred, and now ſhall enter, have deſerved their reward.

But ſome there be that enter, and reſpect not the end; and ſuch ſhall they be as he is, which defileth the flowers.

△ He meaneth of the firſt and ſecond which gathered flowers, and of the third. Reſpice finem.

E. K. Now here cometh a man from the Park-ward, and meeteth thoſe three men, and giveth them three very rich garments: they put off their former garments, and put on thoſe rich and beautiful garments.

Uriel. ..... Otherſome there be, and go the middle way, becauſe it is the next and ſtraighteſt, and thoſe be ſuch as enter with their own ornaments, which are very poor and bare, and upon whoſe garments can hang no pleaſure. 2.

Some there are that enter [1] from me (for without me none entreth into that Garden) and becauſe I am the light of him that lighteth by Creation, therefore is there a way perfect, and beareth teſtimony from me, whereby they are thought worthy, and are [2] apparelled for that place of pleaſure, and ſo worthily enter. 3. Note Cauſa ſine qua non: & cauſa proxima & propria ut differunt hîc.

Lo they enrich themſelves, being made rich with the beauty of ſo pleaſant flowers: and they alwayes drink of the water of wiſdom to their comfort and continuance. Bleſſed is he that ſo entreth.

1. He that defileth the flowers, was worthy to enter into our Garden: but becauſe he came not hither to my Throne, and ſo took the way deſcending from the Hill, [to me] and brought into the Garden of Wiſdom, his worldly apparel; which, lo, is alwayes as a miſt between him and true wiſdom, yet he thinketh himſelf ſatisfied. A defiler of the flowers. The Garden of Wiſdom.

2. He whoſe coat is bare, was alſo worthy: But becauſe he thought himſelf worthy, and viſited not my ſeat, he took the middle way, where are no ornaments: Therefore he brought in his own nakedneſſe which is ſo thredbare, that the flowers fall off it, as from a marble ſtone, and the waters glideth of it, as from the back of a Falcon.

Behold, I ſit: happy are thoſe, that come unto me.

Lo, you ſee, you may become wiſe; with the [1] Cloudy, wiſe with the [2] bare; and wiſe with thoſe that are [3] advanced; and dwell in true wiſdom. Three manner of wiſe men.

The Gate that thou ſhalt enter into, is a fire of fury, and of revenge: Fury and Revenge.

But be it unto thee, as thy Election is. Even from the beginning, nakedly. Open unto Rudolph.

Rudolph the Emperor must be made privy of all. RUDOLPHUS IMPER. Opera ejus fides, misericordia.

Rudolph, the manner of Gods visitation: Shew unto him the holy Vision: for I will make thee unto him an hand, an arm, yea an half body. Yea I will be merciful unto him, and seal him for my self: and he shall be thy comfort. I will put my fear into him, and he shall be afraid to sin, and he shall become a rod to those that are sinful.

Happy are those, whose works are a hope; and whose faith deserveth the aid of my light. This is of God, and I am the finger. Happy are those that are directed by me. For, in me is the true path and light of direction.

E. K. He is gone.

Δ. As concerning this Gate (lastly spoken of) whereinto I must enter, that it is a fire of fury, and of revenge: O Lord, I am afraid, if that phrase be of any displeasure to me: for I referred my Election to the will of God, as was for his honour and glory to be granted: And I have long made Petition to God for your help, and I desire nothing that should make the highest offended with me. But perhaps the service of God wherein I am to serve him now, (with his Talent of wisdom to be imparted to me) consisteth in the execution of the Justice of God, with a furious and revenging fire, as under the Altar they lie, and cry for, &c.

Precibus finitis, & invito Uriele ut nos illuminaret, dirigeret, consolaretur, &c.

E. K. Uriel is here, and about his head at a little distance, is a bright part of a Circle like a Rain-bow, &c.

Δ. We propounded unto you yesterday (O you faithfull messager of the highest) as concerning this letter, how it is liked: when it is to be sent, and by whom, &c.

Earth.

Uriel. .... O earth, how great a Monster art thou, and how great is thy wickednesse, which makest dull mans capacity, and carriest him away into an obscure and rash sense? Not without a cause art thou hated with the highest; yea, not without a cause are thy Garments made short.

My brethren, how long will you be grievous to the Lord, how long (I say) will you be without understanding.

O, how long will you consider your own commodities, and neglect the harvest of the Lord?

[Δ. I understand nothing of the occasion of these speeches.]

A reproof of our choice made.

Uriel. ..... But behold, for you have chosen unto your selves a visitation, and have broken the visitation of the Lord.

For when you were commanded you went not, and unto your selves you chuse dayes for advantage: Well, I say, Take your choice and become wise: for I am ready to deliver.

Prepare.

I say, prepare your selves, and be ready: But I fear me, (yea, I know it) that you will become foggy and misty. Notwithstanding thus sayeth the Lord: Since you will become wise, Chastise your self for a few dayes, and abstain, and you shall see that I am a God that can visit, and mightily:

The Promise becometh life. God well pleased.

I am not man, that my promises may not be, neither speak I of any thing that liveth not, for I am light, and the breath of understanding. Because you have followed my Commandments (yet some of you obstinately, and rather, as reprehenders then obedient servants) I will put a snaffle unto Satan, and unto his Ministers, and thou shalt sit in judgement against the wicked: For

A new promise to Δ.

I will multiply thee, and thy houshold: And of thy seed; yea, even of thy seed, will I finder out a Camber,[a] and will root out a people, which I have long favoured. And for this cause spared * I him unto thee, for unto him that loveth me, will I be a just rewarder. The branches of the wicked do I cut off, and make worse then the Asses dung: But unto the faithfull will I send honour, and a Crown of rejoycing.

Hui, who is he, that I cannot reward him? Or where dwellest thou, (in Heaven, or in Earth) that art, and rejoycest not by me? If thou follow my Commandments, and I once begin to love thee?

I have told thee that I will place thee here.

NOT YET Stewards Overseers Labourers. The Lord his visitation is not yet.

Δ. Lord thou knowest my heart, help, and supply my wants.

Uriel....., Behold, the Corn is not ripe, neither are the Grapes red, nor the Sun hath not yet seasoned them; Therefore, yet, need I not Stewards, but Overseers: And as yet, Laborers are to me as shadows. Because, not yet, no, not yet is the time of my visitation: therefore he that bringeth his Sickle now, must not reap for me, but must rejoyce in himself. Happy is he that tarrieth the Lord, least afterward the doors be shut, and the feast at an end. All wisdom (and sciences ces comprehended in wisdom) that worketh for himself, is of the world: But the wisdom that I give, I give openly, and without reproach: that I also rejoycing in the wisdom may be glorified, and exalted with a Diademe of honour. When Sodom cried for vengeance, had I it not ready? Could not I from heaven have consumed them with the breath of my own mouth? I, in my self know it, and am witnesse: But lo, in the pride of their filthinesse I had regard to time: And (that it might be known to all Nations) licensed my Angels, and gave them power: And lo, then made a promise unto all Nations that they should be blessed in Abraham: even the same moneth that I destroyed the Sodomites. These things did I, as unto Noe: and unto Seth, whom I loved: I made them privy of time to come, and opened unto them my judgements: because the world should be justly condemned. After the same manner made I a promise unto you: Lo, after the same manner have I called you to counsel. But you have chosen the lowest, and have refused the highest places, and have regarded your own comforts, and not my visitation. I commanded thee not to go into the woods, and to fetter Wolves: neither to saw the Tygers teeth. I delivered you not unto the wicked, neither suffered I them to rejoyce over you: But I have brought you from death, and from the dayes of lamentation, *and have dealt with you as faithfull brethren do in their divisions: Not that I forget my self, but that I would be magnified, and that you might see your wildnesse, and naked rashnesse: Many are there upon the earth, which would have burst with gladnesse, and have rent their Garments in pieces. The mercies of God upon us.

[Δ To Prage.]

A sure help promised.

Lo, you wrast me, for what is he of the world, to whom I shall confirm letters?

[Δ. This is spoken in respect of God his judgement required of the letter.]

They grieve me, because they are the doings of man: O man, let man answer unto thee, and let it suffice thee, that the mark whereat thou shootest is in my hand.

My work is not a work of hours nor dayes. But when I command, do speedily. When the Thunders fall from Heaven, and burn up the Earth, scale her face, and leave her naked. Then, Then, will you believe.

Do the Lords Commandment speedily. Note, signes.

Behold, He that is a man, being new born, is accounted a Monster.

Is it not written? Lo, the Lord looked from heaven in his visitation, and in the midday, and groaned upon her, for she had vexed him. Happy is he that is ready when he visiteth: That which I command, let it be done. For when the Kings of the earth, say, do this: They play not also the parts of their servants and subjects, but lo, it is done. Suffer me (I pray you) to have that favour.

After Dinner as we [E. K. and Δ.] were in my Study, and conferring of my choise, and very sorry that we had made our choise not of the best: E. Uriel. ..... Murmur not amongst your selves: But rejoyce and be glad, and sound into the greatnesse of Gods mercies, which beareth all your weaknesse, and leadeth you through the fogey and perilous mists of your daily temptations even by the hand: And now, not onely giveth, but also exhorteth. I speak with you as a man. Yea, let me speak with you as a man: You are oppresst with sin, and with the world, and are not yet apt for the visitation of God.

The workman and the work must be correspondent.

E. K. He is gone beyond a thing like a Hill.

Δ. After half a quarter of an hour he came again.

E. K. He hath a pair of Tables in his hand, made as of white bone: and therein are many names written orderly, one under another.

E. K. If I thought this to be of God, and this to be Uriel indeed, it were another matter: but their too much familiarity maketh me doubt.

Δ. The old saying is true in you, Nimia familiaritas parit contemptum.

Uriel. ..... Believe me, by Heaven and Earth, I am true Uriel.

E. K. He hath another Book holden unto him, by one ſtanding by him, who is like a ſhadow.

A new choice, by God his great mercy granted 73 and a half Dee his age.

Uriel. ..... Give ear, ſay and chuſe: for after this time, there is no choice.

E. K. They look very gravely on their books.

Uriel. ..... Behold my brethren, God is ready to open his merciful ſtore-houſes and gates of underſtanding unto you: But he that liveth for himſelf, and for the end of this ſhadow, limiteth his wiſdom with this number: and ſhall both have an end at once: But he that turneth him to the wall, and weepeth bitterly, ſhall enter into this Book: But he muſt not build his own houſe, but an houſe for the Lord; Neither muſt he be viſited by the challenge of promiſe, but by the meer mercy and good will of God, and at his pleaſure and appointment: He that hath underſtanding let him hear.

Friday, Augusti, 24. à Meridie. Pragæ.

Being willed to deal with Rodolphus, first by letter, and then by speech: I thought good to send the Letter before written, for the Emperour; by the Noble Don Wilhelmo de St. Clemente, the King of Spain his Præfectus Negotiorum with this Emperour: and thereupon by Emericus Suttag, the Lord Laskie his Secretary, I wrote this to the aforesaid Don Clemente, and sent it this Bartholomew Day.

EA est hominum in terris conditio (Nobilissime vir) ut sibi soli nullus natus esse videatur: Immò neque sibi ullus omnia sponte nascentia, vel ultro ab aliis oblata, quæ sibi maximè sunt necessaria recipiat. Mutuæ inde hominum emerserunt societates, mutuæ amicitiæ, mutuæ operæ, Mutua dona, Rerum commutatio, & emptionis, rerumque venditionis contractus: Aliique diversi hominum existunt status, unde hominum inter homines, & cum hominibus multiplicia procurantur officia, commerciaque. Neque omnium illorum, sola est utilitas vel (quæ peribit) voluptas, scopus ille, vel finis, quem attingere conantur & student: Sed aliud aliquibus est propositum quod Divinius quidem est, quod virtutem vel Honestatem nominare possumus; quæ cælitus demissa, hominum informet mentes & ornet, sibique coaptet: Adeo ut sedibus illas reddat cælestibus dignas. Illud, illud, ergo est Illustrissime vir quod excellentiam vestram tam mihi pridie reddidit attentam, benignam & perhumanam; Illud est quod vestram refricabit memoriam, & vestrum intigniter acuet ingenium, in Causa mea, suæ Cæsareæ Majesti tam proponenda, quam commendanda: eoque tractanda modo, quo illa tractari Arcana debeant, quæ a paucis credantur, & a paucioribus intelligantur: verissima licet sint, & ex sese utilissima. Quo citiùs Cæsarea tua Majestas, mirabilem hanc & maximam Dei, non Providentiam solum sed bonitatem etiam amplexus fuerit, eo citius & abundantiùs, meæ ad illum legationis constabit sinceritas, bonitas & utilitas. Voluissem equidem hunc inclusum libellum, literasque inclusas vestræ excellentiæ, ipsemet attulisse. Sed (cum venia sit dictum) ex digiti pedis mei offensa cuticula, non tam commodè possum hodie pedes venire. Proinde amico meo hoc onus imposui, ut (cum vestræ Excellentiæ manuum deosculatione) omnia mea vobis offerat servitia: hocque, quicquid est, pro sua Cæsarea Majestate, traderet munusculi.

Monday

Monday, Augusti 27. Mane circa 9. † Pragæ.

Precium fruitis, I propounded to God, of Madimi four things.

First, what was the cause of the errour recorded, Febr. 18. this Anno 1584. at Lasko of Sir Henry Sidney his death?

Secondly, In what sense is this to be understood, which Madimi willed me to say to Rodolphus, An Angel of the Lord hath appeared unto me?

Thirdly, Madimi said as concerning the time of my wife and children and household to be moved hither, Let that be my charge to answer thee?

Fourthly, Madimi willed me to write to Rodulphus: And I have done, and caused it to be delivered to Don Wilhelmo de Sancto Clemente, the Spanish Embassadour, to deliver it to the Emperour. God prosper it. Amen.

E. K. Here she is.

△. The eternal roots of verity bring forth fruit, to the comfort of such as delight in the pure verity for the service of God, &c. And you Madimi, as a Minister of the Highest in verity, are unto me welcome.

Causa sine q a non. Note this phrase of found.

Mad. ..... Even as mans fingers [or a thing,] touching, moving, or forcing an instrument musical, is the cause, without the which it cannot sound, or drink up the air; which again seeking issue, and feeling a stay, is the [objectum] cause of concord or dissonancy, according to the inward spirit and imagination of the thing that moveth, or of the finger moving: So the earthly part of man, which hath no motion of it self, (radically) moveth by touch or finger (whatsoever) spiritual, and soundeth out sounds; not according to her self, but according to the fiery, yea invisible, and spiritual power, wherewithal it is moved.

Three movers in man concurring.

Hereby we learn, that mans body, and his organical motions, hath three manner of movers; centraliter, by the property and perfection of the Soul, a superiore, and by descension, from the Angels or participants of understanding: E contrario, and ascending, spirits wicked, and tempters, all moving ⊙ Sol non in discernendo hominem tantum est supra hæc inferiora.

But here you must note, That as the Sun depriveth the Moon in respect of her end, which is to give light, but not of her self; So do the Angels and higher powers drown and overshadow the soul in man when they are present: working from God and in themselves, (as from above) and not by the soul as any root, or first cause of the motion.

Note the manner of the Devil working in, over man.

But when the Devil entreth, and ascendeth, he worketh not by force, but by enticement, and so allureth the soul, to grant of his possession: whereby he entreth and becometh strong.

Those that have ears let them hear; for my words are wisdom, and the grounds of many Sciences.

Mundus Humanum Corpus, &c. tanquam Cera.

Impressio { Superior, Humana, Inferior.

Pray against Temptation.

Impressio prædominans est considerandæ.

△. Per quæ homo peccat per eadem punitur: ait dixit Ascendam, &c. Jam ex Infernali statu, semper ascendere tentat.

Then, by a similitude, is the world wax: Mans body wax: and the natural motions of things, naturally extended, wax also: But our purpose is of man; which at one instant receiveth three impressions: Missive, Natural, and Offensive.

Whereby you may perceive, That man greatly needeth to pray against temptation: For the last Seal, is sign of him that oweth the wax, Happy are those, that can watch and pray: for such they are that grant not any room or interest, to the wicked ascender.

I answer you: If you be but as a string, Challenge but your own duty: But take heed, you be in time.

E. K. She speaketh, but I cannot express it.

△. I pray you let nothing of your words, that you utter to us, or before us, be unrecorded.

Mad. ..... You are not worthy to write it: for it is the harmony of the heavens.

Stay a while; for I would open that unto you, which I perceive I may not: but I come again.

[△. We read over the premises, and weighed them as instructions of the three divers movers of mans senses internally, &c. And so after a quarter of an hour

E. K. Here she is again.

Mad. ..... For he that purifieth his house, and straweth rushes, and beautifieth the chambers with Garlands, is worthy to receive (because of his aptnesse,) such as are messagers of understanding and light My friends and brethren, marvelious is the God of Wisdom in all his doings and works, and full of variety are the works of his hands.

E. K. Now she speaketh again; I understand it not.

The Answer to the first Doubt.

..... But to the Answer: The end of my purpose, Satan, perceiving you [E. K.] as well to be moved by him because of your own grant, as by the motion wherewithal you were moved and illuminated:

minated: and being the father of subtilty, and a froward understanding perverted, even in this one sentence; yea, with this one lye, to overturn, or at least to blemish the worthinesse of our message, and of your receiving: because he saw the course of nature, and the doings of man, and that this man Mr. Simon Hagek, young Hagek, would first visit thee, [△] therefore he thrust in a shingle of his own cutting and nature: Not to the intent it should be credited, but to the intent it should be a stumbling block to the action in time to come, which is now.

△. Satan about this time was very busie with E. K. and declared his name to be Satan at Lasko.

An intended lye by Satan.

My brethren, he is a marvellous work-man: and one that striketh now the most strings, in a manner, all. But he hath his reward: Therefore do I deny it to be spoken by me, or of me.

△. So by God his Grace, I did conceive, and undoubtedly think, and of many other things, besides that, I have occasion of reforming the Records: that the heavens may agree, as the phrase was used.

Reformation of the Records.

Mad...... Many there are not: But such as are, gather them together, let me sift them.

△. I thank God for that his mercy.

△. Now I beseech you to the second my present request before propounded, it may please you to give answer.

Mad..... When the King sendeth a Present to a Noble man, or unto any one that he favoureth, he loveth, or delighteth in: The Messager carrieth it, delivereth it within his house.

Answer to the second in a Parable.

E. K. She seemeth to smile.

..... He to whom it is sent enjoyeth it, he useth it; yea, peradventure (being a dainty dish) eateth of it.

Afterward the King sendeth to him by the same messager, saluteth his household, and commandeth him to say: Thus sayeth the King; Go to such a man and salute him: Tell him that I will visit him, and that I say so.

Behold, he sitteth still, and eateth not, neither doth he the Commandment of his Superiour. For lo, sayeth he: The King commanded me not; his messager came, and would so. But whether the King will so, or no, I know not.

But hearest thou: Thou wicked man, hast thou not eaten of his meat, and enjoyed the benefit of his present before? Yes, A threefold benefit, which shall continue untill the * seventh Angel, and untill the third woe.

A Mystery.

* Vide 8. 9. 10. & 11. capita Apocalypseos.

Man begetteth a Son, and lo, his wife is with Childe, and she looketh for the time of her deliverance: If the question be moved unto him, (his wife not yet delivered,) whether he have issue, or fruit of his body, say thou unto me, what shall he answer?

△. As it shall please God.

Mad..... That is no answer.

△. Then he may say, He is in hope to have the issue his wife goeth great withall, may this seem an answer, I beseech you?

Mad..... Though the Childe be not yet born, he hath issue. Deliverance, is, by reason of the issue, and not called issue of the deliverance: for he is a son as well unborn as born.

△. My prayer unto God for wisdom.

So is it of you: Thou hast prayed unto God, and he hath heard thee.

And lo, the issue, which he giveth thee is Wisdom. But lo, the Mother of it is not yet delivered.

Wisdom.

For, If woman know her times and seasons of deliverance: Much more doth he, which is the Mother of all things. But thou mayest rejoyce that there is a time of deliverance, and that thy gift is compared to a woman with childe.

DEUS Mater rerum omnium, idem & Pater.

For, as the one is, and shall be visible: so is wisdom granted, and shall appear: yea, a lively, and most perfect Creature.

Benedictus sit Deus noster, qui respicit gemitus Pauperum.

Behold, the Angels of the Lord have been sent down from God, unto him [E.K.] here is sight, which is of this household in God: He hath brought unto thee that which he tasteth not himself: And yet thou doubtest, saying, How shall I say the Angel of the Lord hath appeared unto me?

E.K. Not taster of that he seeth, or heareth.

Unto thee, [△.] we have appeared: for unto thee, [△.] we are sent. And because his eye hath seen, therefore we have joyned him unto thee, that in the time of darkness thou mightest see.

Note. △. How the Angels of the Lord have appeared to △. which may seem more certain (almost) then as the phrase is verified of the Angels appearing to Joseph, in somnis, vide Matthæi, cap. 2.

△. It is to be made perfect before the time of his visitation.

And before the time of thy visitation thou must be made perfect.

And because it is of thee and not of him: Therefore doth not God impute unto him his offences, but placeth in you the figure of time to come.

Supra lib. 15. 1584. Junii 2.

For some there be that naturally shall draw in the Plow of the Lord. And other some there be, that must have their times and seasons.

For thy household affairs, I say nothing yet, neither for thy Letter sent, or Messenger. Nam Deus agit in suis, sicut vult.

Answer to the third and fourth demands.

I have nothing else to say unto thee: but blessed be those that believe in the Lord, for they have their reward.

Deo Nostro Omnipotenti, eterno & sapienti: sit omnis honor, Laus & Gloria. Amen.

Note. At noon, this day I received Letters from the Lord Laskie, from my wife, and from my brother Nicolas Fromonds in England: how Mr. Gilbert, Mr. Sled, Mr. Andreas Firmorshem, my Book-seller, used me very ill in divers sorts.

The Dates of the Letters from England were of the 15. and 16th. day of April 1584. My wife is in great sorrow for my brother Nicholas.

Monday, August 27. At night after Sun set, Emerich Sontag brought me word from the Spanish Ambassadour, that he had delivered to the Emperour this day my Letters and Book: and that he took them graciously and thankfully, and said that within three, or four dayes he would let the Spanish Ambassadour understand, when he would give me audience.

Deus bene vertat: & ad sui nominis honorem & Laudem. Amen.

Saturday, Septembris 1. Ante Meridiem Circa 10. † Pragæ.

Δ. As I, and E. K. sat in my little Study: after our talk of divers matters, and of my expecting audience at the Emperour his hand, &c. E. K. saw three little Creatures walk up and down in the Sun-shine, about an handfull from the pavyment: and the Creatures themselves very small, not an hundredth long, like little shadows, or smokes, and the path wherein they walked seemed yellow. They walked a good while to and fro, till at length I suspected that they were sent to us; and so prepared the shew-stone: But E. K. said, he had rather see them thus out of the stone. I said that in the stone we have warrant that no wicked thing shall enter: but without the stone, Illuders might deal with us, unless God prevented it, &c. E. K. said again, he had rather deal thus.

One of the 3. spiritual creatures said. He in the middle of the Three.....

..... His meaning is above thy sight.

E. K. Now two of them seem to kneel down in the Sun beams.

..... Blessed be God the Father, God the Son, and God the holy Ghost, the most holy and blessed Trinity: One, true, mighty, perfect everlasting and incomprehensible God.

[Δ. Amen, Amen, Amen.]

..... Which will be comprehended with those that live in the Heavens (the true Church of God) of such as measure him by faith, and not reason: which hath sent us to do his will; Both in that he will turn his heart: And in that he doth vouchsafe to make you witnesses of his secret purposes, and determinations in hand.

Δ. Rod. his heart is to be turned by God, but I know not the meaning.

Δ. Sunt duæ lineæ ultimæ in linea Spiritus Sancti in Tertia Tabula.

The [1] middlemost said —— I am the midst of the third, and the last [Δ] of the spirit of life: Understood in this temporal controversie, and conflict of mans Soul: but not according to his eternal and immensurable proportion.

Flagellum Dei. The [2] on the right side said —— I am the second of the third, which dwell in the spirit, and power of God in earth: I have power to scourge them that resist the power, will, and commandment of God: and I am one of those that stand, and is perpetual.

Trinitas & unitas Divina. For even as the father, son, and holy spirit are one, but of themselves and being dilated, is full of power, and many. So are we one particularly in power, but separated; notwithstanding, spiritually, of, and amongst others, and dilated in the will of God, and into the branches of his determinations: but particularly living, and joyntly praising God.

E. K. Now [3] the other (the third) on the otherside standeth up, and sayeth.

3 ..... The Kingdom of God, and of his son Christ: (which is true God, and the substance of his father, True God of true God) is contrary to the Kingdom of this world.

Δ. The Confession and belief of the Catholick Church: not to be talked of now.

E. K. What is that, God of God?

E. K. They are disappeared: but their path appeareth in the aire, in sun-beams still.

E. K. They are here again.

Δ. Half a quarter of an hour they had disappeared.

Filii fidei & non rationis humanæ. ..... Happy are those that are of his Kingdom, for it hath no end; yea, happy are those that are the sons of faith, and not of the world: which is called Reason. Which is blinde, and is sealed with with the mark of destruction. Because she persecuted, and put to death the Son of God, the God of righteousness, and light of all that live.

I am the last of the first, of the fourth, and I have power to gather up the blessings of God, and to set them (if they be disdained) in a better soyl.

△. There was great disquietnesse in E. K. being come home from our Hosts house, where he had lyen all night upon a form: by reason he had been (which he never was the like afore, as he said) with wine overcome suddenly: yet intending with himself to take heed of being overshot in drinking of wine: being requested by the Hostes to give her a quart of wine upon the good bargain he had in a clock he bought of her for five Stuckats: In this company of drinking was Alexander, the Lord Lasky his servant, who came with us to Prage. Unto whom E. K. (when the drink on the sudden had overcome him) said he would cut off his head, and with his walking staffe did touch him fair, and softly on the neck, sitting before him: This Alexander being half drunken himself, by & by took those words in great snuffe, and went to defend himself, and so took his weapon to him, and thereupon they by caused Alexander to go down: It was supper time; and I that night refrained to suppe, and so tarrying at my Lodging, and looking out, saw Alexander sitting on the great stone against our Lodging: I called to him, and told him that they were at supper: And he came over to me, and he had wept much; he complained of E. K. his former words, and the touch of the staffe, how it was against his credit to take that in good part, and spake many Souldiers terms of stout words, not worthy the recording. I, thereupon went to our Hosts house, and would understand the very truth; and there I found E. K. fast on sleep on a form, most soundly: for which I was right sorry: And yet better pleased to perceive the words of E. K. which so moved Alexander (being half drunken) to have been spoken by E. K. when wine, and not wit, bare rule: and so pleaded long time with Alexander, that of words spoken so as they were, no such exact account was to be given to him, &c. And after two hours perswasion caused Alexander to go to bed in our Lodging, where he used to lye, For he would have gone out, to our former Inne, in thoſe raging half drunken pangs, he was in: which I thought not good. This Monday morning E. K. coming home, and ſeeing Alexander, as he came in; he ſaid, they tell I ſhould have ſpoken words, which greatly offended thee yeſternight, and that I touched thee with my ſtaff, &c. I know nothing of it, and ſhoke hands friendly with Alexander. Well ſaith Alexander, Si fuiſſet alius, &c. E. K. came up to me: I told him how ſorry I was for this miſchance, and told him of the Watchmen perceiving Alexander his diſquiet mind, and hearing his words, they came to me and charged me to have a care of the peace keeping (as they did indeed) And farther ſaid, that Alexander in his rage, ſaid, that rather, or before, he ſhould cut off his head, that he would cut E. K. in pieces. So ſoon as I had expreſſed that word of this drunken Alexander likewiſe, (whom now I ſaw quiet, and E. K. alſo quiet) ſud denly E. K. fell into ſuch a rage, that he would be revenged of him for ſo ſaying, and for railing on him in the ſtreet, as he did, &c.

M ch a do I, Emericus, and his brother, had to ſtop or hold him from going to Alexander with his weapon, &c. At length we let him go in his dubblet and hoſe, without a cap or hat on his head: and into the ſtreet he haſted with his brothers Rapier drawn, and challenged Alexander to fight: But Alexander went from him, and ſaid. Nolo Domine Kelleie, Nolo. Hereupon E. K. took up a ſtone, and threw after him, as after a dog, and ſo came into the houſe again, in a moſt furious rage for that he might not fight with Alexander. The rage and fury was ſo great in words and geſtures, as might plainly prove, that the wicked enemy ſought either E. K. his own deſtroying of himſelf, or of me, or his brother, &c.

Satan his exceeding vehement temptation.

This may ſuffice to notifie the mighty temptation and vehement w rking of the ſubtile ſpiritual enemy Satan, wherewith God ſuffered E. K. to be tempted, and almoſt overcome: to my great grief, diſcomfort, and moſt great diſcredit: if it ſhould (as the truth was) have come to the Emperours underſtanding, except he had known me well, &c. I was in great doubt, how God would take this offence, and deviſed with my ſelf how I might, with honeſty, be cleared from the ſhame and danger that might ariſe if theſe two ſhould fight, &c. At the leaſt it would croſſe all good hope here with the Emperour, &c. for a time, till God redreſſed it.

Note the cauſe o this recording.

1 Comfort in time of need.

After I had brought E. K. to ſome quietneſſe, (by yeilding much to his humour, &c. and ſaying little:) not long after, came my meſſager from my wife at Cracovia: and Hugh my ſervant with him, to my great comfort through her letters, and the full ſatisfying of me by Hugh my ſervant his knowledge farther than conveniently could be written.

2 More Comfort in time of need

About 2 of the clock after Noon, came this letter to me, of the Emperour his ſending for me.

Octavius Spinola Chamberlain and Stall-Maſter in the abſence of the Officer who is ſent into Spain.

Hereupon, I went ſtraight up to the Caſtle: and in the Ritter-Stove or Guard-Chamber I ſtayed a little; in the mean ſpace I ſent Emericus to ſee what was of the clock: and the Chamberlain, (Octavius Spinola) ſpied him out of the Emperours Chamber window, and called him, who came up to me, and by that time was the Chamberlain come out to me; and by Emericus he underſtood that I was the man the Emperour waited for. He came to me very * curteouſly: told me of the Emperours deſire to ſee me, and to ſpeak with me. So he returned to the Emperour into the privy Chamber, and came out again for me, and led me by the skirt of the Gown through the Dining-Chamber, and the Privy Chamber, where the Emperour ſat at a Table, with a great Cheſt and Standith of Silver, before him, my Monas and Letters by him, &c. I came toward him with due reverence of three curſies, who ſhewed me a gracious and chearful countenance.

* Hora tertia exactè à meridie.

Then I craved pardon at his Majeſties hand, for my boldneſſe to ſend his Majeſty a Letter and the Monas Hieroglyphica (dedicated to his father.) But I did it of ſincere and entire good will I bare to his father Maximilian, and alſo unto his Majeſty: and that the rather, becauſe I had good proof of the favour whi h Almighty God beareth unto his Majeſty. He then thanked me for his fathers Book, and did affirm, that he believed me, that I was affectionate unto his Highneſſe: And of my eſtemation with the learned of the world, he had heard

heard by the Spanish Embassadour; and also of my zealous mind towards his grace. And commended the Book Monas, but said, that it was too hard for his Majesties capcity; and added, that the Spanish Embassadour told him, that I had somewhat to say unto him, Quod esset pro sua utilitate. I answered, So I have, and withal looking back whether any man were in the Chamber or no, I found that we were alone: Hereupon I began to declare that All my life time I had spent in learning: but for this forty years continually, in sundry manners, and in divers Countries, with great pain, care, and cost, I had from degree to degree, sought to come by the best knowledge that man might attain unto in the world: And I found (at length) that neither any man living, nor any Book I could yet meet withal, was able to teach me those truths I desired, and longed for: And therefore I concluded with my self, to make intercession and prayer to the giver of wisdom and all good things, to send me such wisdom, as I might know the natures of his creatures; and also enjoy means to use them to his honour and glory. And in this purpose made divers assayes: and at length it pleased God to send me his [Δ] Light, whereby I am assured of his merciful hearing of my long, fervent, constant, and continual prayer, in the cause before specified: And that, His holy Angels, for these two years and a half, have used to inform me: and have finished such works in my hands, to be seen, as no mans heart could have wished for so much; yea they have brought me a Stone of that value, that no earthly Kingdom is of that worthinesse as to be compared to the vertue or dignity thereof, &c. And that these things be true, I protested, and took to witnesse the God of Heaven and Earth, by whose Commandment I am now before your Majesty, (said I) and have a message from him to say unto you; and that is this:

Δ. Uriel.

Books finished.

A Stone brought by a good Angel.

The Angel of the Lord hath appeared to me, and rebuketh you for your sins. If you will hear me, and believe me, you shall Triumph: If you will not hear me, The Lord, the God that made Heaven and Earth, (under whom you breath, and have your spirit) putteth his foot against your breast, and will throw you headlong down from your seat.

My message to the Emperour Rodolph done.

Moreover, the Lord hath made this Covenant with me (by oath) that he will do and perform. If you will forsake your wickednesse, and turn unto him, your Seat shall be the greatest that ever was; and the Devil shall become your prisoner: Which Devil, I did conjecture, to be the Great Turk, (said I) This my Commission, is from God: I feigne nothing, neither am I an Hypocrite, an Ambitious man, or doting, or dreaming in this Cause. If I speak otherwise then I have just cause, I forsake my salvation, said I.

The Emperour said, he did believe me, and said, that he thought I loved him unfaignedly, and said, that I should not need so earnest protestations: and would not willingly have had me to kneel, so often as I did.

All the course of our Actions and Visions, nakedly to be shewed to the Emperour.

Farther I said, His Majesty was to see and understand nakedly, from the beginning, the whole course of this Angelical leading, instructing, and comforting of me: for so I was commanded, that I should from the beginning, nakedly open unto Rodolph, the manner of God his visitation, and shew unto him the holy Vision: Which my charge I am ready to do. The Emperour said, at another time, he would hear and understand more. I spake yet somewhat more in the purposes before, to the intent they might get some root, or better stick in his minde. To be short, he thanked me, and said he would henceforward, take me to his recommendation and care, and some such words (of favour promised) he used, which I heard not well, he spake so low. In the end perceiving that his will was to end for this time, I did my duty with curtsie; and at the door going out, I turned back, and made curtsie, and so came into the next Chamber, where the Noble Octavius Spinola came to me again, and with curteous words, offered me great friendship. I took my leave of him, and so came through the Ritters Stove or Guard Chamber, and so down, and home. I had a large hour audience of his Majesty.

Octavius Spinola.

Δ. In thy name (O Jeſu) we attend thy words by thy meſſager to be uttered.

Uriel. ..... Give ear unto my voice.

E. K. Now he is become like a great wheele of fire, like a waggon

A wheel: He thruſt out his hands on the ſudden, and ſo became like a wheel full of mens eyes: it turneth round, it is full in all places of thoſe eyes, like living and ſeeing eyes.

V Now cometh fire out of it in 4 places.

A great white Eagle.

Now there is a great Eagle, which is come, and ſtandeth upon it: It is a white Eagle: The wheel turneth ſtill, notwithſtanding that ſhe ſtandeth on it.

I E. K. She hath in her beake, like a ſcrol of parchment. She hath two monſtrous eyes: one like fire red; her right eye as big as my fiſt,

Under the wheel is a great valley, and in it a great City, and a Hill on

I the Eaſt part of it. And all toward the South are Hills.

The City is as as big as ſix of Cracovia: and many ruins of houſes in it there appear.

O There is one place in it covered, ſquare like a little Chappel: It hath a little round pinacle in the end of it; and over it in the air, hanging a little fire bright.

N There be many like unto fowles, like Ravens, and their heads like unto unto bright fire: They flie into a Country a great way off from this City.

Now Uriel standeth beside the wheel, and the wheel is as it was before: and he as before with the Scarf.

The Eagle cryeth and skriketh as a Gull, or the Sea fowles do.

Uriel seemeth to descend from the air above, and to come to the side of the Shew-stone.

Uriel..... Man speaketh not with thee: wherefore dost thou wrast the Lord? All things that are delivered thee are plain.

Δ. Lord, I do thus speak to be perfectly instructed in what sense your words are to be understood, when you said: This is the end of teaching.

Δ. Uriel, or perhaps in the name of God.

Uriel..... Thou hast called upon me, and I have heard thee. Thou hast desired comfort, and I have comforted thee.

The spirit of choice Vide 13. September.

Thou hast the spirit of choice.

Garden of the Lord.

Be it sufficient unto thee, that the Garden of the Lord is open unto thee: where there is no hunger, nor thirst, but a filling spirit, a comforter.

Note.

† What care is it unto me, if the Kings of the earth say: Lo, this is not of me. Lo, this is not of the highest.

Uriel..... Behold, I am the light, and servant of God: Blessed are those which believe, and are made partakers in this Testimony: by the which you are become Prophets, and are sanctified for the coming of the Lord.

Δ. He putteth us in remembrance of our frailty; and offence committed before noted.

But lo, why do I speak unto you, who have defiled your selves? I will take up those things that I have, and will be gone. Lo, blessed is he that giveth ear unto the Lord.

E. K. Now all is vanished away, and he is disappeared: Wheele, Eagle, Citie, and all, &c.

Δ. All laud, thanks, honour and glory be to the eternal, Almighty, most just Judge, and mercifull father our God, the God of Heaven and earth, whom of his infinite goodnesse, we beseech to have mercy upon us, and to purifie our hearts and consciences, granting us humble contrition, and sincere confession of our transgressions and iniquities whatsoever. Amen.

Note. While I was thus requesting God, E. K. made a vow of penance, during his life: (in token of hearty sorrowfulnesse for his fault in that dayes action noted) never to eat his supper, or evening meal on Saturdayes, during his life; wherein I beseech the highest to regard his inward intent, and his continual memory of the Lord his mercies, in sparing him when he most had offended him.

E. K. His vow of fasting during life.

Δ. Deo Nostro vero, vivo, omnipotenti, & eterno sit omnis Honor Laus & Benedictio, nunc & in perpetuum. Amen.

Wednesday, September 5. NOTE.

Δ. The morning of this Wednesday (before I prepared my self for the former action) I sent Emerick with two Letters to be delivered: the one to the Spanish Ambassadour (giving him thanks for his honourable dealing with the Emperours Majesty in my behalf) and the other to the Noble Octavius Spinola: thanking him likewise, and requiring his instruction, or advise how I might most conveniently proceed in dealing with the Emperours Majesty: The Copy of which Letter I thought good to record here, that the effect thereof consequent, might have the light of the Original cause (Divine and humane) annexed.

Emericus went and delivered my Letter to the Spanish Ambassadour: But this he brought back again; saying, that the Emperour was ridden very early abroad to Brandeish, or elsewhere: (not certainly being known) and that this Noble Octavius Spinola was gone with his Majesty.

Hereupon I determined with changing the Date, to *send unto him at the Emperour his Majesties returning to Prage. Deus bene vertat.

And becauſe his writing is not eaſie to be read, I have written it plainer ſomewhat, as followeth:

Which anſwer, both by word of mouth, and thus by writing being received by me: and the ſaid Emericus being (by the Noble Spinola) willed at Evenſong time, to bring my anſwer herein; which I gave him of my great good liking the ſame, and moſt humble thanks to his Majeſty, for ſo wiſe and gratious his conſideration had of the cauſe. Hereupon I willed Emericus to go up to the Castle, and to bring himself in sight of the Noble Spinola, if he could. Thereby to help his memory, for warning and information to be given to the said Doctor Curtz: That so we might come togecher, so soon, as conveniently might be.

Thursday, Septembris 13. Manè, horam circiter 9. † Prage.

Δ. Precibus finitis, and the case propounded of the Emperour his Answer, for dealing with Doctor Curtz, a man of his Privy Council, faithful, learned, and wise: upon the considerations alledged, I requested of God, his pleasure to be signified unto me, by some of his faithful and true Messagers: whether I shall openly and frankly deal with this Doctor, so, as the Emperour, by him may understand that which he should have done at my mouth and hands originally: And whether I may, both alone with the Emperour, and before, and with the said Doctor, deal in this Action as occasion shall serve from time to time, at my discretion, informed by his secret grace divine. ——

Δ. Nothing appearing, or being heard, in a quarter of an hour space, I suspected some of our misdoings, to be the cause of the Lord his refraining to answer: and thereupon I did fall to prayer for mercy and grace, and deliverance from the assaults and malitious purposes of the Devil against us: And that I did the rather, because as I felt my good Angel (or other good friend) in vertue, so I felt Pilosum, sensibly, busie, and as it were to terrifie me with my offences past, or to put me out of hope, at this present, from being heard. But I held on to pray divers Psalms, and at length against the wicked tempters purposely. After my prayers and assuring E. K. that the spiritual enemy was here busie, and attended to frustrate this dayes Action: He answered, that against him [E. K.] he could not prevail, or accuse him, for his late notable fault; for he had made a reckoning, and sorrowful bewailing for that his trespass, to the Lord, and that he doubted not of forgiveness; and that he was so reconciled to God, that Satan nor any other wicked accuser, could put him in any doubt of God his mercy, &c. And he spake very well both of repentance, Gods mercies, his justice, and of these Actions. Reconciliation

Mary, he confessed that by reason, he himself was an unmeet person to come before the Emperour, or Princes, &c. and therefore if it would please God to discharge him of further medling, so, by reason he might seem well at ease, &c. At length, after an hour appeared Uriel; but with a Scarf before his face, as he had last.

Δ. God send us the brightness of his countenance when it shall please him.

Uriel. ..... True it is, that in respect of the terrour and force of God his wrath and indignation in [1] Judgement: Reconciliation is made: through that power which is given unto the Lamb, to whom all power is given in Heaven and Earth: But with the [2] congregation, and the members of Christ his body, the number of the faithful, the Church of God, you have not made reconciliation, And therefore, are not sinners worthy to behold the face of true light and understanding: for there is a double Reconciliation: One (and the first) between the Conscience and the Judge: through the force of faith and repentance: that is to say, Reconciliation against Judgement. Another, (the second) Reconciliation between the Spirit of Truth, (the Church of God) and mans Conscience. Reconciliation of two sorts. Wherefore Uriel his face is yet covered. 1. 2.

Vide supra S premb. 5. The eye was commanded to be reconciled to the Spirit of Truth.

Behold I teach you a mystery.

1. Those that are at one with God, shall not be judged with the wicked in the last Judgement: Notwithstanding the Justice of God is pure, and undefiled: and suffereth not mans fault unpunished. 2. But he that is at one with the Spirit of God, is made one with him, and without punishment, Justitia Dei.

For there are many things that God beareth witnesse of, in the soul and secret Chambers of man, that neither the blessed, already dignified, nor to be dignified, do, or can know: which is the cause that the soul of man, (after his body sleepeth) being found polluted, is received, and snatched up, of such as are the Messagers of punishment: and so, according to the multitude of their sins, are in horrour, and punishment. Therefore not all, that are punished, shall be damned; Neither is it evident unto the Angels, who shall be saved: I speak generally. Δ. Ab occultis meis munda me, &c. A temporal punishment.

Therefore when you offend, be also reconciled unto the Mother of the house: that you may have place before such as are reproved. Ecclesiæ catholicæ reconciliari debemus.

Herein you may understand the retaining of sin; For the [Δ] retaining of sin is a judgement: And therefore it is necessary that God should hold a general day, that those that have trusted in him, and inwardly have been sorry for their offences, may also taste of his mercy. Else how could it be verified, that the Prophet saith? If in Hell, thou art also there.

Δ. Accipite Spiritum Sanctum, quorum remiseritis peccata, remittuntur eis: & quorum retinueritis, retenta sunt: Ioannes 20. E. Math. 16. C. 18 C. Si descendero in Infernum, tu illic es.

Ignis purgatorius. But, here, there is a Caution; All sins that are forgiven by the Church, passe not the fire: but he that is forgiven in his heart by God, in his Son Christ; and [2] reconciled through the holy Spirit, to the body from whence he is fallen, is safe, as well from the wrath of God to come, as the punishment due unto his offences.

The perfect assurance by Christ and his Church or Spirit. And therefore is the reconciling of brethren, of great force. Wherefore * hath Christ left his body with the Church? Wherefore is he called the bread of Life?

* Math. c. 5. D. I say unto you, my brethren, that the body of Christ dignified and glorified, is true bread; is true comfort, which cleanseth sinners that are penitent, and wipeth away the punishment of adversity.

△. Aliqui hæretici dicunt Christi corpus fuisse phantasticum. Happy are those, that eat of him, and that account not his body, as the shadow of a candle.

Behold, I teach you: Even as the Spirit of God filleth the Congregation of the faithful; so doth the body of Christ now dignifie, fill and cleanse all that receive with sorrow: sorrow I mean for their wickednesse.

But lo: his body is become an offence unto the world. Many there are that say, This is Christ: But behold I teach you. Even as all things were made by him, spiritually: So are all, that are of his Elect, nourished through him, bodily.

Lo, he is become one power, one God; in that he is neither separated from his body, nor separateth his body from his Church.

After a while I come again.

E. K. Now he is gone away.

△. We read over the premises to our great comfort, in the mean time, while URIEL disappeared.

E. K. Now he is here again.

△. Now he answereth to my request first propounded. Uriel. ..... O ye timerous birds, How long run you headlong into the Wilderness? How long will you be ignorant? How long will you tempt the Lord with the spirit of foolishnesse and errour? Behold thou hast not judged well of me. Behold thou hast placed me in a low room, and hast taken the Garland from my head, and trod it under thy feet: For, what is Rodolph, that is not at leisure for the Lord, the God of righteousnesse, the King of Heaven and Earth?

Rudolp. Are they troubled with things that are greater than I? True it is; for with me there is no trouble: for where I enter, I set all things in quiet. Will the Counsellours of the Earth, sit in judgement to sift the Lord? O ye fooles and starvelings of the Earth: O you of little understanding. Think you, that you are able to find light amongst the affairs of the World? true judgement in the imagination of man? or verity amongst the hoords and corruption of covetousnesse and falshood?

If. If he be not at leisure to hear me: Have not I told thee, that I have another in store? Lo, I see, all flesh is full of folly.

△. It is not yet done: and therefore we ask counsel of thee; and I thank thee (O Lord) for rebuking of us, before farther errour committed.

Spiritus Electionis quid sit vide pagina sequente. Uriel. ..... Lo, I gave unto thee, the spirit of choice: and therefore I will regard thy doing, and will wink at thy weakness. I will blesse all that thou takest in hand, and will cover thee with a Robe of Purple; that thou mayst understand that all is mine, and that I raise up whom I list.

Rodulp. Spiritus veritatis. And I say unto thee again: Lo, Rodolph hath heard thee, And I will poure my Spirit of truth into thee, and thou shalt be a light unto him.

If. But, now, If he live righteously, and follow me truly; I will hold up his House with Pillars of Hiacinct, and his Chambers shall be full of Modesty and Comfort. I will bring the East wind over him, as a Lady of Comfort: and she shall sit upon his Castles with Triumph, and he shall sleep with joy.

△. From the East, Comfort and Triumph. Rodolphi soboles in tertiam generationem. Moreover I will blesse his loynes: and his House shall stand to the third generation: and to the end; for, now, the World hath hoary hairs, and beginneth to be sick.

If. Secresie required. If he despise my commandment, I will put the sword against him; and in his dwelling places shall his enemies banket. (But those that deal with thee, let them sow up their mouth: lest being cut with a Razor, they speak not.) For those that neglect my Judgements I will despise them, and their seed shall wither, as corn sown out of season: But he that loveth me, I will multiply him, And he that addeth unto me, I will adde unto him a thousand.

Addere Deo quo modo bonum est: vide infra, Spiritus Electionis supra Sept. 5. But lo, thou hast the spirit of choice.

△. O Lord open my understanding of that saying.

Uriel. ..... Quos tu eligis, electi sunt: quo autem despicis, despiciuntur etiam.

△. Dwell thou in me (O Lord) for I am frail, and (without thee) very blind.

E. K. Now he is gone.

△. Thy glorious name (O Lord) be magnified, praised, and extolled for ever. Amen.

△. I spake this to E. K. △. I perceive that I shall not deal with the Doctor Curtz now. Well, I can let him understand that I had rather deal with the Emperour himself, and so shift my self of him.

E. K. He is here again.

Uriel. ..... Yes, deal with him: and hide nothing from him.

D. Curtz. △. With Doctor Curtz, O Lord?

Uriel. ..... I —— And therefore I said, He that addeth unto me, I will adde unto him a thousand:

thousand: But he that playeth with me; lo, I swear, I will blot his name from life:
[△] Liberè agas: Deus est enim liber.
E. K. Now he is gone.

△. Frankly as my term was in my first request, or question this day made.

△. Deo Omnipotenti, Invisibili & misericordi sit omnis honor, laus, gratiarum actio, & Gloria: nunc & in perpetuum. Amen.

Thursday, Septembris 13. Mane. † Pragæ.

Emericus did bring himself in sight of the Chamberlain, the Noble Octavius Spinola: as I willed him: And he called Emericus to him, and told him, that this day Doctor Curtz should understand the Emperour his pleasure, to confer with me, &c.

Emericus about 10 of the clock before Noon being in the Ritters Stove (or Guard-Chamber) saw Doctor Curtz come out from the Emperour.

Friday, Septemb. 14. Mane, circa 10.

I sent Emericus to Doctor Curtz his house in parva parte: with my commendations; and to say that before, I understood of Doctor Hageck, Mr. Doctor Curtz his desire to be acquainted with me: whereof I was very glad and desirous: and now I trust that the Emperour his majesty, by his Authority hath taken order with him whereby to begin our acquaintance, and (God willing) our perpetual friendship. The Doctor was at home, and to Emericus (saying the effect of my message before noted) the Doctor declared that Captaverat antea varias occasiones mecum contrahendæ amicitiæ, &c. and that now he is very joyful of the occasion offered by the Emperours Majesty: and that this day sundry affairs did hinder the opportunity of our meeting, but to morrow at any hour (at my choice) he would be ready to welcome me to his house: and so with the usual phrase of offering all his services to my pleasure, he sent Emericus to me with his said Answer.

Quos Deus conjungit, Homo ne separet. Amen.
Quos autem Deus & Cæsar copulat, copulatissimi maneant. Amen.

Saturday, Septembris, 15. A Meridie hora (ferè) prima. † Pragæ.

I came to the foresaid (called Doctor) Curtz: about one of the clock after Noon, who had all the day been ready to have heard me, if I would so have had it: but I sent him word in the morning by Emericus, that after Noon, (as now at this hour) I would come to him. Being come, he entertained me curteously: and two chairs being at the Tables end, he gave me the preeminence (by a friendly kind of earnestness) Then he told me, that long since in Germany, he had heard of my fame, and had seen of my writings: and that he was very glad of the opportunity now of my coming to this City; and that otherwayes he was desirous of my acquaintance, but chiefly seeing the Emperour his Majesty Ore tenus (for that was his phrase) by word of his own mouth, had willed him to hear what I had to say to his Majesty. I began and declared my long course of study for 40 years, alwayes, by degrees going forward, and desirous of the best, and pure truths in all manner of studies, wherein I had passed, and that I had passed as many as were commonly known, and more than are commonly heard of. But that at length I perceived onely God (and by his good Angels) could satisfie my desire: which was to understand the natures of all his creatures, and the best manner how to use them to his divine honor and glory, and the comfort of the elect, and also to the reproof and confusion of the adversaries of his name and honour. And herein I had dealed sundry wayes: And at length had found the mercies of God such as to send me the instruction of Michael, Gabriel, Raphael, and Uriel, and divers other his good and faithful Messagers, such as I had here now brought books (about 18) to shew him the manner of their proceeding: And that I thought it good to begin at the last book, which also concerned most this present Emperour Rodolph. And so I did; and so by degrees from book to book lightly, I gave him a taste or sight of the most part, and also let him see the Stone brought me by Angelical ministery, &c.

△. Studiorum meorum scopus.

Rodolph.

All things being seen and heard, that in six hours I could shew him: at length he required of me what conclusion, or summary report he should make to the Emperour. I answered, as he had occasion of the things seen and heard; but if he would follow my counsel (somewhat expert in these Divine and Angelical doings.) That his Majesty was to thank God for his great mercies and graces offered: and that by me one, who most sincerely and faithfully gave his Majesty to understand the will of God herein, and that his Majesty was to do, as Mary (the blessed Virgin) did, to lay up all these my informations in his heart, and to say Ecce

My counsel to Doctor Curtz.

servus Domini, fiat voluntas tua, and so to attend the manner of the Lord his proceeding, while he framed his life, as it became every Christian to do.

He said, that he would write (for his own memories help) some short note of his observations of my speeches, and things seen and marked: and that he would to morrow (being Sonday) or on Monday, if he conveniently could, make a report to the Emperour, and so with all speed give me to understand further of the Emperour his Majesties will and pleasure. Hereupon courteously he brought me down to the street door of his house; and I came home after seven of the Clock, and an half, in the evening.

The mercies of God be on me, and his name be magnified and extolled in this world, and for ever. Amen.

He also said that in the former my Records that I had noted many a ly, and untruth.

Note. In the mean space while I was thus occupied with the foresaid Mr. Curtz. E.K. was visited at our Lodging with a wicked Tempter, who denied any Christ to be: and that as the heart received comfort of all the Members of the body: So that he, who is God, of all things received comfort by Angels, and other the Members of the world: and that I was now with one, who would use me like a Serpent, with head and tayl compassing my confusion, &c. he earnestly reviled E. K. in divers manners: he said, that E. K. should be damned, and said: moreover, that of our practises should never come any fruitfull end, &c.

Δ. The eternal and Almighty God confound the Adversaries of his truth and glory, and of his Son Jesus Christ our Redeemer, and the Triumphant Conquerour against, Hell, sin, and the Devil. Amen.

PRAGÆ.

On Monday and Tuesday the 17th. and 18th. of September, I sent Emericus up to the Castle, to listen after answer of that Doctor Curtz his report to the Emperour, of that he had perceived by me. (But on Monday Octavius Spinola had sent into the Town for Emericus, and told him that the Emperour had care and desire to understand my doing with the Doctor: And therefore asked Emericus if I had been with the Doctor, and he affirmed that I had. Hereof (said he) the Emperour will be glad: And yet (as I began to note) Emericus coming on Tuesday in the face of the Doctor in the Ritters stove; had not one word spoken to him, that either he had spoken to the Emperour, or he had not. And therefore I suspect that the Doctor dealeth not honestly, faithfuly, or wisely in this so weighty a case. And forasmuch as he told me, that the Emperour his Majesty was perswaded, that he was pious, &c. perhaps he would be loath; now, to prefer me to the speech of the Emperour, seeing both he himself, and the rest of his counsel stood perswaded to the contrary of this King. Hereupon this great delay, upon sinister report made to the Emperour might follow, &c.

Note, the Emperour enclined to hear, &c.

I suspect the Doctour doth not deal sincerely.

Note. Fryday, Septemb. 21. Circa horam 10. Ferè, Mane. † Pragæ.

Δ. As I and E. K. were together in my Study, earnestly discoursing of Auricular confession, publick confession, and confessing to God alone, and of the Authority of the Church, and the manner of the same Authority using to release, or retain sins, E. K. saw one walk on the Table between him and me: Thereupon I framed me to write, and note what should be shewed, or said, E. K. willed me to set down the shew-stone: So I did, and he looked.

E. K. I see him here with the Scarf over his head and face, untill his waste, but I see his hair yellow behinde on his head, &c.

Mitte lucem tuam, O Deus & varitatem tuam ut ipsæ nos ducant ex hac valle miseriæ ad montem Sanctum Sion, & ad cœlestia tua Tabernacula. Amen.

Uriel. ..... I am Uriel the servant of the most wise, mighty, and everlasting God: which visit you for two causes.

The first, that I may open unto you true, and perfect light: such as darknesse comprehendeth not, infallible, and true meat, the power and spirit of the everlasting God.

The second, that I may counsel you against the world, and teach you to triumph against her frowardnesse. For, who hath trusted in the Lord, and hath been cast down? or what is he that hath cried aloud, and is not heard? Therefore, I say unto you; Hear my voyce: For I am of truth, and put against darknesse, and in me are published the light, and mysteries of the Trinity from time to time, and in all ages unto those that fear, and obey God.

Two things there are which are the seals and marks of Satan: which bring eternal death and damnation to all such as are noted, or burned with them, that is to say, lying, and froward silence.

Trinitatis Lux & mysteria per Urielem revelantur.

Mendacium Obstinatum. silentium.

Behold

Behold the words of Christ, unto the subtile (your father is a lyar from the beginning, and the Devil.)

Hearken unto my voyce: He that [1] teacheth false Doctrine, openeth [2] his mouth against truth, or defraudeth [3] his brother is a lyar, and shall not be forgiven.

1. For first, he sinneth against his Creator, which created all things in truth.

2. Secondly, he offendeth against the truth, and his Redeemer, which is the son of God, very Christ.

3. Thirdly, he offendeth against the spirit of God, (of the Father, and the Son) the holy Ghost: which shall not be forgiven; And therefore doth he incurre the rigour of Gods justice, his eternall damnation.

But, I say, give ear unto my words: For, I will sift the dust, and finde out the Pearle, that of a long time hath lyen tredden under the feet.

I will come again. E. K. He is gone.

Δ. We read over the premisses, and so expected the rest.

E. K. He is again here.

Uriel. ..... Now let us joyn these things together.

All flesh offendeth, and is a lyar. Who, therefore shall be saved, or escape eternal damnation? He it is (I say) that when he hath lyed, and spoken against the truth doth not frowardly drown'd, and keep down his sin in silence. Objectio. Solutio.

For, lying meriteth the vengeance of the Trinity. But he that is wilfully froward, sealeth up his own damnation: For this cause (my brethren) and to the intent that the mercies of God might alwayes be ready for sinners; hath he provided the light, and comfort of his spirit, left as a continual workman in the Church and spouse of Christ. Mendacium. Ecclesiæ Dignitas & Authoritas.

I teach you briefly: that, he whosoever, opening his mouth against the spirit of truth; and with wilfull frowardnesse continueth in his lying, without reconciliation to the Church sinneth against the holy Ghost, and shall be damned eternally. Reconciliation to the Church.

I come again. E. K. He is gone.

E. K. He is here again.

Uriel. ..... Be now therefore admonished (I say) be warned: And considering you be sinners, acknowledge your offences, least in the end your sin be against the holy Ghost, and so not to be forgiven. But herein they erre with you that expound the Scriptures, saying, that man sinneth, and cannot be forgiven, because he sinneth against the holy Ghost.

I teach you, my brethren: that there is no sin against God, but it is against the holy Ghost: If so be, in the end, it be shut up with wilfull silence. Wilfull silence.

Whensoever, (therefore) you have offended acknowledge, I say, your sins, before God and his Angels: That God may forgive you, and the Angels bear witnesse of your forgiveneſſe, and shut not up your sins in froward silence. Δ. Finalis impœnitentia. Testes Angelici. Froward silence.

*If thou commit adultry, if thou blaspheme the name of God, if thou be a lyar; yea, if thou speak against the truth: yea, if thou say there is no God (as the * fooliſh do)* Despair not; saying, I have sinned against the holy Ghost, because I am a sinner, and a blasphemer of the name of God, because I have spoken, and opened my mouth against the spirit of truth: But go unto the Church, which is governed by the spirit of God, and there with hearty, and open confession disclose, and make plain thy offences, that the holy Ghost may bear witnesse in the spouse, and Church of Christ; That thou hast not sinned against him to eternal death: Because thou art not drowned in froward silence. * Psal. Ito ad Eccle. siam.

Δ. Voluntary confession is contrary to froward silence.

For, although God bear witnesse of repentance. Although he hear, and open his ears, yet consider also he hath hands, and must untye those bonds wherewith you are bound. What are the hands of God, but his spirit, wherewith he maketh and created all things. Therefore when thou hast cried out and art sorry, endeavour thy self also to be lifted up by the hands of God. Aures Dei, Manus Dei, Vide de Lazaro, Joh. c. 11.

Learn a similitude in Christ, which (signifying the power of his Church) commanded the offender to go and wash himself: and so he was whole. I speak this, for thy [E.K.] instruction: I say also unto thee, [E.K.] Go and wash thy self: For thou art a lyar, thou art a drunkard: And therefore thou art a sinner. And if thou persevere, and shadow thy sins with wilfull silence frowardly, then sealest thou thy self with the second brand, and canst not be forgiven, because thou sinnest against the Ghost.

* Ananias fell down at the feet of Peter, not onely for that he lyed: but because after his offence he was wilfully silent. * Act. 5.

Here thou mayest consider the greatnesse of God his mysteries, and secrets of his will and of favour, that he stretcheth out unto thee in mercy, for thou art a Childe, and must ascend, and must become a man. The rest after you are refreshed. Supra.

Cæsar futurus.

It was said unto thee, my mother saith she will chuse an Emperour in erneſt: But it is Erneſt that shall sit upon his seat. Behold, there shall be no seed left in him for his wickednesse. Yea, the blessings that I have offered him shall return again; and I will *leave his house naked. Monday, Septembris, 24. Mane hora 8. † Pragæ.

Δ. At the first looking E. K. saw Uriel, but covered with his Scarf, &c. Notwithstanding I said some prayers to God on my knees, and came and said here. Mitte lucem tuam & veritatem tuam O Deus: ut ipsæ nos ducant ad montem Sion, &c.

It is to be remembred that for two causes we repaired to the Shew-stone: the one by reason of the letter which I had written to the Emperour: and was minded to go to shew it to the Spanish Embassadour before I sent it to the Emperour, to have his opinion of it, and also to bear it. Secondly, by reason of foul slanderous words which were spoken of me here at this Embassadours Table: That I was a Conjurer, and a bankrupt alkimist, and came here to get somewhat of the Emperour: and that I had sold my goods, and given to the Lord Laskie the mony, and that he had deceived me. To these untruths the Embassadour did reply in my behalf: for which I meant to thank him, &c.

Uriel. ..... Even as the accursed, and cast down, most wilfully abhorreth, hateth, and dishonoureth, the God of Justice, because of his mightiness and power over him: So do all those that suck and hang upon his dugs, that are coveteous and desirous of worldly promotion: that gape and thirst after the glory of this world, abhor, hate, and continually vex and dishonour, such as love Justice, or dwell under the wings of the God of power and Triumph. Herein may you rejoyce, that you are partakers and innocents (railed at, and despised with the world) in the fellowship of God, and of his Son Christ. Herein may you be glad, that you are sealed, and dwell with the Fathers, and that you play also upon the Harpe of David: for verily as they are, so shall you be; and as they are made righteous by reason of their election, and crowned toward eternal Joy; So shall your Election establish your righteousnesse, and give you Garlands of eternal comfort. Those that are on the Seas, are fearful of the windes: And why? because of the motion of the place, and of the power of nature: But it is not so, with you: for you dwell in Castles made of marble, wrought out of the middest of a sure rock, a most stable foundation. For why? I am sure that God dwelleth in you, and you in him. Therefore lift up your heads, and rejoyce when you are afflicted, and keep the image of God sincere and perfect in you, that you may alwayes be * merciful in the Image of his Son Christ. But when the Lord openeth his mouth, and calleth you together, saying, † Venite & audite: Then lay away all mercy; for the God of * Justice dwelleth amongst you. Who dwelleth in a house till it be perfectly finished? or what is he that putteth on a garment before it be made? Be you assured, that when the † house is finished, and your * garments made, you shall both enter, and be clothed with comfort: Comfort of † wisdom and power. I am mindful of you, and will be mindful of my * promise toward you. And If you remain and dwell [forte [together] deest] and be constant in me, you shall passe the † Thunders that are to come; you shall be witnesses of my power: and shall enter into the * Land of Promise with those that shall be comforted: where these dayes shall have an end. O my brethren, this world exceedeth in wickednesse, and is a terrour to the good Angels: Because of the souls that she devoureth. But when lightnesse is rewarded, and Justice sitteth in place, Then shall she bear no weight, but be made all one with the bottomlesse pit. Despise her, despise her; for she is an Harlot.

△ Exit cum Cæsare. I understand not this, how it is, or shall be verified, or with which Cæsar.

Note: As I had finished this Action, and was come to my Study door; Emericus was returned again from the Spanish Embassadour, to whom I had sent him desirous to know his leasure for me: who had now sent me word by Emericus to come to diner, & so he would have leasure, &c. Whereof I was right glad; and went thither to diner: who into his inermost Study (where he himself was writing of letters) caused me to be brought. And after I had complained of injury and violence done unto me, by foul slanders, and that, at his Honours Table: (to which his Honour, in my behalf had replied: and therefore most humbly, and sincerely I did thank him) I said that the Emperous Majesty himself could bear me witnesse, that I used this phrase unto him, that I came not for his riches as, Non veni ad vos O Serenissime Cæsar propter divitias vestras, ut inde ego dives fierem, sed à Deo missus, non audeo aliter facere quam ejus ad vestram Cæsaream Majestatem voluntatem declarare, &c. And therefore, How falsly they slandered me, it was evident: and because I perceive that Doctor Curtz hath not dealt neither with due entertainment of me as of a stranger, or a Sudent, or a Mathematitian, or of one whom (to my face) he gave great praise unto, as of one long since of great fame in Germany, and so in his good estimation, &c. And least of all, as of one, who offered so great curtesies to the Emperours Majesty as he was made witnesse of: I thought good to send unto the Emperours Majesty this letter following, and so read it unto him after diner, when I shewed him Librum Pragensem sive Cæsareum; and moreover Librum decimum, (whose former title was Libri Sexti Mystici Tertiarius) and there shewed him divers Actions in Latine already translated, because now to translate so to him of the English, did seem to me both tedious, and to him not so readily pleasant. All things on his part considered, his summary final conclusion was, as well of the last offer in this my letter, as of the great actions and divine purposes. For the first he declared that he was lineally descended out of the consanguinity, of one a Gentleman, but unlettred at the first, woo left his wife, children, and family in Maiorca, and ascended an Hill there, and in place solitary remained an whole year, and at the years end, he came down, but so learned and wise, that all who knew him before, wondred at it. And that the same man was called Raymondo Lullio: and that he made that which is called the Philosophers Stone, as in England (said he) I understand is good record of it: Therefore I see, quoth he, that it is a truth and possible: and as he hath granted the knowledge of it to one man, so he may grant it to another, &c. And as for the other higher matters, I perceive that God intendeth some great matter in this world. But I am not able to judge or determine of it: But I am of this mind, wherein I can any way further the service of God, I will be ready and obedient, &c. And as for the Emperours person himself, I find him of a good nature, curteous, and most zealously Catholick: yea ready to shed his blood in the cause, if opportunity required. He understandeth the Latine well, and speaketh sufficiently well: That is true (quoth I) for he spake well in Latine to me divers things Moreover (said he) as concerning you, I saw him very well affectionated, making great account of your book, &c. Therefore you are not to regard these Dutch mens ill tongues, who hardly can brook any stranger, &c. Domini Legati Regis Hispaniarum Responsum.

Upon farther matter that I had to shew him, I offered my ready repair unto him at all times of his good leasure, being called or warned. And he desirous to see the Stone brought to me by an Angel, willed me to come to morrow also, to Diner: I promised him, and so with thanks yielded to his honour, I departed toward my Lodging at Bethelem in old Prage.

Note: I went to Diner to the Spaniſh Embaſſadour: and carryed with me the Stone brought me by an Angel; and the fourth Book, wherein the manner of the bringing of it is expreſſed. And alſo I carried with me Librum Sextum Sanctum Mysticum.

After Diner, when I had ſhewed him theſe things: his final anſwer was, that verily he took the doing to be by good Angel: marry, the matters to be too great: Therefore (ſaid I) they are for the ſervice of God, and not onely man. He ſaid he was a ſinner, and not worthy to be privy, much leſſe to be a doer in them: Notwithſtanding whatſoever he can do therein acceptable to God, he would be moſt obedient thereto. He deſired a Copy of the Emperour his foreſaid letters, that he might conſider circumſpectly of the Contents before he ſhould deliver them; whereunto I conſented. Rendering his honour thanks I departed.

A Copy of the letters deſired.

After

After my return home, I found E. K. reſolved to go from hence to morrow, for his wife, and ſo ſtraightway into England: which was to me a grief: But what can I do, but refer all to the mercies of God, whom I have called upon for wiſdom to ſerve him withal? I have put my truſt in the Lord, I have not murmured at any ſuch pangs and tentations hitherto. E.K Ready to go into England as he pretended.

The mercies of the Higheſt be upon me, as I have put my truſt in him.

Amen.

Now were we (all) brought to great penury: not able without the Lord Laskies, or ſome heavenly help, to ſuſtain our ſtate any longer. Poverty.

Beſides this, I underſtood of the Queens diſpleaſure for my departure, and of the Biſhop of London his intent to have begun to have accuſed me of Conjuration, and ſo to have had the ſecret aſſiſtance of you know whom.

Tu es Deus fortitudo mea, refugium meum Suſceptor meus, & liberator meus.

Amen.

Wedenſday, Septembris 26. Antè Meridiem. Pragæ.

About 10 and a half of the clock, Dr. Curtz ſent with Mr. Simon Hageck his ſervant to know my lodging: He had paſſed not far off in a lane on horſeback his ſelf going into the Town, and ſo met Mr. Simon Hageck at the lanes end, &c. D. Curtz.

Thurſday, Septembris 27. † Pragæ.

Manè: About 7. of the clock came Dr. Curtz his ſervant from his Maſter to tell me, that his Maſter would come unto me at 9 of the clock. D. Curtz.

At 9 of the clock came Dr. Curtz on horſeback to me, to my lodging (at Doctor Hageck his houſe by Bethleem) my wife he ſaluted, and little Katharine, my daughter. Mr. Kelly had gotten him into his chamber, not willing to be ſeen.

After he was come up into my little Study, and there ſet, in Mr. Kelly his uſual place, and I in mine; I began to complain of the great injury done unto me here; for I came as a ſincere and faithful ſervitour of the Emperour his Majeſty, intending all goodneſſe and honour unto him: no hindrance, loſſe or hurt; neither came I propter divitias Cæſaris mihi colligendas, as I ſaid expreſſely unto his Majeſty. I was, before I came hither, of good name and fame, both in this Court, and all Europe over, As you your ſelf Mr. Doctor (quoth I) can bear me witneſſe: and other in this Court divers: And that here my name and fame ſhould ſuffer ſhipwrack, where I thought I had been in, a ſure Haven of my principal Patrone: My thinketh that great injury is done unto me: I know no means how to help it, but to give you warning of the envious malitious backbiters that alſo are about this Court, that as you find occaſion, you might encounter with this evil, and foul monſter, in ſo mighty a Princes Cauſe intruding it ſelf.

The Doctor ſeemed not to know what I meant. I told him, that at a Noble-mans Table, There was, of great account, who ſaid, that there was an Engliſh man, come to the Emperours, A bankrupt Alchimiſt, a Conjurer, and Necromantiſt: who had ſold his own goods, and given the Lord Laskie the money: and that he had beguiled him: and that now he would fain get ſome of the Emperour his money from him, &c. The Doctor ſeemed greatly to miſlike theſe ſlanderous words, and ſaid, that he never heard of any ſuch; with ſome few words more, of the wicked manner of backbiters.

After this, as concerning the report making to the Emperour, of that I had ſhewed unto him, at his houſe, (as before is noted) he ſaid that he had made a plain and ſincere report. Whereunto the Emperours Majeſty, had (as yet) given no anſwer. And to be plain with you (ſaid he) his Majeſty thinketh them almoſt either incredible, or impoſſible: and would have ſome leaſure to conſider of them: and is deſirous to have the ſight of thoſe Latine Actions you ſhewed me, or a Copy of them, and eſpecially, of that, which containeth a paraphraſis of the Apoſtolical Creed. I anſwered, that my Books I would not deliver out of my hands: And as for a Copy of them, I would (at leaſure) write it, that his Majeſty might have it. And then I told him farther, that becauſe it was ſo long before I heard any word of him, I had letters ready to ſend to the Emperours Majeſty, to have farther declared my mind unto him, and I declared unto him the tenor of them: and he told me that about three of the clock after noon, his man ſhould go to the Court, and if then I would ſend them, his man should carry them. I answered that I would expect a day or two for the Emperours return hither. After this we talked of some Mathematical matters: And I shewed him the little Book de Superfluorum divisionibus, set forth by me and Commandinus, printed at Pezaro in Italy. He said that he never saw it before: I bad him then take it with him to peruse: and that if I had another Copy, I would give it him; but I had none other but that. I shewed him also the Propædeumata Aphoristica de præstantioribus quibusdam Naturæ virtutibus, which he had never seen before. After this, with mutual curtesies offered on both parts (after the manner of the world) he took his horse, and returned homeward.

 ſhould

Friday, Septembris, 28. Pragæ.

Intending to send the Emperours letter (here before written) to his Majesty, by my good friend, the Spanish Embassadour, I wrote this letter to send to the Embassadour in that behalf, and as concerning the credit of these Actions.

Illustris & Magnifice Heros: Multis hoc probari potest testimoniis & exemplis, quod illa, quæ (præter vulgarium artium & scientiarum decreta) Nova, & supra vulgariter Studiosorum expectationem, hominibus (licet piis & candidis quidem) Divinitus revelantur mysteria, cum summa difficultate vel intelligantur à paucissimis, vel vix sine suspitione admittuntur, aut creduntur à pluribus: Aut qualis, in nostris, (si rectè pieque informatæ nostris adhibeatur judicium) esse potest suspitio? Nam à Deo Omnipotente, per multos jam annos, fideliter, ardenter, & constanter per preces requisita sapientia: Una (scilicet quæ pene nos quidem) videtur esse radix & occasio tanti istius Dom obtinendi. Ast in cœlesti suo Palatio, ante conditum mundum, determinata, & assignata erga nos Misericordia & gratia Omnipotentis Dei, præcipuum, solidum, immobileque hujus tanti mysterii est censendum fundamentum: In quo mysterio, talis relucet, per potentes fideleſque Angelos Isagogica informatio, De Arcanis Dei consiliis, tam in mundi creatione Creaturarumque naturis, & vero usu, quam in mundi præsentis moxque futuri statu: Et preterea, de unius Catholicæ Ecclesiæ (charissimæ Jesu Christi sponsæ, nostræque piæ matris) sanctitate, dignitate, & Authoritate (veluti in qua etiam est Sanctorum Communio, & Peccatorum remissio) & de multis nondum per nos revelandis Dei Arcanis Magnalibus & Determinationibus: Quod tantum abest, ut aliquis (sanæ mentis) Christianus, Actiones Nostras Mysticas, Diabolicas esse fraudes, contendere, immo ne suspicari quidem conetur aut possit: ut potius, tale Arcanum Dei propositum, incredibiliter admirari, rationem humanam, in eisdem examinandis, subjugare, & Dei erga Electos suos admirandam misericordiam in istis esse manifestam, humillimè, & cum summo tremore fateri velit: Ego quidem, hactenus, in istis, aliud (terè) nihil, me esse invenio, nisi Calamum scribæ, velociter per me scribentis. Nam visa auditaque (in mea præsentia) fidelissimè, de litera interdum ad literam, interdum, verbatim, interdum pluribus simul receptis verbis (ipso eodem temporis momento, quo traduntur) annotare sum solitus. Ast jam in quam multa excrevit Noster talis Mor volumina? Ex quibus omnibus illum fructum, successumque expectamus, qualem præfixit ille, cujus nutui cuncta obediunt. Istas autem ad suam sacrem Cæsaream Majestatem literas meas: Cum vestra magnificentia opportunitatem inveniet primam, si meo nomine: humillimè eidem exhibere dignabitur, Tum magno mihi (Divinitus) injuncto, levatus ero onere: Tum magno, à vestra magnificentia affectus beneficio: Interim verò, Dum suæ sacræ Majestatis Cæsareæ ad istas responsum dabitur, (nimirum si ad 14. vel 16. dies prius expectandum esset) vel, statim post acceptum responsum (si tam expeditè illud recipere possum, quam quod recepi ultimo) ad iter me accingere debeo, propter familiam, libros, & aliquam meam suppellectilem, huc (ante hyemis asperitatem) transferendam. Our chief cauſe (at this inſtant) why we reſort to this ſhew-ſtone, is for to underſtand (according to the grounds of God his promiſe) the ſtate of my wife her grievous diſeaſe, and means to cure her, wherein if it pleaſe the Lord to be merciſull unto her and me, it ſhall be the occaſion whereby ſhe will all her life time praiſe the name of God for his mercies, and be of a quietter minde, and not ſo teſty and fretting as ſhe is. Janæ uxoris meæ morbus periculoſus.

Who (I say) are you, that you should deserve the majestral benefit of so great and sanctified grace? as to understand the determination of God, the power of his Angels, or the brightnesse, or obscurity of mans Soul, and understanding: You desperate sinners, and partakers with the wicked, how can you seek bread at your fathers hands: when you seek to steal into his barnes? Yea, into his house, and dining Tables: and more then that; yea, even into his privy Chambers: not to spoyl him of his houshold stuffe, of his Gold, or precious stones, but of the diademe, and Crown of his everlasting Majesty and honour: you are thieves and robbers; and through the Dignity of your spirit you shall think to exalt your selves, and to live in Majesty with the world.

The robbing God of his honour.

True it is, you may live so: But you live with an Harlot, and shall possesse the reward of Fornicators and Adulterers.

Therefore seek not to feed of such food, as the holy, and blessed messengers, and Ministers of the God of Hosts and glory do taste of: and are comforted; for they are the spirits of truth and understanding: such as cleave unto their God, and fight against the abominations, and horrible blasphemies of the world and her adherents: which (because you set your selves against them) shall keep, and close up the brightnesse, and obscurity of each Soul from you, that your ignorance may be greater; and your darknesse thicker, and that you may return without light: to the Barathrum of ignorance, where pride, self-love, and the Children of vanity have their habitation.

Superbia philautia vanitas.

Then (peradventure) will you say within your selves: There be other doors, there be other woods; yea, there be other wayes, let us therefore seek out them.

But behold, I will shut up from you all Elemental Vigor: So that the Fountains of coagulation shall be dried when you seek them, and the natural nourishment and food of parts that dwell in one proportion shall hide themselves, and be asleep when you seek them; yea, in the lowest I will place a threefold door-bar, stronger then a Rock of yearn, which shall stand between your eyes and knowledge, and you shall not see: for peradventure you may say in your selves.

Vigor Elementalis. Coagulatio. Pabula.

Behold, there is a science known; yea, there is a conjunction of [△] equal qualities, *opening unto us the mysteries of comfort in infirmities, that is not so. Gabriel..... Trouble [△] thou not thy heart, but hear the voyce of me, Gabriel, the man of God. I am the true medecine of such as put their trust in the God of Hosts, and in his son Christ; which is the Lamb of life, and the comfort of his father, which give unto those that thirst, the true medecine of comfort and consolation; neither shall God forsake thee, neither shall thy Soul be deceived.

But it behoveth these things to be spoken, that sin might be corrected, and the name of him that sent us, magnified.

And from hence thou shalt have science and understanding, and thou shalt be favourable in the eyes of him, that I favour not: that my glorie might be exalted in him, and against his childishnesse. Yet, I will be mercifull to him; yet if he hear me. E. Friday, Fryday, Octobris 5.

At afternoon came one of Doctour Curtz his servants from his Master to tell me, that his Master would come to me to morrow in the morning about seven, eight, or nine of the Clock, as I would, &c.

Saturday, Octobris 6. Manè.

Before seven of the Clock I thought good rather my self to go to Doctour Curtz, then to suffer him to come to me so far, and that for divers causes: So I went to him, and I came before he was ready. At his being ready he came forth, but nothing with so chearfull a countenance to welcome me as he did at the first: I conjectured that he suspected that I would take his words in evil part, which he had to say to me from the Emperour, which (after I had somewhat spoken of the book that I lent him, and some other, that had written somewhat of such matter of division of superficies, and he had told me that this my book was the most excellent in that Argument, and so made a pause, he began in this sort in two parts to divide his speech, and said that Cæsarea sua Majestas quantum ad sua peccata (per me reprehensa) solet Confessionarium adhibere tempore & loco opportunis, neque diffidere illum de Misericordia divina; Quantum autem ad me attinebat, paratam esse suam Cæsaream Majestatem mihi gratificari & benefacere in quacumque re quæ illius subjiceret Authoritati: I hereupon answered, and said: Doleo verba mea in alio sensu intellecta vel concepta fuisse à sua Cæsarea Majestate quàm intelligi vel concipi debebant. Non enim me ejus fieri Confessionarium cupiebam, sed peccata ejus ex cœlo reprehensa fuisse, hæc illi significare jubebar, ut feci: unde ille consolationis plus haurire poterat, quam ex consilio alicujus sui amici vel Confessionarii sui, peccata ejus redarguentis, Domini enim Dei eximium declarabat favorem, &c. Quantum verò ad illam quam mihi offerebat sua Majestas Cæsarea gratiam, humillimè ac ego rebam. Non verò quod desiderem titulo Philosophi & Mathematici Cæsarei insigniri causa est multiplex; tum respectu secreti mei servitii erga Cæsarem, sub eo prætextu cælandi quam majoris authoritatis & favoris apud Cæsarianos & Anglos meos, ne vel illis hic nugas agere videar, & nullius esse æstimationis, vel iis etiam viderer aptus, contra quem suam invidiam & maledicentissimam, ut incepere, exercerent linguam impune, &c. Orsus igitur D. Curtzium ut Cæsaream suam Majestatem admoneret de intellecta interpretatione illorum verborum quibus vitia ejus redarguebantur, &c Then he spake of the second Letters to the Emperour, the effect whereof he had heard at my hands, and had sent on Michaelmas even to the Emperours Majesty, a note and advise of them, as he now said. And did wish that they had been delivered before the Emperour had resolved on the former answer: Those Letters (said I) are in the Ambassadours of Spain's hands; and if he will not deliver them to day, I will fetch them for you: if you do (said he) I will deliver them straight way, for at eighth of the Clock you shall have me in the Ritter stove, or hear of me there. Then (said I) I will straight way go to the Ambassadour.

I went unto the Ambassadour of Spain, and reported all that had passed between me and D. Curtz. He said that by reason of his divers affairs he had not good opportunity, never since the receipt of my Letters to go to the Emperours Majesty: But that this day he determined to deliver my Letters with his own hand unto his Majesty: so with thanks given to his honour I departed: I went to the Ritter stove (or Chamber of presence) where I found none of the Guard, but very many sitting without. In the stove were three, or four, of which one went straight way into the privy Chamber, and by and by D. Curtz came out from the Emperour unto me, I asked him if he had told the Emperour of my grief conceived of his misunderstanding my words: he said, I, and that the Emperour took it not in evil part, and so of divers other things we had talk walking up and down together about a quarter of an hour: Among other things I told him that the Lord Ambassadour would deliver my Letters himself to the Emperours Majesty, so I departed, and he returned back to the Emperour into the privy Chamber.

Sunday, Octobris 7. Mane hora 7.

I sent to the Lord Ambassadour his house, and there I learned that the Ambassadour had yesterday delivered my Letter to his Majesty: And that answer was to be expected by D. Curtz.

After Dinner I went to Doctor Curtz home to his lodging, and he had nothing as yet to say of the Letter delivered by the Lord Ambassadour: But we fell to other talk, and I told him plainly, that I had not hitherto lived obscurely, neither without care of my good fame and name, maintaining, and increasing; therefore if here for my sincere dealing I should seem to be despised, or not regarded, or to be but a trifler, my thought I should have great injury: And sure I was that the Emperours Majesty was much ruled by him, and as he did frame his judgement, so did his Majesty very oft resolve in such matters as mine; wherefore if I were not uſed in my cauſes as was reaſonable, and for the Emperours honour it ſhould not be laid to any other mans charge but to his, &c. He promiſed that he would deliver all in the beſt words he could, in friendly ſort, &c. After this he ſhewed divers his labours and inventions, Mathematical, and chiefly Arithmetical Tables, both for his invention by ſquares to have the minute and ſecond of obſervations Aſtronomical, and ſo for the mending of Nonnius his invention of the Quadrant dividing in 90. 91. 92. 93. &c. I then opened to him my ſecret of my glaſſe, for battering in a dark night, &c. He ſaid that concluſion would be very acceptable to his Majeſty, I told him that the glaſſe was at Cracovia, and his Majeſty ſhould ſee it by Gods leave.

After this I told him that I would full fain have a Paſport, or ſafe conduct to paſſe quietly and ſafely in any of the Emperours Dominions. He thought his Majeſty would willingly grant that, and willed me to write three, or four lines as I would have it, and he informed me thus:

Cæſaream ſuam Majeſtatem humillimè orat Joannes Dee Anglus, ſereniſſimæ ſuæ Majeſtatis Devotiſſimus ſervitor, ut pro ſua majori in Itineribus per ampliſſimum ſuæ Cæſareæ Majeſtatis Imperium conficientis ſecuritate, literas ſalvi paſſus ſibi concedere dignaretur.

Joannes Dee.

At my coming home, I bethought me that I would gladly, the ſaid Paſport, ſafe Conduct, or Letters of paſſage, more ample and beneficial; as for my wife, children, family, ſervants, and goods whatſoever, and for one whole year to dure from the date of theſe preſents thus.

Wedneſday, On Monday morning 8. Octobris.

Sacram ſuam Cæſaream Majeſtatem humillimè orat, ſereniſſimæ ſuæ Majeſtatis Devotiſſimus ſervitor Joannes Dee Anglus, ut eidem Joanni pro ſeipſo, uxore ſua, liberis ſuis, familia ſua, ſervitoribus, Ancillis ſuis & ſuppellectili ſua quacunque ſua ſacra Cæſarea Majeſtas favorabiles & gratioſas ſuas literas ſalvi quieti & liberi tranſitus per omnes & quaſcumque ampliſſimi Majeſtatis ſuæ Cæſareæ Imperii partes viaſque, & pro integri anni (proximè poſt datam præſentium ſequentis) tempore quocumque, clementèr concedere dignaretur.

Anno 1584. Oct. 8. Joannes Dee.

Monday, Octobris 8.

I went to Mr. Doctor Curtz, with theſe laſt Letters fair written, and I found him to be at the Hoff rate Camer in Counſel: and ſo awaiting till they roſe (half an hour after 8. of the Clock) he came out with my Letters in his hand, which I left yeſternight with him. I ſhewed him theſe laſt written: And he ſaid they uſe to limit no time, but to make them indefinite. So he took the laſt, and I had the former Letters back again. He went with them into the privy Chamber, he ſaid, I ſhould not need to ſend for the Letters, but he would ſend them home by his man, and I went from him toward the Ambaſſadour Don Gulielmo de Sancto Clemente, whom I found coming with the Ambaſſadour of Spain (who came three, or four dayes before, to give the golden Fleeſe to the Emperour) and the Marſhall of the Court to go to the Emperour preſently to have audience: And as I ſtood in the Court of the Ambaſſadours lodging, and they three on horſ-back coming, the Ambaſſadour my friend did put off his Cap, ſo did the new Ambaſſadour and Marſhal twice very courteouſly to me. I ſaw it was no time to offer ſpeech to the Ambaſſadour; now of my giving thanks, taking leave, and requiring his pleaſure toward the Lord Laskie: ſo following them to the Court, I paſſed forward home toward my Lodging.

ILluſtris & magnifice vir. January 12.

Saturday Afternoon I removed clean from Doctor Hagec's, his House by Bedlem, and came with all my Houshold to the House which I had hired of the two Sisters (married) not far from the Market-place in old Pragæ.

January 14. Pragæ Actio prima, post reditum.

Monday Circa 9 horam à media nocte: Precibus ad Deum de more fusis, & invocato lumine auxilióque Dei, ad ejusdem veritatem intelligendam, & cum virtute tractandam, &c.

E. K. Here is △ one with a Vail afore his face, as it were, a Hair Cloth of Ash-colour: I know him not yet: I see a Garden full of fruit, of divers sorts. In the midst of it is a place higher then the rest. On that place standeth a round House, it hath four corners, [within] and 4 Windows: and every Window is round, and hath 4 round partitions, round also. It hath 4 Doores, and at the East Door is one step, at the South 2 steps, and at the North 3, and at the West Door, 4 steps: The first Door is white, like Chrystal, transparent: The South Door is red of an high colour, transparent. The North Door is bright black, not to be thorough seen, as the rest. The West is green, like an Emerauld Stone: So is the South Door like a Ruby. The Doores be all plain. The House within (as it may be judged by the transparent Doores) seemeth to be white, and empty.

△ LEVANAEL as may appear Febru. 5. post ultima parte. E. K. Note, The House is round without and square within.

E. K. He that hath his face covered, openeth the East Door; and all the House seemeth to be on fire, like a furnace. The fire within doth weve, and move about the House, and by the roofe. Now he openeth the West Door, and there appeareth, as if all the House were a fountain full of water. And there run divers streames, in the same one water, whereof, one doth go and come, as if it ebbed and flowed; which stream doth go about all the rest, by the sides of the House, that is, as if it were the Ocean sea compassing the World. The next stream, within that, moveth from the 4 sides ward, and make (in manner) 4 Triangles, or rather Cones, of water, whose vertices rest cut off (as it were) by the middle stream of water which occupieth the middle or Center of the House, and is in circular form invironed.

1 Fire.

2 Water.

An other manner of stream there is, which commeth from the 4 corners of an innermost square: and so run diametraliter or contradictorie wise, toward that circular middle stream.

The middle stream seemeth to issue out at the very Center of the place, and to mount up, and making an arch of his course, doth seem to fall circulariter in one, circumference.

E. K. The fire also had diversity in it.

△ I would you had noted the diversity of the fires also.

..... Those that learn truly, learn by parts.

E. K. The colour of the water in the Center, is most pure white.

The waters of that Saint Andrews Crosse, are like a water somewhat Saffronish coloured. The waters of the Triangles, are somewhat like a watrish blew, which appeareth most, in the top of the arches of their flowing:

For all spring otherwise.

The uttermost water, is of Quick-silver shew, as if it were somewhat mortified.

△ In the figure following, you may gather a better and more easie understanding of this Description of the water streams.

Here is a blank, or void space in the Original Copie: but no figure.

E. K Now he openeth the Fire Door againe: And the fire appeareth in a ſquare place. And there appeare 4 fires filling the whole place, leaving nothing vaccuum.

One of theſe fires ſeemeth to riſe from the Center of the place; and to go in low arches to the 4 corners of the Houſe.

The Houſe ſeemeth to have 14 foot long in every ſide.

The arches of theſe fires ſeem to come from a trunk of fire, which riſeth from about the Center: and ſeemeth to be 4 foot over in the Diameter.

This Trunk ſeemeth to be high three quarters of the height of the place; The place ſeemeth to be as high as it is broad.

On the top of this fiery trunk, ſeemeth the fire to be in form of a fiery Globe, having 6 foot, his Diameter, which fire reverberateth and rolleth in it ſelf.

From the ſides of the Trunk (between the ſaid Globe and foreſaid Arches,) goeth up fire Triangularly, filling all; ſaving that which remaineth filled, by the flames of fire, which ariſeth from the Globe to the 4 corners of the Houſe, filling all the place above the Globe: as by the figure annexed more plainly may appear.

Here is a blank, or void ſpace in the Original Copie: but no figure.

E. K. Note The colour of the fire of the 4 arches, is very red; The reſt are very pure, Aërial, candent, &c.

The Motion of the trunk fire is ſwifteſt.

The Original Center of all theſe fires, ſeemeth to be very little.

E. K. Now he openeth the red Door.

3 Aire. The Houſe ſeemeth darkiſh, of colour of the ſmoak of a Wax Candle being put out.

..... By it ſelf, it is not, but by the Sunne, it is clear.

E. K. It hath 4 motions in it alſo: every one moving more ſwiftly then the other: All from the middle of the Houſe. Three of them move arch-wiſe to the ſides.

The firſt and ſecond ariſe to half the height of the place.

The third occupieth the other half.

The fourth goeth upright to the top of the Houſe.

The ſecond his ſpace (that he ſtriketh againſt on the Wall) is double to the ſpace of the Wall, againſt which the firſt ſmiteth.

Here is a blank, or void ſpace in the Original Copie: but no figure.

4 Earth. E. K. Now he openeth the black bright Door; And the Houſe there ſeemeth full of black duſt, like Gun-powder colour, or ſomewhat of Leadiſh colour.

E. K. Now he ſeemeth to goe down, faire and ſoftly from the Houſe, down the little Hill, and from thence goeth by a water ſide, to a Rockiſh Mountain.

E. K He ſpeaketh.

..... Aſcend. I am now ready for you: Bring out your Mattocks, Spades, and Shovels. Enigè veri eri.

E. K. Now come out of that Rock, ſeven lean men, with Spades, and Shovels, and Mattocks, &c.

..... Follow me.

E. K. Now they be come up to the foreſaid Hill.

..... Come

..... Come on, Dig till you finde.

E. K. Every one ſtandeth diſtinctly one from another, and they dig on the foreſaid Hill, which before ſeemed covered with Earth and Graſſe: But now it appeareth to be a Rock, and they dig that the Fire flieth out again of their ſtroakes, and ſome have broken their Mattocks, ſome their Spades, all except two, one with a Shovel, an other with a Pickax.

The Workmen. O Lord we labour in vain.

..... So you are ſure to do, unleſſe you have better Tooles.

The Workmen. Alas we labour in vain.

One of them. This is long of you.

..... I bad you provide Inſtruments to labour with, but you asked not me, wherein you ſhould labour. Therefore have you digged away that which you ſaw, and have repulſe with that you knew not.

A dark man thou art, and hidden from men, and ſo are thy doings.

One of them ſaid to the man covered with Hair-Cloth of Ash colour.

E. K. They ſtood gazing one on another.

..... Have you not better Inſtruments? Go, provide your ſelves, and return.

E. K. They runne a great pace to the foreſaid Rocky Cave from whence they came out firſt. Now they come againe with great Beetles of Iron, and Wedges. They knock their Wedges (as we uſe in Wood) and ſo break off great Slakes of Stone, like Slate, and throw it down the Hill.

One of them. What a thing is this, that this Wedg is broken?

Another We are in worſe caſe then ever we were.

E. K. Their Wedges are broken, the moſt part, and the Fire flieth out of the Stone in great abundance.

..... The nature of this Stone is not to cleave: Therefore if you have no other Inſtruments you muſt ceaſe.

E. K. They are in great diſquietneſs among themſelves.

..... Thoſe that go a Journey, provide them Cloathes againſt all weathers: He that is worthy of the Name of a Conqueror, carrieth with him all Engines: Where the Bridges be broken down, he ſtayeth not, becauſe he is prepared: Behold, he hath victuals for time to come, and his Study is as well the event, as is the mean. So ſhould true Labourers do: conſidering what they work in. For the Earth is a Monſter with many faces: and the receptacle of all variety. Go home, ſtand not idle. Provide by Arts for the hardneſſe of Nature, for the one Siſter weepeth without the other.

E. K. They go away ſpeedily.

..... They have their Tooles to harden, and their Steeles to temper. It will be more then an hour ſpace before they return. Therefore may you ſpend the time in your neceſſity, and uſe the time of day as you are acquainted or wonted. I alſo muſt over-ſee them, or elſe their labour will be without fruit.

E. K. Now he is gone.

△. Gloria Patri, & F. & SS. ſicut erat, &c. Amen.

Monday,

The ſame day, after dinner we returned to our former purpoſe for God his Service, to his Honour and Glory.

E. K. He is here. Now the Labourers be comming out; They have Wedges made long and ſharp: and Pickaxes with three pikes very ſhort.

They ſay. Our truſts, that theſe tools will ſerve.

E. K. They fall to work. They make like ſquare holes, and put in their wedges, and break up the rock or blackiſh ſtone (like yron-mine, or Magnes ſtone) in roundiſh lumps as big as a two-peny loaf, about two or three inches thick. They pick or dig round about the hole firſt, and ſo after uſe their wedges. The Pickaxes have three heads, every pick thereof bigger then the other. The firſt as big as one finger: the ſecond as two: the third as broad as four fingers. And ſo after the firſt digging they fetch three or four cakes or pieces out of one hole, and then they go to another. Now one of them is faln into the ground, up to the arm-pits. Now another is faln in, to the knees. Now the houſe ſtanding thereon beginneth to ſhake, and waver from one ſide to the other. Now the men be gotten out of the holes they ſtuck in.

..... Make an end of your labour.

One of the workmen to the Guide. It behoveth you to find a remedy, or to let us underſtand what remedy remedy we shall finde, that you may descend thence: for lo, the peril you stand in, is great: for this Rock was nothing else but a shell, whose kernel is a bottomlesse lake, and a myre quickened with some shut up water.

..... You come hither as Labourers, therefore make an end of your work, and stand not idle. If the house fall, and I sink, then is your labour at an end. For the end of your labour is the fulfilling of my will, and the promise which you have made me.

One of them. We are ready to do our promise; but we are more ready to provide that you may be amongst us; so you may be free from danger.

.....O you of little wit; are you not ashamed? which of you have dwelt within the secrets of this Hill? yea, which of you intendeth to fulfil his promise? Judge not a thing whereof you have no skill, neither be slack in that you have to do: for the one hath his reward of idlenesse, and the other is condemned of rashnesse: For why? It springeth on her mother ignorance.

They say. If we work, it is against reason. Neither do our tools answer to this labour. Therefore we had rather be idle then to labour about nothing: for to labour in vain, is to do nothing.

If we were determined to work, how should we perform our determination, since the Instruments of working want?

..... Gather up the pieces of your spades, that is wood, and may be joyned together: The older and the baser they are, the fitter they are to turn up such soile.

E. K. There commeth a Smith by with a budget full of nails.

One of them to the Smith. What hast thou there?

Smith. Nailes.

E. K. They be like Horshooe-nails.

..... Thou cam'st in good time, leave thy nails behind thee, and at thy return I will pay thee for them. See, God is not unmindful of us, for nails are the fittest things to further your work. Joyn therefore your spades and shovels together, and labour.

E. K. Now they are mending their spades and shovels, the iron of them being all off and broken.

Now they work, and throw away the earth like dusty sand, and the skurf of the earth sticketh to their spades and shovels.

E. K. One goeth behinde, and maketh a trench to let the water out from the sand.

One of them. How now! Have we found harvest in the midst of winter?

..... Why: what have you there?

One of them. Marry either Alablaster or Salt.

E. K. Now one of them knocketh a piece off with his shovel-end, and reacheth it up to his Guide.

..... Did I not tell you, that the Earth hath many faces?

E. K. They work now easily, and cut up like Salt or Alablaster.

Now they have digged all the hill away, even to the house. Now the house seemeth builded upon that white stuff.

One of them. If we dig any further, we shall undermine the house.

.....Go to your businesse.

E. K. They work.

..... Soft, soft. Now labour with your hands as softly as may be. Stand aside.

E. K. Now he taketh one of the irons of their spades, and seemeth himself to pare the sides of the Founaation under the house, and it seemeth to be a vessel of transparent glasse, and having fire within it.

Timor Domini ..... The fear of the Lord is a burning fire, consumeth not, but rectifieth the body; the old drosse it wipeth away, and the daily influxion of the flesh and sin it separateth from the soul.

Behold (I say) he liveth not, but unto whom life is given: neither is their any joy, but it is ascending; for the end of joy is glory; but glory is the consummation of desire, and the beginning of felicity. No man entreth into joy, but by life: neither is there any life, but in the fear of God.

Whosoever therefore hath the fear of God, let him draw neer, and come hither. Number exceedeth not, but by unities. Neither is there any multiplication but by order. For the root of number is one. And things that ascend are dignified by order. Out of this vessel go four vents ascending into that Rock, which is the Root, which is this building.

Ascension

Separation

It is said, Behold: let my spirit enter in, let there be Separation made within the house of the North, that the earth may be divided into her members. Cursed be that body, that is not divided, according to proportion, answering to the Division. For she hath yet not cast off the shape of darknesse.

E. K. There runneth up fire into the house, from out of the round glasse vessel under under the foundation of the houſe. And that fire maketh a great noiſe (through the black bright or marble door to be hard onely.) Now that North door is mightily thrown open, and there appear in the houſe like kernels of apples, and ſlime appeareth, and water thinner then ſlime, and there appeareth pure water, elſe. Now there commeth together ſtuff like yellow earth, which the fire wrought out of the black earth: And the pure water runneth into that yellow ſtuff.

.....Of that take a part.

E. K. The fire returneth back again among the ſtuff in that houſe, and there appear of all Creatures ſome.

Creation.

Here is Creation, and it is the firſt.

E. K. Now he taketh a lump of the earth lying by, which was thrown up, and he breaketh it into ſix pieces like round Balls.

E. K. He taketh a thing like a veſſel of iron, and putteth into it that mixture of yellow earth and water. And it looketh now like graſſe mingled with water.

.....Thou art ſtrong, and wilt beget a ſtrong Child.

E. K. Now he putteth out the earth which he put in, and it is a lump of gold. He giveth it him that ſtandeth by.

.....ſo are the ſeeds of the earth.

E. K. Now he taketh the ſecond, and putteth it in.

.....Corruption is a thief, for he hath robbed thee of thy beſt Ornaments, for thou art weaker in the ſecond.

E. K. He taketh it out, and it is as if it were pure ſilver.

.....Where there is double theft, poverty inſueth. But, notwithſtanding, Thou art true; for thou giveſt unto every thing as much as he deſireth: Thou openeſt the greateſt hability and ſtrength of thy power, not ſuch as it hath been, but ſuch as it is.

E. K. Now he putteth in the third Ball.

.....Thou muſt tarry, for thou art of an harder digeſtion, ſince thou art the third, Content thy ſelf, for thou art not an Inheritor.

E. K. He taketh it out, and giveth unto one of them that ſtandeth by, that is a red metal like copper.

E. K. Now he taketh up another of the Balls, and holdeth it in his hand.

.....Behold, thy mother, Heat is gone, and the enemy of life entreth; for he that paſſeth his middle age, decayeth, and draweth to an end.

Behold, thou ſhalt find a Step-mother, for thou camſt out of time.

E. K. Now he putteth it into the veſſel.

.....Let cold cover thy face, let the North truly beget thee, for thou art an enemy to thy predeceſſors. But thou art of great vertue, for of thy excrement ſhall vertue receive dignity. And thy vertue ſhall be a garland to Nature; for thou ſhalt be viſible when the other are ſilent: the Seas ſhall not hinder thy vertue, notwithſtanding, thy vertue ſhall differ with the Seas: For as they differ, ſo ſhalt thou.

E. K. Now he taketh it out. It is a ragged thing like Smiths cynder of iron, and it hath holes in it, as if it were ſpongy.

E. K. Now he taketh up another Ball of the earth: he putteth it in.

.....Thou art tractable, and like unto an obedient daughter: But thou ſhalt be the fifth in the ſecond, and an Inſtrument to the firſt.

E K. Now he taketh it out, it is like unto a white whet ſtone, as he ſhaped it at the putting in, it is like Tynne.

E. K. Now he taketh up another Ball, and putteth it in.

.....Thou art the laſt that hath in himſelf and by himſelf his being: Behold thy face is like unto wax, but thy inward bowels are like unto the anger of a Serpent: Many ſhall have thee, but ſhall not know thee.

One of them by ſaid. Will you give me nothing?

E. K. A great cloud covereth them all, the ſtone and all.

△ It dured ſo a quarter of an hour.

E. K. Now appeareth another, none of them before appearing. He ſeemeth afar off comming, and higher placed then the other, it ſeemeth to be URIEL, he hath his face covered with a Skarf of black hanging down to his breaſt.

URIEL .... Bleſſed are ſuch as are not offended in the little ones.

[E. K. He ſpeaketh now a language which I underſtand not.]

URIEL..... For the Angels of the God of Righteouſneſſe, are his little ones: and ſuch as know

not not sin of Concupiscence by consent (I speak this for your understanding.) Take heed (therefore) that you offend not your selves: for you must become little ones: and the power of the highest must abound in you.

He that offendeth his brother, offendeth God: but he that offendeth his own innocency, is abhorred of the Lord. Lo you are The children of Promise, and in you is the mystery of a great, and mighty Seal. Therefore study to humble your selves, for Humility is the Root of Innocency. But (my brethren) Innocents by nature you cannot be, neither can you serve God in the imagination of cleanness of your own flesh. Now (therefore) since you are fleshly, will you become innocent? Or how can you seek that which Nature hath lost?

In Christ we may become Innocents, and be born anew.

The Scriptures teach you; That in Christ you were born a-new: And by him you may become Innocents, when in him you are cleansed. Therefore, if in him the state of your Innocency remain, if in him you are renewed, and made clean, (being rotten and defiled,) why seek you not him, as you should do?

No man that seeketh the brightness of the Sunne, goeth under the Earth: Neither creepeth he into unknown Caves. The Tygres seek not their prey upon Earth, where the waters are not. Neither the Eagles upon waters.

Temptation. No more ought you to grudg that the Lord tempteth you, nor to be offended when the World offendeth you.

Is it not said unto you, that you shall fight a great fight: What fight is it my brethren: But a Battel against the Worldlings and the Devil?

Kings. I say unto you that Kings shall be offended in you.

The Sunne ceaseth not, yet he shall cease, yea he shall not be.

The Lights of Heaven keep their course; but they shall suddenly stagger, and forget their long worne way. Much more shall the wickednesse of those that rise up against you, have an end, for in them is no course but error, and the fire-brands of Sathan, prepared in their own hands, for their own destruction.

* Victoria nostra erit. *Behold, they shall contend against you and shall despise thee: But lo I have blessed thee above them: for thou shalt fight against them, and shalt overthrow them: that my Name may be magnified in thy mouth amongst the multitude of the sinfull.

Behold, they are opposite unto thee, because they are opposite unto me: for I have gathered thee from amongst them, and they are become thy Enemies. Since therefore they are thine Enemies (because thou must fight against them:) Be not grieved therefore when their wickednesse doth offend thee: But put on the armour of patience, and Become innocent.

Ministri veritatis. Dost thou think that from the Heavens can come the dew and life of all things? Even so think also, that from us commeth no untruth.

Be therefore innocent, and be not deceived by the flesh; Cast reason aside, covered with her Cloud: And lift up thy self in him, unto him (I say) that hath lifted thee from the Doores of Death: taken thee out of the hands of Butchers, and continued thee for a member of his Glory.

O magna misericordia tua, Domine. Behold, I say unto thee, The brightness of Truth over-shadoweth thee. If therefore, thou dwell in truth, why shouldest thou be afraid? Considering that she conquereth and resisteth all her Enemies.

Behold, the World despiseth you, you also shall despise the World.

When the Angel of the Lord poureth his wrath and vial upon the Earth, and the enemies of the Sonne of God, runne in among the sheep. When the self-same Plague that was in the land of Pharaoh raineth in the Houses of all that dwelleth upon the Earth, such as the Lord abhorreth. When the Lord with his hand shall gather up the fruits of the Earth from them, Where then shall be their honors? What then shall be done with money; with that harlot and strumpet of the Earth? Of what value shall their love be then, or who shall regard their friendship?

The Harbour we are in.

In these 4 yeares that are to come, shall all these things come to passe.

And this great joy shall be turned into teares of Brimstone.

Why? you of little faith, you know not how often I have been amongst you: neither the Harbor that I have thrust you into. Notwithstanding you murmur amongst your selves. But stick fast unto him that leadeth you: For he is a sure Guide.

And be not afraid, though the Earth open her jaws against you, for why? I will blesse all things you take in hand, (saith the Lord,) and my spirit shall dwell amongst you.

△ May I speak?

E. K. He turneth him to you.

△ How shall our new proceedings joyne to our old beginnings? O God, our guide, light, staffe, shield, and comfort, &c.

URIEL. Behold, I teach you, before I correct: But the Doctrine I teach is Humility, Patience [he seemeth to speak to one above,] and the fear of wrath to come

After which manner, I have taught them, by thee △.

To Rodolph, and Curtz. Note * I promised the stone.

Therefore, if thou teach Obedience through the spirit of God, appearing unto thee; Be thou also Patient and Obedient: And Humble thy self unto them, for my sake. Not with the opening of any seal, neither with the Counsailes, that I shall deliver thee: But with a ready mind, Obediently, desiring to performe that which thou hast promised in me.

I

I am ſufficient ſtrength, and will be thy buckler, and if they intend evil, it ſhall reſt upon them; yea when they imagin it, it ſhall frize within them. And thy goings in and out ſhall be ſafe amongſt them. But behold, I teach unto thee a way, which thou followeſt not. When thou mindeſt to do any thing, in the name of God, to his honour, to the help of thy neighbour, or thine own comfort: Go about it whatſoever it be: and begin a Labour; Do that thing thou intendeſt. And ſee that you joyn with one conſent towards God and the buſineſſe you are occupied in. A way of dealing.

Then cry out to God for comfort, for light, and true underſtanding. And it it ſhall be given unto thee abundantly. For Lo, I ſay unto thee [E. K. I underſtand him not now.] I will open my hand unto thee, and be merciful unto thee: And whenſoever you heap up the Wood together, I will deſcend and give fire. Together.

Behold, I keep back the reſt of my meſſage for an other time. Which ſhall be ready for you when I find you ready to receive it.

△ I requeſted to know how I ſhould deal with the Ambaſſador of Spain, or the Emperor, or Curtius; Secondly, your RULE here given, I underſtand it not. For I dare not begin any labour without counſel divine: Mans imagination is ſo weak, &c.

URIEL Thou haſt thoſe that are ſent unto thee here for thy inſtruction, which ſhall by degrees lead thee into the degrees of that thou art to do. By degrees.

But it is one thing to receive Corn, and abundance of grain, by the bleſſing of God, in the return of an year: and an other thing to do the works of the Apoſtles.

For the ſpirit of God is twofold: working by information, and influence Cœleſtial through the grant of God his good will, in the miniſtery of his Angels to the information of ſuch as are his faithful and choſen: Another thing to be inſpired from God himſelf, in his holy ſpirit, imediately comforting and knitting Wiſdom together with you, beyond the power that is given unto his Angels.

I have ſpoken unto you a ſound and true doctrine, and have given you not fleſhly but Celeſtia counſel: Apply your ſelf unto it, as the Spirit of God leadeth you. As for thoſe wicked men (that Ambaſſador excepted) our underſtanding hath no name of them: We remember them not, neither limit any thing for them. But if thou in thy ſimplicity and innocency canſt not deal with them, the fault reſteth in thy own faith. Simplicity Innocency.

I am gone.

E. K. I ſee the man again and the houſe: the man ſeemeth to be covered on his face, and ſo over with a vail of hair-cloth to his middle.

△ When it ſhall pleaſe God, all vailes and Ænigmata ſhall ceaſe.

..... Whatſoever I teach you hath a Myſtery. And I am a Myſtery in my ſelf. Even ſo all things that you learn of me, you muſt be content to receive as myſtical inſtructions comprehending perfect truth, and to be known to ſuch as are true. Some there be that have, and have nothing: yea though they have all, for All, is conteined: But the myſteries of God are infinite, and his grace is not to be determined. Myſteries.

△ That ſaying is dark.

That which is All, is conteined. Beleeve you, that we give holy things unto Swine? Or open the finger and workmanſhip of God unto Sinners? God forbid. Moſes ſaw God but his hinder parts. The Prophets were acquainted with God, but myſtically. The Apoſtles with the Soune of God in ſhadows, and their own impotency. Yea, I ſay unto you, that ſhe that lyeth in the lap of her Mother, knoweth not but by degrees, for it is the manner of Gods Wiſdom, both immediately and by us, to keep back his Wiſdom from Hell and corruption.

Therefore murmur not at that which you receive, for it is not your own. Behold, if you have better, you need it not: for it is vanitie to ſeek for that you have. Well, ſince it is given you, Conſider what it is, that is given you. Conſider alſo how it is given you, and by whom.

△ We know by whom, as our conſciences and faith teach us.

..... O you of little underſtanding: Who is he that can and hath to give, but God, Jeſus Chriſt the Sonne of the living God, unto whom all things are given in Heaven, and in Earth, if therefore, All be his, then he giveth. And if you receive it hardly; Conſider how hardly you ought to deliver it again.

And if it be a fire reviving the form of all worldly things: Then caſt it not to Swine: neither yet worſhip it. Behold, you are men, But in having it you muſt ceaſe to be men, for by it you enter upon Ignis viviſicans. Lapidis P. Dignitas.

But I hear a voice; I will depart, and come again.

E. K. Now all is vaniſhed away.

△ We read over the premiſſes to our comfort and inſtruction, we beſeech God to continue his graces and mercies, on us, and in us, to his honour and glory, here and for ever.

E. K. Now he is here again.

△ Note this VISION.

E. K. He hath a great heap of earth, or little hill natural by him of orange or tawny colour, drawing ſomewhat to a Lion tawny.

Earth of a tawny colour.

E. K. A Woman commeth, and with a ſpade diggeth about it. Now commeth a child (a man-child) out of a dark place, with a fire ſhovel in his hand.

Water.

The Woman hath taken away all the earth, and there appeareth water, where the earth was. The boy caſteth out that Water with the fire ſhovel. The Woman laugheth at that. The Woman is in green clothes, and the boy in red.

Green. Red.

Now commeth a Woman with child, or with a great belly, in white clothes, ſhe putteth her hand down to the ground, and pulleth out a little Glaſſe full of red oil.

Now commeth an old man with a Crab-tree ſtaffe on his back, his clothes of motly colour. This old man taketh the Glaſſe from the Woman by force, with his fiſt he breaketh the Glaſſe, and all the oil runneth about his arm, and out of that oil did ſeem a Book to come, a very little Book.

..... Plainer, truer, or better can nothing be.

E. K. He ſaid this, looking on the Book.

1 A Woman. 2 A Child. 3 A Woman with child. 4 An old man.

..... Theſe four found, but none H A D F R U I T, but the laſt. Hear and write the myſteries of God, with humble hearts, not ſitting, but kneeling, before Sanctum Sanctorum.

E. K. He kneeleth himſelf.

E. K. Now goeth fire out of his mouth ſtreamingly, he turneth himſelf to the 4 parts of the World, ſpouting out, or breathing fire vehemently.

An Angel.

E. K. Now commeth one like an angel, hovering over him in the aire: and biddeth him Hold up his hand.

An Oath.

..... Thou ſhalt ſwear by heaven and earth, and by him that ſitteth on the Throne, that thou ſhalt open thy mouth, and ſpeak no more then is conteined in this Book.

E. K. He delivereth him a Book out of his Boſom.

..... I have ſworn.

E. K. The Angel is gone. Now truly, the place is holy.

E. K. He holdeth the Book in his hand which the Angel gave him. The Book is as if it were of Ivory bone. The Book is open, he looketh on it. The letters ſeem to be blewiſh.

..... There is ſilence in us, and in the heavens.

E. K. Now all is full of ſmoak.

△ Oravi paululum tacitus.

E. K. Now it is clear again. ..... He ſeemeth to read of the Book.

E. K. thought this is ignotum per ignotius.

E. K. —

..... Gather or take fierce degree.
.....[I feel no power, therefore have patience.]
..... „ Notwithſtanding, work it diverſe dayes multiplying four digeſtions.
E. K. Now he is in a Cloud again.

E. K. A Cloud ſtandeth by him, and now commeth before him as other times before: and then goeth away from before him again.
„ ..... it, a holy hour deſcendeth.

Friday Manè horam circiter 8½

Orationibus fuſis ad Deum, ut Myſteria nobis exhibita (heſterno die) explicentur; & ut detracta literæ cortice ſuccus & ſpiritus veritatis manifeſtus fiat, &c. tandem apparuit ille cum velo cinereo.

E. K. Here he is, upon a green endleſſe plain field, and as I ſee abroad in the field, ſo the Heaven appeareth, and all circumſtances of the air abroad: but my thinketh, that I am from the earth aloft, and ſee all under me, as if it were in a valley.

.....Now what have you learned out of that Leſſon?

△ We perceive the grace and favour of God, to deliver us Myſteries in outward terms determined, but in the fruitful inward verity, as yet unknown to us.

The uſe and fruit of the former Leſſons.

..... Behold I have delivered you (through the Will of God) the true perfect and moſt plain Science or underſtanding of all the lower Creatures of God: their natures, fellowſhip together, and perfect knitting together, which is fourfold.

The firſt, the knitting together of celeſtial influence, and the Creatures below. The ſecond, the centre of every body Eſſential. The third, the combination of many parts or bodies concurrent to one principle. The laſt the true uſe and knowledge of every ſubſtance to be conjoyned and diſtributed. Take a pauſe—

[E. K. He ſpeaketh a language which I cannot found after him.]

△ We read the premiſſes, and diſcourſed of them.

E. K. Now he is here again.

.....In the Leſſon which I have taught you is this knowledge, with the reſt contained.

Note

Therefore ſeek, and turn the earth upide down. Labour, that you may receive fruit, for unto him that worketh, and hath ſtrength, ſtrength ſhall be given, and the reward of a workman. Many years, the daughter of long time, are not neceſſary to the opening of this Myſtery. Many moneths have nothing to do here: For lo, it is a labour of one day, for in one day you may underſtand to tear this Leſſon in pieces, and to underſtand what every word ſignifieth.

Note

The place of words and letters.

The number of words and letters.

The joyning of number and place.

But here is to be conſidered, in the learning of this Leſſon, three things: the place that every word occupieth; the place that every letter occupieth, and the number and place that every word and letter is referred unto. For here place and number are apart, and bear an Image of the work that they intreat of.

But number and place muſt be joyned together, and thereby ſhall you taſte of that which followeth, true wiſdome.

Be therefore diligent, and pray for the grace of God, that you may learn and underſtand. The manner of mans teaching look not for, in me; for I have nothing to do with man. See, how you can digeſt this:

E. K. He is ſtept aſide. △ I diſcourſed.

E. K. He is here again.

.....¶ Now hear of what I ſhall ſay unto you. I will open unto you a Myſtery, the key and foundation into the entrance and knowledge of the divine wiſdome, delivered unto you in a Science palpable, conteined in letters and words unorderly placed, as a Chaos: and therefore not to be underſtood but by order to be reduced and drawn into their places, and thereby to be underſtood.

Cabaliſtically

For you have not a letter, nor the form of a letter, nor the place of a letter, but they are all counted with us, as the ſtars are counted with God. The letters and words working into all reaſon, as the ſtars do into the lower creatures: Therefore humbly receive that which I have to ſay unto you, or ſhall open unto you as obedient Scholars, kneeling.

Firſt, a little with me praiſe God— E. K. He is on his knees.

E. K. prayed the 142 Pſalm, Domine exaudi orationem meam, and I with heart conſented, and greatly rejoyced in the aptneſſe of the prayer: as E. K. his caſe chiefly required, and mine alſo.

.. .. I come again.

E. K. He is gone.

△ We conferred and conſidered many things to the praiſe of God, and the contempt of the worldly wiſdome, &c.

The Word and Teſtament of* Jeſus Chriſt, the bread of life, left to the comfort and inſtruction of the faithful, is ſuch as informeth according to the dignity and pureneſſe of Spirit in him, which ſeeketh to be informed. For why, the Holy Ghoſt helpeth not ſuch as are Lepers, neither healeth ſuch as are ſick, unleſſe they come ſeeking him truly for medicine.

Many read the Scriptures after the ſame manner, (my brethren) but they are confounded, becauſe they ſeek their own glory, and not the glory of him, whereof they intreat. Herein doth Satan rejoyce that the Word of God is become an inſtrument unto him, to ſpoil the life (and ſtate to come) of man.

Herein doth he rejoyce, that with the ſame meat that God feedeth, even with the ſelf ſame he confoundeth.

Officio unusquisque propria gaudet.

Because thou yesterday wouldest offer up sacrifice, wouldest put thy hand to that which is not thy office, and that in the absence of him, which is thy body: therefore hath Satan deceived thee, and as the father of liers hath in a lesson of truth led you so far into errour, that you will never find the way out, if you should follow those instructions.

E. K. Here he is.
△ Benedictus qui venit in nomine Domini, cujus nomen sanctificetur & exaltetur, nunc & in ævum per omnes gentes.
.... Remember that you are flesh, and by your works deserve nothing at Gods hands.

Now

Now then if you be man, then are you of earth, earthy. But according to your similitude, grafted in the image of God in his Sonne Jesus you are heavenly.

But behold, God is opposite unto you, and his spirit cleaveth not unto you, in that you are flesh, in that you are earth, in that you are filthy: in that you are the children of Satan, and that therefore, take part with him against Christ anointed of the Lord.

E. K. He is out of sight now.

Now if you be opposite, or more contrary to the image of him which dwelleth in you, if you dwell in him what do yee here: why presume you to enter within the Doores of him to whom you are an adversary?

Herein you shew your ignorance; and the lumpishnesse of your fragility, in that you seek of him, unto whom you are odious, or crave the bread which is due and necessary for his children and servants. But hear my voice, Petentibus dat, sed petentibus filiis, & servis, sed non alienis.

Panis

Notwithstanding, of his mercy, and for that, he knew before the beginning of all worlds, the corruption of your vessels, and remembring that you have been of his household, mercifully he hath hitherto winked at you, and at your presumption, and fed you with that bread, which is not the bread of sinners.

But now considering that you continue in your wickednesse, continue in your rebellion against his Majesty, and fight daily under his banner which is accursed, he taketh his bread from you, shutteth up his Doores against you, warneth his servants against you, and is become a fire-brand of wrath against you.

Upon condition.

But here you will say: were not we of those number unto whom he made a promise, you were so. But upon condition: That if you would bridle your tongues from speaking evil, and become wholly his. But you are neither his, nor bridle your tongues: but speak Blasphemy before the Lord, and the Messengers of his light and covenant. Therefore are you not inheritors of his promise. Behold, while the grapes grew, and the corn ripeneth, God did expect your return, for no hour is unacceptable unto him.

But now the harvest commeth that the corn must be cut down and the grapes prest, you are not as you said you would be, nor as you promised.

Therefore are you excluded, for in the vineyard there commeth no strangers, nor in this harvest commeth any hirelings, for it is not the harvest of man.

Now either fulfill your promise and return from the multitude of your sinnes: or murmur not, though you be shut out of Doores.

The earth of it self bringeth forth nothing, for it is the lump and excrement of darknesse, whose bowels are a burning lake.

Hell.

But where the heavens yield, and the Sunne poureth down his force, she openeth her self, and becommeth spongy, receiving mixture to generation, and so is exalted above her self, and bringeth forth to the use of man: Even so the Body when it lyeth in the puddle and hotchpotch of his earthly filthinesse, and darknesse making himself equal with beasts: whose dignity is not, but in their use.

E. K. Now he is here again.

..... Two things you have to be instructed in, in Rlodnr, and in the Law of Coition and Mixture.

The first, is the instrument working, and drawing things together of one nature. The second is the bonnds and termes, wherein every mixture consisteth, and beyond the which it cannot go.

The first of 4 parts, every part conteining, conteineth his conteined double.

The first is Tepens, this teacheth the rest.

These two things can I open unto you in two revolutions, which is but one dayes work.

But now I cease to open any more unto you till I see the favour of God more open unto you.

After 7 dayes I will come again, until then, I neither am, nor speak.

△ The mercies of God be upon us, now, and ever, Amen.

+ Praga. Jesus Mercy.

Monday.

Januarii 28. Manè, hora 10 ferè.

Oratione Dominica & aliis pro misericordia divina, fusis precibus extemporandis.

After diverse pitiful complaints of our frailty, and calling for favour, grace, and mercy, he appeared.

..... Let the heavens prepare themselves to hear, the earth scatter her self before my voice: for I am the Trumpet of the Highest, and the piercing Spirit, disperst into all creatures, which are from the beginning in God, and made to his glory, and the use of man-kind, that in man he might be glorified.

Give ear therefore, gird up your garments, and scatter your hair abroad before the Lord, which is glorified in me, and through whom I speak; and these are my words.

Har-

Harden not your hearts against the Lord, neither exalt your selves above him that hath created you. But humble your selves, and consider you are flesh, mortal, transitory, and full of sinne.

My brethren, my brethren, sinne and flesh appear not before the Lord, neither such as are sinners, and fleshly vessels apt or fit for the Lord to dwell in.

Understand what the Lord is, and how great he is: a Judg to the wicked, great and terrible: a father to the holy and sincere, just, full of mercy, and loving kindnesse.

If you now therefore be holy, and put on the garments of Innocency, and walk before him in righteousnesse; Then look to have the reward of Children; Then look for his fatherly mercies, and loving kindnesse; Then, then rejoyce at the garments of glory prepared for you. If

But if you seek him in judgment, and stir him up to wrath and anger: if you cause him to call the terrible thunders (provided for the wicked) about him, in the most furious flames of his indignation, to gather you together like whirl Winds: if you draw his holy Angel from you, and spoil you of your armes: if he sit down upon the mouth of vengeance, and arm himself with righteousnesse against your wickednesse. But if

Then look for the horrible and unspeakable reward of the wicked, and the consuming fire of Justice, sharper then the two-edged sword.

Who hath stood before the Lord in Justice? or who dare quarrel with the highest? What flesh hath seen the Lord in his Majestie? or can appear before him, as righteous?

Tear your selves therefore in pieces, and fall down before the Lord, worship him as a father, and become his children: for his Judgments (my brethren) are terrible, and his wrath is without measure. Many wayes you are bound and tyed unto God; As by discipline you learn.

But three special wayes you have been advanced by him more then your brothers or sisters have bin:

The first in the visitation, wherewithal he hath comforted you, and exalted you above the worldlings, of his good, pure, and just Ministers of eternity and light.

Secondly, in that with his own hand, yea, with the beck of his own eye, beyond the ministry of Angels, he hath divers wayes protected you: defended you, yea, and snatched you from imminent and violent envy, and prepared destruction of Satan, at home, abroad, and diverse other wayes, secret and not to be opened.

Lastly, that by their meanes and ministry, which are his good Angels, and minister unto him; he hath guarded you from the wickednesse of your own Country, and hath brought you, ready to place you into the lap of a Virgin, with whom, if you take part, you shall ascend into that Hierusalem, which shall descend, and there live for ever.

Therefore ought you, above all men, to lift up the horn of the Lord, and to blow his praises abroad.

Therefore ought you when others are full of idlenesse, the dalliances of sinne, to humble your self upon the earth before the Lord, and to praise his Name.

Therefore ought you, though all flesh forsook the Lord, and cried out against his anointed, to stand stifly against the malice of the hills, and to be without fear.

O my brethren, therefore ought you (in very deed) to shake off your wickednesse, and to cleave (before the Lord) unto the innocency of Angels, delighting in the one as an eternal food, despising the other as a fire-brand for Hell-fire and the wicked.

△ O Lord, Velle adest nobis, ast absque tuo singulari favore, & auxilio non possumus perficere, quod ita debemus præstare. Igitur Deus.

Lo, behold, your humility is not, you are sealed to the World, and according to the World measure the Lord; Therefore with the World shall you be judged. Therefore shall the Lord sit in judgment against you. World.

△ O Lord, what prevaileth us that we are are born? or what prevaileth us that we have heard of the mysteries and promises most merciful of the highest, as concerning our Election, if the Lord will not help us in our great frailty and misery: where shall we become on the face of the earth? &c.

..... Hear me. Fret not in Spirit, for it is not in thee. △

E. K. Now a flame of fire flasheth in my face.

..... *O yee of little faith! O yee of little faith! O yee of little faith! I have gathered you together as Prophets. But you flie from me. If I had known or foreseen, that to sit on the seat of Kings, had been meet for you: to have had habitation or dwelling with the crafty Counsellors of the Earth would have made you fit for me. If I had seen that pride of the loathsome heaps of money ill gathered together, could have sanctified you before me; Then could I have lifted you up, placed you amongst the worldly wise, or opened unto you the lowth of the Earth. △ Abissum, the lowth.

△ Our office appointed.

Take whomsoever thou wilt, in whose face the Lord shall seem to dwell, and place him with this Seer, and let him stand seven times by him: I will take the spirit from him, and will give it unto another, unto the same that standeth by, and shall have power to see: and he shall fulfill my word, that I have begun. But if thou do so, take heed that upon his head there come no rasor; But keep him for me.

De novo asciscendo vidente & Nazareo Domini futuro.

I come again.

△ O Lord God, thou haſt coupled us two together, in thy election, and what the Lord hath ſoyned, no fleſhly fancy of mine ſhall willingly ſeparate. But Lord, if it be thy will, ſeeing he is ſo hard to give credit to thy holy meſſages, without ſome proof in work firſt paſſed; as for example, this doctrine of the Philoſophers ſtone; that ſo he may come to be allowed, though he imitate Thomas Dydimus in his hard and ſlow belief, or credit given to thy Miniſters in this Action. Lord, proceed herein, that he may perceive thy power and mercies, &c. And Lord, becauſe he is to receive the pledge of thy mercies, and myſtery of the heavenly food, we would gladly hear of that holy Sacrament ſome diſcourſe for our better inſtruction, and his better incouragement to the myſtery receiving.

△ After a good while, in which mean time we had diſcourſed of the Sacrament receiving, and of the Philoſophers ſtone making, he appeared.

E. K. Here he is now.

.....Note well what I ſay unto you.

E. K. He openeth his face, he putteth on a white garment, he taketh up the four corners of his garment, and putteth them under a broad girdle he hath: on his head is nothing, but hair reddiſh wavering.

.....God, in the beginning, of Nothing, by himſelf, made, created, and gathered together all Creatures; of Nothing, becauſe in himſelf he is.

E. K. He holdeth up his hands, and looketh up to heaven, and ſeemeth to pray extentis manibus.

..... If he Be, then doth it follow, that nothing is, but that which is God. But God made not all things (made and created) of himſelf, neither out of himſelf: therefore of nothing.

Underſtand therefore, that God from beginning, and beyond the beginning in himſelf, in himſelf as God, conteined I am and is, proper to himſelf, and for himſelf: But alſo by the knowledge of himſelf, he conteined alſo that Nothing, of the which in his ſecret and determined purpoſe ſeparated from himſelf, he intended to make all things. It followeth neceſſarily (therefore) that that which was not, had no power of it ſelf, muſt remain after the Image of I S, brought or knit together by the Wiſome of God, ſubſtantially in himſelf, whereby Jeſus Chriſt appeared in his God-head.

But behold, when God the Father and the Son throughone ſpiritual ſubſtance and illumination, from one centre, had gatherered together (I&u Divino) that Nihil ſeparable.

E.K. He ſeemeth to be conſumed to aſhes in a fire, and ſo lyeth as it were in aſhes proſtrate.

E.K. Now he is up again I know not how.

E. K. He ſeemeth now to be very clear, and in manner tranſparent.

..... Say that laſt.

△ I read, But behold, when God, &c. as in the 8th. line above.

E.K. He looketh about him diligently.

.....Then did he ſeparate that Nothing from himſelf, and as it marvelouſly lay hid in him: ſo marvelouſly he wrought upon it: Not at one inſtant, for then it had been like unto himſelf.

Time. But in time, which he firſt made out of nothing: which being conſumed, Nothing ſhall return into the place from whence it came. And that which hath offended in nothing ſhall be a ſecond, oppoſite from God, and out of God; which ſhall have continuance, world without end: And it ſhall be alwayes vexed, the Spirit of God mediating: not of the ſubſtance or pureneſſe of God, or of his Spirit, but with the ſelf-ſame Nothing; out of which God created all things. Seeing therefore, that the Will of God, which is his Image, ſeparating Nothing from eternity, in time made all things (being the work of ſix dayes.) [But I teach you a Myſtery.]

Angels Mens ſouls. All things that through God are moved to the Center by the Spirit of God, (which is the center of the Godhead) are not after the world, after the conſummation of the world, as Angels and the bleſſed ſouls, are not to be reckoned with [that] Nothing: But are of God, becauſe they dwell in him, of whom it is ſaid, There they ſhall not need the Sun nor the Moon, the Lamb himſelf ſhall be their light, and a ſhining lamp for ever. Note here that the Trinity, firſt, ſecond, and third, totally not moved, but by himſelf, in himſelf, time bringing forth all things according to his Word, made all things except Man. For why? when all things had pleaſed him, not becauſe they were, but becauſe by the Word (the Image of himſelf, and wherein he is delighted) they were made, he made man, as the Scripture teacheth you, how by the Spirit of God in Moſes, that he ſhould injoy and uſe the benefit of all this ſomething proceeding from nothing in the Creatures of God in their kind: that in him God might be glorified; not onely in this world, which is your earth & vail of miſery; but alſo and chiefly that the memory of his exceeding and great mercy & omnipotency might remain before him in heaven, in the image of man, and the moſt excellent Creatures, world without end.

E. K. Now he is faln into aſhes again, as before.

E.K. Now he ſtandeth up again, as before.

..... Here is the making of man to be conſidered: for of the moſt excellenteſt dignified, and neereſt part of Nothing diſtributed, as it were approaching neer unto God: God made the Soul of man, man, as a thing knit or tied in the convex of his own Sphere, not taking part with Nothing materially, but with Nothing Immortal. Creation of man.

The Soul was made Spiritual and increasing, wherein the Philosophers, the wise men of this world are deceived, and hath been a secret shut up in the Book of Esdras, not fit for the world. Anima hominis Esdras book.

For even as flesh by conjunction and commixtion of likelihoods proper in their own nature to bring forth the image of himself; so doth the most excellentest part of man, taking part with the vicinity of God, (and so perpetually moving) bring forth, after the manner of eternity, every living soul: the Spirit of God (conjoyned with the Trinity) working with him in his infinity. Note of the souls spiritual increasing. A rare Mystery.

Behold in the beginning God hath not numbred formally all souls that shall enter into these vessels, or other part. But the matter material in himself, he knoweth and hath limited, beyond the which, Deficiente materia, there cannot be. Therefore it is conteined in Number: Not, that it is conteined in Number to be numbred, but within the proportion of number conteined in the knowledg of Jesus Christ, taking part with man, and so to be numbred. △ So that it may be said, that Deus quasi creando, & homo quasi generando, animam humanam progignit.

Adam fell; transgressed God his Commandment, and therefore was his soul darkened, bare and naked, because he wanted the beauty and excellency of Gods Spirit, wherein he dignified him, and made him like unto himself, being a living soul. He was cast out, and now casteth off misery, wanting the knowledge of those things, for the which he was created. Now God, the image of his Father, grieved at the fall of man, and moved with pity, vouchsafed, because of the excellency of man, to enter into man, being before separated, into this part of nothing, into man. Not that he would beautifie himself with any thing that man had: But that, Become man, begotten of the Holy Ghost, he might, as you know by the Scriptures, make man acceptable again with God his Father, God himself, with God in unity, for Justice and Terrour is God the Father, Mercy and love is God the Son. Wisdome and knowledge is God the Holy ghost. The Trinity distinct.

He, since he became man, put not on the flesh of man to become a lyar; but that the flesh of man might be full of the spirit of truth and understanding.

E. K. Now he is faln again into ashes.

E. K. Now he is up again.

And so receive forgiveness of sins, and be at one with God, which is to say, in his favour, taking hold in God, not as created, and from Creation sinful by fall. But by ransome and redemption as bought and made free in Jesus Christ, which offered up the Sacrifice of frankincense, gold, and myrrh, of true propitiation, for the quick and the dead.

Now, my brethren, give good ear what I say unto you.

The wisdome of the Father, in love, created and made man, dignifying him, and exalting him, as the Lord and Master over all Creatures mortal. But how? by Plasmation. For it is written, Let us make man.

Here thou seest also the Scripture saith, that God took of the Earth. Mark this word, and consider it when I shall apply it. Earth.

Now if this power, if this Plasmating, if this Taking, which was the Word, become man, perfect man; then followeth it, that man was and is, God creating and created. If therefore this conjunction or knitting together of God and man, bear the image of him, in excellency and power, which created all things, and by whom this Nothing was spread abroad, and had form in his parts: then followeth it, that the self-same God and Man being truth, speaking of himself unto his Disciples, saying, This is my body.

E. K. Now he is fallen again in ashes.

E. K. Now he is up again.

..... Read.

△ I read, Now my brethren give good ear, &c.

E. K. Now he holdeth up his hands.

.....did in breaking of bread, which signifieth the earth, in taking it signified, the power of making, and his own Office, and breaking it before his Disciples, according to the secret sense of mans soul, then being yet alive, give himself in the bread, and in breaking unto his Disciples, as the sense of his word spoken.

E K. He speaketh that I understand not.

.....did import and truly signifie himself, his very body, to suffer, and suffered in that, in him, in his Godhead and wisdome before the worlds it was so: his very true body and very true blood. But notwithstanding Myistcally. Consider of this.

E. K. He is gone.

△ Blessed be.

E. K. Now he is here again.

..... Mark here for whom, and unto whom Christ took, and brake bread: also took the Chalice, and called it his blood of the New Testament, which shall be given.

Here you see, that in faith, and Sacramentally it was given unto his Disciples there, which was also to be given upon the Crosse for the redemption of man-kind; for else, why should he have said, which shall be given? Note. In faith & Sacramentally.

But here my Brethren, in that it was to be given, it was to seal the perpetual and everlasting memory thereof unto the destruction of Satan, and the comfort of his chosen. But in spirit, before, he had pacified the wrath of his Father: Therefore it was given and to be given.

But unto whom? to his Disciples, and not unto strangers; not unto the Scribes and Pharisees, but unto such as did apprehend him by faith.

Here thou seest, that to apprehend by faith, is to be comprehended in the love of God.

But in that Christ said that shall be shed, it signified unto the worlds end: for his blood is always shed before his father, as a satisfaction for the obstinacy and sin of man.

The remembrance. But the remembrance thereof is the power of doing, that he gave to his Disciples, which consisteth in Act, which must be done in the Church of God, yea even unto the end. For as God (Jesus Christ) is said to be a Saviour and anointed, so is he an eternal King, and a continual Saviour of such as fly unto him, conteining in man (being dignified through his Godhead) the eternal power of Christus potest esse ubique. presence and Being, in all places whereoever.

Consider (my brethren) unto what use should the body of Christ be, if the Body it self were not a Sacrement, and the holy sign of the peace between God and man.

Behold it is said, unless thou eat of the flesh and drink of the blood, thou canst not, &c.

If the Disciples did eat the body of Christ, Christ ministring himself, and standing by, not yet crucified, why therefore shouldest not thou eat the body of the same Christ, which dwelleth in thee, and in whom thou hast to dwell.

But here is to be considered the manner of eating.

E.K. Now he falleth in ashes again.

E.K. Now he is up again.

..... But at whom shall we learn this manner of eating? My brethren, of his Disciples. For although Christ himself alive, visibly and substantially stood beside them, and ministred unto them: Notwithstanding took bread, brake it, and gave it unto them, saying, This is my body: They simply did believe it, considering and acknowledging his Omnipotency (which Peter had grounded in saying, Thou art the Son of the living God.)

If therefore he be acknowledged of us (I speak for you) to be the Son of the living God. Then must we truly confesse, that all things are possible unto him, and that by faith, we ought to believe the mysteries, works and wonders of God, Sacramentally opened and to be used for the cure of our own sores.

[He speaketh I know not what, nor to whom.]

..... Read.

△ I read: But at whom? &c.

And not as the wicked use to do; Tie the power and majesty of God and his Omnipotency to the tail or end of reason, to be hailed as she will.

If his Apostles have left us examples of belief, have taught us how to believe, and upon what rock and foundation to fasten our belief; Then simply and nakedly follow the steps of true Faith, and laying reason aside, believe.

But here note, that this Sacrament is to be ministred amongst the Apostles, amongst the Ministers and true Servants of God, in his Church, and not in the temple of the Scribes and Pharisees, Hypocrites, and Deceivers, which whilest they tear Christ Jesus and his body after the frowardnesse of their own sense, do eat (as Judas did) and so perish eternally.

But I say unto you, and teach you, that whersoever in the true Church of God remembrance is made; and the use of this Sacrament is celebrated of the true body and blood of Jesus Christ crucified, there is also the true body of Christ, God and man substantial, and bread of eternal comfort and food, to such as humbly, nakedly, and penitently receive it, propitiatory for the quick and the dead; not unto such as are dead in sin, and in hell, and out of this life, but unto such as are here Sinners, and so dead, and to be revived. For he that dwelleth in Christ is quick, because he dwelleth in life and light. But he that goeth out of Christ through sin, and in whom Christ dwelleth not, he is dead. For this, I have said.

△ Lord, what shall we say to the Priests, when they would have us to acknowledge Transubstantiation, &c.

△ The words of Consecration pronounced. Sub forma panis. .....The bread that was ministred by Christ unto his Disciples, was not a figure of his body, but his true body. So the Minister using the office and person of Christ in office, pronouncing the [△] words, doth also give unto the people not Bread, but the true body.

But hear me. Thou must consider it as a Sacrament, and must believe as the Disciples did, that it is the true body of Christ, that thou eatest in the form of Bread.

△ As concerning under both kinds recieving, what is your doctrine?

..... Caro & sanguis faciunt corpus & constituunt.

△ Then it is no offence to God, to receive under one kind onely.

△ As concerning the worshipping of it, being lifted up by the Priest.

..... That

..... That, by faith (in that it is believed to be the true body,) is also by faith to be worshipped: Not in that it hath the shape of bread, but that it is the body of Christ, true God and man.

△ As concerning also the reserving of it, being consecrated, what are we to understand?

..... Reason hath no place here: To them that receive it, it is a Sacrament. But receiving ceasing, the Sacrament ceaseth also.

Celebrandi, & accipientibus, Sacramentum & Sacrificium est: Cessante celebratione, & nullis accipientibus, cessat Sacramentum & Sacrificium. Nam Sacramentum dicitur ab institutione & modo.

The mean consisteth in them both.

..... To morrow you shall hear more of me, in the mean season consider you, How merciful God is unto you through me, and open this doctrine also unto your wives, that they may also know God truly.

△ Gloria in excelsis Deo, & in terra pax hominibus bonæ voluntatis.

..... I demonstrated to you, yesterday, how the visible ignis of matter appearing was united and knit unto the visible, signified: wherein and Whereunto I answered in my own form and person, for whosoever talketh of God and Christ expounding the Scriptures, ought to talk plainly, truly, and openly, that that which they speak may be understood. This is the Office of a Preacher. Even so I talking of God, and illuminated to this Office, for the time, was bare, because I spake not of my self. But the doctrine I taught you was true: and is worthy to be graved in golden Tables, and monumentally to be placed upon the altar, wherein man may see, as in a glasse, How God through his Sacraments and holy institutions, sanctifieth, regenerateth and purifieth man unto himself.

Now to the work intended, which is called in the Holy Art Gebofal, which is not (as the Philosophers have written,) The first step supernatural, but it is the first supernatural step naturally limited unto the 48 Gates of Wisdom; where your holy Book beginneth. But if the Cloud be in you, then by your own help and consent it must be removed.

△ By the favour and help of the Highest we trust the Cloud shall be removed.

..... Take heed therefore you lift not up your selves in mind, presuming against reason, (whereby you are knit together,) and the will of God: whereby you are taught obedience.

For pride is hateful before God: and to be in love with your selves is the greatest ignorance.

Pride. Self-love.

Shortly after.

E. K. I see an endlesse thing like a red Sea. A head cut off from a body doth appear: the Hair hath bin pulled off it: that Head appeareth to come out up of that bloudy Sea, tumbling sometime one part, and sometime another upward, and sometime under the water clean.

E. K. Now I see a Tree upon an old Hill full of mosse in a desolate place, besides the former water.

The Tree is sprung of a graft, which hath been grafted in ∴ The Tree hath a few green leaves on, and many old leaves: The state of the Tree is as if it were Autumn. There lyeth by it the top of a Tree cut off, and dead withered.

The Tree hath a eleven Shots or branches issuing out of it.

There tumbleth down from heaven a white thing, and out of it issueth an arm with a broad axe in his hand, such as they hew pamnel board with, it seemeth to be about a yard long

That hand with his nail maketh a race down along the body of the Tree, and then spreadeth the bark open from that place of the race made.

A voice.

Quod erit, & futurum est, est & non est.

E. K. That voice seemeth to come out of the top of the Shew Stone.

E. K.

E. K. On the place of the Tree where it was made bare appeared two figures of 8, one in manner under another. Now the bark is put together again, and the Tree ſeemeth whole, and as it were not cut.

A voice out of the white. Quod erit & futurum eſt, jam eſt.

10 branches cut off of the grafted tree. E. K. At this word he ſtrook off ten of the Tree branches, and the ſtem or branch that ſtandeth, ſeemeth to be now between me and the Sun riſen about an hour high; And that ſtem or branch hath five leſſer branches out of it.

Every.

E. K. Now there ſtandeth one like Michael, with a tanckard in his hand of ſilver and ſtooped, he ſaith;

Mich. ..... Iterum Lavabo te.

E. K. He waſheth with water, and his hands the old branch cut off. Now he taketh that old branch up in his hand, and holdeth it up. The ax is torned from the tree.

A voice from the top of the ſtone. ..... Plantavi te, & neglexiſti mandata & ſtatuta legis mea, & in ſuperbia tua defalcavi te: Sed jam memor ſum verborum & pacti mei apud patres, & occupabis locum ſolitum, & ipſe rorabo te nubibus cœli. Igitur dejeci, & præcipitavi illos à me: Ne forte triumphantes poſſuiſſent nullum Deum.

Michael..... Magnus es tu Ben Elohim, magna eſt gloria tua, magnitudo tua ſuperat cœlos, & jam regnabis in terris.

Regnum Dei in terris inſtat. E. K. Now Michael putteth on the dead bough on the former tree: Now he with the ax with his thumb, cloſeth the barks together.

Now out of heaven commeth drops of a rain, and that ſtem which was ſo put to, had 12 branches; and both that and the reſt ſpringeth together very freſhly.

Michael. ..... Qui habet oculos videat, & cui ſunt aures audiat.

Dee

{ Dee / Kelly } E. K. Now appeareth one like △ under the tree.

E. K. or Safeguard.

And alſo I ſee my ſelf (ſaid E. K.) comming there, and my Gown is all white, but bebloudied: and △ ſeemeth to have a white Gown, or rather like a womans ſafeguard full of pleats, and full of mens eyes.

Seven more. There appear ſeven more, ſix men and one boy. One is a Blackamore.

They have all white garments alſo.

The tree at the firſt ſeemed to bring forth and ſhew horns, and after that there appeared men iſſuing out or growing plentifully on that tree, and thoſe men to have thoſe horns.

Then he with the Ax pulled one of thoſe men off, and pulled one of his horns, skull and all, and thereof gave to eat to △, E. K. and the other ſeven; and they did eat: and ſo all the Viſion did vaniſh away, nothing appearing in the ſtone.

A voice. ..... Iſta ad rem; Vos autem poſt modicum admonebo.

——— △ After half an hour, wherein we talked de Converſione Judæorum.

E. K. Here is now Levanael, as before time.

Levan. ..... O thou which art of the ſeed of the earth, attend my voice, and open thy heart, that thy bowels may be filled with gladneſſe, and that within thy head may wiſdome enter, ſince God hath not onely called thee, but alſo hath made a choice in thee, If thou hear his voice, and obey it.

If Be not ſtiff-necked, neither ſuffer ſenſual imaginations to obſcure or defile thy inward underſtanding. The firſt nouriſheth thee to the nouriſhment of thy fleſh, that thy fleſh periſhing may alſo carry thy ſoul with it. The ſecond teacheth thee to underſtand thy ſelf, and thereby to acknowledg the Creator: that thereby thy ſoul purified may alſo purifie thy body: that thereby in the end thou mayeſt riſe a purified and perfect Creature.

Behold, there are which riſe; and have loſt their bodies: and there are alſo which riſe, and they riſe in body.

Qui appetit ſe propter ſe, non intelligit Deum, ſed qui intelligit Deum, appetit ſeipſum; ſed appetitus ejus non eſt à ſe, ſed ab alio.

Since therefore, to ſeek God [not] for your own ſakes, is to glorifie God, lift up your ſelves, and behold the heavens, and look into the earth, and muſe at her wonders: And let not the leſſer part carry away thegreater.

E. K. I pray you ſpeak higher, I can ſcarce hear you.

Thoſe that have their Sanctification through promiſe, and fulfilling of the Will of God, have alwayes wayes forsaken themselves: But yet, for themselves, followed his Commandements; Therefore I say forsake your selves, and do the will of God, that for the comforts of your selves, and your eternal salvation, you may seek God.

But he that seeketh God, seeketh him through patience, through afflictions, through temptations. Patience. Afflictions. Temptations.

Therefore despise this Monster that tempteth you, and neglect her in the middest of her pride, for she is poor, miserable, and prepared as a fire-brand for destruction; if you seek riches of her, she hath none, if you seek wisdom at her, she knoweth it not, if you desire quietnesse, and the joyes of rest, she cryeth out against you, Watch, Watch, and gird up your selves. Mundus.

And if you seek eternal life, or study to please God, and to glorifie him, whereunto you are created, seperate your selves from the Harlot.

Swear your selves her enemy, and hate all those that take part with her; For, behold, she is become an enemy of him that created you, a Blasphemer of him whom you seek to glorifie, the daughter of him, which set himself against the Highest. A mundo & mundanis debemus esse alieni.

Therefore for your Creations sake, ought you to despise her.

For your Redemptions sake to neglect her, and for the Glory that you seek to attain unto, utterly to despise or contemn her.

But here, peradventure, you will say unto me, as he said unto Christ the Sonne of the living God.

E. K. He maketh curſy, and kisseth the ground.

What shall I do to enherit everlasting life?

I say unto you follow the Commandements.

Behold, it is written, I give you a new Commandemnt; Love one another. Love.

How love you one another without Charity?

But what is Charity? is it not the gift of the Holy Ghost? you know it is so, you know also, that the Holy Ghost is called a Comforter.

But consider with your selves, why he is called a Comforter; Not because he comforteth himself, for he is all comfort; But because he is the comfort of such as he hath spoken to, saying, I have given you a new Commandement, Love one another; But, who are they? Even they that eat the flesh, and drink the bloud of the Sonne of man Jesus Christ, the Sonne of God, true God and man, which unlesse you do, you are not of that Company unto whom Christ said I give you a new Commandment.

For in so doing you are grafted in Christ, are subject to the Commandment, tyed unto Charity, wherein you are refreshed by the Holy Ghost the Continual Comforter, and giver of wisdom to such as dwell in Christ.

See therefore that none is of Christ, that hath not Charity, neither hath any Charity, that is not of the Company of such as feed of the flesh and bloud of Jesus Christ, without the which there is no Salvation, therefore art thou E. K. a lyar when thou sayest I fear God, I love God, I intend to live well and in obedience, for thou followest not his Commandements, thou fliest from him; Therefore thou art not with him.

*But I hear * thee saying,* I confesse my self to Christ before the Throne of God. * △ E. K. did confesse that he thought so at this instant.

But thou hast not offered thy self unto the Priest, neither hast laid down thy Sacrifice.

I say unto thee, Thou confessest not thy self, neither thy sinnes, before God, because thou commest not where he is.

Not that God seeth thee not, but that he is said not to hear sinners, unlesse they be penitent, but penance is limited by the Church, and sorrowfulnesse is not judged by thy self, it behoveth thee therefore, if thou wilt flie unto Christ, to enter into the Company of such as professe him, where he is, and with whom he dwelleth. Penance. The Church. Ad Ecclesiam Catholicam confugiendam.

There, at what time thou repentest thee of thy sinnes, and shalt confesse them with sorrowfulnesse, before him which is in office at the mystery; there also by the mystery (which is Christ) shalt thou receive forgivenesse of thy sinnes.

For if he that ministreth, is heard in the power of his Administration, and Sacramental vow, much more hath he power to forgive Sinnes; For lo, that he doth, is not of himself, but his dignity is of that, whereof he is called a Priest.

Now therefore I say unto thee E. K. until thou make thy self clean, thou shalt continue filthy, & immundis & impuris, non revelat Deus Sacramenta.

But even as thou, not clean, seest, and yet seest nothing: so being cleansed, not seeing thou shalt see, and see all things.

I have done.

△ Gloria Patri & Filio & Spiritus sancto, sicut erat in principio, & nunc & semper, & in secula seculorum. Amen.

Februarii 23.

Saturday A meridie horam circiter 2.

Orationibus ad Deum fuſis, pro luce & veritate divina, &c.

△ The occaſion of this comming to the Shew-Stone, was that as we ſat together in the Stove, there was a pat or ſtroke or two (not natural) given on the Bench and Wall: and withal I felt on my head a heavy moving thing, and alſo after that E. K. felt on his back, as if one had written letters diſtinctly: whereupon we went to underſtand the will of God, as being thereto half warned and ſtirred by theſe tokens.

E. K. Madimi is here.

△ Benedicti ſunt pedes evangelizantium pacem & favorem altiſſimi.

Madimi ..... What ſhould I ſpeak unto you, ſince you have no faith?

Faith. Why ſhould I teach you that deſpiſe my documents?

I knock in vain, for you hear me not.

Unus unam alius aliam quærit: diſpares eſtis.

△ Deus poteſt omnibus & diverſiſſimis ſatisfacere, bona ſemper petentibus.

Madimi ..... Shall I ſpeak, or no?

△ Speak in the Name of God, who would not hear the words of the wiſe and of the mighty, of the good and true?

Mater. Madimi. Madimi ..... Shall I cloſe my mouth, becauſe of your wickedneſſe? or ſhall I open my mouth, becauſe my Mother hath commanded me?

I will go back, and will deſire that my mouth may be ſewed up with a double threed: for aſſure your ſelf I will not come again willingly: But if ſhe ſay again, Go, I will come.

Ium, wherefore doth God give bread to Dogs: or ſuffereth his ſonne to ſhine to the bottomleſſe Caves? I know a cauſe, but yet I am torn in ſpirit.

O Mother, Mother, if thou ſhouldeſt ſpeak unto this people, out of and from above the Clouds, they would melt before thee, yea, they would fall.

But to thou ſpeakeſt unto them by thy daughter that they may ſtand and hear, but they hear not: But I ſwear unto thee, they deſpiſe thee.

What ſhall therefore become of them? I go, I will ſee if I can abſent my ſelf from them.

△ She went away as if ſhe had been angry, in the mean ſpace we argued after our former manner; E. K. as he was wont, and I ſtill in my conſtant hope of Gods mercies.

After half an hour. E. K. Now ſhe is here again.

E. K. She putteth off her peticoat, and putteth on an other Garment full of pleats of a golden colour, and after that an other Garment, upon that Garment with many Crowns bordered on it, with hands out of every of them, and a great part of the Arm, they are right hands, the firſt Garment (which ſhe put off) and flingeth it into a fire.

Madimi ..... I ſpeak unto you, though I ſay nothing.

Conſilia Dei. But the wrappings of mans wit, are unperfect knots, hard to put together, and harder to unloſe: Therefore they are not.

Impriſonment conſpired againſt me. △ But theſe are of God, and they are true. Envious minds, and falſe hearts, do hunt after thee, and they have ſaid and have conſpired; But I have ſaid unto them, be it unto them, as they have meaſured unto others: And that which they have nouriſhed in corners, let it be fire, and conſume their dwelling places; Let it ſeek out their brothers: Let their throats be burſt in pieces: Let it range along their Kingdomes, and let it burn down the gate of their borders, that the way may be wide: for a narrow way ſerveth not where I bring in miſchief, I will bring her to the borders, and will place her in the Gates, and will ſay unto her.

Accipe tibi vim.

And I will give her a two edged ſword, but I will not enter in with her: becauſe I will not hear their Lamentations, neither be moved with their groanings.

Theſe are the hard and heavy knots, that the evil ſpirit and mans wit hath wrought togther; But becauſe they are humane, they ſhall periſh.

The way is prepared by A. L. Truly it ſeemeth good to my Mother and me: and our conſent thinketh good alſo, (and the rather becauſe ſhe hath prepared the way by her own wiſdome, which part of the North you muſt alwayes (look unto,) and be directed by.

For why, that Conſtellation is true, and doth teach thoſe that erre; Thoſe alſo that are right, it comforteth them.

But

But I will go unto my Mother, and ask her once more, whether I may hide theſe things from you.

Sapientia divina noſtra debet eſſe ſtella nauticis in hoc mari magno.

E. K. She is gone.

△ We read over the premiſſes, and gathered, that ſome treachery was deviſed againſt me: And therefore, I beſeech God, to give us his counſels, and adviſes, to be my guide and protector, my light and comfort.

E. K. Here ſhe is again.

Madimi ..... That you both, or (if you will be diſtracted) one of you, go ſecretly hence, and ſpeedily unto Lasky: So ſhall it come to paſſe, that he whom they intended to impriſon, (ſaying, we will compel him to perform his word, leaſt he peradventure triumph elſewhere againſt us;) [&] may at laſt, open the Priſon Doores for them, and ſalute a ſtrange King, even in the ſelf ſame place, where they ſhall eat to morrows Dinner. But when they perceive that you are gone; Then will they underſtand that you knew, and that the ſpirit of God was amongſt you.

Flie from Prage.

The words of the Conſpirators.

I come again.

E. K. She is here againe.

Spiritus Dei nobiſcum.

Madimi ..... If theſe words be true, bear witneſſe of the truth: if you think them to be falſe, you need not follow them.

△ How ſoon would you adviſe me to be going hence? you ſee how bare I am of money.

Madimi ..... Do ſo as in an eminent danger. I have ſpoke the laſt word. Sed adhuc tria; Omnia ſuccedent voto.

△ Deo noſtro Omnipotenti, ſapienti, & miſericordi, ſit omnis gratiarum actio, Laus, Honor, & Gloria, nunc & ſemper, Amen.

Monday

Februarii 25. à meridie, circiter 1½.

Precibus ad Deum finitis, citò apparuit Angelus Dei.

E. K. Fell on his back as one had written as he ſat at the Table; Hereupon we reſorted to the Shew-Stone, &c.

E. K. Here is Madimi.

Madimi ..... You have vowed to your ſelves, and to the Lord, perform your vowes. That which God commandeth, that do.

Excuſe your ſelves with men, and gird up your Garments to the travaile; Not in Waggon, but on Horſe-back.

E. K. I pray you to give us ſome inſtructions of my Lord Lasky his being.

Travaile hence directly, and unto Wratiſlania, and there I will meet you.

E. K. I pray you to deal openly with us, according to our frail ſtate, and to declare unto us of my Lord Lasky his eſtate.

A. L.

Madimi ..... You depend not upon Lasky, but Lasky dependeth upon you; if he do evil, his puniſhment is ready: if he do well, he doth it for himſelf.

I am greater then you, and my eye ſtretcheth farther then yours; yea, though you went to morrow, you have loſt ſome dayes.

Dayes.

△ I muſt carry my Books with me, we muſt be at the leaſt three horſe.

Madimi ..... Not ſo, but thou ſhalt hide them.

Books to be hidden.

△ Am I to return hither again, before my wife come from hence?

Madimi ..... I am not fleſh, neither do I move, or am moved with fleſh; But if you fulfill the firſt, the reſt followeth.

Do this, as though you committed theft, △ Secretly and ſpeedily.

for if the hours be diminiſhed, the purpoſe ſhall alſo want ſucceſſe.

Houres.

Ductus es, ſequere ſi vis.

The hand is open, and ready to take hold on you, what therefore ſhall I ſay more to you?

△ What hand I pray you?

Madimi ..... Manus amplectens non rapiens.

△ Lord I underſtand not that neither.

E. K. She is gone.

△ In manus, tuas Domine, Commendamus noſtra corpora, animas noſtras & ſpiritus noſtros. Amen.

Wedneſday.

February 27. △ I and E. K. and Thomas Kelly as ſervant, rode to Limburg, (otherwiſe named Nimburge,) ſix miles from Prage, in the way toward Breſſel: otherwiſe, named Wratiſlania.

Februarii 28. Manè circa 6 horam. At Limberg.

Thurſday. Note, I had cauſed from 4 of the clock in the morning the Horſes to be looked unto, ſo as, by five, or aſſoon as it was break of day, we might be riding.

In the mean ſpace while E. K. yet lay in his bed awake, and I was in the next Chamber by, in ordering my things of my male. E K. heard a voice (like mine) ſay D.

Whereat he asked me, what ſay you? I anſwered, that I ſpake nothing. Then he doubted what creature did uſe that voice. Afterward he roſe: and when he had been ready a while, and ſate in the Chamber where my male lay, he ſaid, that he felt ſomewhat crawling, or as one writing on his back, and at length to aſcend into his head. And ſo I left him, and went out into another place, and kneeled to pray, and prayed, and upon the comming in of Thomas Kelly into that room where I kneeled (in the Door of a little open Gallery over the ſtreet) I roſe up, and went in again to E. K. and he told me that he ſlumbred by reaſon of the heavineſſe of his head, and that he ſeemed to ſee me praying, and Michael to ſtand by me. I anſwered, that truth it was I had been ſomewhat bent to prayer, but that I could not pray as I would, &c. Hereupon, Immediately he ſaw Michael over my Head with a pen in his hand: Thereupon I was reſolved that I was to write ſomewhat of importance: And I made ſpeed to take pen, ink and paper, and to ſettle my ſelf to writing, becauſe we made haſt to ride, as intending to ride 8 or 9 miles that day, and company tarrying for us: one of them being a Jew, whoſe ſiſter is wife to Doctor Salomon of Prague the Jew, &c. And going about to attend for ſomething to write, a voice ſaid, as followeth.

A Viſion.

A Voice. Cur non includis te ad audiendum vocem meam?

△ Hereupon, I did ſhut all the Doors, and uttermoſt Doors.

Note the reaſon why a Receptacle is of more credit. A voice ..... In receptaculo, ut magis approbetur veritas.

△ Hereupon ſpeedily I took out the Shew-ſtone, and ſet it on the Table before E. K.

E. K. Here appeareth a white Circle round about the border of the Stone, and a ball or Globe of flaming fire in the midſt; The white Circle hath great brightneſſe of light in it.

Madimi. E. K. Now here is Madimi, ſhe ſtandeth in the white Circle: and looketh into the fire, ſhe kneeleth.

On the outſide of her, ſtandeth Michael with a ſword.

E. K. Madimi is gone away, and Michael is come to the lower part of the Circle.

A voice ..... Speak, for who controlleth me?

E. K. Michael boweth himſelf toward his feet, as though he kiſſed the place where he ſtood: as if it were the Circle that he kiſſed.

Michael ..... Theſe are the words of the Lord, and of me his Angel, and Miniſter of truth: and they follow.

Behold, I have led you forth diverſe times: and you have obeyed me. Therefore I ſay unto you, Be now Stewards of more.

△ O merciful God.

E. K. He ſpreadeth his Arms abroad, and ſtoopeth down.

Michael ..... He that committeth his Treaſure unto man, findeth favour, and at his return hath his own. But he that committeth himſelf unto me, and heareth my voice, I will write his Name in the Book of Life. Behold, Behold, Behold, I ſwear and it is.

Dee. That in thee, Dee, I delight. And lo, becauſe thou haſt obeyed me, and not of force of humane perſwaſions, I ſhew unto thee what is to come, and what I would have thee to do: and wherefore thou commeſt hither.

△ Fiat voluntas Dei. E.K.

Michael ..... Cover me for a while, leſt peradventure thou ſee I am beyond the ability of thy capacity, and ſo return not eaſily.

E. K. He becommeth very bright.

△ I underſtood not well this ſaying, neither E. K.

Michael I ſay unto thee cover the receptacle.

△ We covered the ſtone a while, and read the premiſſes.

E. K. He is brighter then he was, the Circle of light ſhineth ſtill.

△ We uncovered the Stone, and then he ſpake again.

Michael ..... Before twelve moneths of your account be finiſhed, with the Sunne: I will keep my promiſe with thee, as concerning the deſtruction of Rodulph: leſt peradventure, he triumph, as he often doth. For, thy lines are many times peruſed by him; Saying, This man doted, where is become his God, or his good Angels?

Rod. The deſtruction of Rodulph. And behold, I will ſweep him off the face of the earth: And he ſhall periſh miſerably: that he may underſtand, that thou dealt not for thy ſelf, but didſt fulfil the work of thy maſter.

More.

Moreover I will bring in, even in the second moneth, (the twelve ended) Steven. &c.

And for a truth, (as I am) will place him in the seat Imperial; He shall possesse an Empire most great: and shall shew what it is to govern, when God placeth. △ All conditionally to be understood.

In his time will I fullfil many things that I have promised thee, and I will be mercifull unto thee; because thou hast not broken my Covenant.

My minde abhorreth from Lasky, for he is neither faithful to me, nor to thee: neither he careth for his own soul. A. L.

△ Chamo & træno maxillas illius constringe (ô Deus) ut approximet ad te.

Michael ..... The speedy return of Curtius was to deliberate with Rodolph how they might, (under the colour of Justice) entangle thee.

And lo, whom thou fostredst and fedst at thy Table, is he, that hath wet his hand in the dish with thee, and hath delivered thee.

Moreover, he hath betrayed his Master: And the cause of his adversity, hath had chief root in him. From the third year he hath done unjustly: and hath made naked his Lords secrets. Emericus. Sonnagius.

But he shall have his reward: and shall perish with his own hand. Before thou camest out of thy own Doores, to take thy Journey, Rodolph knew of thy going.

And for a truth, his letters are before thee.

Therefore, it behoveth me, to give thee warning, and to teach and instruct thee, as one exercised in my businesse.

Cover me, I am become cleerer.

△ We covered the Receptacle.

After a while we uncovered it.

Michael .....This therefore shalt thou do.

The same way thou camest, the same way thou shalt also return: Not to flie from their malice or tyranny: But to stand in the face of them as my servant.

Hereby, indirectly, shall the Traitour understand you know him. The Traitor.

And Rodolphus hard heart, I will stir up with indignation against him. For he shall be construed a Lyar.

And they shall begin to fear thee, and also to love thee: and thou shalt be in favour amongst them.

Note.

Annuate their doings, and hear their sayings. And those things they shall offer thee, refuse not. I will send one out to pay them their wages. Annuate their doings.

Moreover, I command thee Kelly, (But in my own person, I counsel and advertise thee) that thou take part with the Lord Jesus: And go forward with the businesse thou hast in hand.

For why? They shall be shortly made open and plain; lest thy (△) word (to the Emperour he meaneth) receive foil in the hearts of men. △ Belike he was studying in Dunstons book & Tables whereof he made me not privy.

But I bind it not to that place. For, the fruit that springeth of it, shall do my service with Steven; And yet, if he will, with that unjust Lasky. And it shall be a Garden for you: wherein you shall not borrow of the World, but of the Gift of God. Yet if. Donum Dei.

And hitherto I will deal with thee, that the least thing which thou hast bestowed in obedience toward me, shall not be forgotten. Together.

Live you together, as brethren: and wonder together, at my works, and in me, for there shall not a hair of your head perish; So that you listen, and be obedient unto my voice. If.

When therefore thou commest home, hide not thy self; But see, that the Infant be regenerated. Infans baptizandus.

△ As concerning the Godfathers: shall I request and use such as I intended? Mich.

Michael ..... Do, that thou hast done.

But put all these things up amongst the secrets of your hearts, as though not seeing, yet seeing all things.

Let these for this time suffice.

E. K. The fire is gone, he and all.

△ Creatori nostro Omnipotenti, Protectori nostro misericordissimo & consolatori nostro abundantissimo in tempore necessitatis nostræ sit perennis Laus, Honor, Gloria, & gratiarum actio.

Amen.

△ Hereupon we had great comfor, and so brake our fast, and returned to Prague again, before 4 of the clok in the afternoon.

Note.

While I was thus out, and had left a letter for the Curtese Balthasar Federicus Dominus ab Ossa, &c. to deal with the Spanish Embassador, the Lord Romse, and myne Her Kinsky, to crave pardon of my sudden departure, and the Child not yet christened, &c. and had given my wife charge not to deliver the Letter before Friday night, &c. It came to passe, that this Mr. Balthasar had sent word of his comming to Prage with the Lord Kinsky, (whom on the Friday before I had met riding ding out of Town: and he told me that he was to be out three or 4 dayes, &c.) and that he was deſirous to ſpeak with me.

Upon which occaſion my wife thought it beſt to ſend the letter to him, and ſo did, not long before my coming home. Which thing when I underſtood, I was half ſorry for it, and ſent preſently word to Maſter Balthaſar of my coming home, and to certifie him that my wife had erred to ſend that letter unto his worſhip before Friday night, when ſhe might perceive that indeed I did ride forth to Breſſel.

He thereupon was deſirous to ſpeak with me, and of him I received my Letter which he had peruſed, and offered himſelf moſt ready to ſatisfie the content thereof, &c.

Now to the chief purpoſe, At my return home from Maſter Balthaſar Federick ab Oſſa, I found Emericus Sontagius, in my wives ſtove with Maſter Kelly, who at the ſight of me was ſore amazed, and half not able, or not willing to ſpeak, but ſaid, vos eſtis veteres equites. Then Mr. Kelly told me, that Emericus had told him, that the Emperour had been all day yeſterday very melancholick, and would ſpeak with no body. And that he knew of my journey in a moment when it was, and that by the Jews, & ſpecially by the Doctor his ſon, that had gone about to get me the four horſes, & laboured very much with himſelf (unasked) to perſwade me that the Emperour his firſt and chief underſtanding of it was by the Jews, &c. Hereupon (being now night) he went home.

And becauſe it was not in ſhape humane, he of purpoſe would not declare it ſo to me, and ſo I have noted (as appeareth) of no ſhew. This he told me on Tueſday night (that was yeſternight) upon occaſion of a great ſtir and moving in his brains, very ſenſible and diſtinct, as of a creature of humane ſhape and lineaments going up and down to and fro in his brains, and within his skull: ſometimes ſeeming to ſit down, ſometime to put his head out at his ear.

..... Against divine necessity is no prayer nor resistance.

E.K. I feel nothing, in my head now, and till now I did, as is moved before.

..... Come, ô you Prophets, and render your accounts. Come, O you that have sucked of the brests, wherein the judgments and secret will of the Lord is hid, and of Necessity to come, Gather your selves together, render some account why the King of eternity descending from the heavens hath so often visited you? And why he hath rather visited you, in the Desert, upon mighty and high Mountains, unranged of men. Tell, I say, what the cause is, that he hath come down into the Fens, and amongst your flock: Could not this God have lifted you up, and have brought you into his secret chambers? Could he not have ravished you unto himself, and so have carried you about with him, that you might see his great wisdome unknown to man, and the abundance of Glory, wherein he hath his habitation. There is none of you that dare presume to say, that you deserved the Lord his presence.

There is none of you that dare open his mouth, saying, God hath need of us.

Tell therefore what is the cause that God hath visited you.

△ The unsearchable judgments and determinations of the highest, &c.

..... Be silent, thou answerest before thou art called.

.... What is there none of you that answereth me? No, where art thou?

Job, where art thou?

Moses, where art thou?

Zyrom, where art thou?

Syracasba, where art thou?

Daniel, where art thou?

Jonas, where art thou?

Ezechiel, where art thou?

Holy, holy Eldras, where art thou?

You lesser Prophets, where are you?

You number without number, (whom the Lord hath talked withal) wherefore shew you not your selves?

All these were full of the Holy Ghost.

All these mortified their flesh for the love of God. Yet, what, are you not able to render account or to shew the true cause why God hath visited you?

God visited you so long, and so oft, so mercifully and so abundantly, and are you silent and ignorant? Why?

Mandata tua justa sunt Domine.

What, was this the cause that God visited you for, that you should fulfill his Commandments, and teach his people the way of salvation?

True it is, it was the cause that moved you to obedience. But the very cause why God appeared unto you, you know not.

Behold, the Commandments of God are just & true, whose sons you are: if therefore you follow not the Commandments of your father, you are disobedient. But why, your Father hath commanded you: Lo, I teach you.

When God of very God, the true light, beauty and honour of his Father, conteined or was full of the image of an heaven and earth, and by the omnipotent, conjoyned, and equal power and strength of them both, joyned in one, was brought forth, and had his real beginning, he determined also, in the self-same Image and Idea, the due and proper order, just law and determination, of all things that were comprehended, which law and things together have their course co-essential both in heaven and earth, distinguishing all things into their real beginnings, limitation of time, and determination between their extreams. This order or law, begun in the bosome of the Word of God, keepeth so his proper course, and order, and law of his own establishment, That those things that before were wrought in God, might also receive working and being substantial to the end of God his progression.

This is the self-same that we spoke of before, in the name of divine Necessity, against the which no prayer prevaileth, nor resistance can be made.

This Necessity was the cause, O you Prophets and Children of God, that God dwelt amongst you.

This Necessity was the instrument that brought you to the stage of your election.

This Necessity was the cause that God chose you.

This Necessity maketh of wax, honey; of tar, milk; of long ranging, return, of Infidels, Christians; of disobedient, holy ones.

Finally, of the unperfect and evil, rage and roming astray of mankind, the true number of such as return from wickednesse, and are chosen to eternal joy from the beginning.

But this may seem unto you a strange and stumbling Doctrine.

I have laid the Basis.

△ We read the premisses, which seemed to us very pithy, and ponderous, and full of mysteries.

△ I noted two Prophets names, not before.

..... This Neceſſity is two-fold, one (that is to ſay, the firſt) contemplative and fix.

The other, working and leading to an end.

In the firſt do dwell two great and mighty Judges, Juſtice and Mercy.

In the ſecond dwelleth the ſon and image of Juſtice, leading on by order for the courſe of things, that are led on by the later, have not true Juſtice, but the image of Juſtice.

This is the cauſe that the elect and choſen may erre and go aſtray, and loſe the benefit both of the end of his Election and firſt determination.

For why: All things come on, and keep their courſe, even as they are led, by the image of Juſtice, Man onely excepted: which by reaſon of his free-will, draweth out of order, runneth from the mark, refuſeth that which is good, and through the burden of his fleſh, inclineth unto evil. [E. K. He teacheth himſelf.]

In the which evil, whilſt he dwelleth and continueth, lo the courſe of neceſſity taketh hold upon him, and draweth him unto the ſcope or end whereunto he inclineth himſelf.

For, behold, Although he be before ſanctified unto the Lord, and made a choſen veſſel, wherein If he continue. if he continue, neceſſarily he ſhall enjoy the reward and glory of the ſanctified. Yet if he loſe that Neceſſity, and fly from his own law and condition, taking part with the filthineſſe and iniquity of his enemy, through Satan or his fleſh, of Neceſſity he muſt periſh.

If For as thoſe that are good, tied unto the law of goodneſſe, are glorified, if they continue: ſo likewiſe are the evil tyed unto the law of wickedneſſe, the Neceſſity whereof is damnable.

This is the cauſe that the Prophets are viſited.

Becauſe God found them puniſhing their fleſh, deſpiſing the vanities of the world, and reſiſting Satan.

For lo, the Lord looked down unto the earth: And he ſaw them deſpiſing wickedneſſe, fearing him, and grounded in the faith of redemption.

Therefore he thruſt himſelf in amongſt them, and through the firſt part of neceſſity (in mercy) he viſited them.

Take heed (ô you) that the Lord of neceſſity viſiteth in Juſtice, for your burden ſhall be great and intolerable.

E. K. He is gone. △ We read and diſcourſed a pretty while.

E. K. Here he is again.

..... Now unto the reſt.

What is (therefore) that neceſſity divine againſt the which there is no prayer nor reſiſtance?

For why it is evident, That ſinners may return, and thoſe that erre, may be brought into the right way, and that by Prayer.

Prayer. Behold, no man is penitent, but he uſeth Prayer.

No man ſatisfieth, but he uſeth Prayer.

No man taketh part with the Church, but in Prayer, for Prayer is the Key, ſanctified by the Holy Ghoſt, which openeth the way unto God.

Neceſſity had determined the deſtruction of Ninevee, neceſſity alſo ſaved it.

For lo, when they ſhould neceſſarily have received reward for their wickedneſſe, they prayed, and reſiſted neceſſity.

It appeareth, therefore, not yet, what neceſſity that is, that Prayer prevaileth not againſt.

Note here, The later neceſſity is neceſſity, leading malum ad malum, & bonum ad bonum; which neceſſity is that, which is tyed unto every thing leading it unto the end that it deſireth.

Even as God, ſeeing the Prophets forſake the loathſomneſſe of their fleſh, and framing themſelves to the neceſſity which leadeth unto good, of his meer mercy, in the firſt, thruſt himſelf amongſt them, fixing their later and deſired neceſſity, with a neceſſity of his Omnipotent and unſpeakable mercy wherein there dwelleth two things;

Joy, and Perſeverance.

Theſe therefore (as the Prophets) which are viſited with God in mercy, are fed, nouriſhed and foſtered as the Prophets were, with theſe two diſhes, Whereof the greateſt is Perſeverance.

Herein I teach you, that he that is firſt elected and applyeth himſelf to the neceſſity of his Election, doing the works that are righteous before the Lord, and receiveth comfort by the viſitation of Gods mercy, is ſealed to the end of his Election, in gladneſſe, and through the value and ſtrength of Perſeverance, and cannot fall ſo far, that he ſhall be bruiſed, or run ſo far aſtray, that he ſhall not be able to remember himſelf.

Happy are thoſe that are elected.

But happy, happier are thoſe that perſevere in their Election.

Theſe are thoſe unto whom God imputeth not their ſinnes.

Theſe are thoſe that ſinne and Satan are a weary of, for they are not able to prevaile.

Theſe are thoſe which are numbred in the Book of God, and whoſe brethren tarry as yet for their comming. But the altar ſhall be opened, and they ſhall riſe.

But

But is there a mercy fixed, and doth this mercy also fix Justice; Or as I have called it the Image of Justice.

It is evident; So also is there a Justice that is fixed, a Justice triumphing, a Justice mighty, a Justice unable to be resisted, a Justice that Prayer prevaileth not against, yea, a Justice that Hell and the Devil are condemned in.

This is that Justice, this is that two edged sword, this is, that Iron Mall, wherewith those that refuse their Election, or are not elected, following the necessity of wickednesse, are and shall be cut in pieces with, beaten into small powder, and be cast into the lake of fire and brimstone.

This is he that sealeth up the second Hell, with the second death.

This is that you, o you Starvelings, you vagabonds, you stiff-necked and stinking sinners ought to dread and fear!

Hath God elected you, and do you disdain it?

Hath he provided a Seat for you, an Honour for you, a Crown for you, a Wedding Garment for you, his eternal glory for you. And will you force him to cast it into the fire.

Shall the finger of God write you, and shall the vengeance of God root you out.

Repent I say, and flie from your iniquity.

Return into the way of the Lord, least God seeing your wickednesse, your un-natural and inhumane rebellion, your disobedience against your father, thrust himself upon your necessity with his justice and vengeance.

Which thing if you do, Prayer prevaileth not, much lesse is their resistance.

Are you not afraid to lose the sight of God, and to be deprived of the glory of his Majestie?

Are you not afraid of the unspeakable flames and fire-brands of Hell, which are prepared for the wicked?

What shall I say unto you?

Shall I take pity upon you?

Why care you not for your selves?

Shall I pray unto God for you?

You pray not for your selves.

Shall I bestow goodnesse upon you?

Hui, you despise it.

Shall I bring three Sheep from the Mountains, and shall I lose two of them before I come home. Three sheep.

O you mortal men, be merciful unto your selves, Take pity on your selves. Fall into the true judgment of light and darknesse, of good and evil, of eternal Glory and Damnation.

For, behold, I tell you, that God is ready to thrust himself, yea, to throw himself as a might stone upon you.

Against the which there is no time of prayer, nor nothing that can prevaile.

I have here taught you, and exhorted you.

Exhorted you to forsake your wickednesse, and to cleave unto the Lord.

Taught you that those that are elected may lose their election, and may be established in their Election. Also that those that are not elected run by the rule of necessity unto the end of their wickednesse, which is rewarded with eternal fire.

From the which God of his mercy, and in his Sonne Jesus Christ, who hath redeemed you, is yet ready, if you will, to deliver you.

Hal rowgh ha.

△ We long discoursed of sundry things, and each reproved other of haughtinesse, or pride of mind, how justly we did it God knoweth.

E. K. He is here still.

△ O Lord order these matters with us, and between us, to thy Honour and Glory.

E. K. —

..... Thou E. K. and we, receive at one fountain, we are created and made by one God, to the end we should glorifie him, as our Creator, you, as your Redeemer and Creator.*

Note E. K. had said, let them give me somewhat, or some thing beneficial to my mind or body, and then I will like the better of them.

△ The fall of Angels.

But lo, we are of Heaven heavenly, comforted and nourished with the glory of God, wherein (since the (△) division made amongst us) we erre not: you to the intent you may be proved, are covered with mortality and corruption, to the intent that the judgment of God may allow you, for those places you are apt to inherit. If therefore we be both refreshed of God, have our beginning from God as from our Creator, let us both acknowledg his goodnesse, and glorifie him in the works of our hands: we, in our angelical forms, you, in the Skirmish wherein you fight, by fighting manfully, and overcomming.

Yet of us thou hast, as those have that are rewarded in the labour of him that is sent in message from the giver.

If the King send his Messenger unto thee, he ought for three causes. First, for the person from A King his meſſenger to be honoured for 3 cauſes. The Angels good will toward E. K.

whence he commeth. Secondly, for the authority of his meſſage, or goodneſſe of reward. Thirdly, that by him you receive the benefit, whereby you are gratified.

Even ſo deal with us ∴ for us he may ſay, you fare the better by him, in reſpect of his labour, and the authority that he uſeth: ſo may we ſay, you fare the better by us.

But let the heaven and earth bear witneſſe (beſides the benefits of God) of our good will towards you. But anſwer me.

E. K. What ſay you to me? wherein.

..... As touching your receiving, as touching thy taking part with Chriſt Jeſus, very God and man: the Son of the living God, whoſe precious blood cryeth out continually before his Father for the ſins of the people.

△ E. K. ſaid he would not allow of their doings & counſels, unleſſe they were allowed of and confirmed by the Prieſt, to whom he would confeſs himſelf. The authority of good Angels is greater then the authority of the Pope. Note of the Jews. Both Churches Triumphant and Militant. Eccleſia. quid?

Whether is greater, the authority of truth, by the Church Militant, or Triumphant?

Anſwer you [E.K] to that.

E. K. By the Church Triumphant.

..... Even ſuch is our authority. Therefore it is greater then the authority of him that is a fleſhly Prieſt.

If the Angels that have appeared unto you, had appeared alſo unto the Jews, ſaying, Crucifie not the Son of God, they would not have done it.

For though they believed not man, yet would they have believed an Angel.

Therefore did God the Father acknowledge his Son Chriſt, by both Churches: as you may read by the Angels that appeared to the Shepherds, acknowledging from heaven the truth, that Jeſus was the Son of God.

E. K. What is the Church? I did not think that the Angels were of any Church.

The Church is the number of thoſe which are governed by the Holy Ghoſt, and that continually ſing Holy, Holy, Holy, Holy, Lord God of Zebaoth: But that we ſing ſo, the Scriptures bear witneſſe. Therefore we are of the Church, and our teſtimonies are true.

I counſel you therefore to put on humility, and to make your ſelves ſubject before the truth.

Love one another, not becauſe you are men, but becauſe you are partakers of the heavenly teſtimony.

In reſpect of thy body and mind, I anſwer thee, that thy body is which now had not been, and what thy minde ſeeth, commeth through the light that we leave with it.

But if we forſake thee, thy body is not, much leſſe ſhall thy underſtanding be.

Stay and I come again.

△ We read, and E. K. marvelled at the aptneſſe and foundneſſe of their anſwer.

E. K. Here he is again. E. K. I cannot tell F or P.

..... When ☉ hath ended, and P hath ended,

I come again.

E. K. He is here.

When P hath ended, and L hath ended (which is at hand) then cometh the ſon of perdition, and entreth.

Take also Lulo of red Roxtan, and work him through the four fiery degrees, until thou have his Audcal, and there gather him.

We desire God of his great and infinite mercies, to grant us the help of these heavenly mysteries, that we may by them be directed how or by whom to be aided and relieved, in this necessity that we are in, of sufficient and needful provision, for meat and drink for us and our Family, wherewith we stand at this instant much oppressed: and the rather becaus that might be hurtful to us, and the credit of the actions wherein we are vowed and linked unto his heavenly Majestie, (by the ministry and comfort of his holy Angels) to lay such things as are the ornaments of our House, and the coverings of our bodies, in pawn either unto such as are Rebels against his divine Majestie, the Jews, or the people of this City, which are malicious and full of wicked slanders: I Jane Dee humbly request this thing of God, acknowledging my self his servant and handmaiden, to whom I commit my body and soul.

E. K. Here appeareth Michael on your head, and hath bid me divers times to ſpeak to you.

△ I diſpoſed my ſelf to write, and Michael had bring the Stone.

E. K. Here appear 12 with him, 4 behind him, and 4 on each ſides of him 4, and all with ſwords of fire, and he the hindermoſt of them had a Barrel of Glaſſe on his back full of fire, the 12 were all in red Coats.

Michael ..... The Prophet.

Nunc ergo Notum facimus Domine Rex quoniam ſi civitas hæc ædificata fuerit, & ipſius mutilati fuerint, deſcenſus tibi non erit Cœloſyriam, neque in Phœnicem. 3 Eſdræ cap. 2. c.

E. K. Now they all kneel down about him.

They look pitifully with their faces upward, as though they were praying, they be all in blood red Garments, and Michael his ſword is as the ſword I once did ſee him have; whoſe edge did open.

E. K. Now anſwer me to the purpoſe: whether I ſhall have the Circle of Letters which I did deſire?

Michael. ..... Is there any like unto thee, O Jehovah in Heaven and in Earth, or can thy enemies riſe up [ſaying] againſt thee, and ſhall they ſtand, O thou whoſe look is more terrible unto thy Angels, then all the fires which thou haſt created, either in the bottomleſſe pit or in the life of all Elemental Creatures, or above in the heavens if they were gathered together in one can be terrible to man.

Haſt thou not made Heaven and Earth, and haſt put thy head no where, and thy feet ſomewhere; becauſe without thee there is not, and without thee there cannot be?

O thou that haſt numbred the Starres, and art Dominus Dominantium above thoſe that govern them, and more in knowledg then their Government. Thou, Thou, Wilt thou ſuffer thy Name to be trodden under foot? Thou, Thou, Wilt thou correct the Heavens, and the whole ſeed of man? Wilt thou drown the World with waters, and root the wicked from the face of the Earth? Wilt thou caſt down the lothſome and wicked Cities, that they may grow in the terrour of thy judgment? Wilt thou ſend ſo many Plagues into Egypt?

Wilt thou ſuffer all theſe things to be done and many more memorable, which are all in thee: And thou permit one Man, one Soul to be thus carried away with Satan to the diſhonouring and treading under foot of thee, and thy light of thee, and thy truth. One man: E. K.

If the King exalted him which magnified Truth before the ſtrength and Policy of Women: extolled him before his Princes, and cauſed for his ſake the building of this Temple to go forward: Wilt thou not puniſh him that deſpiſeth truth, that preferreth the wantonneſſe and volnptuouſneſſe of the World (that errant ſtrumpet) before thy word, and before the ſtrength of a heavenly Authority: Art thou ſo become a little one, that thou art leſſe then a King? haſt thou turned thy face ſo far aſide that thou ſeeſt not this Rebellion? Can one man be dearer unto thee then the whole World was? or ſhall the Heavens be thrown head-long down, and ſhall he go uncorrected? Haſt thou Mountaines and Stones untrodden on, out of the which thou canſt ſhew thy Praiſe and Honour? Are there not yet Infants which may be ſanctified to ſpeak with the Heavens, that thou ſo hideſt thy ſelfe away from Juſtice; What, what, if thoſe that often cry for grace receive it not, yet doſt thou give it unto him that commeth from it. Veritas. 1 Eſd. ch. 4. 33, &c. An apt Skriet is ſanctified. Nota.

Sane ſtupor Cœlis, & ſtupor terris.

What, are not ſo many Fires as wait upon me ſufficient to arm Satan with vengeance againſt this △ wicked one? O thou Beaſt, O thou roaring Lion, O thou Monſter, O thou Whirlpool, O thou terrible Murtherer. Note the manner of Juſtice.

E. K.

Haſt thou plac't headlong many thouſands into Hell, and doſt thou linger to rage upon this imp, whom thou haſt ſo long ſought for?

Is it not written, leaſt peradventure he find them ſleeping, and ſo overcome them.

But, behold, whom thou findeſt ſleeping, is ready for thee, willing to go with thee. what ſpareſt thou? art thou ſo bold to give authority unto thy Miniſters to confound, nay, to ſo blind that thou canſt not ſee ſo great an Hell?

Behold,

Behold, thy Ministers cry out unto thee, and send thee word, calling thee Master, King.

Take heed the City be not built, take heed the walls of it be not lifted up, and as they that were the Messengers of the King made evident before his face that it was against his commodity, to have the Temple of the Lord built up, to have the City new shapen, to have the Walls made strong,

1 Esdras 2.24. because it should hinder his passage into Cœlosyria, and the rest.

E. K. Now the 12 (he excepted) fall down.

Mich. ..... And thy Ministers have they not said unto thee, if this work of the Lord go forward, if the City sent down from the Heavens may receive a place to set her selfe in, if the Walls and Rampiers of this that was built above, shall be placed on any place of the World on earth, Behold, Behold, will it not hinder thy cause, will it not subvert thy Kingdome, will it not turn thee out of Doors: will it not bring thee to a terrible day before the Lord?

Is it not written, that that day shall be terrible to Satan, and his Angels?

And wilt thou suffer a Door to be opened, wherein it may enter, it behoveth thee Satan here to bend thy bow, it behoveth thee now to draw up thy arrowes.

And if thou intend to plant on earth, that it may grow, time is, yet, now to weed out this Message from above.

Do thy Messengers give thee warning of these things, dost thou hold back thy force: when the Porters will betray the City, would deliver it into thy hands, would break down the walls before thee, what I say art thou like to enter, thou that loseth no opportunity, art thou so negligent: Behold, the Doors stand open before thee, why entrest thou not.

Dost thou want fire, lo, he that betrayeth it hath fire for thee, yea, rumor.

Behold, he offereth himself a companion, what wouldest thou more, unto these things thou hearest the sayings of thy servants, which say unto thee O Satan, if this City be built, and the walls erected; Thou canst not go into the Holy Land: And lo, hearest thou not them, neither dost regard this opportunity, whence art thou so forgetful, O God? great is thy mercies, and far art thou above the sinnes of man: O thou not only shuttest up the eyes of the wicked, that they cannot see truth before their face, but the profound [the] malice and sight of Satan, that where he should most enter he misseth that place, and when time serveth him, that he letteth it passe.

Mirabilis Dei misericordia. But so, so, God, thou giveest to whom, and where thou wilt, and even as thou art terrible in Justice, so likewise art thou wonderful in mercy; Therefore of thee is no end, neither can be added any end.

Blasphemous rebellion. This thy great mercy is the cause that this blasphemous Rebellion is yet unpunished; This is the cause that Satan misseth his mark, and is become weak.

If any man make a pot, an earthen vessel, worketh he not, tempereth he not, to the end to make a pot? But lo, when he hath made it, and applieth it to his intent, if even he againe destroy it, is he not vain? Do not those that stand by him wonder at him? More mervail is it, that when Satan shooteth and hitteth the mark, that he should be blind, yea, so blind, that he knoweth not where to gather up his arrow?

3 Esdras cap. But lo, the Temple was built, and the City stood, although the work was left off for a while, and he that magnified truth went with glad tidings, neither desiring rich apparel, neither to sit next the King, but that the City of the Lord might be built, and that the Name of God might be magnified, so shall it be of this City which the Lord hath sent down with his finger, his unsearchable

Actionum: and wonderful truth: the Revelation and Law of time to come, it shall be built, it shall flourish, it shall stand, it shall endure, it shall be magnified, it shall be spoken of through all the World, and it shall not cease.

Behold, the King of Kings hath allowed it and the love of truth, is great with him, what hath he to do with Kings? or wherein needeth he the beauty of the Earth? Domini est terra, & plenitudo ejus.

Whosoever therefore sticketh unto truth, shall be exalted with God, which is the King of Kings shall be magnified before his Counsellors, not Counsellors fore-warning, but Counsellors partaking of holy Will: not called Counsellors, in respect of counselling him, but in that they are made privie of the Counsel of God: Before these also shall he be magnified.

E. K. For what end saith he all this.

O ye Infidels, and of little faith, which tast of the meat that was hidden from the Prophets, which are over-shadowed with the light of heaven, which have alwayes associated with the holy Ministers of God: wherefore are you so stiff-necked, pleasant is the yoke wherein you are linked, and honourable is the earth that you draw the plow upon, for the Lord followeth, and his Angels drive, and the seed that is sown shall be the beginning of glory.

O yee stiff-necked people, why forsake you your visitation, or runne astray from your faith that you are driven in, do you make much of the Lords of the earth? Do you delight in her drosse that harlot money? Do you give reverence to the King, and stand you in fear to break his Lawes? have you a greater Lord then the Lord of Heaven and Earth, have you any money or jewels to be compared to his Grace? have you any honour on Earth, that can stand up against the Crown of Heaven?

ven? wherewith God crowneth those that are Victors? Have you any Law sweeter then the pure illuminations, and sweet dew like comforts, the voices and presence of the holy angels?

Be mindful, be mindful, and lift up your selves, and be not blind, but consider the time of your visitation, and that which you do, is the work of a King, a King which is able in power, strength, and majestie to exalt you, to strengthen you, and to make you honourable, but in the end of the Visitation, and in the reward of your faithfulnesse, work not to day, and be sorry to morrow; But lay sorrow a side, and continue your labour, least peradventure God unhood-wink, and make open the sight of Satan, and so deliver you.

Wo, wo, be unto them that are delivered, for beleeve me their tribulation is great.

There is horrour and gnashing of teeth, there is misery and vengeance for ever, there is horrour and the worm of conscience.

But two things are to be considered, here, whether the temptation be greater then the resistance, or the resistance, more dignified then the rigor of temptation.

Behold, the work is great, the labour is also equal unto it; And to fight against the Princes of darknesse in a set battail, requireth great force.

The temptations therefore that follow you, must needs be great, I see therefore the temptations surmounteth your strength, and your dignity is not such as can resist against it; For why, Satan striveth not with you, simply for the sinne of Adultery, for the dregs of Fornication, for the covetous desire of money, for the want of charity, or because you are proud; But he striveth, riseth up against you and tempteth you against the Lord, and against the strength of his truth, whereunto you are elected: Therefore, I give sentence.

Lo, because that temptations hath entred into you above your power, and not so much for the subverting as of the work of the Lord intended, and of necessity to be done.

Therefore, I proceed not against you, but against Satan, and God shall deliver you from your temptations; And this shall be a sign and token, that I will hamper and bridle the jawes of the enemy, that is to say, so long as thou (K. lly) art in this flesh, never shall there appear, or visibly shew himself unto thee any wicked or evil spirit, neither shalt thou be haled in peeces, as thou hast been, whosoever therefore appeareth hereafter is of God; For thy eyes shall be shut up from the wicked object. Et intellectu tuo Non introibit umbra mortis.

Signum quo certi esse possimus quod Deus Satanæ frænum injiciet.

Nota

But now take heed, thou either perverse or froward, stiff-necked or disobedient; The sinne is of thy self, and shall fall upon thee, and thou shalt not be spared as thou hast been; Now watch and gird up your selves, and do the will of the Highest, preferre and worship truth, that you may be also worshipped. Lift up your selves, as the servants of God, and help to bring stones unto the building of this great City, that you may be openers of the Gates, and that the white * horse may enter, and that he that entreth may reward you with honour.

Caviat E. K. dinceps.

* Equus albus. Apoc. cap. 19. B. Nostra vocatio magna. Dee sup.

Greater then you are in the dignity of truth, are not amongst mortal men, neither shall there be any amongst mortal men that shall more despise the World then you, therefore hath God framed one of you as a stiffe made asse, to bind up the countenance of his work, and to be free from yielding unto Satan, which well understandeth that Satan endevoureth, and that his Ministers cry out against this glorious habitation, which being built, the wicked come not to Cœlosyria, neither shall they see the beauty of the Phœnices.

When you have read these things I come again, and ponder them well.

△ We read them, and the places of Esdras, one in the second Chapter of the third Book of Esdras, and the other in the third and fourth Chapter of the same Book.

E. K. Now he is here himself alone.

Parabola de nobis duobus.

Michael ..... A Wood grew up and the Trees were young, and lo, there arose a great Tempest from the North, and the Seas threw out the air that had subtilly stoln himself into them, and the winds were great, and behold, there was one Tree which was older then the rest, and had grown longer then that which shot up by him; This Tree could not be moved with the wind, but the Tree that was young, was moved to and fro with the Wind, and strook himself oftentimes, upon the stiff set Tree: The Forester came and beheld, and said within himself, the force of this wind is great, see this young Tree beateth himself in peeces against the greater, I will go home, and will bring my ground instruments, and will eradicate him, and I will place him further off: Then if the winds come, he shall have room to move: But when he came home, the Lord of the Wood seeing him in a readinesse, with his Mattock and his spade, asked him of his going, which told the thing in order to his Master; But lo, his Master rebuked him, and he said thus, when the winds are not they increase, they are not hurtful one to the other, suffer them therefore, when the young Tree taketh roots, and shall look up unto some years, his roots shall link themselves with and under the roots of the greater; Then though the winds come, they shall not be hurtful one to another, but shall stand so much the more fast, by how much the more they are wrapped together, yea, when the old tree withereth, he shall be a strength unto him, and shall adde unto his age as much as he hath added unto his youth. And he ceased to dig.

Be not therefore haled in sunder, neither be you offended one at another, peradventure Reason would set you aside: But God will not. ∴ Behold, if you break the yoke that you are in, and runne astray, he that erreth shall perish: even so shall he that standeth also be desolate: For why, the driver angry, continueth not with one: But he shall return home, and shall not see the end of the Harvest. ∴

E. K. He wrappeth up the place of their lying as if it were a Cloth, and putteth or tumbleth them out of sight.

LORD,

△ I am heartily sorry for any thing I have said or done, which hath provoked thy indignation, thy mercy be upon us, and not the rigor of thy most just Judgment. Amen. Thy Name be alwayes praised. Amen.

O Lord, I find my own weakness and frailty continually, and therefore I call unto thee for thy gift of Wisdome, that I might wisely and discreetly serve thee all the dayes of my life. O Lord, the escapes of my lips and the folly of my heart pardon, I most heartily beseech thee: And if thy helping hand forsook us, and much more, if thy indignation work against us, we are in most miserable and pitifull case, have pity, have mercy, have compassion on us, Lord, Lord, Lord, forgive this our offence whatsoever; Suffer us not to be confounded through our little faith, O God, help our faith, help, help, or else we perish.

K. K. Here he is againe.

Note my great offence.

..... When the Lord bad thee go, if thou had'st so done, and had'st not taken thine own time, more had been given unto him, and more had been added unto thee.

△ Lasky his letters came on Friday last.

But now Letters came, that have passed through the hands of Sodomites and Murderers, (through whose hands they are accursed,) you rejoice, you receive comfort, you determine to goe.

△ Pardon, pardon, pardon, O God, thy judgments are just.

But if you had left those letters behind you, had come when I bad you go. Then had my Name been untouched.

Therefore is the Lord angry, and forgetteth not this offence.

For he that dealeth with me, dealeth not as with a man, for I have nothing in me tied to time, much lesse hath he that sent me.

△ O God, what a wretched miserable man am I, thus to fall, and to offend my God, O Lord, that thou judgest is very just; for man would have taken indignation against his servant that should not go where he biddeth, or that would seek or use better credit to encourage him to his duty, then his Masters, &c.

Many times hast thou been wearied.

Have mercy, O God. Et dele omnes iniquitates meas, cor mundum crea in me, & averto iram tuam à nobis, Is thy fury implacable, or shall thy anguish last for ever, what is flesh and dust before thee?

A sentence of punishment yet Lord be merciful.

..... There shall remaine the sting of this offence, in both your generations, until the fifth. And I swear unto you by heaven.

△ Spare this Sentence of indignation (O God) against us. Thou hast said in what hour soever a sinner is sorry for his sinnes, and turneth unto the Lord, &c. And Lord, I am heartily sorry, I bewaile with teares this great offence, thou seest my contrite heart, O God, O God, O God, &c.

Pardon.

..... This hath added much, even hath bound up the rod, which I spoke before unto thee.

△ Thy mercies be recorded, likewise, O Lord, and praised from Generation to Generation.

After this we sat and considered, and perceived, and confessed the greatnesse of our offence, how it concerned much the Honour and Glory of God, if we had gone without receiving the advertisement of those Letters; So should they hear (the) and the King St. have perceived that we had the direction of God, and of his good Angels, and not to have depended upon mans letters, or perswasions, &c. we both a like confessed this great misdoing, and so framed our selves to make all speed away that possible we could, the mercies of God be upon us now and ever.

△ xx dayes the Stone is to be shut.

Aprilis 5. A Praga.

Friday, I took my Journey from Pragæ toward Cracovia, God be our good ſpeed, E. K. I, Thomas Kelly, & Hugh Brycket my ſervants.

Friday. + Cracoviæ, 1585.

Aprilis 12. A meridie we came to Cracovia, and as we were within an Engliſh mile of the City, being a fair and calm day, there paſſed about half a mile before us, croſſing from the right hand to the left Whirlwinds, divers one after another, wreathing up the duſt with great vehemency on high, and ſhooting forward ſtill, and then mounting into the air, and ſo went Southerly from us, and likewiſe ſome began on the right hand, and came furiouſly, raiſing up and wreathing the duſt up into the air Southerly alſo, and did not croſſe the way.

When we came to our houſe, we found that a ſtranger was ſet into it, by the Landlords (Mr. John Long, the Judge, and Martin Plutner) and having by me the keys of the Store-houſe, and of the Street-door, I cauſed my ſtuff brought with me to be ſet in, and that night we made hard ſhift for lodging. But the new and forced in tenants gave me leave to have one of my Bedſteads, which was in one ſtove, and emptied the ſame to us, with much ado.

Saturday and Sunday we were ſore out-faced or rather threatned, that we ſhould have no houſe there, and alſo one Bonar his arms were ſet upon the door, as if the houſe had been allowed to him ex officio. Monday I made the Rector privy of the Injuries I indured, and he courteouſly ſent two Maſters of Art with me to the Proconſul to have Citation for the Landlords to appear on Tueſday by 7 of the clock, to anſwer to our complaint.

This Monday-night came the Lord Lasky from Lasko, upon a Letter he had received from me from Niſo, of my coming.

Tueſday (Aprilis 16) the Lord Lasky came to the houſe, and in the morning would have preſently caſt all their ſtuff out of doors, but by entreaty he permitted them to empty all into the lower ſtove.

In the mean ſpace I appeared with my Lawyer or Attourney Mr. Tetaldo, (an Italian) an ancient Practitioner in the Poliſh and Cracovian Cauſes: And to conclude, I had a Decree againſt my Landlords, that I was to have at leaſt an half years warning; whereupon John Laugh gave me warning to avoid at Michaelmas, and ſo we came from the Court or Town-houſe, called Prætorium in Latine. This ſame Tueſday afternoon, my Lord Lasky went to the King of Poland up into the Caſtle, and told him of my comming, and how evilly I was uſed: and he ſaid, why did he not caſt them out of doors? ſo have I now, quoth the Lord Lasky; and the King granted the Houſe to be holden ex officio: And the next day the King was deſirous to ſpeak with me.

Aprilis 17. Wedneſday, I went with the Lord Lasky to the King, to whom I ſaid, to this intent, Conſolatio, pax, & miſericordia Dei ſit tibi, ô ſereniſſime Rex: Coram quo, Divinitus recipi admonitionem, ut me ſuſtinem, quod nunc humillime facio: paratiſſimus cum omni fidelitate & ſinceritate ea cum Regia veſtra Majeſtate tractare, quæ mihi divinitus injungantur, Quorum myſteriorum hiſtorias de ordine in ordinem referre, prout occaſio dabitur, non recuſabo aliaque omnia peragere, quæ Deo & veſtræ Majeſtati Regiæ gratia fore intelligero, &c.

The King anſwered, Ut de veſtra perſona multa bona audivi abſente, ita jam mihi gratus valde eſt adventus veſter, & ſi quod ſit in quo vobis mea gratia & favor, poſſit eſſe commodo non dubitate me veſtrum favorem, & protectorem exiſtere: Atque de iſtis & aliis majoribus rebus aliquid magis opportuni loquendi tempus poſt feſtos iſtos dies: quo tempore vos ad me accerſori curabo, &c.

Hereupon I made Courſy, as was appertaining, and ſtepped back ſomewhat from the King, and ſo the Vice-Chancelor and other Officers, the chief Secretary brought Bills to be read, and ſubſcribed, or aſſigned with the Kings own hand, which he did: and after the Lord Lasky had watched a fit time to tell the King of his deſire to ſpeak a few words to his Majeſty of ſome of his own affairs, and was bidden to reſort ſtraightway after dinner to his Majeſty, we took our leave with reverence doing, and ſo went out of the privy Chamber, or rather with-drawing Chamber through his privy Chamber, where he had ſaid Maſſe when we came, and ſo into the Guard-chamber, and down, &c.

Friday, I took Ghoſtly counſel of Doctor Hannibal, the great Divine, that had now ſet out ſome of his Commentaries upon Pymander, Hermitis Triſmigiſti.

Saturday (Aprilis 20) I received the Communion at the Pernardines, where that Doctor is a Profeſſor.

This day E. K. the Ghoſtly counſel and comfort, as his caſe required.

On Eaſter Monday, very devoutly in Saint Stephens Church E. K. received the Communion, to my unſpeakable gladneſſe and content, being a thing ſo long and earneſtly required, and urged of him, by our ſpiritual good friends, as may appear by ſundry former actions.

Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday.

May 6, & 7,8. E. K. was very unquiet in mind, and so expressed to me in words: for that A. L. had not paid him his money, long since due: and chiefly for that he doubted very much of A. L. his turning to the Lord with all his heart, and constantly. So much did A. L. his former life and ungodly living and dealing offend him, and so void was he of any hope, that he became in a great oppresse of mind to find us coupled with so * ungodly a man. I shewed A. L. his last Letters, how he was in a Monastery of his own, belonging to the Castle Rithwyan, (which he had now by a stratagem won from the unjust delaying of his adversary) and what penance and contrition he was in, what meditations, and what godly purposes, &c. But E. K. would not hope of conversion, and thereupon utterly and resolutely intended with all speed to be gone from hence toward Prage, and willed me (if I would) to prepare my Letters He became very blasphemous against God to my great grief and terrour: what the issue thereof would be, so great was the blasphemy and rebellion against God and his holy purposes in us, that almost greater could not be uttered. I used as quiet words as I could, alluring him of Gods mercies alwayes ready, and his helping hand for all such as put their trust in him, and call upon him in their troubles and times of need, and so did betake him to God for that Tuesday night, being past 9 of the clock.

* △ What should I then think o. both them.

Wednesday morning, as I was at my prayers in my study over his Chamber, and had made declaration of this cause, and of the perplexity most grievous that I was in to see my friend and partner (E. K.) thus carried away with so grievous a temptation, so manifold and vehement.

E. K. yet lying in his bed, did call his brother Thomas to him, and willed him to call me to him: Thomas came (when I had in manner ended my devotions and prayers) for me, I went to him, yet lying in his bed: And after I had wished a good morrow, and sate by him on the Bench at his beds head, he began and said such matter as followeth,

E. K. A Spirit appeared to me this morning by my Bed-side, and bid me be quiet.

Bad me will you to go to morrow with both your servants to my Lord, as secretly as you could.

Bad you comfort him.

Bad you bring him with you.

Bad you to go to the King as you came homeward.

Bad me to board in the mean space with the Italian * Doctor at Perins house.

* Gregorius, Jordanus, Venitus.

Bad me lie here every night.

Hereupon I was most glad and joyful, and praised God for his marvellous mercies, loving kindnesse and goodnesse toward us, and declared my self assured that God had put out his term, and setled the degree: For the performance of his purposes and promises made to us, for his own honour and glory: And so with joy and thanks given E. K. for his courteous imparting these good news to me, I went about my businesse intended, which was to go to the Table of the Lord: as I was prepared for it, and so went to the Barnardines Church.

Soli Deo nostro sit omnis laus, honor, gloria, & gratiarum actio, nunc & semper, Amen.

Note, I had in my prayers alledged to God, that albeit I was in great perplexity and agony of mind, yet since I was willed to cease my voice for having at any angelical presence, I said he of his divine clemency and care over us, in these great desires might counsel us and direct us, though we did not urge our request as we were wont. The conclusion and shame which many wayes would follow, if this intended purpose of E. K. should go forward and take place) was so great, that we might seem to the world, to have been led to that evil end, by a manifold digression, rather then otherwise led in mercy and verity, wherein I requested God to regard his own honour and glory, &c.

NOTE △.

E. K. ſitting with me in my ſtudy, told me, that after my going to Rithian to the Lord Lasky, he had very many apparitions, and divers matters declared unto him, of the ſtate of Chriſtendom, &c.

He ſaid (moreover) fault was found with my manner of ſtanding before Stephen, I ſhould have made ſome more ample declaration of my Calling and knowledge in theſe our actions. Secondly, that I did miſtake the phraſe ſpoken unto me at Prage of the rod binding up *: For he ſaid, that Michael Dee ſhould die, that I ſhould thereby be afflicted, and divers ſuch things he told me, and among other that he was willed to be ready to leave me, when he ſhould be called: for, he ſaid, our actions ſhall be cut off, for ſome of our unworthineſſe, &c. All which things were ſo grievous unto me, as I was (in manner) ready to ſound; and my diſtreſſe was the greater, becauſe (after a ſort) I was barred from requiring the preſence of any of our ſpiritual friends, till Stephen had been rebuked by the Lord, and I had vowed to obey their commandments and inſtructions, whereby I was driven to beſeech God to conſider my cauſe and grief, who unfainedly deſired to be his true Servant: And being deſirous to obey them, ſtaying of my voice for the preſence of his good Miniſters, I was contented to offer up my obedience herein for a ſacrifice; and ready to receive this diſtreſſe and affliction, as a puniſhment for my ſins, awaiting his will and pleaſure.

* 1585. April. Our actions to be cut off for our unworthineſs.

E. K. ſaid, It ſhall not be amiſſe to bring forth the Shew-ſtone, and aſſay what the good will of God would be herein.

△ I fetcht the Shew-ſtone, and after it had been ſet about a quarter of an hour. E. K. Eſpied in it a little naked boy, with a white cloth ſcarf, from under his Navel hanging down unto his knees; The hair of his head is ſhort as of an young child: [and about that time came the Lord A. L. unto us, who ſat down by us:] He had a little Circle of aire in his hand: There is a light in the ſtone as if there were the ſhining of the Sunne in it.

Apparition.

Now he is returned to his former ſhape again.

Prophets. And the ſickle of the Higheſt ſhall reap down the Mountaines; The Valleys ſhall be without fruit: And the ſeed of man ſhall be accurſed.

E. K. Now he turneth his face to you [△]

Puer ..... Who is he that the Lord rejoyceth in, or on whom the Heavens look with merry countenance, whoſe feet are not a burden to the earth, and in whom is the force of the ſoul comforted? Who is he that ſhall rejoice in the Lord? Even he it is that goeth out of himſelf, and beholdeth himſelf, ſaying, O thou Carcaſe thou art a Sepulchre for me; Neither am I placed in thee, for thine own beauty, but that the Lord may be magnified, and his Creatures dignified; He it is that ſhaketh off himſelf, and putteth on the Armour of Affliction, praiſing and extolling the Garland of the God of Hoſts, before that great Whore, and in deſpite of her Congregation; He it is that forſaketh his own will, to do the will of him that created him; Whoſoever (therefore) doth his own will, is the ſervant of Perdition; But he that expecteth the will of God is anointed.

Behold, therefore, becauſe you do ſo, and have beheld your ſelves, not in your ſelves, have acknowledged the power of God, and the truth of his Meſſage, your Honour ſhall be great: Therefore fear not, For, lo, This Garland is prepared for you: and reſt is ſealed unto you, of the Higheſt, unto you, your wives, children and ſervants.

Note, after dinner as we sat together, A. L. E. K. and I discoursing of some of our matters; There appeared over A. L. his head (to the sight of *E. As I began to pray and study, Domino non sumus digni ut nos exaudias, suddenly E. K. said he saw as followeth.

E. K. I see a great Hill of fire, a very great Mountain, and it is as if it did hang in the aire: for I see the aire under it, and I see the Sun shine on it ∴ the Mountain fire flameth not.

Now the little boy that appeared last day, standeth on the top of this Mountain.

Puer ..... God hath spoken unto you, and hath gathered you together, and lo, you are become a strong sword, with the which the Nations shall be cut down, and the God of Hosts shall stretch forth his hands; And behold, you are come, and now is the time you Satan shall reap. ∴ But Satan

For thou dealest with him that is a flame of fire, and a two edged sword to the wicked, out of the Dunghil I chose him, out of nothing I can stirre thee up, and exalt thee, but thou must first be poor before thou be exalted, read the Scriptures and judge.·. The King sent for the Lord Lasky and me, by his Vice-Chamberlaine, whom we came unto in a Chamber, within the Chamber or roome where he useth to give audience, or to eat with his Palatines and other: He sat by the Window which is toward the South, and by which his Prospect is into his new Garden, which is in making: He began thus, (the Lord Albert Lasky being by, and thereto willed by the King,) and said unto me very near as those words import.

St. Egit mecum Dominus Palatinus, ut vos audirem de rebus istis magnis & raris loquente: Quod libentur feci: & tamen hoc considerari debet, quod Prophetæ omnes & revelationes jam diu & in tempore Christi cessaverunt. Tamen si nihil in istis, contra Dei sit honorem, eo lubentius sunt audienda: Et ego quidem haud dubito quin Deus nunc possit multis modis secreta quædam hominibus deligere, ad hac usque tempora, mandatis & inusitatis.

Heer-

Hereupon I answered to this sence, although I cannot expresse the same words.

△ Considero in ordine vestræ regiæ tria quasi capitala, in quibus totus ordinis vestræ est medullæ. Primum de Prophetiarum, & revelationem cessatione, secundum; an aliquid in nostris actionibus, vel exercitiis insit contra Dei honorem: & tertium (quod animo meo est valde gratum) quod, Deo non præscribatis certos aliquos modos vel tempora quibus suæ hominibus velit aut debeat secreta detegere. De primo, hoc possimus vestræ Majestati Regiæ asserere, quod ille Scripturæ locus haud rectè à plurimis intelligeter: & ab illis pessime, qui velint omni modæ. Dei potentiæ & misericordiæ & sapientiæ præscribere certos modos, & tempora certa: asserendo nullorum hiis temporibus esse Prophetiam, vel post Christum fore: quia omnes in Christo cessavere: hoc est, quia omnes de illo quæ erant Prophetiæ felicet. De Dei filio in carne venturo & Messia vero, & redemptore generis humani futuro, (& de tota illa quam nos agnovimus & confitemur Christiani, completum & consummatum esse Christi historia) jam cessavere: adeo quod illa neque jam futura sunt ut putant Judæi, neque repetenda sunt, cum jam sunt consummata & peracta quemadmodum Prophetæ prænuntiabant nam ob hac causa cum Christus Jesus in cruce pendens scinisset, quod omnia de eo Prophetia completa fuissent, & præcepimus scilicet omnium Prophetiarum (ante Christiano) scopus jam esset Collinatus, & Juxta præsentiam & propositum Dei redemptoris humane conscientiam esset mysterium ipse dixit consummatum est: Nam & Paulus dixit ad Judæos, (namque consummassent omnia quæ de eo scripta erant, deponentes eum, de Ligno posuerunt eum in monumento. Et post Resurrectionem suam ipsemmet Christus suis discipulis pergentibus versus Castellum Emaus, & de illius morte & resurrectione differentibus & dubitantibus) dixit, O stulti & tardi corde ad credendum in omnibus quæ locuti sunt Prophetæ: Nonne hæc oportuit pati Christus, & ita intrare in gloriam suam, & incipiente a Moyse & omnibus Prophetis interpretabitur illis in omnibus scripturis, quæ de ipso erant, &c. & paulò post iterum ad eosdem vobiscum: Quoniam necesse impleri omnia quæ scripta sunt in lege Moysi & Prophetis, & Psalmis de me.

△ Oratione finita & aliquibus verbis factis, de nostra cum Stephano Actione præterita hæri.

E. K. Here is he that was yesterday in our Action with the King.

Hei mihi (saith the Lord) [He stoopeth by little downward] why do I hold my hand from the Earth? What have all the Princes of the World built a Tower against me? These in denying me and my Majestie: The other wallowing in extream drunkennesse amongst the pleasures and blindnesse of the flesh, neglecting (without fear) my Commandements, have I thrown out the Children from the Vineyard, and called in the Dung-carriers? have I visited my servants, (whom I chose,) in wrath and indignation with the Sword of Justice? have I thus scattered them upon the face of the World, without a Shepherd, to entertain blasphemous Murderers, Lyars, and the Runnagates of the Earth, the seed of Cain, and of the curſed! O you Caterpillers, O you that fill the Earth with poison! O you abusers of my Name, and Dishonorors of my Temple! What is the cause that you are so barren, or that the Lord hath not mightily shewed himself amongst you, as unto his Children? Why are not the Miracles and Wonders a Testimony of the God of Truth amongst you, as they were unto the Israelites? Why, hath not the Sea divided her self? Why, hath not the Lord delivered you from bondage? Unto the Israelites he gave a fruitful *land (the possession of the wicked) abounding with Milk and Honey: unto you, he hath delivered your possession unto the Dogs: and your children to become Captives, why doth not the God of Hosts stretch forth his hand saying: Deliver my people from bondage? are not the times of those latter dayes and of the Harvest of the Disciples * shadowed amongst the doings and graces of the Israelites, you are become blind, you have eyes but you see not, for you * know not the time of your visitation. O thou stif-necked Generation this is the cause, that the finger of God commeth not amongst you: This, this is the cause, because* you have not Faith: Neither is the Spirit of godlines and obedience amongst you, can he that is all Truth defile himselfe with lying: or can the flesh of man diminish the authority of the Godhead: is Christ Jesus, *(very God of very God) of less power or strength unto you, then he was before, unto the seed of Abraham: because he hath taken your flesh upon him. O you ignorant, ô you blind strangers, ô you that were faithful in the sight of the Lord, is not the God of Heaven and Earth heire unto you, by reason of his Man-hood have you not now access your selves unto the Throne of the Highest, which your Fathers had not? the Israelites ran unto the Prophets and high Priests: yea, they durst not run before the Lord: For it was said of them * Let them stand before the hill. They brought their offerings to the Priest, which offered up their prayers and humility: But unto you (ô you of little faith) the Gates are set open: yea, even unto the Throne of God: why therefore, doe you not ascend unto your* Christ, Which is anointed before the Father. Hath he anointed him for himselfe, or for you? for both: If you have no miracle, you have no faith, if you have (saith the Son of God) faith, to be compared with a Mustard-seed, &c. But you do none of these things, neither is the name of God magnified amongst you, Is it not a shame, that the faith of man groweth not to be equal with a Mustard-seed, is it not a signe of your slavish nature, from the which you were called, that there is no faith amongst you?

Land,

△ As the Israelites and Hierusalem knew not the time of their visitation and so are these dayes shadowed in the Israelites acts, &c.

*Exod. c. 19. be

Miraculà Fidei.

True it is: For why the blood of Christ is shed upon you: and you are washed without deserts, Behold now (saith the Lord) when I have stirred up a Moses there are no Israelites that will follow him: the seed of Abraham is destroyed with the Winter of self-love and dis-obedience.

A Moses.

The Lord groaneth, saying: Whether shall I turn me? unto whom shall I shew my face? if I say unto them go out, set your Tents against the wicked: Behold, I will be amongst you, and fight for you: who is it that heareth me? where is your faith become? who is he that believeth me, O you wicked Generation shall the Lord call you and seeke your deliverance, and will you know of the Lord with what meanes he will work amongst you, *is the God of Heaven and Earth become amongst you an Ingineer or a Merchant, a Hoorder up of worldly treasure; or one that rideth on horse-back to battail? you stinking Carrion, you hateful wretches before Heaven and Earth, you blind hirelings. Who devided the Seas who threw down Jericho, who overthrew the wicked Kings? who destroyed the Cities of the wicked? who fought against the reprobate Giants and the flesh of mankind? who opened the windowes of Heaven and consumed you all except as you read * eight persons, yea, if out of the windowes I can consume you, what shall become of you if I open my doors, if I send out my servants against you, and my innumerable army. Is it not said, whatsoever I put into your mouthes, that speake. Why do you so, but for the truths sake: If therefore I bid you doe, is not my truth all one? I am full of sorrow: for no man openeth his doors unto me, no man believeth me: no man remembreth that I made Heaven and Earth:*

Totus mundus in maligno positus est, and is become the open shop of Satan, to deceive the Merchants of the Earth with all abhomination. But what, are you the Pedlers of such wares? or the Carriers abroad of lies and false doctrine. Do you think it is a small matter to tie the sense of Gods Scriptures and mysteries unto the sense and snatching of your Imaginations? Do you count it nothing to sit in judgment against the Spirit of God: leaving him no place, but at your limitation. Is it lawful before the Sonne of God, to spend the whole dayes, yea, many yeares, with the Sonnes of Satan, the lying imps, and deceivers of the World? Are you so far entred into the shop of abhomination, that you point unto the Sonne of God the time of his comming, the descending of his Prophets, and the time wherein he shall visit the Earth? Moses durst not speak, but from the Lords mouth: The Prophets expounded not the Law, but the voice of the Lord. The Sonne of God spake not his own words, in that he was flesh, but the words of his Father; His Disciples taught not, but through the holy Ghost; Dare you (therefore) presume to teach, and open the secret Chamber of the Highest, being not called?

Malitia, Mundana, Pompa, & Vanitas.

Tell me, have you left your Merchandize, and the counting of your mony deceitfully gotten, to become Teachers of the Word of God? Are you not ashamed to teach before you understand? yea, are you not ashamed to lead away, where you cannot bring home? Hypocrites you are, and void of the Holy Ghost, lyars you are become, and the enemies of Christ, and his holy Spirit.

Peradventure you will say, in reading the Scriptures we understand But tell me, by what spirit you understand them: what Angel hath appeared unto you? or of which of the Heavens have you been instructed?

It may be you will say of the Holy Ghost, O thou fool, and of little understanding! Dost thou not understand that the Holy Ghost, is the School-master of the Church, of the whole Flock & Congregation of Christ? If he be the School-master (therefore) over a multitude, it followeth then, that one doctrine taught by the Holy Ghost, is a lesson or an understanding of a multitude: But what multitude are of thine understanding or of what Congregation art thou? Wilt thou say, thou art scattered. Thou speakest fasly, thou art a runnagate. But, behold, I teach thee, and thy error is before thy face.

Whosoever doth understand the Scriptures must seek to understand them by Ordinance and spiritual tradition. But of what spiritual tradition understandest thou? or by what Ordinance are the Scriptures opened unto thee? Thou wilt say thou art informed by the Holy Fathers, and by the same Spirit that they taught, by the same Spirit thou understandest. Thou sayest so, but thou dost not so. Which of thy Fore-fathers hath tied reason to the Word of God? or the understanding of the Scriptures to the Discipline of the Heathen? I, say unto thee, that thy Fore-fathers were dear unto Christ, were partakers of the heavenly visions and celestial comforts, which visions and celestial comforts, did not teach unto them, a new exposition of the Scriptures, but did confirm and give light unto the mysteries of the Holy Ghost spoken by the Apostles, the ground-layers and founders of the Church. Whatsoever, therefore, thou learnest of thy Fore-fathers, thou learnest of the Apostles, and whatsoever thou learnest of the Apostles thou hast by the Holy Ghost. But if thou expound the Fathers after thy sense, & not after the sense of the Apostles, thou hast not the Holy Ghost, but the spirit of lying. Therefore humble thy self and fall down before the Lord. Lay reason aside, and cleave unto him. Seek to understand his word according to his holy Spirit. Which holy Spirit thou must needs find, and shalt find in a visible Church, even unto the end.

Reason. Ecclesia visibilis.

I will plainly say unto thee (That, Truth may appear mightily in light:) Whosoever is contrary unto the will of God, which is delivered unto his Church, taught by his Apostles, nourished by the Holy Ghost, delivered unto the World, and by Peter brought to Rome, by him, there taught by his Successors, held, and maintained, is contrary to God and to his Truth.

* Acts 23. A.

Open your eyes therefore, and understand, and cleave to the Church for the Church sake, and not for the love of man. Despise not the Church, because of the transgressions of man: But submit your neck under that holy yoke and ordinance, which shall lead you to the Congregation governed by the Spirit of God, wherein you shall understand the secrets of God his Book, to be interpreted according to the sense of your fathers: whose understanding was the finger of the Holy Ghost, you cannot authorise your selves, and without authority you can do nothing; Therefore if your authority be not, why take you upon you the doings of the Church, which it is one thing to seek to understand the Scriptures, and another thing to teach the Scriptures according to his understanding, for he that teacheth, teacheth, by Authority, but if he have no Authority, he is an Usurper.

But Curiosity is the Devil; Have you not read; That the bread of the holy ones is not to be cast unto Dogs? Look unto your selves whether you be Dogs or no. See if your life be holy: your doings straight and just, your patience manifold: your affliction great for the Lord: if you find not your selves so, you are not Children, If you be not Children, you are not Sonnes, if you be not Sonnes you have no Mother, if you have no Mother you are Dogs, you are devourers of the bread of Children, currish, senseless, and against God.*

AS E. K. ſtood at the end of the Galery by his Chamber, looking over into the Vineyard he ſeemed to ſee the little man the Gardiner, in all manner of behaviour and apparel, who is the chief workman or over-ſeer of Mr. Carpio his workmen in the ſame Vine-yard. He ſeemed very handſomly to prune ſome of the Trees: at length he approached under the wall by E. K. and holding his face away-ward he ſaid unto him, Quæſo dicas Domino Doctori quod veniat ad me. And ſo went away as it were cutting here and there the Trees very handſomly, and at length over the Cherry-trees by the houſe on the Rock in the Garden he ſeemed to mount up in a great piller of fire.

E. K. bade his Wife to go, and ſhe who was in the Garden. She came up, and brought him word, No body.

E. K. then came to me and ſaid, I think there is ſome wicked ſpirit that would allude me, and he told and ſaid to me, as is before noted. Then ſaid I, I will go into the Garden, and bade E. K. come with me. We went down that way which this Creature did go: but nothing we ſaw, went to the Banqueting-houſe in the Vine-yard, but that place pleaſed us not ſo, we went along in the way by the cliff ſide, and ſat down on the bank by the great pyle of Vine-ſtakes lying in the very South end of the Vine-yard. And we had not ſat there half a quarter of an hour, but I eſpyed under the Almond-tree, and on the South-ſide of it, being the Weſterly Almond-tree, that is it which is ſtanding on the Weſterly ſide of the ſtraight path which leadeth from the North toward the South in the Vine-yard. I eſpyed (I ſay) like a ſheet of faire white paper lying toſſed to and fro in the wind. "I roſe "and went to it, and (to the prayſe of God his truth and power,) there I found three of my Books "lying, which were ſo diligently burnt the tenth day of April laſt.

1 The three Books were, Enoch his Book.

2 The 48 Claves Angelicæ.

3 And the third was the Book of my gathering of the thirty Aires, and entitled Liber Scientiæ terreſtris auxilii & victoriæ.

Thereupon E. K. comming to me, I fell on my knees with great thanks yeilding to the God Almighty, and ſo did E. K. whoſe mind and body were mervailouſly affected at the ſight of the "ſaid Books, having no ſhew or ſigne that ever they had been in the fire, neither by colour or ſavour, "or any thing wanting.

And after we had ſet half an hour under the fore-ſaid Almond-trees prayſing God and wondring at the Miracle. Suddenly appeared by us the ſelf-ſame Gardiner like perſon, but with his face ſomewhat turned away, and nothing thereof to be adjudged as of Ave the cuſtome is. He ſaid, Kelly, follow me, E. K. went, and I ſat ſtill, awaiting his return.

This

This Gardiner went before E. K. and his feet seemed not to touch the ground by a foot height. And as he went before E. K. so the doores did seeme to open before him, he led him up the great stairs on the left hand by the Vineyard door, and so in at his own Chamber door where E. K. hath his new Study, and then the door going out of that to the stairs opened of it self, and he went up those stairs, & at length brought him to the Furnace mouth where all the Books and papers had been burnt the 10 day of this April. And coming thither, there the spiritual Creature did seem to set one of his feet on the post on the right hand without the Furnace mouth, and with the other to step to the Furnace mouth, and so to reach into the Furnace (the bricks being now plucked away which stopped the mouth of the Furnace, all saving one brick thick) and as he had reached into the furnace there appeared a great light, as if there had been a window in the back of the Furnace, and also to E. K. the hole which was not greater then the thickness of a brick unstopped, did seeme now more then three or "four brick thicknes wide, and so over his shoulder backward he did reach to E. K. all the rest of the "standing Books, excepting the Book out of which the last Action was cut, and Fr. Pucci his Recan- "tation, also to E. K. appeared in the Furnace all the rest of the papers which were not as then de- "livered out.

That being done, he bade E. K go, and said he should have the rest afterward. He went before in a little fiery cloud, and E. K. followed with the Books under his arm all along the Gallery, and came down the stairs by Fr. Pucci his Chamber door, and then his guide left E. K. and he brought me the Books unto my place under the Almond-tree.

MEMORANDUM.

1586. May 1.

On May day after dinner I went over the water (being brought to the water side in the Lord Rosenberg his coach, and Jacobus Menschick with me) unto the Lord Rosenberg his Gardens, and lodging by the water-side, whether he came to me by appointment. To whom when I had read in Latin (ex tempore) the things that concerned him, I asked him what he had done, since the time of my being with him, that I may the better understand these words spoken to him and of him.

He told, that he had often prayed, since unto God for the forgiveness of his sins, and to open his eyes how he might serve him; and to make it to be evident unto him whether he is to marry or no, and where, or in what stock or kindred. And if it were his divine will, that he might receive comfort and instruction by me, and that these and such matters, and somewhat earnestly he had prayed also for his Mr. the Emperour, that he might bend himself to enjoy God his favour, yea, for his own marriage and amending of his loose life, while he yet sat at dinner this day at the Archbishops table, his heart and thought did come very much upon it, &c.

At these his words I rejoyced much to perceive the doing of the Highest, in the hearing of his prayer faithfully prayed & that the answer which I read unto him was so fitly applyed unto his prayer as he also himself, did perceive with great comfort and spiritual joy. He entreated much that I would pray to God that the Emperour might be restored to the favour of God, as he was when I declared my message unto him from the Highest, I answered, that whatsoever the God of Heaven and Earth should appoint me to say or do unto his Majesty, I most willingly rejoyce in the faithful doing of it: and that it was my duty (as a Christian) to pray for his Majesty: but I should not make my promise of my prayer to be heard, but would highly rejoyce if his Imperial Majesty would so use himself in God his judgment, as might be meritorious in the sight of our Redeemer.

Votum & promissum Wilhelmi Ursini, Vice-regis Bohemiæ.

Such words and matters as this passed between us. And he said that he would in all points, fulfil the advice and warning of God, in this Action expressed, & would marry a Maiden as he was willed. And this day did acknowledge, & account himself a happy man. And as concerning our mutual bond by the meanes of each being given to the other by God of Heaven and Earth, he vowed and promised that he would regard it in all points to the best of his skil and power, &c.

These and other such good seeds for the service of God being sown between us; he went towards his Palace in the Court, and I to the water-side, and so over to the Coach awaiting for me, and so came home. God be praysed.

NOTE.

I had translated this Sunday morning, the same parcel of the former Action into Latin for the Lord Rosenberg, which he then sent for, jump at the time, when I had finished it: And so I sent it him inclosed in a Letter.

May 6. Being Tuesday, I entred my Journey toward Valkenaw Glasse-house, and Leipsig Mart.

There are divers Valkenaws, one by Egre, or Elbogen, not far from Carls Bath, westward from Prage about 18 Bemish miles, an other in Behem, about 11 or 12 miles from Prage, northerly, a mile from Krebitz, and two miles from Liep, and a mile from Kamnitz.

NOTE.

May 11 I came to Leipsig, on Sunday the 11 of May, and was at Peter Hans Swartz his House lodged. I found Laurence Overton, (with much ado) an English Merchant: to whom my wife (the last year) had shewed no little friendship to himself, and Thomas his partners servant, in the time of his lying sick in our House, &c. at Prage; He came from England at Mid-lent, he confessed that Edmond my servant had been oftentimes with him, at his House, and that he did think that he would come with the next Ships after his comming from England, then to come within 16 dayes.

I perceived by his diverse expresse sayings, that he was but a hollow friend unto me, and seemed half afraid to deal either with me, or my man.

There, also I found a courteous Gentleman called Mr. Francis Evers, the Lord Evers his Sonne of the North. And of all other matters omitting the rehearsal in these Records, (those matters I mean which at Leipsich and in this Journey happened notably unto me, or I did my self) one Letter which I wrote to the Queen of England her Secretary, the Right Honourable Sir Francis Walsingham, as followeth.

Right

Right Honorable SIR,

ALbeit I have (almoſt) in vain come a hundred miles (from Prage to this Leipſich Mart) hoping either to meet my Servant there, with anſwer to my former Letters, ſent in November laſt to her Majeſty (when alſo I wrote unto your Honor, and divers other). And ſo with ſpeed from this Leipſich to have ſent again, moſt ſpeedily as occaſion ſhould have ſerved. And now, I find, neither ſervant, neither Letter from him, neither word of mouth: yet all this notwithſtanding: and whatſoever the hindrance or delay hereof be (whether the keeping back of my Letters from her Majeſty, or the manifold and importune, moſt weighty affairs publick hindring or delaying her Majeſties moſt gracious, diſcreet and wiſe reſolution herein: or what other occaſion elſe hath and doth cauſe this long and wonderful delay of anſwer receiving. All this notwithſtanding, I thought good, before I ſet up to my Coach, to viſit, and moſt humbly to ſalute your Honour very faithfully, dutifully and ſincerely, with great and the ſame good will, that my Letter ſome yeers ſince written to your Honour, (butt hen, a ſtnmbling block unto your Honour and other, for the ſtrangneſſe of the Phraſes therein) doth pretend, ſo it is, right Honourable, that the merciful providence of the Higheſt, declared in his great and abundant graces upon me, and mine, is ſo wonderful and mighty, that very few, unleſſe they be preſent witneſſes, can believe the ſame. Therefore how hard they are to be believed, there where all my life and doings were conſtrued to a contrary ſenſe: and proceſſe of death contrived and decreed againſt the Innocent, who can not eaſily judg.

I am forced to be brief. That which England ſuſpected, was alſo here, for theſe two yeers, almoſt (ſecretly) in doubt, in queſtion, in conſultation Imperial and Royal, by Honourable Eſpies, fawning about me, and by other, diſcourſed upon, pryed and peered into. And at length, both the chief Romiſh power, and Imperial dignity, are brought to that point, reſolutely, that, partly they are ſorry, of their ſo late reclaiming their erroneous judgment againſt us and of us, and ſeek means to deal with us, ſo as wee might favour both the one and the other: And partly to Rome is ſent for as great Authority and Power as can be deviſed, and likewiſe here, all other means and wayes contrived, How, by force, or for feare, they may make us glad to follow their humours. But all in vain; for force humane we fear not: as plainly, and often, I have to the Princes declared: And otherwiſe then in pure verity, and godlineſſe, we will not favour any (my words may ſeem very marvellous in your Honours ears: But mark the end, wee have had (and ſhall have to deal with no babes) I have full oft and upon many of their requeſts and queſtions, referred my ſelf to her Majeſties anſwer, thus, in vain, expected. Nuncius Apoſtolicus, (Germanicus Mala Spina) after his yeers ſuit unto me to be acquainted with me, at length had ſuch his anſwer, that he is gone to Rome with a flea in his eare, that diquieteth him, & terrifieth the whole State Romiſh and Jeſuitical: ſecretly they threaten us violent death, and openly they fawn upon us. We know, the ſting of Envy, and the fury of the Fear in Tyrannical minds, what deſperate attempts they have and do often undertake. But the God of Heaven and Earth is our Light, Leader, and Defender. To the Worlds end, his mercies upon us, will bread his Praiſes, Honour and Glory. Thus much very rhapſodically, (yet faithfully) tanquam dictum ſapienti, I thought good to commit to the ſafe and ſpeedy conveyance of a young Merchant here called Lawrence Overton: which if it come to your Honours hands before my Servant have his diſpatch, I ſhall or may by your Honour be advertized. Your Honour is ſufficient from her Majeſty to deal and proceed with me, if it be thought good. But if you make a Council-Table Caſe of it, Quot homines, tot ſententiæ. And my Comiſſion from above is not ſo large: Qui poteſt capere, capiat.

Sir, I truſt, I ſhall have Juſtice for my Houſe, Library, Goods, and Revenues, &c. Do not you diſdain, neither fear to bear favour unto your poor Innocent Neighbour. If you ſend unto me Maſter Thomas Diggs, in her Majeſties behalf, his faithfulneſſe to her Majeſty, and my well liking of the man, ſhall bring forth ſome piece of good ſervice. But her Majeſty had been better, to have ſpent or given away in Alms, a Million of Gold, then to have loſt ſome opportunities paſt. No humane reaſon can limit or determine God his marvellous means of proceeding with us. Hee hath made of Saul (E K.) a Paul: but yet, now and then, viſited with a pang of humane frailty. The Almighty bleſſe her Majeſty both in this World, and eternally: and inſpire your heart with ſome conceiving of his merciful purpoſes, yet, yet, not utterly cut off from her Majeſty, to enjoy Illustrissimo Principi & Domino Domino Wilielmo Ursino hereditario Domino Inclite Domus a Rosenberg, Domino in Grommaw Equiti aurei velleris Cæsareæ Majestatis intimi consilii Consiliario, & in Regno Bohemiæ supremo Burgravio, &c. Domino & Patrono meo Colendissimo.

ILlustrissime Princeps, nihil mihi gratias a Magnifico Domino, Schonbergio narrari poterat, quam vestram Celsitudinem prospera interim frui valetudine, Dum ego vario, diverso, & intricato quodam fueram jactatus itinere, per montes, per valles, per sylvas densissimas, per apertos campos, & per nivem profundam, & nobis fere inperviam: Et (semper tamen nos protegente altissimo) tandem sani, salvique illesis tam equis quam curru Celsitudinis vestræ, reversi sumus. Pro quo prospero successu, summas Altissimo agimus gratias, & Vestræ Celsitudini infinitas a nobis deberi fatemur. Dum absum contra nos nescio quid falsi incipit iste Apostolicus Nuncius vel leviter nimis credere, & temere conqueri, vel a seipso excogitare perversæ. Veræ si ita pergant (habito jam nostri, per biennium experimento satis accurato) illi quidem, qui pietate & sapientia, (saltem vulgares) deberent superare homines omnes, omnium hominum semet declarare maxime invidos, malitiosos, perversos, sanguinis humani appetentes, superbos, innocentum carnifices, & piorum in Christo Calumniatores exitiosos, &c. Vere (dico) cogemur pulverem ex calceis nostris excutere, & alias in mundi partes nos conferre. Et nisi vestræ Celsitudinis haberemus eam quam debemns considerationem: Et nisi nos ipsos vestræ Celsitudinis præsidio quocunqne armato (quasi) minntos existimaremns (præter illud invincibile, Dei Opt. Max. agmen invisibile) statim abire ex hoc regno conaremur. Curare etiam debet sua Cæsarea Majestas, ut aliquo modo, & citissime, perspectum toti huic Regno esse possit, nos duos non solum veræ Catholicos esse, sed etiam veræ pietatis & pacis Christianæ, esse amantissimos. Per literas istas non est opus ut plura effundam, spiritus mei fervore quodam. Sed diligentissime & circumspectissime respiciamus nos utrique, inestimabile Dei, quod nobis utrisque contulit Donum. Sumus enim quasi tres. Sed in uno Deo, unus quasi vir esse debemus. Mysterium hoc notate I. D. E. K. W. R. Nam qui me habet, habet & E. K. & quem ego meum habeo, ille etiam ipsius mei E. K. censendus est esse. Omnipotens ille Deus qui cuncta creavit, vestram Illustrissimam Celsitudinem, suæ divinæ Justitiæ, & Gloriæ Comimnistrum & co-operatorem nobis conjungat & diutissime conservet.

Pragæ, Maii 26, Anno 1586.

Illustrissime Celsitudinis vestræ fidelissimus in Christo Servitor.

△ Admonitio.

Tempore exilii nostri.

Nations teriæ omnes vocatæ in Judicium, coram Tribunal stabunt. Populus enim rebellis, nimiúmque hujus mundi deditus voluptati, mei jamdudum ira furoris irritatus tabescit: Ita quod, neque ad sinistram neque ad dextram sed ad voluntatem meam perinplendam, declinandum est. Beatus ille qui mihi mandatisque patris mei obediens est & perseverantia decoratus.

Maledictus autem, qui mendax operibus, perdicas verbum meum: quia scandalo multis erit, & ignominiæ pacis Evangelii mei.

Ego te Gulielme (quia manus adjunxisti mihi) Davidem ad Goliatha jugulandum constitui & constituendo invexi.

Mundo igitur ad gloriam meam utere, & corpus tuum erige in me, ad justitiam meam in sede debita collocandam, & superbiam iniquissimam turpissimámque (illorum qui posuerunt sedem meam, in scabellum pedem blasphemiæ & abominationis) ad penitus tum conculcandum, tum eradicandam.

Beatus enim eris in fortitudine manus & spiritus mei, quia audite preces tuas. Noli igitur tempus visitationis tuæ negligere: sed freme zelo & indignatione acerima, & conjunctam tuis parietibus, virginem in uxorem accipe, paratam lumbis & senectuti tuæ illámque amando dilige, & diligendo fove, ut mea in te & in illa benedictio pollicita manifesta fiat.

Cave porrò, ne quos tibi in auxilium paravi, servos meos, vel negligentia vel timiditate tua, aliorum sic patiaris ex manibus tuis vel tanquam oves ab ovili tuo, malis artibus & iniquitate, eripi. Quis enim istud surripiet quod datum est à me?

Cogita igitur & vigilando cura, quod hactenus lesum est.

Fringam namque frænum Satanæ & inimicis vestris.

Benedictio Patris & Spiritus mei, & consolatio à me (cui subjecta est omnis potestas) sit tecum & supra te.

A peccatis denique monitus cessa ut cum mecum loqueris, vita tua sit lumine & gratia mea suffulta.

MEMORANDUM.

Be remembred that Mr. Francis Pucci Florentine, whom at my going to Leipsich I left in our house at Prage, in the meane space had been at Frankford upon Mene, and went from Prage about the same day that the Bishop of Placenza Nuncius Apostolicus did exhibit to the Emperour a libel against us of most horrible untruths, &c. At his going from Prage he had that Nuncius blessing, &c. In the meane space, and after his return to Prage again it happened so, that the 30 of May last, I received the Emperours commandment, I, my Companion, and all mine to depart within six dayes out of Prage and consequently out of all his Kingdomes, Dukedomes and Lands. Which we did, and were come to Erphurd in Thuringa, and sometimes to Cassel whether we had removed our goods and family by reason the Senators of Erphurd would give us no leave to hire any house there as both by the Lord Schonberg in the name of the Lord Rosenberg, I was assayed, with repulse received, and also again by me and E. K. proved, July 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14. And on Tuesday (the 15*th day of June) Doctor* Curtz brought upward from the Senat that they would not grant our Request, yet notwithstanding, if the Lord Rosenberg would again send unto them in the matter, they would think better upon the matter, &c.

Mr. Francis Pucci. Anno 1586. Maii 6.

Now remember that Francis Pucci came to Erphurd on Thursday after our supper, July 10 (stilo novo) on horse-back on a horse which he had bought at Mawnberg-faire, &c.

July the 11*th he discoursed with* E. K. and me, that he thought we might obtain favour to return to Prage again if we would.

That he had found this Nuncius Apostolicus more courteous then Malaspina, of whom he reported also, that is was credibly informed that he was sore offended that we gave him no more honourable title in our speeches to him, then Reverendissima Vestra Paternitas.

This Pucci framed the discourse of his talk to perswade us to think well of this Episcopus Placentius that he was charitable towards us, and sorrow that we were so uncourteously used, that he meant nothing else in his sute to the Emperour against us, but that we might be examined, and thou being found found faulty, we should be sent to Rome, but after that he had begun to move against us, that he found the Emperour more eagerly bent against us, than he himself was.

NOTE.

The Lord Rosenberg told us that when he did (in our behalf) advise the Emperour of his error committed in our extermination, that the Emperour answered that this Nuncius from his first Audience did urge so vehemently against us, and also the Pope had sent commandment by Letter to him to deliver us and send us to Rome, that he was forced in manner to do as he did. But if the commandement or his Decree were to be made again, that it should not passe, or if this Nuncius Apostolicus had not sent this Decree away to Rome, that he should not send it, &c. This I note in respect of the contrariety in the Nuncius assertion, and the Emperours, of our so hard usage.

The foresaid eleventh day of July, the foresaid Fr. Pucci to prove this his intended perswasion of the Nuncius good meaning toward us, and to make us beleeve that great benefit would ensue our going to Rome, did bring forth unto us a writing of his own hand which he read unto us, and at the hearing of it we mused much for many causes I asked him then why the Nuncius had not subscribed this writing. It is all one said he for that; Hath he heard this read (quoth I,) yea, that he hath heard me read this three several times, arise unto him (said he;) And if you like of it saith he, wherein his power serveth him not to performe as much as is specified in the writing, he will make and use meanes to have it from his Holinesse; well, said I, take a copy hereof Mr. Kelly, for I was riding toward Salfeild about a house getting; Thereupon said he, contented, but I think it meeter to save and keep the original it self said E. K. Well, said Pucci, and so the original was delivered to E. K.

NOTE.

After 10 of the clock the same Friday, being the eleventh day of this moneth, after break-fast I rid toward Salfeild about the house of the Earl Albert of Swartzenberg, &c.

But after I was out of Erffurd until my return again, I was so sore vexed in mind to think of Pucci his return to our company, as well for his unquiet nature in disputations, as for his blabbing A bait. of our secrets without our leave, or well liking, or any good doing thereby; either in God his service, or our credit, but rather the contrary, ensuing albeit not of his intent, but by either his undiscreet handling of it, or of his undue hearers of him, &c. A spie. And also for his Houshold behaviour, not acceptable to our wives and family, and also because we were warned that he should be cut off from our company, &c. And chiefly, now to consider that he had laid such a bait for us with our mortal enemy, to entrap us by fair fawning words, which by no meanes the Emperour would consent to do before by his authority, but rather to put us out of his Kingdomes, &c. And imagining that he was a mighty Explorator upon us, for this Nuncius Apostolicus, and his adherents, that now he might perceive what we had done hitherto, what we were doing, and what we intended to do, and considering that he urged at our hands in answer to the former writing, wherein also lay a trap for either in not answering it, or refusing to grant some points of it, or in our consenting to the whole, this Nuncius would put matter against us to our great disadvantage. Thus being tormented in mind in my absence, how we might be rid of this Fr. Pucci, by quiet and honest meanes, I devised to write to this Nuncius to know if this writing were of his contriving onely, or of Pucci his contriving onely, or joyndy, or if at the least the writing were according to his will, and offer unto us, and so to send him away; wherein he could make no refusal, I intending not to make him privy of the content of my Letter; And in the mean space of his absence I hoped that some good way and better meanes would appear or fall out, whereunto we might trust, &c. Thus I note my imaginations and discourses in the time of my absence.

I returned to Erphurd July 13. hora 5. à meridie.

I found Fr. Pucci desirous to have answer to the foresaid writing, and very much perswading this Roman voyage, using arguments out of our actions, as that God said we should go to Rome, in a certain moneths space; That we ought to obey the Roman Bishop, and to love him, &c. I replyed and said, that he was not to urge God upon any his sayings to us, but to referre all to his most free disposition, his will was to be done and not ours, God was not bound to us, &c. He answered very vehemently, and often, that Deus est nobis obligatissimus, & Deus dixit nos ituros Romam, & ego credi & credam, & aliter non credam nisi mihi Deus dixerit non nobis, &c. Well, (quod we) God hath delivered unto us his meaning in that phrase, which we also devise you of, that it is not meant (by the speech) that we shall corporally goe to Rome, and so I brake off that his reasoning; And told him that we mervailed that he should urge this Roman Voiage so violently and eagerly more then we; It appertained unto us as much as to him, &c. The same day I told him that he had heretofore offended God with his curiosity in our affaires otherwise then appertained unto his calling, and he may well remember his repentance therein, and his forgivenesse obteined. But that now now he had offended much more in curiosity, and half in conspiracy against us with our mortal enemy this Nuncius Apostolicus, upon whom he did fawn, in whose favour he is, who joyeth, counsaileth with him in our affaires, who dare prescribe us what we have to do in so weighty affaires as our Journey to Rome, who hath framed a bill, accusing us coufusedly of Heresie, and wicked Magick, both falsely in one part, and dangerous to life, and infamous at the least in the other, and hereto requireth, urgeth, and in manner in God his name argueth by our actions past, obedience. And therefore he hath separated himself from us, and hath set himself against us, &c.

With great vehemency he said, He intended nothing, but well to us, and was Explorator with this Nuncius for our behalf; We require none (said I) neither we need any, for God seeth all, and doth all, for our benefit, if we will constantly love and serve him; To be brief, he would seem to be worthy to be thought well of for his zealous good will and fidelity to us ward, in all his doings and sayings; The truth whereof God knoweth, to whom we commit the cause between him and us.

The Copy of the writing before specified.

SID. Johannes Dee, D. Eduardus Kelleus, & Fr. Puccius, volent ire Romam, ut conferant cum Summo Pontifice de suis Revelationibus, venerantes cum tanquam Sancti Petri Successorem & Christi in terris Vicarium Illust & Reverend. Episcopus Placentinus Apostolicus Nuncius apud Cæsaream Majestatem, dabit illis Literas commendationis, ut per totum iter, & Romæ, humanissime summaque charitate tractentur, & in suis necessitatibus juventur: Ac præterea authoritate Apostolica absolvet eos & liberabit ab omni culpa & pœna, quam meriti essent in vita ante acta, ob artes Magicas exercitatas, hæreses, falsasque opiniones ab eis sparsas, aut fictas, verbis aut scriptis, aut aliis rationibus; ob libros prohibitos lectos aut scriptos, sive ob aliud quodvis crimen, cujus accusari aut argui possent in foro sancto Inquisitionis, aut in foro quod Contentiosum vocant; aut in quovis alio foro Pontificiæ ditionis: Ne quis ob ullum peccatum aut scelus quantumvis atrox, quod illi admiserint ante hoc iter susceptum, eis unquam facessere negotium, aut molestus esse possit, aut ullo modo inquirere, aut ipsos accusare presumat.

For the better ground of any manner of answer making hereunto I asked the same Fr. Pucci, after supper, on Tuesday the 15 of July, (forasmuch as I had framed a Letter for answer to the pith of the Letter or writing here recorded) whether this Letter were written and sent to us by the consent of this Nuncius Apostolicus, to know our answer in, or no. He seemed to be unwilling now directly to affirm the Nuncius consent. We replyed that he had already told us that he had read it thrice over to the said Nuncius, and that he liked well of it, and did mervail that now he would make strange to affirm the same again, seeing I had now, (according to his purpose) written a plain and perfect humble answer to the same Letter, and much more matter, true and needful for this Nuncius to know. Well, said he, Eatenus ex ejus consensu est, si velitis ire Romam, ea præstare conabitur, quæ in eisdem literis continentur, &c. Well, said I, (in Latin alwayes you must understand my talk with him in the same sence here in English recorded, if he mean well unto us, and in charity unfeigned; he will not be offended with my answer; The Copy whereof doth ensue.

posthac esse indicetur indubitatè, qualis (ante vestrum Cæsareæ Majestati exhibitum contra nos libellum,) per 30 annos, (& plures) in omnibus (pœne) Christiani orbis tam Academiis, quam Regnis & Provinciis (ex Dei immensa Bonitate, gratia abundantissima & singulari providentia) extitisse, haud obscuris confirmari possit testimoniis. Ex hiis igitur paucis, Historiæ ipsius veritatis scintillis, Vestræ Illustrissimæ Reverendissimeque Dominationis prudentia, magnum sibi lumen alicere sive accendere potuit: ad nos, nostrorum animorum affectiones, nostrorum ita mirabilium & adhuc incredibilium negotiorum progressum & statum dijudicandum, & denique de ipso futuro horum omnium exitu, haud leves sibi contexendas conjecturas: Cum nos, ex solo Deo Omnipotente, & vero & vivo, in omnibus nostris pendeamus, & ab ipso dirigamur & protegamur. Cui soli, nos ipsos, nostraque omnia, Animæ, corporis & Fortunæ nuncupata Bona, tanquam Holocaustum, quotidianis nostris humillimis & spontaneis offerimus precibus. Fidelis (in Christo, & propter Christum) servulus.

Joannes Dee.

This Letter being written, and read unto E. K. and of him well liked for the quiet and modest course therein kept, otherwise (as he said to Fr. Pucci) then he could have used: or had us'd in a Letter which now he had also written: but now would not send, thinking that my foresaid Letter might suffice for our case, he talked with Fr. Pucci of this Letter, which Fr. Pucci said he would gladly see and read, which E. K. told him that I was minded not to let him read it: Then said he, that he would not carry it: Hereupon in talk with Fr. Pucci, speaking of this Letter, I told him that I had written a Letter with sufficient answer in general to the Nuncius request and offer by him in writing brought to us, and in summe told him the chief contents of the Letter. Then said he, whereas you write of the Books burnt, why write you not unto him of the recovery of them, as I now perceive by you both, that they are restored? And it shall be a disgrace to you if the Nuncius shall understand more by other, then by your self. Thereof have I no care, Quod scripsi, scripsi, and I know the truth of my writing: And they are not all restored that I know of: And whatsoever he hath at my hands he may be assured is true: whatsoever he shall otherwise hear, the Record thereof cannot be so good, unless, our Record consent thereto; Then said he, why write you of those Books burning, being done before your comming away: It is as if you wrote backward. Have you no care Mr. Pucci, for the method of my Letters said I, and I said farther, it is told me that unless you see my Letters you will not carry them, you shall pardon me for seeing of them, the content I have sufficiently told you: and if you will not deliver them, I can get them delivered divers wayes, or I may omit the sending of them, and write such a Letter to the Nuncius that I had written answer to his requests, and offer sent by Fr. Pucci; But he would not bring the said my Letter, unless he might have a sight of it himself. At the length by farther discourse with E. K. he became resolved to goe with the letter, and (by E. K. his order) he was to receive 50 Dollors of John Carpio, that he should not be destitute of money at Prage. Fifty Dollors.

NOTE.

This day, Francis Pucci said to us both, how can you doubt of my fidelity toward you (whom I love as my own life,) and against this Monster of Rome, whom my chief desire is, and long hath been, that he may be overthrown, &c. Again, consider, what fidelity, obedience, and reverence he hath promised to the Pope, and this Nuncius, as the writing brought by him, and so sore and many wayes urged by him, for us to accept of, can specifie. Pucci infidelitti manifestissima facta.

Therefore Fr. is false to the Pope, or us, or both, or rash, foolish, blind, &c. And (as our spiritual Schoolmaster, divers times termeth him) leprous: Therefore I commit this his doings to the judgment of God: But also it is greatly to be remembred and noted that he now also discoursed again with E. K. as concerning the Birth of Christ, that it could not be proved by the Scriptures, that Christ came of the line of David, unless he were begotten of the actual copulation of Joseph, with Mary, and said that, because it was the gift of the Holy Ghost, that at Joseph his first and onely carnal copulation with Mary, Christ was conceived; Therefore she was accounted (in manner) ner a Virgin according to the Jews doctrine: which his hereſie when I heard, I trembled for the horrour of ſo manifeſt an hereſie againſt evident Scripture, virgo concipiet & virgo pariet, &c. & againſt many other moſt plain and ſufficient Authorities both of Scriptures, and alſo Hiſtories of our Lady her examination made by Women, and that ſhe was found a Virgin, &c. And at her conception her anſwer to the Angel; Quia virum non cognovi, &c. & antequam convenirent, juventa eſt in utero habens de ſpiritu ſancto, &c.

NOTE.

It is evident hereby that this Pucci is very leprous, both in this Hereſie (what other he is infected with, God he knoweth) and alſo the former infidelity proved.

On Thurſday 17 July Fr. Pucci entred his Voyage toward Prage with my Letter to the Nuncius Apoſtolicus, and with Letters to John Carpio from E. K, and with my Letters incloſed to the Lord Roſenberg. And we entred our journey toward Caſſel, but that night we rode onely three miles, to Gotha, our horſes were ſo ill that we hired, and therefore ſending them back again the next day, we hired a Coach, &c.

POSCRIPTUM.

Remember that Fr. Pucci, the morning before his going required of me our Letters Teſtimonial to our friends, of his fidelity toward us. What needeth that (ſaid I) for as much as your deeds were as well known to them as to us, your own conſcience to your ſelf may ſerve abundantly. But our friends divers, who have warned us of you, and have marvelled why we would ſuffer you any longer in our houſe and company, would neither credit our Letters as yet in this caſe. And would alſo condemne us of light judgment, or great blindneſs to judg the cauſe between you and us.

But truly I obſerved in him, now, a more proud preſuming over us then hitherto, before, when he was ſore rebuked, for over-crowing us, ſo as he began to do.

Præſumptio.

1 Now he ſaid, he had as great authority as we to publiſh any of our Secrets, at his diſcretion.

2 That he ought to eat bread with us.

3 That he underſtood our Books of Actions better then we.

4 That he needed not our conſent or counſail to deal with the Pope his Nuncius: he did it by his duty general, of Charity, &c.

5 He offered to order the Nuncius, and the Emperor to the reclaiming of the Decree made againſt us, &c.

NOTE.

Conſider what this may import, that the Decree touching him, being one of my houſhold company, and of them that then did appertain to me, and whoſe name he is not affraid one way and another way not abaſhed to * thruſt himſelf into the whole body of our Revelations, as a principal fellow or Receiver of them. By the firſt he ought to be afraid of the danger of the Decree which baniſhed us, unleſs he is aſſured of their good will who have ſhewed themſelves our mortal enemies, or elſe ſome other cauſe emboldned him to ſome other purpoſe, &c. by the ſecond he might be afraid of ſo great preſumption, being but a Probationer, not yet allowed of, and to us known to be cut off.

* Vide ſcriptum illius de noſtro itinere Romano, &c.

I. D. All theſe points I cannot decipher and judg, but referre them to the profound wiſdome and high providence of God, wherefore and how farre he hath admitted him to be privy of our Actions, and ſo a Witneſs to ſome purpoſes ſufficient. All things be to the honour and glory of God. Amen.

Magnifice Domine,

Lectis tuis literis fui miratus quod intelligerem te illius eſſe opinionis & ſententiæ, me apud Cæſarem tibi ac conſorti tuo officiis meis non parum obfuiſſe, quod ſciam ita me & religione & natura comparatum, ut omnibus quam maxime cupiam prodeſſe, nemini aut obeſſe. Quod autem præſtiterim quod mei erat officii, mihi vitio verti non debet. Cæterum cum inter ſummum Pontificem, & Cæſarem, merus ſim interpres, non video quid in hoc veſtro negotio præſtare poſſim: Conſulo autem, ut veſtram innocentiam, de fide Catholica ſenſum, & de Angelorum converſatione & aſſiſtentia, quam viſibilem habere dicitis, juxta Concilii Lateranenſis in undecima Seſſione decretum, coram Summo Pontifice & Sede Apoſtolica deducatis, & ita exponatis ut non poſſit cuiquam eſſe dubinam bium quid sentiatis, quin sede Apostolica approbante, fides tuto ab omnibus Angelicis assertionibus vestris, præstari possit, & tum demum & obtrectatoribus, si qui sunt, ora obcludentur. Nec ut arbitror grave vobis videbitur consilium meum, si enim ea vobis est in fide Catholica puritas atque constantia, ea in præsenti Angelorum communione sinceritas, vitæ integritas, & innocentia, ut asseritis: Me etiam tacente occasionem quæritis declarandæ vestræ fidei & bonitatis, & hac una ratione honori vestro (cujus vos rationem habendam dicitis, & cui tantum abest quod per me aliquid sit detractum, ut illum etiam pro viribus quantum officii mei & injuncti muneris ratio patietur, fovere sim paratus, ut Domino Puccio pluribus dixi) & omnibus vitæ commodis vel maxime consuletis. Deus gratia sua vos ita regat, ut Angelorum conversationem in Cœlis aliquando habere possitis. Vale Pragæ, die 28 Julii 1586.

△ Oraculum Divinum.

Multa sunt flagella præcepta mea negligentium: *Multiplexque furor hominibus propriis confidentibus viribus. Hi enim contemptores sanguinis & Regni mei fortitudinis, Gigantes facti sunt, ad omnem abominationem multiplicandam. Sed ego Sum qui sum, qui posui in Patre Solium verbumque ad faciendum in terris Judicium: qui in ultima Tuba percutiam illos, ut coacti recognoscant vias meas, & ad ovile proprium redeant. Trebonæ, Anno 1589. Mensis Augusti fine.

When Mr. Kelly was gone from me at Salfeild toward Bohemia, and in the mean space the Emperour had granted to the Lord Rosenberg licence for us to return into Bohemia, to any of his Lord-ſhips, Towns, Cities, Caſtles, &c. This was delivered written by ſpiritual and divine meanes, and the writing yet remaineth in my Lord his hands, out of which I copyed this for the order of our Hiſtory ſomewhat making plain.

Franciſcus Puccius præſtantiſſimis ac Deo dilectis viris D D. Joanni Dee & Eduardo Kelleo generoſis Anglis, majoribus in Chriſto fratribus, & ipſis tanquam patribus colendis, precatur gratiam & pacem a Deo patre noſtro, & a Domino Jeſu Chriſto, Amen.

EX quo a vobis diſceſſi, toto illo itinere, quod octo diebus confeci, vendito Lipſiæ equo, haud parum vexatus fuit meus ſpiritus, dum animum mecum volverim, quot modis Satanas divinum opus retardare & noſtram conjunctionem dirimere, adhibitis exterioribus & interioribus machinis & armis, tentaverit, & adhuc tentare non ceſſet. Neque enim poſſum, niſi ab eo, agnoſcere afflatus illos diffidentie, rumores ab invidis hominibus, ſparſos, ſuſpitiones nobis injectas, abſque certis indiciis, adverſus fidem non levibus argumentis probatam, atque hujuſmodi impedimenta & offendicula, quibus curſum noſtrum impedire ac ſanctam amicitiam, divinis auſpiciis, inter nos cœptam, convellere ac labefactare, malignus ille ſpiritus aggreſſus eſt. Itaque, in illa lucta, ne ullo modo manus illi darem, aut fatiſcerem, decrevi me, magis ac magis, munire certa fide in Deum, ac ſpe promiſſionum ejus, quas illum ſervaturum non dubito, tum precibus frequentioribus magis inſtare, apud ſummum patrem, ut nos quam primum donare velit illo ſpiritu, quo noſtri humeri montibus ferendis, ut ille inquit, pares evadent; ad hæc auſteriorem vitam inſtituere nec menſas lautas amicorum adire, ſed panem doloris ſolus comedere decrevi, ne ſim meliore conditione quam vos, qui tantopere affligimini, ut benigniſſimus Dominus quamprimum, vos in integrum reſtituat, atque ad ſolita colloquia piaque exercitia nos una revocet, & eventu conſentaneo ſuis ſanctiſſimis dictis, ſingulos noſtrum exhilaret. Hanc viam ſequenti Dominus mihi ſpem facit fore, ut vobis & aliis facilius meam fidem probem, & multas tentationes vitem quæ apud hujus mundi homines facile nos invadunt. Ideo, niſi neceſſitate urgente, aut communibus negotiis, familiaritatem omnem & convictum cum aulicis fugio, & me hoc modo minus ineptem precibus gentio, meamque vitam & mores in dies emendare conor, ne videar omnino indignus ea ſchola, in qua Dominus me erudire dignatus eſt, nec interim cum Publicano, illo, precari obliviſcor, ut Deus propitius ſit mihi peccatori. Vos non dubito me veſtris votis & ſupplicationibus juvabitis, ut vocatione meæ reſpondeam, & in opere Domini vobis adjumento & conſolationi eſſe poſſim: & benigniſſimus ille pater propediem hoc adverſo vento ignem ſuum magis excitari curabit, ac nos majori, quam unquam antea, jucunditate recreabit. Ac de his hactenus. Quod vero ad noſtra negotia attinet; perveni huc die 24 Julii, ſub veſperam, ac ſtatim adivi Illuſtriſſimum Dominum Nuncium, cui veſtras tradidi, quas læto vultu accipere viſus eſt: ſed colloquendi non fuit otium, cum, parata cœna, jam diſcumbere vellet. In poſteriorem Diem igitur rejectus, ad Dominum Carpionem me conferebam, cum didici eum ad vos Miſſum, quatriduo ante, hinc diſceſſiſſe. Dolui admodum eum non eſſe mihi obviam factum, tum ratione veſtrarum, tum mearum literarum, quoniam faſciculum quendam ad me quoque ferebat. Sed quod maxime me torquebat erat cura de litteris Illuſtriſſimi Domini Roſenbergii, quas ſciebam incluſas Domini Carpionis literis, nec eas aperire, aut alii tradere audebam, cum diſerte eſſet, ſcriptum illud ad manus proprias. Dum itaque occaſionem quero & expecto, ea ſeſe obtulit, quam mox audietis. Reverſus ſequenti die, ad Illuſtriſſimum Dominum Nuncium, invenio apud illum Jeſuitam Italum, qui mihi fuit a confeſſionibus: blande ab ambobus accipior, ſedere jubeor, a Jeſuita nomine candoris & ingenuitatis, non parum laudor. Tum lupide moneor ab Illuſtriſſimo Domino Nuncio ut ipſi adſim, in convertendo Jeſuita ille (is enim erat qui cum ipſo expoſtulaverat, quod nimis facile mihi dediſſet: teſtimonia triumphantis Eccleſiæ non ſubjici judicio militantis.) Reſpondeo me feciſſe quod in me erat ut docerem eum præferre Cœlum terræ, ac tribunal ſuperius inferiori; ſed cum id mihi minime ſucceſſet, ejus eſſe, ſua doctrina & autoritate, hominem de ſententia illa dejicere Illuſtriſſimus Dominus Nuncius haud gravate, noſtram ſententiam, hac in parte, probat, & exemplis confirmat, atque ita concludit, ut ſtatuat certitudinem videntis & audientis Dominum, aut ejus angelum, non pendere a probatione Eccleſiaſtica, neque ab illo eſſe rationem repetendam ſuæ revelationis, dum nihil publici muneris exercere audet: ſed ſi incipiat palam profiteri, ſe a Deo doctum & miſſum, ita ut non ipſius ſolum, ſed aliorum quoque interſit, ſcire quo ſpiritu agatur, tunc Eccleſiaſticorum munus eſſe, illius ſpiritum examinare & probare, neque ipſum jure poſſe examen hoc detrectare, licet ſuas revelationes eis ſubjicere minime teneatur. Nam ſi ordinaria autoritas eum admiſerat, bene habebit, nihilque turbarum excitabitur: ſin per injuriam aut inſcitiam aliquam, aut per aliam hujuſmodi cauſam, rejicietur, ſuum erit appellare Superiorem Dominum, qui ipſum miſit, quo ſuum ſervum & Legatum defendat, aut ordinario Judice commonefacto, aut alia ratione: quod probabat decreto Lateranenſe Concilii, cujus mentionem facit in ſuis literis; ac præterea hiſtoria S. Franciſci, qui primum expulſus ab Innocentio Pontifice, mox revocatus fuit, cum per quietem apparuiſſe Pontifici pannoſus ille, qui Lateranenſe templum ſuis humeris fulciret. Addebat præterea viros Dei non eſſe ſolitos deterreri una aut altera repulſa, & hoc re-repellendi modo, dicebat Præſules aliquando uſos eſſe, ut probarent ſpiritum & conſtantiam eorum qui res novas magnaſque proponerent. Ego vero inquam, ut hæc ita ſe habeant, Vos hactenus publicum munus exercere non tentaſſe, & intra privatos parietes, ſumma modeſtia vos continuiſſe. Tum ille, longiori ambitu verborum, ſic de vobis differint, ut ex veſtris verbis Sereniſſimum Poloniæ Regem, ad invictiſſimum Cæſarem, & ad Illuſtriſſimum Legatum Hiſpanicum, jam conſtare diceret, vos aliquid amplius quam privatum moliri: Ac Summo Pontifici, ſedenti in ſpecula ſuper totam Chriſtianam Rempublicam potuiſſe merito ſuſpectas eſſe veſtras perſonas, hoc modo Principum animos, & interiores aularum receſſus ſcrutantes: Idque ratione veſtræ Regnæ, infenſiſſimæ Apoſtolicæ, ſedi, & cum ipſo Turca conſpirantis, necnon ſpiritus familiares habentis ac præterea ratione veſtræ ſummæ peritiæ, in artibus & ſcientiis reconditis, quibus facile plebi & imperitis imponi poteſt. Cum enim ſitis magni Aſtrologi, dicebat ille, & facile vobis ſit habere geneſes principum, necnon Magicas artes calleatis, haud difficulter poſſetior bonorum Angelorum nomine, ea proponere, quæ a ſpiritu Eccleſiæ hoſte manarent. Ideo Summum Pontificem, (cui duo, illi Principes ſunt maxime obſervandi, utpote qui inter Hæreticos vivant & regnent) prudenter feciſſe, qui juſſerit, ut in veſtros mores & doctrinam inquireretur. Accidiſſe autem præter ejus poſtulatam & voluntatem, ut, indicta cauſa, expelleremini. Se vero vicem noſtram dolere, & paratum eſſe ad curandum, ut vos juſtificare poſſitis, idque ſibi eſſe in votis, non ſemel aſſerint Quapropter hortatus eſt me, ut ad Illuſtriſſimum Dominum Roſenbergium contenderem, atque ipſius bonam propenſionem, erga vos, ei ſignificarem; Nam ille a Summo Pontifice facile impetrabit, ut cauſa veſtra hic cognoſcatur, & ſi ille vobis faverit, ut hactenus fecit, ſe quoque adfuturum vobis omnibus officiis, ac primum fore, qui ſe veſtris genibus obvolvat ſi tales eritis, quales vos nonnulli prædicant. Ego igitur recta ad Illuſtriſ. D. Roſenbergium. Sed quater redeundum mihi fuit, antequam admitterer. Die 27 tandem admiſſis, expoſui meum ſtudium, erga vos reſque veſtras, ac quomodo Illuſt. D. Nuncius affectus ergavos eſſet, ac tandem oravi utnon deſereret patrocinium & defenſionem illam, quam ſuſcepiſſet peregrinorum pientiſſimorum, qui a Cæſare minus bene informato ad Cæſarem melius informatum, provocarent, ac ſuam innocentiam, Dei & hominibus, probatam cuperent. Ille humaniter reſpondit: Vos non admodum ſibi notos eſſe: ſe bis cum ſeniore; ſemel tantum cum juniore collocutum, judicaſſe vos doctos & pios, & præclaris donis inſtructos: exiſtimare vobis hoc accidiſſe mala aliqua relatione cui incommodo a res principum ſunt obnoxiæ: veſtrum eſſe id æquo animo ferre: non ſe pœnitere quod vobis faverit, & ſi ſcirit quid potiſſimum, a ſe, peteretis, daturum operam, ut veſtris votis reſponderetur. Tunc mihi viſum eſt nonnulla dicere de optima ſpe, quam de ipſo concepiſſetis, piſſetis, & quomodo me non dimiſeratis ſine literis ad illum: Sed erant incluſæ faſciculo D. Joan. Carpionis, quem ſtatim protuli, atque eo inſtante ac reſpondente D. Carpionem non ægre laturum ſi ipſi dediſſem, tradidi faſciculum ei, qui dixit ſe per otium lecturum, ac, ſequenti die, mihi reſponſurum. Diſcedo igitur ab illo ad Illuſt. D. Nuncium, atque otium nactus, tum per me, tum per Illuſt. Legatum Florentinum, pluribus cum eo agere inſtituo, de inſigni injuria vobis facta: expono quantopore laboraveritis, ut conſidere poſſetis, apud Catholica Templa, & quam inhumaniter, in hoſpitiis & civitatibus ratione hujus præjudicii Cæſarei, tractaremini, doceo quam ſordido & anguſto loco veſtras familias reliqueritas, ita ut veſtram ſupellectilem, & libros explicare nequi veritis; Moneo, ut Domini Dee jam grandis natu, aut potius ſenis, & nihil tale hactenus paſſi vicem doleat; ejus erumnas non tanquam ſimplicis hominis conſiderandas eſſe, cum vir ſexagenarius, quatuor tenellis ſuaviſſimiſque liberis (quorum major ſeptimum annum vix exceſſerit) ac dilectiſſimæ conjugi adjunctis, longe gravius affligatur, ratione uxoris ſuæ lectiſſimæ fœminæ, & pignorum chariſſimorum, quam ſui ipſius; oſtendo quanto offendiculo hoc futurum ſit Catholicis Anglis, ac cæteris, & quanta anſa præbeatur hæreticis, invehendi in Eccleſiaſticum ordinem: declaro periculum imminens ordini illi, ſi forte Deus facultatibus veſtris ad eos plectendos eorum inimicos armari permitteret: Demonſtro Deum alias, per Iſaelitas hæreticos Catholicos Judæos punire conſueviſſe: ac denique declaro, quam abſurdum ſit vos indicta cauſſa condemnari, ſi id meriti ſitis: quanto abſurdius, ſi non meriti ſitis quicqnam tale: abſurdiſſimum vero, cum a Catholica Eccleſia honor potius vobis deberetur: Ac cum non petatis niſi ut vobis vos purgare liceat, nihil magis conſentaneum rationi excogitari, nullo alio modo errorem admiſſum emendari, atque hoc negotium bene dirigi & redintegrari poſſe. Ille mihi legit veſtras literas, id eſt D. Dee, ſed de rebus, ambobus vobis, aliquo modo, communibus: dicit ſe non credere ea, quæ de divinis monitis & miraculis, in illis, continentur, petit ut ipſe declarem obſcuriorem locum de libris combuſtis: audit a me teſtimonium oculatum de illis concrematis, & quomodo vobis audiverim eos eſſe cœlitus reſtitutos, ac denique concludit in illis literis eſſe multa laudabilia, multa admirabilia, multa itidem incredibilia; ſed cum non ſint Deo impoſſibilia, ſe ſuſtinere aſſenſum, nec velle quicquam certi, re non penitus explorata, pronunciare: vobis tamen reſponſurum humaniter, ac daturum mihi literas, quod fecit poſtea die 28, quas literas ad vos, cum hiſce, mitto. Et quia legendi eas mihi fecit copiam, ſatis jejunias & frigidas mihi eſſe viſus, haud diſſimulo Tamen quia mentionem aliquam mei facit, tanquam hominis cum quo fuſius de ſuo animo, erga vos, egerit, viſum eſt mihi accurate & particulatim exponere, quid inter nos actum dictumve ſit, ut verba cum factis conferre poſſitis, & pro veſtra prudentia & pietate, conſilium capere, & ſi operæ precium videbitur reſcribere. Quantum enim ex ejus ſermonibus colligo, videtur ipſi neceſſarium novum mandatum, a ſummo Pontifice, antequam quicquam vobiſcum agat; nec ſe ſcripturum dicit de vobis Romam, niſi prius petatis quod ab ejus ſanctitate capitis : utpote qui, in hac cauſa, fuerit merus interpres, inter Pontificem & Cæſarem; nec poſſit, niſi verbis ſui Domini quicquam promittere & ſtatuere. Idcirco, quantum videre poſſum, res diutius protrahetur quam vellemus, niſi Dominus noſter & Pontifex cœleſtis, alio modo, nobis providerit. Die 28 & 29 inveni Illuſt. D. Roſenbergium tam occupatum, ut admitti non potuerim, ſed per cubicularium ſignificavit, ſe valde cupere ut colloqueremur, itaque redirem die 30. Interim fui rurſus cum Illuſtriſſimo D. Nuncio, mox diſceſſuro ad Sancti Caroli Monaſterium, ubi commorabitur quamdiu hi eſtus ſævient. Et cum commodo cecidiſſet, in colloquendo, viſum eſt, mihi interrogare hominem, an probaret meam ſententiam de diſcernendo ex certis notis & terminis verum verbum Dei a ficto & fucato, cum poſſit angelus malus tranſformare ſe in angelum lucis & Apoſtata falſi, non raro, ſe transfigurent in Apoſtolos Chriſti. Dicebam enim duo mihi videri neceſſaria, ut hoc judicium rite fiat, primum quidem, in homine audiente, bona propenſio & animus bene affectus ad Creatorem, totuſque ex ei ita pendens, ut nihil antiquius habeat quam ei placere, & qui de ejus benignitate atque veritate non dubitet erga eos, qui ad ipſum confugiunt, ut bonum ſpiritum hauriant. Deinde in ſermone, nomine Dei propoſito, requiri eas proprietates, quæ tantum authorem deceant; quas graphice deſcribit Paulus, cum dicit, Vivus eſt enim

Heb. 4. 12, 13. ſermo Dei & efficax, & penetrabilior omni gladio ancipiti, & pertingens uſque ad diviſionem animæ ac ſpiritus, compagum quoque ac medullarum, & diſcretor cogitationum & intentionum cordis, & non eſt ulla creatura inviſibilis in conſpectu ejus. Cui adſtipulatus Deus, Jer. 23, 28, 29. qui apud Jeremiam dicit; Propheta qui ſomnium habet, ſomnium narret, et qui verba mea habet, verba mea narret. Quid paleis cum tritico? dicit Dominus. Nunquid non verba mea ſunt quaſi ignis? dicit Dominus, quaſi malleus conterens petram? Concludebam igitur, hominem Deo fidentem, ex efficacitate & ardore illo, quo affici ſe percipit, deprehendere ſermonis Dei veritatem. Nam vox lupi & alieni paſtoris non poteſt permovere veram ovem, ut ipſum diu ſequatur, & hanc eſſe regulam, qua judicarem divinas ſententias a non divinis, diſtingui poſſe : Ille probabit meam ſententiam, atque addidit, ſine bono ſtudio auditorum, non apparere efficacitatem divinorum ſermonum, ut conſtat ex Chriſti hiſtoria. Dum enim ſimplices Iſraelite, dicebant; Nunquid ſic loquutus eſt homo, & ſimilia de Chriſti doctrina, Phariſæi & perverſi Sacerdotes eum deridebant & contemnebant. Tunc ego, ſi contingeret igitur, ut cum congrediemur, fieret ad te verbum Domini, mini, num hujuſcemodi regula utereris. Hic ille inquit, cum poſſet accidere, ut mihi de hac re judicandum eſſet, nolo hoc tempore, meam ſententiam declarare, ſed hujuſcemodi ratio non mihi mala videtur. Ex quibus verbis neſcio quid mihi viſus ſum adorari minus candidum, quam in re tanta, opus eſſet. Sed Dei eſto judicium de ejus interiori ſenſu. Ego, bona fide, colloquia noſtra expoſui, ut vobis uſui eſſe poſſint, ratus hoc vobis gratum, ſicut foret mihi ſi veſtro loco eſſem. Reverſus die 30, ad Illuſt. D. Reſenbergium vidi eum tandem exeuntem, ex cubiculo, ad quoſdam nobiles, et dixit ſe tantopere diſtrictum eſſe, ut mecum colloqui non poſſet. Sicut cuperet. Ego vero, inquam me S. Celſitudinis monitu, toties reverſum expectare ejus reſponſum, et an vobis reſcribere vellet. Tunc ille inquit prius tecum colloquendum eſt mihi, itaque, (ut ejus verbis utar) habeas patientiam, aliquot dies donec ego pro te mittam, et ſic me dimiſit. Docui igitur Venceſlaum cubicularium noſtras ædes, qui dixit ſe optime callere locum, ac, ſuo tempore, memorem fore mei, cum Dominus me accerſet. Expectans igitur aut reſponſum Illuſtriſſimi D. Roſenbergii, aut aliquid aliud dignum veſtris auribus, non viſum eſt mihi id vos expreſſum nuncium mittere: Monente præſertim Domino Sevembergio, vobis eſſe paratis neſcio quas ædes in oppido Naitu, in Comitatu Suarreburgenſi, & ut expectarem reditum Domini Carpionis, quem propediem reverſurum ſperabat, ne ſine magna cauſa atque incertus de loco veſtræ ſedis, ad vos literas dirigerem. Igitur non parum ſolicitus de vobis & de reditu D. Carponis, ſemel ad minimum in die, ejus ædes adeo, atque interrogo ſi quid de illo ſignificetur, nec quicquam, per multos dies audio. Tandem de die 12 Auguſti ſciſitor D. Millerum an aliquid mihi de amico, dicere poſſit. Reſpondet ſe quoque expectare hominem, atque admodum mirari tam diuturnam moram, præſertim cum D. Gregorius, qui in ipſo Carpione ad vos venerat, ſit triduo ante reverſus. Ego igitur, qui nihil prius de D. Gregorii aut itinere aut reditu noveram, ad illum recta contendo. Gallus ejus contubernalis humaniter me admittit, jubet expectare D. Doctorem, et ad illum accerſendum currit. Sed cum diutius moraretur, ego jam diſceſſurus, video D. Gregorium ſeorſum cum ipſo colloquentem, et me torvo vultu intuentum. Saluto illum & gratulor reditum, ac demum de vobis incorrogo. Ille reſpondet ſe nihil quicquam de vobis aut rebus veſtris ſcire, nec vobiſcum fuiſſe. Tunc ego aliquantulum hæreo, ac tandem dico, ſi nolit quicquam dicere me æquo animo laturum, ſed jam mihi conſtare eum vobiſcum fuiſſe: Ille ſtomachatur veſtrum nomen, ac totius mundi fallacias & impoſturas: dicit ſua ſibi eſſe curæ, non veſtra vos multa quidem promittere, ſed parum præſtare, neſcire ſe quare conqueramini: ſe per ſeſqui annum, vana ſpe lactatum, vobis ad hæſiſſe, ut aliquod e minoribus veſtris arcanis diſceret, nec quicquam alicujus momenti percepiſſe.

Hic ego: an parvum tibi videtur arcanum illud contra luem veneream? Ille vero, subridens, a D. Sconto, inquit, longe præstantiorem habeo. Denique, his omissis, librum meum Postellæ repeto: ille negat se habuisse interrogata quo audiverim; ac me laudante D. Dee, ille rursus negat se vidisse; nisi forte, inquit, ex manibus D. Sevenbergii, vis dicere librum nescio quem sine titulo: ac denique de restituendo nullam spem facit. Ego qui cum illo verba commutare nollem, abeo: ac puerum vestrum Stanislaum, in atrio offendo, & ab illo intelligo, vos Erfordiam usque cum D. Gregorio & D. Carpione venisse, ante octiduum. D. Carpionem illinc Bambergam ad exigendas nescio quas pecunias, profectum; se cum D. Gregorio, hoc venisse. Interrogo an literas aut aliquod verbulum, a vobis, ad me, ferret; respondet, nihil prorsus, quia forte putabant, inquit, te hic non esse: se post triduum aut quatriduum ad vos reversurum. Laudo ejus consilium, & constantiam in serviendis Dominis, ac docco meas ædes, ne sine meis literis ad vos veniat: promittit se non discessurum, me insalutato D. Gregorius interim percipit, me cum eo colloqui, atque iratus (quantum ex voce clamantis judicare possum) puerum revocat. Ego, cogitabundus, discedo. Die quinto decimo hujus mensis, tandem nactus servulum vestrum Stanislaum, in loco libero, eum accuratius de vestris rebus ac statu examino, atque non sine magna animi mei voluptate, audio vobis concessas esse ampliores ædes. Illust. D. Langravium præstantissimo D. Dee multum tribuere ut favere, & summo Deo pro tanto munere magnas gratias ago, atque puerum ad meum cubiculum duco ostendoque illi literas ad vos paratas, ne sine ipsis ad vos revertatur. Sed paulo postea pater Carpionis me monet, se velle ante noctem, ad vos unicum expressum mittere & ut scribam si velim: nam se a D. Kelleo monitum hoc mihi significare: ingentes gratias ago D. Kelleo qui mei non sit omnino oblitus, & hæc, per hunc quem vobis spero fidem nuncium, significare statuo, scripturus rursus per Stanislaum, si operæ pretium videbitur.

Oro vos atque obtestor per Deum illum vivum, qui Autor est nostræ amicitiæ, & qui diserte præcepit ut nos invicem ac mutuo amemus, ne obliviscamini mei cum datur vobis occasio invigendi me per literas aut per inter nuncios, & reddendi me certiorem de statu vestrarum nostrorumque rerum; nam ego certe vestri non obliviscar, & officia mea id testibuntur, non solum coram Deo, sed etiam coram omnibus hominibus. Si vester reditus aliquandiu differetur, invisam vos proximo mense Septembri, longe enim a vobis vix vivere possum, immo si proprie loquendum sit, me vitæ tædet: Ac præsens agam de nonnullis rebus quas scribere minime decet.

+ A

Sir, My hearty commendations unto you desiring your health as my own, my Lord was exceeding glad of your Letters, and said now I see he loveth me, and truly as far as I perceive he loveth us heartily. This Sunday in the Name of the Blessed Trinity I begin my Journey, wherein I commend me unto your prayers, desiring the Almighty to send his fortitude with me. I commend me unto Mrs. Dee a thousand times, and unto your little babes: wishing my self rather amongst you, then elsewhere, I will by Gods grace about twenty dayes hence return, in the mean season all comfort and joy be amongst you;

Your assured and immoveable friend.

To the Right Worshipful, and his assured friend Mr. John Dee Esquire, give these.

Magnifico Domino, Domino Dee.

Received of Lodovick in the High-way by Platz, in the middle way between New-house and Trebon, as I was comming from New-house, whither I went to have met my Lord as he came from Vienna: But Arch-duke Erneste was occasion (as was thought) that they should go to Prage by Triegle, being the more even, although not the next way: I received them on Friday the 6 of February, and they were delivered him at Prage on Sunday was a seven-night before, being the 25 of January, novo stilo.

Swethart I commend me unto you, hoping in God that you are in good health, as I and my children, with all my Houshold am here, I praise God for it; I have none other matter to write unto you at this time.

I being at New-house from Trebone, (to go to understand which way my Lord Rosenberg would go from Vien to Prage and when,) and this Letter being in the same day brought from Prage, my wife sent Lodovick with it, toward me, and so without Platz Town in the High-way he gave it me.

△ I had set up Mensam fœderis, with the appurtenances, and had set the Angelical Stone in the frame of Gold on the Table, onely E. K. and I being in the goodly little Chappel next my Chamber, appointed to our uses.

A voice ..... Let him come, that is to come.

△ I went for the Lord Rosenberg, whom I found in his Oratory of the Church hearing of Masse: And he came with me and sat in his place.

E. K. I see a great plain like unto a field, as though it were a Mile over, in the end of it there is a great high rotten Tree, all the grasse is as though it were withered and burned, there commeth a beam as of fire from Heaven, and lighteth upon the Tree, now there commeth water out of the root of the Tree, as though it were a Sea, and spreadeth all the plain over: And the Tree openeth and there commeth a Man out of it, his hair hangeth down unto his girdle stead, his garment covereth him down from his shoulders, and hangeth behind him down upon the water. Visio.

The earth hath now drunk up all the water, and the Man standeth upon the dry ground.

All the place is full of green grasse about a cubit high.

Now the Man is out of sight.

It seemed to be as beyond and without the Stone.

The Vision is clean dis-appeared.

△ I expounded this Vision in Latin to the Lord Rosenberg.

E. K. In the middest of the Stone seemeth to stand a little round thing like a spark of fire, and it increaseth, and seemeth to be as bigge as a Globe of 20 inches Diameter, or thereabout.

Vox ..... Wo be unto the World, wo be unto the World, and Worldlings: Wo be unto you Sonnes of men, for you are withered, and behold the field of the Lord bringeth you not forth: you are defiled, and being defiled, you defile also the beauty of your Seat: And behold, behold, behold, (I say,) you that are the King and Princes of the Earth tyed and knit together upon one stemme, you are all rotten and barren, behold, you bring forth no fruit: but even as the grasse that withereth, he is a dis-glory to the place, even so, are you that is grasse, of your situation and dwelling, for behold, you have no leaves, much lesse fruit: Wo, wo, wo, unto such a generation, which lacketh moisture, and the fire of comfort: The stemme that carrieth you is the Seat and holy place, which also is contaminated. And lo, behold, (as it were) withered; if holinesse be hidden whereupon you stand, how wicked are those that are governed by you, how wicked are you, and how abominable Locus sanctus contaminatus.

ble: how full of corruption are you that ſtand without all beauty, moiſture, or comfort: The time ſhall come that the power and might of God which here ſpeaketh amongſt you, in the fire and ſpirit of his holy truth ſhall come down from above, from Heaven, from the Seat of comfort, from the everlaſting Throne, and ſhall fall down, not into you, nor amongſt you (for you ſhall be rooted out,) but into the ſtemme and into the root which is the holy place, and the houſe of comfort: And behold, the power of God, (of him that ſpeaketh) ſhall be mighty, ſtrong, and of infinite power: So that like a Woman with Child, ſhe ſhall bring forth in the Church of God, a man, clothed with a white garment: which is JUSTICE unſpotted, which may walk with infinite power (and in the Garment of holineſſe and beauty,) upon the abundance of graces, and the waters of comfort, which ſhall flow out of the holy Seat.

And behold, ô you Sonnes of men, you ſhall be full of underſtanding, and of the ſpirit of Wiſdome, and the grace of God, (of him that ſpeaketh with you) ſhall be plentiful and ſtrong amongſt you: So that you ſhall ſpring, and beautifie the Earth and the Houſe of Chriſt: And behold, the higher boughes, and mighty branches ſhall loſe their vertue, and be caſt down, becauſe they have placed themſelves upon the outward rotten Stock, to the diſhonour of him that hath called them: and there ſhall no more ſtrength or vertue be amongſt you: but you ſhall be ſubject to vanity, and be controuled with an iron rod, by him that came out, and walked on the waters: Then ſhall be peace and reſt: Then ſhall Hieruſalem deſcend.

Quando Hieruſalem deſcendet.

E. K. Now is all diſ-appeared away out of ſight.

△ I read the former parcel in Latine to the Lord Roſenberg.

William Roſenberg.

Let him mitigate therefore the fragility of humane reaſon, and give me a dwelling place by faith: for I will this day make a Covenant with him, ſo that my Name and Spirit ſhall not depart from his Houſe.

Roſenberg ſhall fall.

And what I have promiſed him I am, and I will bring to paſſe: what is he, or who is he that laugheth me to ſcorn, that (if he repent not) receiveth not his reward?

And moreover, I will appear to him hereafter, and he ſhall be partaker of the cœleſtial myſtery, if my Name be exalted in him.

And behold, he ſhall often fall, but he ſhall riſe again, and ſhall perſevere unto the end.

E. K. It is diſ-appeared.

K. K. There appeareth a little white cloud, like the end of a cloud, with a dark image of a face of three in one: ſometimes appearing three, ſometimes one.

The end of the white cloud doth wave up and down before the face.

Two Winds in this Kingdom. Of the firſt, Vide An. 1587 Actione Rehenſceinenſi. Mart. 16.

Vox ex latere lapidis ..... Theſe four Moneths, let William (for aſmuch as in him lyeth) abſtain from Prage, for he ſhall deceive thoſe that are deceivers.

Two winds ſhall ariſe from the Earth within theſe next yeares in this Kingdom: In the firſt let him ſit ſtill: In the ſecond let him arm himſelf; and reſiſt with Victory.

E. K.

E. K. There appeareth a Wood, a great Wood on the left hand by a River: There be two like Hawks, whereof one is white, and the other is black: The one is on a bough in the water, that is the black, the other on a withered bough on the land.

A great Bear commeth out of the Wood. ut ſus primus.

Now he runneth toward them, he catcheth the black one in the water, and ſwalloweth him, and ſtandeth up upon his hinder legs. Now he goeth to the other, and ſhaketh him in his mouth, and ſtandeth up on his hinder legs: and hath pulled off both his Wings, he returneth into the Wood again, the body of the white lyeth on the ground. Now he turneth his feet up.

Now he ſtandeth on his legs again.

He followeth the Bear the ſame way he went, he would lift up himſelf as if he would fly, but he cannot.

All this Wood, Bear, and two Fowles are vaniſhed.

E. K. Below ſtandeth a great Caſtle, at the foot of the Hill on which that Wood did ſtand, down in a valley from the Hill goeth a great high Bridge of Stone long (in ſight) about ten Engliſh miles long.

Beſide the entrance, on the right hand of that Caſtle, is like a Dial, with motions cœleſtial in it, of Sunne and Moon.

Now commeth a Bear, (black as the other) a very great monſtrous Bear. The Bridge quaketh under him as he paſſeth it toward the Caſtle he roareth, lookingtoward the Caſtle. He ſteppeth up to the Dial, and taketh the Moon out of it, and teareth it all in pieces with his teeth. The Caſtle falleth, and the bridge where he ſtandeth is broken. The Caſtle is all in ruine. ut ſus ſecundus.

The Bear ſtandeth upon the edge of the bridg, and beholdeth the ruine of the Caſtle down into a pit as it were.

Now he goeth back and the bridg falleth down after him.

Now the Wood appeareth again, and he goeth into the Wood.

Now that Viſion is all vaniſhed away.

Vox ..... You ſhall ſhortly ſee, againſt what ſtone Pucci hath ſpurned.
My Peace and bleſſing be upon you.

E. K. Now all is gone away.

Vox..... Happy is he, whoſe minde thirſteth after the knowledge of ſuch things as are ſpiritual, and celeſtial, of ſuch things as are in the everlaſting place and glory of him that is, and was, and ſhall be for ever: for unto him belongeth reſt in the harveſt of the Higheſt, and comfort in the midſt of many worldly ſorrows. For unto him, thus ſaith the Lord, the Lord of Reſt, Thou haſt rendred my blood again, with comfort unto me, and haſt made a blood of eternal reſt unto thy ſelf for ever. Aſcend therefore and dwell with me, and receive eternal comfort: for unto ſuch belongeth the Kingdom of my Father; for I am * Zebaoth unto all ſuch as truſt in me. But behold, the earth bringeth not forth my mighty praiſe, becauſe of the wickedneſs that aboundeth in all mankinde: Neither have I many ſuch children amongſt the ſons of men as I have ſpoken of before; for why? The Giants of this world are a ſtumbling block unto the poor people, and unto their ſubjects: for lo, behold, behold! (I ſay) vile and baſe things (for that they are miſuſed) are become gods within their houſes: ſo that, Gold and Silver, precious Stones, and ſoft Apparel, which were wont to be brought out of their *houſes to garniſh mine withall, are become their gods, and the Idols of their deſtruction: for, who is he that exalteth not himſelf in his riches, and deſpiſeth me that was the Author of them? Where is he that loveth not his wife and children, pomp and worldly glory, more than the ſetting in order of my little flock, or the preferment of my glory? △. Be merciful unto us, O God of Mercies.

..... O wretched and miſerable mankind, look, look in and upon thy ſelf. Haſt thou made thy ſelf? or when thou art afflicted, canſt thou remove thine own affliction? Haſt thou any thing of thy own, which my Father hath not given thee, through me, in one provident and eternal will? Canſt thou hide thy ſelf where I cannot ſee thee? or canſt thou do that which lieth hid from me? Look again upon thy ſelf, and conſider what parents, and root thou hadſt thy beginning in Nature: behold, they and their fathers are become the duſt of the earth; even ſo ſhalt thou do. And even as of them is a ſtraight account of life required, even ſo ſhall it be of thee: for, I that made thee, and gave thee breath, made thee partaker and uſer of my creatures, led thee in and out, gave thee the Sun to ſhine upon thee, and the Moon as the mother of your radical moiſture. I that lifted thee up, either to the honour of a King, or Magiſtrate, and made thee a governour over thy brethren, will at laſt take a ſtraight account of thee, how thou haſt uſed thy ſelf towards me, and where thou haſt advanced my Name in ſuch things as I have lent thee: And be right ſure, that thou ſhalt pay, even the uttermoſt farthing. Woe be unto thee, if thou make not a juſt account; miſerable ſhalt thou be for ever, if thy deſerts condemn thee. Therefore while thou haſt time and ſpace, look, look up unto me; for I am the Well of comfort, and the God of peace; the true reward of righteouſneſs to all ſuch as faithfully love and truſt me.

Magna Pauſa.

William the ſon of Urſine, the Lord talketh with thee this day, ſaying, Wilt thou that I buy a Kingdom for thee with gold or ſilver? Wilt thou that the Kings and Princes of the earth ſhall laugh the Almighty God of the heaven and earth to ſcorn?

Have I at any time preferred (ſuch as truſt in me) to the government of my people, by giving them the excrements of the earth?

Look down upon my ſervant Abraham.

Look down upon his children.

Call to remembrance my ſervant David.

Set Solomon before thy eyes.

The Kings and Princes of Judah and of Jeruſalem.

Conſider with thy ſelf the Calling of the twelve: The government and ſtate of ſuch as have been Princes amongſt the flock Chriſtian.

Have they been hired or promoted? Have they been lifted up by me with gold or ſilver, or ſuch like trumpery, the Monſters of the earth? In neceſſity, to pay Tribute the fiſh miniſtred, wherewithall Tribute might be paid according to cuſtom.

In the calling of Abraham, multiplication of ſeed was promiſed; which was to be a multitude in people, mighty and great upon the face of the earth.

David was brought in (the leaſt of his brethren) even to be King of Iſrael, not by the multitude of precious ſtones, gold or ſilver. A Sling he had, a Satchel with a few ſtones.

Solomon was commanded to build me a Temple, without any ſum or ſtint. The Apoſtles went from place to place, intending to teach; neither carried they gold or ſilver, but onely a ſcrip or bag prepared for their common victuals and nouriſhment.

Many Princes and Kings have publiſhed my Name, without any promiſe made unto them from heaven.

Notwithſtanding, unto Abraham I have plenty, as his neceſſities required: and unto his children, as I had limited.

Unto David, being King, riches followed his State: and unto his ſon Solomon, plenty both at home and abroad, to build my Temple.

Unto the Apoſtles I gave (in the time of the calling of my people) the ſpirit of underſtanding, whereby they underſtood and had power to teach: And unto ſuch as ſtretched out their hands for my name, I have abundantly given; and it hath been faithfully, and for the love of me taken in hand.

Believe therefore with Abraham, and with his children.

Bring thy ſling and bag before the people of the Lord againſt Goliah.

Endeavor thy ſelf with Solomon, to build a Common-wealth, wherein I will be exalted, as the ſervant of the Son of God, and as his follower.

Go forward, as thy own power and ability ſhall ſerve thee: For thus ſaith the Lord of Hoſts:

Thou haſt nothing but what thou haſt received of me: neither thou, neither thy father.

Provide therefore, of that thou haſt, which is mine: that is to ſay, of that which thy power can extend unto, in thine own faculty and riches, to ſhew thy good will and ready endeavours in ſuch things to be brought to paſs, as thou haſt learned of me: That is to ſay, Neglect not the time of this thy viſitation, neither deſpiſe this Kingdom wherein thou ſhalt reign, for in ſo doing I dwell with thee for ever, and with thy poſterity which ſhall be (in me) mighty. When thou art entred into it, whatſoever Treaſure there is in my houſe, or amongſt you, Take it, uſe it.

The uſe of the Powder.

Make thee a ſword of it with two edges, that with the one thou maiſt cut off the baſtards head, and with the other build up the Monuments and the houſes of cleanlineſs, godlineſs, and underſtanding: That the Eaſt again may flouriſh, and that I may make one Floc, from the Sun-riſing to his going down.

Unum ovile. The ounce & the half wch W.R. hath is to be multiplied.

In the mean ſeaſon, ſhall the Powder which thou haſt to be multiplied, be extended, and multiplied with them that are here preſent, that it may be apt for thy uſes, and the ſtrengthning of thy faith.

The one half of it thou ſhalt keep, as the perpetual remembrance of me, even thou and thy poſterity.

Caeſari reddenda quae ſunt Caeſaris. The L. Sobcovitz the Land-Hoſtmaſter.

Unto him that is thy head, do thy true obedience: although his heart be hardned againſt thee, and thirſteth after thy deſtruction.

Arth. Now in the place of thoſe ſquare marks, I ſee two Lions, the one very exactly, and gaping. About the upper brim of the Stone they appear: and the Lions feet be waxen greater and greater.

I ſee another man from the breaſt upward. I can ſee no hair on his head.

I ſee a great company of feet, and their garments skirts ſomewhat above their ankles: and they are like womens kirtles with gards about them.

I ſee another man without a doublet, in his ſhirt, and with a white Cloke about him, hanging his hands down by his ſides.

△. Nothing elſe eſteemed or judged to be ſhewn in the Stone, by the Childe, we ceaſed that Exerciſe, and committed all to Gods mercies.

△. On Thurſday and Friday, I determined each of them two dayes that the Childe ſhall thrice in the day be put to the Exerciſe, and each time repeat the Prayer preſcribed thrice. Aprilis 16.

I ſee two men with Crowns of gold upon their heads: their apparel is black and white. I cannot ſee their feet. Their faces are white, their eyes are black like ſpots of ink.

There appear now two other, without Crowns: of the which one ſtandeth whole before, and of the other I ſee nothing but the head, which ſtandeth behinde the firſt.

I ſee not any with Crowns now. The apparel of him is white that I ſee.

I ſee no hands of him. I ſee nothing now.

The ſquares and pricks appear again as yeſterday.

And I doubted it was ſomething of the Glaſs it ſelf: as there were in it certain white ſpots.

An hour we were at the practiſe.

△. The ſecond Exerciſe before Dinner. After the Prayer thrice ſaid, &c. II.

Arth. I ſee the firſt ſquare lines and pricks, white and black: the pricks for the moſt part be all white, but ſome are black, and the lines all white.

I ſaw, even now, ſome of thoſe ſquares made Lions: but now there appear none.

The ſquares are now turned alſo into other ſhapes, which I cannot well declare.

Now the Letters be gone, and the ſquares do appear again.

The ſquares are gone, and a word is there.

The letters are clearer then they were: for all the lines and letters do appear white.

There appeareth a B, with a ſquare, with four black pricks in it. It is gone.

Now ſome of the ſquares are come amongſt the letters B D O.

Under the B appeareth a little e thus ə backward.

Now there appeareth a young man with a white doublet, and his arms by his ſide, and a B before him againſt his doublet. He hath a black beard and a white face. I ſee no hair on his head: his beard is a little-----

He is now changed: he hath on his doublet breaſt, on each ſide three black lines.

He is gone, and another is come in his place, with a white leather doub'et, and a grey cloke like Hans of Gloats his cloke. He is gone.

The firſt young man is come again, and hath now on the one ſide of his doublet = on the other ſide, thus :

Now I ſee only two ſtrokes overthwart all the doublet, but he hath no head that I ſee.

Either his head is come again, or elſe another man, that hath two lines and two p icks as he had.

The light of the candle did ſeem to ſhine ſuddenly on his face, and go away again. It did not ſhine on his doublet, but onely on his face and his head.

There is now another man come in, who holdeth up both his hands: the upper part of his ſleeves are white, and the half towards his hands black.

The firſt man is here ſtill. Now he hath no arms, but a B before his doub'et, but no lines, but only on each ſide two pricks in ſtead of the lines, thus : :

Theſe men came amongſt the ſquares ſuddenly before I was aware.

Here appear not ſo many as were here.

Here are now but ſix ſquares, and one man. I ſee no farther of the man but to the waſte of his doublet.

The man appeareth not ſo brim to my ſight as he did, his head is no bigger than the mark in the margent.

III. The third Exerciſe after Dinner.

Arth. Whereas I ſaid before there was ſome of the ſquare figures wanting: Now I finde that they are all here again, as many as they were at my firſt ſeeing.

NOTE.

Δ. UPon this former part of the Third Action General, where my firſt begotten Son (namely Arthur) was aſſigned to the Miniſtry of ſeeing and hearing, in place and ſtead of E.K. if he would utterly refuſe the ſame office (hitherto by him executed, and by him to be executed, until the ſeven actions general finiſhed) And that the ſame Childe and Son, in the mean ſpace (that is to ſay, between the day of the part of Action received, and the end of the ſame: determined to be fourteen dayes after) ſhould be exerciſed before God. I thereupon thinking that E. K. would, ſhould, or beſt could inſtruct and direct the Childe in that exerciſe, did alwayes await, that E.K. would of himſelf call the Boy to that Exerciſe with him; and ſo much the rather, becauſe he ſaid, that he was very glad now that he ſhould have a Witneſs of the things ſhewed and declared by ſpiritual Creatures: And that he would be more willing to do what ſhould be ſo enjoyned to him to do, then if onely he himſelf did ſee, and that for divers cauſes. But when E. K. ſaid to me, that I ſhould exerciſe the Childe and not he, and that he would not, I thereupon appointed with my ſelf to bring the Childe to the place, and to offer him, and preſent him to the ſervice of Seeing and Skrying from God, and by Gods aſſignment, and of the time of fourteen dayes yet remaining, being the 15, 16, 17 dayes of April, and next before the 18 day, (the day aſſigned to end the Action in) to have the Childe exerciſed in them. And thereupon contrived for the Childe this order of Prayer enſuing.

Die Mercurii ſummo mane die Aprilis 15. anno 1587. Trebonæ.

Oratio pro Arthuro qua in exercitiis ſuis uti debet myſticis.

In the Name of God the Father, of God the Son, and of God the Holy Ghoſt. Amen.

Glory be to God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Ghoſt: As it was in the beginning, is now, and ever ſhall be, world without end. Amen.

O Almighty and Everlaſting, the true and living God, have mercy, pity and compaſſion on my father John Dee, and on me Arthur Dee; who being now called hither by thy aſſignment, am now here preſent and ready in all humility, obedience and faithfulneſs, to ſerve thy Divine Majeſty, with all the gifts and graces which thou haſt hitherto endued me with; and with all other which of thy moſt bountiful and fatherly mercy, thou wilt henceforward beſtow upon me. Lighten (therefore) O Almighty God, mine eyes, and open thou mine ears; Quicken, Inſtruct and Confirm in me, and unto me, my diſcretion, judgement, underſtanding, memory, and utterance, that I may be a true and perfect Seer, Hearer, Declarer and Witneſs of ſuch things which either immediately of thy Divine Majeſty, or mediately by the miniſtry of thy holy, mighty, and faithful Angels ſhall be manifeſted, declared or ſhewed unto me, now, and at all times and occaſions, for the advancing of thy Praiſe, Honour and Glory. Amen.

Hereupon, Wedneſday morning, (the 15 of this April) I brought the Childe to the holy Table, being in order of the furniture thereto belonging, and ſet before him the Stone in the frame, (my firſt ſanctified Stone) and cauſed him on his knees, to ſay the foreſaid Prayer. And I alſo praid to the Childs hearing, other Prayers to God for the purpoſe in hand: and at his coming to look and ſee in the Stone, Madimi openeth all her apparel, and her ſelf all naked; and ſheweth her ſhame alſo.

E. K. Fie on thee, Devil avoid hence with this filthineſs, &c.

Mad. In the Name of God, why finde you fault with mee?

Δ. Becauſe your yeſterdayes doings, and words are provocations to ſin, and unmeet for any godly creature to uſe.

Mad. What is ſin?

Δ. To break the Commandement of God.

Mad. Set that down, ſo.

Mad. If the ſelf-ſame God give you a new Commandement taking away the former form of ſin which he limited by the Law; What remaineth then?

Δ. If by the ſelf-ſame God that gave the Law to Moſes, and gave his New Covenant by Chriſt, who ſealed it by his blood; and had his witneſſes very many, and his Apoſtles inſtructed by his holy Spirit, who admoniſhed us of all cleanneſs in words and works, yea and in thoughts, if by the ſame God, hoſe former Laws and Doctrines be abrogated, and that Sufficient proof and teſtimony to be had herein.

ſufficient proof and teſtimony may be had that it is the ſame God : Then muſt the ſame God be obeyed : For only God is the Lord of Lords, King of Kings, and Governour of all things.

E K She kneeleth , and holdeth up her hands.

Mad. The Laws , God, and of his Son Chriſt, ſtabliſhed by the teſtimony of his Diſciples and Congregation , and by the force and power of his holy Spirit , are not in any particular vocation abrogated, but rather confirmed.

Δ. A priviledge granted doth not abrogate a Law, but doth notifie the force of the law in it ſelf otherwiſe.

For oftentimes it falleth out , that God being offended at the wickedneſs of any man, or of ſome man private, ſendeth down his Spirit of Death, infecting and tempting another mans minde ; ſo that he becometh void of Reaſon, and riſeth up againſt him, whom God is offended with, and ſtriketh him, ſo that he dyeth. This, before man, is accounted ſin, before God it ſhall be imputed unto him for righteouſneſs. Even ſo whatſoever the Spirit of God teacheth us from him , though it appear ſin before man, is righteouſneſs before him.

Therefore aſſure your ſelves , that whatſoever is ſeen and heard amongſt you, is from above , and is a ſign and teſtimony even this day before you; for I that touched thy Son, might alſo have taken away his breath.*

* Arthur was ſmitten in a ſwound and E.K. ſaw one in a long white garment make as though he would ſmite him. He was very ſick for the time.

But O, you are of little underſtanding : But behold I teach you.

That unto thoſe that are acccounted righteous (through the good will of God) ſin is juſtly puniſhed, but not as unto the wicked. For whatſoever you have done unto other men, even the ſelf-ſame ſhall light upon you , but happy is he that receiveth not juſtice through the terror of malediction, but through the grace and mercy of God.

Juſtice.

The Apoſtle Paul abounded in carnal luſt : he was alſo offenſive unto his brethren ſo that he deſpaired, and was ready to have left his vocation, untill the Lord did ſay unto him , My mercy and grace ſufficeth thee.

S. Paul lecherous.

Beleeve me, that we are from above.

Good Angels.

Which conſidered : Conſider alſo , That as you cannot comprehend the heavens, ſo likewiſe can you not comprehend the wiſdome of God, which ſaith, I will be merciful unto whom I liſt; and unto whom I will not, I have none in ſtore : Fooliſh is he that asketh why ?

The wiſdom of God, of us n comprehenſible.

And behold I ſay unto you, Stumble not againſt God. Who he is that made you? Who is he that hath given you power to look up towards heaven ? You are fools , and of little underſtanding : This day ſaith God unt you,

Behold you are become free : Do that which moſt pleaſeth you : For behold, your own reaſon riſeth up againſt my wiſdome.

Not content you are to be heires, but you would be Lords, yea Gods, yea the Judgers of the heavens : Wherefore do even as you liſt, but if you forake the way taught you from above, behold evil ſhall enter into your ſenſes, and abomination ſhal dwel before your eyes, as a recompence, unto ſuch as you have done wrong unto : And your wives and children, ſhall be carried away before your face.

Δ. The Almighty God of heaven and earth be my comfort , as I deſire comfort in his ſervice; and give me wiſdome as I deſire it for his honour and glory, Amen.

The Chriſtaline pillar

E.K. I ſee a white pillar; and upon the pillar, I ſee four heads.

Shee tieth the pillar round about with a liſt.

The four heads are like on two heads, and on two Wolves heads.

Now there cometh a thing like a white Crown of Chriſtal, and ſtandeth upon all our four heads. The heads ſeem to be incloſed by the necks within the pillar.

Now ſhe taketh the pillar and goeth up with it.

Now ſhe bringeth an half Moon down , and written in it as followeth.

Injuſtum nihil quod juſtum eſt Deo.

Now ſhe goeth round about upon a thing like a Carpet ; ſhe goeth now beyond where is an Orchard; ſhe cutteth branches of two trees, and ſhee ſeemeth to inſert them, or graff them into another.

Now ſhe goeth into a black place behinde the wood, and bringeth a thing with her in a chain : An ugly thing like a Devil.

Mad. ..... Behold, ſeeſt thou this : wherewithall thou thoughteſt to overthrow, and moſt infect, thou art utterly overthrown, and ſhalt never return again.

E.K. Now he leapeth, and the ground openeth, and he ſinketh in :

and

and there ſeemeth a ſtink of brimſtone to come to my Noſe from the pit.

Now the grafts are all grown in the tree, as if they were all of one tree.

Now ſhe cometh out of that orchard. Now ſhe goeth round about the orchard, and leaveth a darkneſs like a cloud round about the orchard.

Mad. ..... Viſible to God, but inviſible to man.

E.K. Now ſhe cometh again upon her Carpet.

Behold, if you reſiſt not God, but ſhut out Satan (through unity amongſt you) thus it is ſaid unto you, Aſſemble your ſelves together every ſeventh day, that your eyes may be opened, and that you may underſtand by him that ſhall teach you, what the ſecrets of the holy books (delivered you) are: That you may become full of underſtanding, and in knowledge above common men. Unity. An offer of every 7th day to be taught the ſecrets of the books received.

And in your works go forward, and detract no time, that you may alſo have fruit.

Unto William I will be merciful for ever, according to my promiſe. But I will buy him no Kingdom, after the manner of man, with money. But what I have determined unto him, ſhall happen unto him: And he ſhall become mighty in me. The holy books delivered.

¶ And this Powder which thou haſt brought here, is appointed for a time by God, and cannot be uſed until then, without offence. Happy is he that heareth my words this day: and happy is he that underſtandeth them. Our works to go on.

But if you deny the Wiſdome of the Higheſt, and account us his Meſſengers, Creatures of darkneſs. This day you are made free. The Lord Roſenberg.

And look that you lay up all things that is ſpoken of from above; and whatſoever hath been taught you, (as well the books as inſtruments.) The powder here.

You ſhall ſhortly have to do again with the cruelty of the Emperour, and the accurſed Biſhop. If Omnia reponenda.

Whereunto, if you go forward with God, you ſhall be taught to anſwer. If you leave off, as ſoon as you hear of it be going into Germany, leſt you periſh before then. Caeſar & Papa brevi nos infeſtabunt denno.

I have no more to ſay unto you, but my ſwiftneſs is from above.

E.K. Now ſhe maketh her ſelf ready, &c.

Mad. ..... If my friendſhip like you not, I beſeech God ſend you as good will, as I (in power) bear towards you. If

I have not one word more given me to ſpeak.

E.K. Now ſhe is gone.

△. I was glad that an offer was made of being every ſeventh day to be taught the ſecrets of the books already delivered unto us: Thinking that it was eaſie for us to perform that unity which was required to be amongſt us four; underſtanding all after the Chriſtian and godly ſenſe. But E.K. who had yeſterday ſeen and heard another meaning of this unity required, utterly abhorred to have any dealing with them farther, and did intend to accept at their hands the liberty of leaving off to deal with them any more: which his underſtanding, as it was ſtrange and unpleaſant unto me, ſo I earneſtly requeſted to be reſolved therein in manner as followeth.

At the ſame time and in the ſame place this enſued.

NOTE.

△. Upon Mr. Kelly his great doubt bred unto me of Madimi her words yeſterday, ſpoken to him, that we two had our two wives in ſuch ſort, as we might uſe them in common, it was agreed by us, to move the queſtion, whether the ſenſe were of Carnal uſe (contrary to the law of the Commandment) or of Spiritual love, and charitable care and unity of mindes, for advancing the ſervice of God.

E.K. Upon a Scroll, like the edge of a Carpet, is written,

De utroq; loquor.

△. The one is expreſly againſt the Commandement of God: neither can I by any means conſent to like of that Doctrine. And for my help in that verity, I do call down the power of Almighty God, the Creator of heaven and earth, and all the good Angels, (his faithful Miniſters) to aſſiſt me in the defence of my faithful obedience to the law of the Goſpel, and of his Church.

Aſſiſt me, O Chriſt. Aſſiſt me, O Jeſu. Aſſiſt me, O holy Spirit.

E. K. It appeareth written upon a white Crucifix, as followeth, Mea gratia, major eſt mandato. Gratia enim hæc mea eſt, ut hominibus inſanis concederetur beatitudo: Et que ita dicta ſunt, Vel ſint, vel hodie libertas vobis reſtituitur. Amen dico vobis, quia ſi dicerem homini; Eas, & fatrem Jugula, & non faceret, filius eſt peccati & mortis. Omnia, enim, poſſibilia & licita ſunt ſuperis. Neque magis odioſa ſunt pudenda illis, quam mortalium quorumcumque vultus.

Ita enim fiet ſpurius cum filio (quod magis abſurdum eſt) copulabitur. Et oriens cum occidente, Meridies quoque cum ſeptentrione coadunabuntur.

E. K. Now it is vaniſhed.

Δ. Hereupon we were in great amazement and grief of minde, that ſo hard, and (as it, yet ſeemed unto me) ſo unpure a Doctrine, was popounded and enjoyned unto us of them, whom I alwayes (from the beginning hitherto) did judge and eſteem, undoubtedly, to be good Angels: And had unto E K. offered my ſoul as a pawn, to diſcharge E.K. his crediting of them, as the good and faithful Miniſters of Almighty God. But now, my heart was ſore afflicted upon many cauſes: And E.K. had (as he thought) now, a juſt and ſufficient cauſe, to forſake dealing with them any more. As his prayer to God of a long time hath been (as in the former part of this Action may appear.)

After our going out of the Chappel, and at our being at dinner, when we four (whoſe heads ſo were united, in a pillar ſhewed, as is before ſet down, I found means to make ſome little declaration of our great grief (mine chiefly) now occaſioned, either to try us, or really to be executed, in the common and indifferent uſing of Matrimonial Acts amongſt any couple of us four: Which thing was ſtrange to the women: And they hoped of ſome more comfortable iſſue of the cauſe. And ſo we left off.

After Dinner, as E. K. was alone, there appeared unto him little creatures of a cubit high: and they came to the Still where he had the ſpirit of Wine diſtilling over out of a Retorto: And one of them (whoſe name they expreſſed Ben) ſaid that it was in vain ſo to hope for the beſt ſpirit of the Wine: And ſhewed him how to diſtill it, and ſeparate it better. And moreover how to get oyl of the ſpirit of Wine, as it burned in the lamps: And began to ask E. K. what Country-man he was? And when he had anſwered an Engliſh-man, he asked then, how he came hither? he anſwered by Sea: Then ſaid he, And who helped you to paſs the marvellous great dangers of the Sea. And ſo took occaſion to ſpeak of the benefits which God had hitherto done for us, very many. And this Ben, ſaid than among very many other things (as Mr. E.K. told me on Saturday night after Supper holding on his talk almoſt till two of the clock after midnight) That he it was that delivered him, or gave unto his hands the powder. And alſo he ſaid either than or the next day at the furtheſt, that unleaſt he would be conformable to the will of God in this laſt Action declared, That he would take the vertue and force of the powder from it: That it ſhould be unprofitable: And that he ſhould become a beggar.

Ben was the deliverer of the powder to E.K. at the digging in England, Note, unleaſt conditionally. Q. El. K. Phi.

And of me alſo he ſaid that I did evil to require proof, or teſtimony now, that this laſt Doctrine was from God Almighty, and ſaid that I ſhould be led priſoner to Rome, &c.

He told of England, and ſaid, That about July or November her Majeſty ſhould from heaven be deſtroyed; and that about the ſame time the King of Spain ſhould dye. And that this preſent Pope at his Maſs ſhould be deprived of life before two years to an end. And that another ſhould be Pope, who ſhould be Decimus quintus of his name; And that he would begin to reform things, but that ſhortly he ſhould of the Cardinals be ſtoned to death. And that after that there ſhould be no Pope for ſome years.

England.

Of England he ſaid, That after the death of our dear Queen, One of the houſe of Auſtria made mighty by the King of Spain his death, ſhould invade and conquer the land, &c. He ſaid, One (now abroad) ſhould at Milford-haven enter, and by the help of the Britans ſubdue the ſaid Conqueror: And that one Morgan a Britan ſhould be made King of the Britans, and next him, one Rowland, &c.

Fr. Garland Edw. Garland.

He ſaid alſo, That this Francis Garland was an eſpy upon us from the Lord Treaſurer of England: And that Edward Garland is not his brother: And that ſo the matter is agreed between them, &c.

That my Lord Roſenberg ſhould be in danger of poyſoning for theſe certain months to come.

Enochs Tables.

That my Tables of Enoch, were in ſome places falſly written.

Antichriſt.

Of Antichriſt he ſpake, and of his appearing.

Ely, Enoch. Johannes Evangeliſta

Of Ely and Enoch coming out of Paradiſe: And of Saint John Evangeliſt, that he dyed not, but in Pathmos had his inviſible being: And that he it was, who did give Julianus Apoſtata his deaths wound.

He ſaid alſo that he hath at divers times preached viſibly ſince the time of his inviſible ſtate entred.

He

He confirmed the words of the great Famine and Blood-ſhed that ſhould come ſhortly.

He ſaid that on every ſide of us, people ſhould be ſlain, but that we ſhould (by the Divine protection) eſcape. God our Protector.

He ſaid that ſhortly this Francis Garland ſhould go into England : And that we ſhould be ſent for. But that it were beſt to refuſe their calling us home. F. Garland into Engl. Refuſe calling home.

He ſaid that there were four other, who were made alſo privy of God his myſteries as we were, with whom we ſhould meet at Rome. 4 alii participes horum myſteriorum.

He ſaid that Mary and one more in England, ſhould ſee the wonderful days to come. Madimi appeared to him there alſo. Mary my old Maid.

The ſame Ben went once away mounting up in a flame of fire : and afterward upon occaſion of asking him ſomewhat, he came down ſo again. Ben.

And of the manner how to draw the oyl of the Spirit of wine being burnt, he brought thither the inſtruments of two ſilver diſhes, whelmed one upon another with an hole paſſing through the middle of them both, and with ſponge between them : in which the oyl would remain, &c.

After all theſe, and many other things told me by the ſame Mr. E.K. we departed each to his bed, where I found my wife awake, attending to hear ſome new matter of me from Mr. Kelly his reports of the apparitions, continued with him above four hours, being elſe alone, I then told her, and ſaid, Jane, I ſee that there is no other remedy, but as hath been ſaid of our croſs-matching, ſo it muſt needs be done. About 2 of the clock after midnight. Iane Dee.

Thereupon ſhe fell a weeping and trembling for a quarter of an hour : And I pacified her as well as I could ; and ſo, in the fear of God, and in believing of his Admoniſhment, did perſwade her that ſhe ſhewed her ſelf prettily reſolved to be content for God his ſake and his ſecret Purpoſes, to obey the Admoniſhment.

△. Note, Becauſe I have found ſo much halting and untruth in E. K. his reports to me made, of the ſpiritual Creatures, where I have not been preſent at an Action : and becauſe his memory may fail him, and becauſe he was ſubject to ill tempters, I believe ſo much hereof as ſhall by better trial be found true, or conformable to truth. April 20.

△. Note ..... E.K. had this day divers apparitions unto him in his own Chamber, and inſtructions in divers matters which he regarded not, but remained ſtill in his purpoſe of utterly diſcrediting thoſe Creatures, and not to have any more to do with them. But among divers apparitions he noted this of one that ſaid unto him.

..... Joyn Enoch his Tables.

..... Give every place his running number.

E.K. What mean you by places ?

..... The ſquares. Which done, refer every letter in the Table to his number, and ſo read what I will, for this is the laſt time I will admoniſh you.

E.K. A man ſtandeth in the Air, in a fiery Globe of my heighth, accompanied with ſome hundred of Puppets : on the one ſide of him ſtandeth a woman, and about her are four Clouds all white.

The man upon a white Triangle △ ſhewed theſe Numbers with ſpaces, as you ſee following.

△. I perceive that commonly one is to be abated of the number.

△. Note:

△. Note: When E.K. had ſhewed me this Note, I by and by brought forth my book of Enoch his Tables, and found the four letters r T b d to be the four firſt letters of the four principal ſquares ſtanding about the black Croſs: and that here they were to be placed otherwiſe than as I had ſet them. And in the firſt placing of them together, I remember that I had doubt how to joyn them; for they were given apart each by themſelves.

Secondly, I found out the 4 Characters; ſaving they were inverſe I ſomewhat, and one of them cloſed: wherof I found none like, but very near. Theſe Characters were of every ſquare one.

Thirdly, I did take theſe numbers contained between the lines (ſome more and ſome fewer) to be words to be gathered out of the Table of letters: ſo many words as were diſtinct companies of numbers; it is to wit, 41.

Hereupon we began to number the ſquares wherein the letters ſtood in Enochs Tables as I had them, but we could not exactly finde the words, but ſomewhat near. Hereupon being tired, and deſirous to know the ſenſe of that Cypher, we left off till after ſupper, and then we aſſayed again: but we could not bolt it out, though we knew very near what was to be done by the inſtruction of a ſpiritual Voice, now and then helping us toward the practiſe.

At length E.K. was willed to go down into his Chamber, and I did remain ſtill at our Dineing Table till his return, which was within an hour or ſomewhat more. And at his return this he brought in writing.

..... The black Croſs is right, and needeth no mending. But thus much I do, to let thee underſtand, that thou mayeſt conſider thy ſelf to be a man: And beneath this underſtanding, unleſs thou ſubmit all into the hands of God, for his ſake; who elſe leaving you, all naked, provideth in his creatures to his own glory.

..... Cara tibi uxor, carior tibi ſapientia, chariſſimis tibi ego ſum. Electus tremis, & heſitando peccas: Noli igitur ad genium, & carmen ſapere; ſed obtempera mihi: ductor enim tuus ſum & autor ſpiritus omnium. Hec omnia à me ſunt, & licita vobis.

..... I admoniſh you as the children of God, to conſider your vocation, and the love of God towards you; and not to prefer your reaſon before the wiſdome of the higheſt, whoſe mercy is ſo great towards you, That you are choſen from the number of men to walk with him, and to underſtand his myſteries, and with all to execute his juſtice and praiſe throughout the Nations and people of the earth. Conſider that if he finde you obſtinate, the plagues of haynous ſinners, and contemners of the gifts of God ſhall fall upon you, to your great overthrow: This is the laſt time of your trial. Therefore ſhew your ſelves lovers of him that hath led you, and covered you with a mighty ſhield: Or ſhortly look for the reward of ſuch, as have contemned the Wiſdome and Majeſty of the Higheſt.

I Raphael, counſel you to make a Covenant with the Higheſt, and to eſteem his wings more then your own lives.

△. When E.K. had brought me theſe things, I greatly rejoyced in ſpirit, and was utterly reſolved to obey this new Doctrine to us, peculiarly, of all people of the world enjoyned. And after ſome little diſcourſe and conference hereof, we went to bed, this Aprilis 20. 20. day of April, at night.

Aprilis 21.

△. Thus, am I reſolved, O Almighty God, as concerning the caſe, ſo hard to fleſh and blood, to be reſolved in, thus: And thus I deſire, that we all four, might with one minde and conſent, offer and preſent unto thee, this writing as a Vow, Promiſe, and Covenant, if it ſo pleaſe thy divine majeſty to accept it.

WEE four (whoſe heads appeared under one Chryſtalline Crown, in one pillar united, and incloſed) do moſt humbly and heartily thank thee, O Almighty God (our Creator, Redeemer and Sanctifier) for all thy mercies and benefits hitherto received, in our perſons, and in them that appertain unto us: And at this preſent, do faithfully and ſincerely confeſs, and acknowledge, that thy profound wiſdome in this moſt new and ſtrange doctrine (among Chriſtians) propounded, commended, and enjoyned unto us four only, is above our humane reaſon, and Chriſtian profeſſion to like of: For that in outward ſhew of words, it ſeemeth to us expreſly to be contrary to the purity and chaſtity, which of us, and all Chriſtians, thy followers, is exactly required. Notwithſtanding, we will, herein, captivate, and tread under-foot all our humane timorous doubting of any inconvenience, which ſhall, or may fall upon us, or follow us in this world, or in the world to come, in reſpect or by reaſon of our imbracing of this Doctrine, liſtened unto, of us, as delivered from our true and living God, the Creator of heaven and earth; who only hath the true original power and Authority of ſins releaſing and diſcharging: And whoſe pardoning, and not imputing of ſin unto us, through our lively faith in the moſt worthy merit, and precious blood of the Lamb Immaculate, ſhed for us, is and ſhall be our juſtification and ſalvation. We, therefore (according to bleſſed Raphael his counſel laſt given) moſt humbly and ſincerely require thy Divine Majeſty, to accept this our Covenant with thee (for that, thy merciful promiſes made unto us, may be to us performed; and thy divine purpoſes in us and by us, may be furthered, and advanced and fulfilled.) That, as we acknowledge thy divine wiſdome and grace offered unto us in this thy laſt myſtical Admoniſhment: And doſt moſt earneſtly will us to accept the ſame, as lawful and juſt with thee; Which Admoniſhment ſtandeth upon two parts: That is to wit, upon our true Chriſtian charity ſpiritual between us four, and alſo upon the Matrimonial licence and liberty, indifferently among us four to be uſed: So we the ſame four (which hereunto will ſubſcribe) covenant with thy Divine Majeſty, upon the two principal reſpects before rehearſed, truly and unfainedly to accept and perform henceforward amongſt us four, in word, thought and deed, Chriſtian charity, and perfect friendſhip, and all that belongeth thereto: And as for the Matrimonial-like licence, and liberty,

we accept and allow of it, and promiſe unto thee (O our God) to fulfill the ſame, in ſuch ſort, as the godly are permitted to fulfill, and have been by divers teſtimonies commended for, and by Divine doctrine willed to fulfill, in Matrimonial converſation, whenſoever thy motions and allurements (Matrimonial-like) ſhall draw and perſwade any couple of us. Beſeeching thee, as thou art the onely true Almighty and Everlaſting God, Creator of Heaven and Earth, Thou wilt, in thy infinite mercies, not impute it unto us for ſin, blindneſs, raſhneſs, or preſumption, being not accepted, done, or performed upon carnal luſt, or wanton concupiſcence; But by the way of Abraham-like faith and obedience, unto thee, our God, our Leader, Teacher, Protector and Juſtifier, now and for ever. And hereunto we call the holy Heavens to be witneſſes, for thy honour and glory (O Almighty God) and our diſcharge, now and for ever. Amen.

I Edward Kelly by good and provident (according to the Laws and ordinances of God) determination and conſideration in theſe former Actions, that is to ſay, appearings, ſhews made, and voyces uttered, by the within named in this Book, and the reſt whatſoever Spirits have from the beginning thereof (which at large by the Records appeareth) not only doubted and diſliked their inſinuations and doctrine uttered, but alſo divers and ſundry times (as coveting to eſchew and avoid the danger and inconvenience that might either by them, their ſelves, or the drift of their doctrine enſue, or to my indamagement divers wayes, happen) ſought to depart from the exerciſes thereof: and withal boldly (as the ſervant of the Son of God) inveighed againſt them: urging them to depart, or render better reaſon of their unknown and uncredible words and ſpeeches delivered; and withall often and ſundry times friendly exhorted the Right Worſhipful Maſter JOHN DEE (the chief follower thereof) as alſo in the Records appeareth, to regard his ſouls health, the good proceeding of his wordly credit (which through Europe is great) the better maintenance to come of his wife and children, to beware of them, and withall to give them over: wherein although I friendly and brotherly laboured, my labour ſeemed to be loſt and counſel of him deſpiſed, and withall was urged with replies to the contrary by him made, and promiſes, in that caſe, of the loſs of his ſouls health, if they were not of God: Whereunto upon as it were ſome farther taſte of them, or opinion grounded upon the frailty of zeal, he ceaſed not alſo to pawn unto me his ſoul, &c. which his perſwaſions were the chief and onely cauſe of my this ſo long proceeding with them: And now alſo at this inſtant, and before a few dayes having manifeſt occaſion to think they were the ſervants of Sathan, and the children of darkneſs; becauſe they manifeſtly urged and commanded in the name of God a Doctrine Damnable, and contrary to the Laws of God, his Commandements, and Goſpel by our Saviour Chriſt as a Touchſtone to us left and delivered, did openly unto them diſlike their proceeding, and brotherly admoniſhed the ſaid Worſhipful, and my good friend Mr. JOHN DEE to beware of them: And now having juſt occaſion to determine what they were, to conſider all theſe things before mentioned by me,and wiſely to leave them; and the rather becauſe of themſelves,they (as that by their own words appeareth) upon our not following that Doctrine delivered, gave unto us a Quietus eſt, or paſport of freedome : But the Books being brought forth *, after ſome diſcourſe therein, after a day or two had, and their words peruſed ſpoken heretofore, did as it were (becauſe of the poſſible verity thereof, Deo enim omnia ſunt poſſibilia) gave us cauſe of further deliberation : ſo that thereby, I did partly of my ſelf, and partly by the true meaning of the ſaid Mr. DEE in the receiving of them, as from God ; and after a ſort by the zeal I ſaw him bear unto the true worſhip and glory of God to be (as that was by them, promiſed) by us promoted, deſcend from my ſelf, and condeſcend unto his opinion and determination, giving over all reaſon, or whatſoever for the love of God : But the women diſliked utterly this laſt Doctrine, and conſulting amongſt themſelves gave us this anſwer, the former actions did nothing offend them but much comforted them : and therefore this laſt,not agreeing with the reſt (which they think to be according to the good will and wholeſome Law of God) maketh them to fear, becauſe it expreſly is contrary to the Commandement of God : And thereupon deſiring God not to be offended with their ignorance,required another action for better information herein; in the mean, vowing, faſting, and praying, Mrs. DEE hath covenanted with God to abſtain from the eating of fiſh and fleſh untill his Divine Majeſty ſatisfie their mindes according to his Laws eſtabliſhed, and throughout all Chriſtendome received. To this their requeſt of having an action, I abſolutely anſwer, that my ſimplicity before the Higheſt is ſuch as I truſt will excuſe me : And becauſe the ſumme of this Doctrine, given in his name, doth require obedience which I have (as is before written) offered, I think my ſelf diſcharged : And therefore have no farther cauſe to hazzard my ſelf any more in any action. Wherefore I anſwer that if it be lawful for them to call this Doctrine in queſtion, it is more lawful for me to doubt of greater perril; conſidering that to come where we are abſolutely anſwered were folly, and might redound unto my great inconvenience. Therefore beſeeching God to have mercy upon me, and to ſatisfie their Petitions, doubts and vows, I finally anſwer, that I will from this day forward meddle no more herein. 22. of April, 1587.

WEE four (whoſe heads appeared under one Chryſtalline Crown, and in one pillar united and encloſed) do moſt humbly and heartily thank thee (O Almighty God, our Creator, Redeemer and Sanctifier) for all thy mercies and benefits hitherto received in our own perſons, and in them that appertain unto us: And at this preſent do faithfully and ſincerely confeſs and acknowledge, that thy profound wiſdom in this moſt new and ſtrange Doctrine (among Chriſtians) propounded, commended and enjoyned unto us four onely, is above our humane Reaſon, and our Catholick Chriſtian Profeſſion to like of: for that, in outward ſhew of words, it ſeemeth to us expreſly to be contrary to the purity and chaſtity which of us and all Chriſtians (thy followers) is exactly required. Notwithſtanding, we will for thy ſake herein captivate and tread under foot all our humane timerous doubting of any inconvenience which ſhall or may fall upon us, or follow us (in this world, or in the world to come) in reſpect, or by reaſon of our embracing of this Doctrine, liſtned unto of us, as delivered from thee, our true and living God, the Creator of heaven and earth, who onely haſt the true original power and authority of ſins releaſing and diſcharging; and whoſe pardoning, or not imputing of ſin unto us, through our lively faith in the moſt worthy Merit and precious Blood of thy Lamb immaculate, ſhed for us, is and ſhall be our Juſtification and Salvation. We therefore, (according to bleſſed Raphael his counſel lately given) moſt humbly and ſincerely require thy divine Majeſty to accept this our Covenant with thee (to the intent that all thy merciful and gracious promiſes made unto us four, and any of us, may be to us performed: and alſo that thy divine purpoſes in us, and by us, may be furthered, advanced and fulfilled) That as we acknowledge thy divine wiſdom and grace opened unto us in this thy laſt myſtical Admoniſhment of univerſal unity to be between us: And doſt moſt inſtantly and earneſtly will us to accept and uſe the ſame, as both myſtically moſt needful, and alſo lawful and juſt with thee: (which Admoniſhment ſtandeth upon two parts; that is to wit, upon true and conſummate Chriſtian Charity between us four unviolably to be kept. And alſo upon the New Matrimonial-like licence and liberty indifferently amongſt us four to be uſed:) So we the ſame four above-named (which hereunto will alſo ſubſcribe our Names) do this day Covenant with thy Divine Majeſty (beſides all other reſpects, chiefly upon the two principal intents and reſpects * before here reherſed) truly and unfeignedly to accept and perform henceforward amongſt us four (in word, thought and deed, to the uttermoſt and beſt of our power) a perfect unity, and with incomparable true love and good Chriſtian Charity, friendſhip, imparting and communicating each unto other, all and whatſoever we have or ſhall have hereafter during our lives. And as for the Matrimonial-like licence, we accept and allow of it: And promiſe unto thee (O our God, the Almighty, Creator of heaven and earth) to fulfil the ſame in ſuch ſort as the godly are permitted to fulfil, and have been (by divers teſtimonies) commended for, and by divine Doctrine willed to fulfil in Matrimonial-like converſation, whenſoever thy motions and allurements Matrimonial-like ſhall draw and perſwade any couple of us thereunto: Beſeeching thee, as thou art the onely, true Almighty and everlaſting God, Creator of heaven and earth, Thou wilt in thy infinite mercies not impute it unto us for ſin, blindneſs, raſhneſs or preſumption; being not accepted, done or performed of us upon carnal luſt, or wanton concupiſcence, but by the way of Abraham-like faith and obedience unto thee our God, our Leader, Teacher, Protector and Juſtifier, now and for ever. And hereunto we moſt humbly and faithfully require thy Divine Majeſty to be our witneſs: And moreover we call thy holy Angels, and to bear record for thy honour and and glory, and for our diſcharge, now and for ever. And for a further conſummation of this New Covenant on our behalf, (by thy will and permiſſion) made with thee (the God of heaven and earth) we the ſame four firſt notified, and particularly and vulgarly named John Dee, Edward Kelley, Jane Dee, and Jone Kelley, have faithfully, obediently, willingly and wittingly ſubſcribed our Names with our own hands day of May, Anno 1587. In Trebon Caſtle.

And finally, as thou haſt warned us (O God) that this doctrine and doings ſhould unto no mortal man elſe be diſcloſed, but among us onely the above-named four to be kept moſt ſecret: and haſt ſaid, that whoſoever of us ſhould by any means diſcloſe the ſame, and he alſo or ſhe to whom the ſame ſhould be diſcloſed, ſhould preſently and immediately be ſtrucken dead by thy Divine power: So we all and every of us four do requeſt thee moſt earneſtly, and Covenant with thee as our God, that ſo all this doctrine and doing may be kept moſt hid and ſecret; and alſo that the ſudden and immediate bodily death may light and fall on the diſcloſer, and on him or her to whom the ſame doctrine or doing any manner of way ſhall be diſcloſed or known. Amen, Amen, Amen.

PRECES ad Dominum Creatorem Cæli & terræ, &c. Then as concerning the Covenant which was made subscribed and delivered in, but the next day required again of Mr. E.K. and in his wifes name to put out his name, &c. But when he had it, he cut it into equal parts; keeping that half wherein his subscription and his wifes were, and delivered unto me, the other half but after a few dayes desired to have the sight and reading of both together; and then he kept the other part from me also: But afterward Madimi did with her finger draw on the two papers make them whole again, &c. and then she gave the print of my Characters, and said a red Circle should always appear in the Stone to all mens sight, &c.

..... Who sitteth upon the Cherubins, and is carried abroad with their wings: Who is he that is lifted up in thunders, and in the voyce of many waters exalted and magnified through the power of a Seraphin (which is the power of him that made him?) Who is he that stretcheth out his arms and imbraceth all things? Who is he that is not, and is? Who is he that numbreth the Stars as the letters of a Volumn? Who entreth down into the waves? In the multitude of his wonders who is he that harboureth his Whelps there, where the Sea glideth, and keepeth them in Chains, till the day of his stretch-forth power come? Who is he that maketh his habitation in the Sun, or filleth the Moon with a perpetual River? Who is he that hath made Winter and Summer, times and seasons? Who is he that is the Lord of all beasts and fowls? Who is he that hath made you of nothing? even he it is that hath led you out, even he it is that hath carried you to the Seas even he it is, that hath kept you sleeping, and preserved you waking: Even he it is that hath tyed his thunders underneath your and hath harnished you.

With the Whirlwind of vengeance against the people of Ethan, yea even he it is (I say) that is, and liveth for ever, and hath provided you as the chiefest reapers, yea and over-seers of his harvest, which hath made you a promise: That the Kings of the earth shall be inriched by you, and hath made you free from all men; against the day when you shall see me. But O you of little faith and understanding, O, I say you of little faith and understanding, how long will you be your own masters, nay your own servants, how long do you contemn, the profound and unspeakable floods of my wisdome, and fore-knowledge in you.

How long (I say) will you run after your own imaginations and contemn the present counsels which I give you, hindring the power that is ready to fall upon you, O you of little faith and understanding.

Behold I have prepared a banket for you, and have brought you even unto the doors; but because you smell not the feast you disdain to enter, happy is he that entreth in through me: For I am the very gate to all felicity and joy, and without me is nothing: Are you more discreet then I am wise? or more holy then I am holy? Righteousness, and righteousness is that, which is rewarded with honour. Behold I made all things, Is it not contrary to Nature, that the lights of heaven should stand: Why therefore at the prayer of the Carpter call you upon the Sun in my name; Calling (I say) upon my name did the Sun stand still. Rebuke him therefore if he hath done amiss; or teach him, why he so abused Nature, O you wretches, I say unto you, you are the last of the beginning of the times to come, so figured by my determination and eternal purpose: And behold the Son and Moon shall stand still, even at your voyces, and the Mountains shall bring themselves together before the face of man, at your commandement, that the people and Kings of the earth may say, Lo this is the finger of him that hath created all things.

I can, and by our two Consents, and at the request of Jane Δ··· unto the women. And Mr. E.K. hereupon said to his wife, That his boots were now put off, and changed his purpose of going away with Carpio now. God confirm his minde in all good purposes according to the well-pleasing of the Highest. Amen.

Carpio.

····· Δ ····· As I, and E.K. walked out at the new stairs, into the new Orchard-ward along the little River to view the small fish, and returning to the fore stairs again, E.K. saw twain as high as my son Arthur fighting by the River side with swords; and the one said to the other, thou hast beguiled me : Then I at length, said unto them, Can I take up the matter between you ? one said yea that you can : in what is it quoth I ? Then said he, I sent a thing to thy wife by my man, and this fellow hath taken it from him. They fought sore and at length, he that had it was wounded in the thigh, and it seemed to bleed. Afterward he that was wounded, did bring a yellow square thing out of his bosome; then I guessed it to be my Stone that was taken away. The other said unto him, let it be carried, suddenly he seemed to have been out of sight, and to be come again; he threatned the other that had wounded him, and said he would be even with him. The other said, Hast thou laid it under the right pillow of the bed where his wife lay yesternight.

Friday afternoon about four of the clock.

Lapidis sancti restitutio.

At length they both went (one after another) into a little Willow tree body on the right hand next the new stairs into the garden; the tree seemed to cleave, or open, and they to go in.

Hereupon we went away : And I coming to my Chamber, found my wife lying upon her bed (where I lay yesternight) and there I lifted up the right pillow, upon which she lay resting her self (being not well at ease) And in manner under her shoulders there I found my precious Stone, that was taken away by Madimi : Whereat E. K. greatly wondred, doubting the verity of the shew. But I and my wife rejoyced, thanking God.

Saturday May 23. Mane circa 9. ½

PRECES ad Deum fundebantur,&c. And then we requeſted that the act of obedience performed (according to our faith conceived of our vocation, from the Almighty and Eternal God of heaven and earth) might be accepted: And that henceforward we might be inſtructed in the underſtanding and practice of wiſdome, both ſuch as already we have received ſome introductions Myſtical, and alſo of all other what the Almighty God ſhall deem meet for us to know, and execute for his honour and glory,&c.

△ E. K. Took Pen and Inke, and wrote the requeſt here adjoyned; and he read it to me, and he requeſted me to read it to the Divine Majeſty; and ſo I did, and hereupon we waited both to the firſt my prayer and to this Petition, the Divine anſwer.

△. Omnipotens ſempiterne, vere & vive Deus mittas lucem tuam & veritatem tuam ut ipſæ nos ducant & perducant admontem, ſanctum Syon, ex hac valle miſeriæ & ad Celeſtem tuam Jeruſalem. Amen.

E. K. From the beginning of this our coming, there appeared a purple Circle as big as a ſtar in the Circumference of the holy Stone, which yeſterday was brought again: And that it ſhould ſo be, Madimi had forewarned E. K. when ſhe ſhewed it unto him, when alſo ſhe gave the prints of the letters of the backſide of the bottome of the gold frame of it.

Equus albus ..... E. K. There appeareth here a great man all in bright harneſs ſitting upon a white horſe: he hath a ſpear all fiery in his left hand, he now putteth into his right hand: he hath a long ſword by his ſide: he hath alſo a target hanging on his back, it ſeemeth to be of ſteel: It hangeth from his neck by a blue lace; it cometh up behind him as high as the top of his head. The horſe is milk white, all ſtudded with white: a very comely horſe it is. The man is in compleat harneſs, the top of his helmet hath a ſharp form.

Upon his Target, are many Cherubins, as it were painted in Circles: there is one in the middle: About it as a Circle with ſix in it, and then a Circle with eight, and then a great Circle with ten in Sum. it, and in the greateſt are twenty; and about the Circle of twenty are ſeven parts: at each of which points is a Cherubin; Their faces be like burning gold, their wings be more brighter and as it were their wings coming over their heads do Cherubin. not touch together. His horſe is alſo harniſhed before and behind. The horſe legs behind are harniſhed as with boots marveilouſly contrived, for defence as it were of his hinde legs.

E. K. He is ridden away, he ſeemeth to ride through a great field.

E. K. Here is now come Madimi.

E. K. She is gone into the field, that way which he rode.

E. K. Here is another, like a woman all in green.

E. K. Here cometh another woman: All her attire is like beaten gold; ſhe hath on her forehead a Croſs chryſtal, her neck and breaſt are bare unto under her dugs: She hath a girdle of beaten gold ſlackly buckled unto her with a pendant of gold down to the ground.

I am

I am the Daughter of Heaven, and I have had very long time my way open for me. For I have a Commandment large, and Science dwelleth in me. And I have power to stay the moving of the Firmament. Few or none have known me, for I am not common with the Circle of the Stone, and the vain Minds. My feet are swifter than the Arrows, and my hands are swifter than the morning dew. My garments are precious, and my dwelling place is in my self. The Lion roareth not, neither doth the Bear ramp, before I be known. I am delightful, and my sweetness cannot be satisfied. Happy is he that inherits me, for in the night season I am found, and in the day time I am a pleasure. My company is a harmony of many Melodies, and my lips speak the heavenly Language of my self. I am a harlot for such as revile me, and a true wife unto my Lover. I am the Love and Liking of many, and I am loved of many; and as many as seek me, unto me will I make my self known. Purge your hearts, O ye Sons of men, and make your selves clean, and sanctify your selves holy, and put on righteousness. Cast out your evil prayings, and then shall you find me. Come from the company of other women that are wicked, that are slothful, and not so beautiful and beautified as I. And then will I come and dwell amongst you, and unfold, and bring forth Children unto you, and they shall be the Seals of Comfort. I will open my Treasures, and unfold them before you, that your Love may be more enflamed towards me.

As yet, I walk in the Clouds, as you, I am carried with the Winds, and have delight in you for the multitude of your Acclamations, and the filthy loathsomness of your spotted hearts. Behold their hour, who is he then that say, They have sinned? or what shall they make account? Not unto you, O you sons of men! nor unto your children? for unto the Lord belongeth the judgements of his Creatures.

Now therefore, let the earth give Birth how fast unto you, and let the Mountains torfake their covetousness, where you have dwelled remote. Happy is he that followeth me, and cursed is he that holdeth up his hands against me. And power shall be given unto you from hence forth to set at your enemies: and the Lord shall always hear you in the time of your trouble. And I am lent unto you to play the harlot with you, and to make merry with you as a friend. Prepare for me, for I come hastily. Provide you Chariots for me, that we may go sweet and cleanly, for I will make a Carpet of Roses and Violets for us to walk upon, and I will be at one with the Father and the Son, you and with all those that truly love me. For my self I am clothed with flowers, and my strength is not to be extinguished with man. Provide you of Rooms for me, therefore provide for me: for behold, I now salute you, and let you be comforted, for I am the Daughter of Comfort. Delight not my Lovers more than me, neither let their sweetness be known how sweet I am, for all things belongeth not to every one. I open unto you a gate,

E. K. She is gone along that green field also.

A. I read it over to our great comfort.

A. We must humbly and heavenly thank thee, O God Almighty, the only fountain of Wisdome, Power, and all goodness. Help us now and ever to be faithful and thankful servants to thee, for thy honour and glory. Amen.

E.K. The field appeareth a very level ground, covered with pretty grass even to the brinks of the . . . It is bright as the Sun light, but I see not the Sun, but the clear sky over it.

A. Pause semihora vacua.

E.K. Now cometh the horseman, and rideth by into the field, and so doth Madimi. Now cometh the third, and so goeth away into the field.

Now cometh the that was left here: she thunderth still: she hath a book in her hand covered (as it were) with Mosse three inches at the head, and four inches long, and a finger thick: it hath no Clasps, it is plain.

Pause.

The fourth hour after dinner, receive him again. And whatsoever you shall receive of this book, receive it kneeling upon your knees; and see that you suffer no Creature female to enter within this place: Neither tell the things that be opened unto you, be revealed unto your wives, or unto any Creature as yet: for I will speak with you a while, and you shall be certified that I am sweet and full of comfort, and that the Lord is at hand, and that we will speedily visit the earth, and all her wicked Inventions.

Dominus propè est.

E. K. She turneth her self into a thousand shapes of all Creatures: and now she is come to her own form again.

She hangeth the Book in the air.

Give God thanks, and so depart.

Δ. All laud, thanks, honour and glory be to our God, our King and Saviour, now and ever. Amen.

1587. Saturday the same day.

AFter Dinner, about four hours, or somewhat less we resorted to the place.

A voyce to E.K. Kneel toward the East; so he kneeled at the table of Covenant, with his face toward the East; and I at my table opposite to him.

Δ..... In the Name of God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Ghost. Amen.

Recte sapere & intellegere doceto nos (O Dominus) nam sapientia tua, totum est quod quærimus Da verbum tuum in ore nostro & sapientum tuam in cordibus nostris fige.

E. K. The Book remaineth hanging in the ayre.

A voice ..... Kelly, I know it is troublesome for thee to kneel: Sit. Fausa magna.

Δ ..... So E.K. rose from kneeling, and did sit.

..... E. K. Now she is here, that last advertised us.

She taketh the book and divideth it into two parts: and it seemeth to be two books: the half cover adjoyning to one, and the other half cover belonging to the other, the sides with the covers are towards me.

The book divided.

..... Wisdome is a piercing beam, which is the center of the spiritual being of the holy Spirit, touching from all parts from whence the Divinity sendeth it out: and is proper to the soul, or unto substances, that have beginning, but no ending; so that, whatsoever shall have end, can never attain unto that which is called Wisdome: Neither can things that are subject to the second death, receive any such influence, because they are already noted, and marked with the seat of destruction. Happy is he whom God hath made a vessel of salvation; for unto him belongeth joy, and a crown of reward: Adam (your forefather and first parent) in respect of his creation, that is to say, in respect of his imaginative composition received no strength, but by the Holy Ghost; for the soul of man is free from all passions and affections, until it enter into the body unto the which it is limited: so that, being neither good nor bad (but apt unto both) he is left, by Divine providence and permission joyned together to the end of the one, or the other: But whersoever wisdome dwelleth, it dwelleth not with the soul, as any property thereof, but according to the good will of God, whose mercy concurreth on every side into him, and taketh up a mansion therein; to utter out, and manifest his great goodness: And even as the heavens are glorified continually with the Spirit of God: So is the soul of man glorified, that receiveth sanctification thereby; for no man is illuminated, that is not sanctified: neither is there any man perfectly sanctified, that is not illuminated. I speak this (my brethren) for that you shall understand, That no man did, or can ever attain to wisdom (that perfect wisdome which I speak of) without he become a Center in his soul unto the mercies, and good will of God comprehending him, and dwelling in him, therefore lift up your eyes and see, Call your wits together, and mark my words, To teach you, or expound unto you the mysteries of the Books that you have already received, is not in my power, but in the good will of God, after whose Image I am: Which good will of God, is the descending of his holy Spirit abundantly upon you, and into you, opening all your senses, and making you perfect men: for Adam understood by that grace, and his eyes were opened so that he saw and knew all things that were to his understanding: So have all those more and less, that have been counted wise, received the gifts of the Holy Ghost, which setteth the soul on man so on fire that he pierceth into all things, and judgeth mightily. The Apostles which knew even the thoughts of men, understood all things, because the holy Spirit made a dwelling place in them: even so shall it happen unto you: For you are the chosen of this last dayes, and such as shall be full of the blessings of God, and his Spirit shall rest with you abundantly. Mark therefore what I have to say unto you.

I am blessed Raphael, a blessed messenger of the Almighty, I am sent of God, who is blessed for evermore. Amen.

John Dee. I am sent of God for thy comfort first to certifie thee thou shalt overcome thy infirmity, and when thou art living in body, a God in his good will make thee THRICE. Thou shalt have all made known unto thee of such things being now come to pass as have been before spoken of, because that thou shouldest take comfort in God, that thou art not left from the comfort of Gods blessed creatures. Now God hath sent me at the time aforesaid, by thine own desire to be satisfied, THAT when thy body is able to abide the time of my further access from God to be delivered unto thee by the shepherd. My friend John Young performeth, but the time is likely to be short.

As it pleaseth God.

O God. I am bent upon a great attempt, to make the counsel privy, of my beggery, and to offer the Earle of Salisbury. such my duties as I may perfect to his content. How standeth this with your good liking?

mercies, thy friends shall overcome thy foes and thou shalt for ever be married in his goodness. He will work mightily in his power for thee.

Proceed in thy suit so shortly as thou canst finde thy health in body able: And for thy health use thy own skill, that God hath, and shall guide thee withall to thy good and perfect receiving of thy perfect health.

Of the blood, not coming out of my Fundament, but as a little it were a pin hole of the skin.

Raph. That the which thou hadst skill by, to help thy weakness, God will be mercifull to send thee therein present help, the which but only for that issue thou couldest not have lived. And for thee and thy help, the same God will work with thee in thy house and private so, that it shall be known unto no man, but by Gods mercifull guidance, direct unto thee such wayes, and means as shall be thy help, and restore thee to health again. This God of his mercy hath sent me to deliver this short message, because of thy weakness. Thou art not strong to endure therefore such a Gods goodness to let you to understand that after the tenth day of April, I will then [16] appear again, and then shalt understand much more what God will and his pleasure is to be done in Gods services, and for your good, and so for this little short message, I have declared unto you the will of Jesus Christ. And so for the time, In the Name of the most highest, mercifull and maker of Heaven and Earth, I do now return at his will and commandment, and I am ready at all times to be (by) summoned me to appear to thy comfort. His Name be praised evermore. Amen, Amen.

Amen.

DEus in adjutorium noſtrum intendas D. D. R. R. ... Zebaith ..... The Omnipotent God be praiſed for evermore, his holy Name be glorified. Now John Dee, I Raphael am n w come at Gods pleaſure, and at his commandement to ſpeak with thee, and make known unto thee as far forth as in my power lieth to ſpeak God hath ſent me to declare unto thee: the cauſe of thy deſire now at this time, John Dee, as thou art an earthly man, if thou doſt deſire to have help from God of ſuch things as earthly men cann t be without while they have time here in this mortal life, thou deſireſt to have knowledge as concerning things hid, the which I Raphael have no delight, neither pleaſure in ſpeaking of any ſuch earthly matter, or earthly caſes. But my delight is in the Almighty, and in his wiſdome. But notwithſtanding at this requeſt, and thy inward deſire in God to be certified of this treaſure, the which theſe two men whom thou knoweſt do ſpeak of, they ever had a time appointed of God for it, and it was not uſed accordingly as they ſhould have done. Now this ſecond time, becauſe you have a deſire to have help and knowledge at the hands of the Almighty, I Raphael do command thee and thoſe men whom thou knoweſt, that they ſhall not intermeddle, or to take it in hand before the tenth day of January be paſt, f r if they do, they ſhall not prevail, for that is a time that God hath beſt appointed for the ſaid purpoſe, and f r the quiet enjoying of it; ſo w en that day is pa t, then let th m in the name of God enter into that wor'. And if they will be ſuch men as they ought for to be, and as Gods will is that they ſhould be, to deal faithfully and truly one with the other in deed and in word, God will then bleſs their good purpoſe, and bring it to their head when they ſhall take in hand to open the earth, God will preſently at that inſtant then ſuffer their good purpoſe to take effect, and the matter to be effected and had, ſo that they ſhall not be put off, if they ſhall heare or ſee any thing that they ſhall diſlike, but ſafely to ſtand in the hope, and craving at Gods hand to have that good help to be a warrant between them, and all hurt and danger whatſ ever may behappen, and ſo overcome. I ſay, If they will faithfully pray unto God with their whole truſt in God, God will bleſs their good ſucceſs, if they be otherwiſe, then as ood never ſtir, and their good ſucceſs will be againſt them. So I Raphael have made known unto thee Gods purpoſe in this thy requeſt.

For this I have ſaid.

John Dee, I Raphael, did make known unto this deſire of that ſecret, and that great gift that gave unto thee in ſuch order and manner as thou knoweſt where thou hidſt it, and that never as yet hadſt the knowledge and the wiſdome that God will give thee as concerning that, and many mo ſuch unto thee: So this rare gift being taken away from thee by them thou knoweſt, by taking thy key, and ſo taking of it from thy keeping, it was the will and purpoſe of God, that I Raphael ſhould give ſuch ... that thou ſhouldeſt have knowledge ... of the ſame. Thou ſhalt take ſuch courſe .... thou mayeſt obtain it again, and when thou haſt it, thou ſhalt put it into the ſame cheſt again, and commit it into the cuſtody and keeping of thy very friend John Pontoys, and he ſhall, and will deal faithfully and friendly with thee in keeping the ſame until ſuch time as by that ... the which thou knoweſt is promiſed unto thee, that thou ſhalt receive the perfect underſtanding of the hid knowledge and ſecrecie of God that is not as yet made known unto thee, and ..... as hath been ſaid, ſo ſhalt thou have ſuch wiſdome delivered unto thee by me Raphael that ſhall come in ſuch ... and order as hath been late made known unto thee for thy good in ſuch ſhort and ſpeedy time to be performed, and ſo thus much I have made known unto thee, as God hath in ſtore for thee to be performed. Thus much I have now ſaid, and given thee cunning to keep it in ſuch maner as I have ſpoken, or elſe thou wilt be diſappointed of that, and ... it will hide ſuch purpoſe as God will have come to paſs, ſo in his mighty power command me to come. I have for this matter finiſhed; If thou have any thing ſpeedily, ask in ... for I am to depart.

John Dee, If thou wilt have all thy cauſe then .... as thou muſt ſhew unto thy liking and bers what thou haſt drawn, and crave for good aſſiſtance it ... of ... deſiring his help, and ... unto her the diſeaſe. ...to go to ſuch men that ſhould give thee further inſtruction thy beſt as I have ſaid to ſhew unto her that thou haſt done ..... and he will ... in thy caſe unto ..... and Canterbury, and ſo the faith ſhall triumph in ſhort time, and if this be .....

△. Mittas lucem tuam & veritatem tuam, quæ nos ducant & perducant ad montem sanctum tuum & cœlestia tua tabernacula. Amen.

Barth. As for you, the Creator of God doth appear.

△. Benedictus qui venit in nomine Domini Halleluia.

..... Blessed be God the Father, and God the Son, and God the holy Ghost. All honour and power be ascribed unto the living God for evermore. Amen. △. Amen.

John Dee, I am Raphael, one of the blessed and elect Angels of the Almighty; and at his will and his good pleasure, he hath commanded me to appear here at this time, to set forth the will and pleasure of the Almighty God.

John Dee, my message that I have at this time to deliver unto thee, is of great force, in that God would have thee to do. And whereas it was said at my last appearing at this beholder, that I would appear again, and now it hath pleased God to send me to perform and make known according to that which was then said, that all things before promised should be made plainly known what Gods will is to be done in all that hath been before said.

Now I do make known unto you the plain meaning and understanding thereof.

First thou hast been promised the secret knowledge and understanding of the Philosophers Stone, of the Book of St. Dunstans, to have the knowledge of them.

It is since a long time, as thou knowest to mans reason, and to the minde of man, a few years is with man thought to be big; and now God hath been thy keeper, and most chiefly created thee, and hath suffered thee to have time to live unto this age: and furthermore, thou dost like unto thy Nativity, and considering thy great age that the course of Nature for age, is likely, by thy reason, to take place. BUT John Dee, thou dost well remember unto whom, in the holy Scriptures, that God in his mercies did adde and put to fifteen years longer than the time was set him: So think not but God in his mercies will be as great unto thee. And now to come to the matter whereby to let thee to understand why thou hadst not thus these rare gifts and promises performed unto thee, it was the will of God to keep them away, and to suffer the heart of thy supreme head and governour, under God, to be hardned against thee, that thou art no better account made of unto him, but to be such an one that doth deal with Devils and by Sorcery, as you commonly term them Witchcraft: and who doth, and who hath informed him, to be thus evil and hardly informed against thee, but only the Devil, and by the hatred of thy secret enemy whom thou knowest (Salisbury I mean) and all malice and enemies that he can by his Devils, Maserien, Hermeloe, the four wicked ones, the which are accounted the four Rulers of the Air, whose names be Ories, Egym, Paynim, and Mayrary: They be the Devils that he doth deal withall, that he through their enticing and his, he thinketh to be pleasant and good wisdom that he receiveth at their hands; That he and his Devils do seek thy overthrow in all good things, and doth and shall, so far forth as God will suffer them, seek all the malice and hindrance in all good causes to be done to thy good. Therefore now John Dee I am to let thee to understand plainly what Gods will and his great purpose is to have thee to do, although it may seem hard to thy good liking, considering as thou dost think, the weakness of thy body, and course of age: yet notwithstanding, that same God that hath been thy protector and keeper until this present time of years, that same merciful God shall keep thee, and make thee able to perform things that shall be made known unto thee; for God will not bestow such rare gifts as I have before said, amongst those which be unworthy of such great blessings from the Almighty. For God will not bestow Pearls amongst those that will not believe nor understand that God hath any such blessings to bestow upon men: for I say unto thee, John Dee, that if God should or would bestow those blessings upon thee, even at this present, or at any time to be shortly performed and delivered unto thee: Then, except that thou shouldst make all things plainly known of Gods secrets delivered unto thee, unto thy supreme head under God here upon earth, and likewise thy enemy to be partaker in these secrets and great gifts of God, if thou wouldst not perform as much unto them, as God should give wisdom unto thee, therein, thy life would and should, by the envy and malice of those wicked ones, and by thy great enemy thou shouldst speedily be cut off from this life, but God will not have it so. So if thou wilt do as God shall command thee by this message, thou shalt have all these messages, promises and wisdom, both for the Philosophers Stone, the book of S. Dunstans, the secret wisdom of that Jewel that was delivered, as thou knowest, in what manner it is plainly known unto thee.

So now it is the will of God to suffer thy supreme Head his heart to be hardned against thee; and likewise for thy great enemy for his wicked instructions against thee, God doth suffer it so to be, even as Pharaoh his heart was hardned against the children of God, so standeth the matter against thee with them. It is the will of God so to suffer it to their great account that they shall have to make, when it shall please the Almighty that that time shall be, that they must render unto God their accounts. Now John Dee it is the will of the Almighty to send me Raphael to deliver unto thee this Message, the which will seem unto thee to be very hard: yet as thou art the servant of God, and one whom God doth favour and love (although the world by wicked enemies doth hate thee) willingly and obediently follow that course the which God in his mercies at this time shall make known unto thee.

Thou

Thou ſhalt (if thou wilt obey the commandment of God, by me made known unto thee) take a long journey in hand, and go where thou ſhalt have all theſe great mercies of God performed unto thee, and God will ſhew thee as great favour in the ſight of God as ever he did ſhew unto Joſeph, who was ſold into bondage, as thou knoweſt, and in all his imprisonment and troubles God was with him, and delivered him: So, if thou wilt follow this commandment from God delivered unto thee by me Raphael, that thou ſhalt not doubt, nor waver in thy mind, but God will be merciful unto thee, both in this life and in the life to come: and think God will not command thee to take ſuch a journy in hand, but that he doth know that is beſt for thee, and he will preſerve thee, and keep thee in thy journy. And thou ſhalt find in thy journy, that God ſhall and will deal mercifully with thee in finding eaſe of the infirmity of the ſtone, that the Angels of God ſhall direct thee in thy heart and mind, how thou ſhalt uſe thy body, to the health and comfort of thy ſtrength. And when thou art at thy journies end amongſt ſuch friends beyond the ſeas as thou knoweſt, God ſhall and will raiſe thee as faithful friends (as now I have ſaid before) as Joſeph had, ſo ſhalt thou be favoured with God and man; for it is the will and purpoſe of God to have thee to be obedient unto this the which I do make known unto thee, becauſe thou ſhouldſt not remain here, to be beholding unto thoſe that are thy mortal enemies, and had rather to hear of thy end, than otherwiſe to hear of thy well-doing, or any good to be done unto thee by any man; it is a grief and a ſpight in head and mind unto them, that thou ſhouldſt come to any help, or things neceſſary for mans uſe here upon earth, the which man cannot be without. And John Dee, I am to command thee, that ſo ſhortly as thou canſt by all means poſſible, ſet thy things in order, for thy Wardenſhip, and in all other cauſes of worldly affairs. ¶ And for maintenance to further thy journy God will moſt graciouſly raiſe thee up ſome good friends to be helping unto thee, that thou muſt have maintenance in thy journy. And thy very friend John Pontoys ſhall by Gods favour come home, and he ſhall and will be a great aid unto thee, to perform this courſe the which God by me hath commanded thee to undertake: That where thou doſt live now in wan, and to be beholding unto thoſe, who do not love thee, neither in heart do wiſh thee well; ſo God would have thee to be where thou muſt do him ſervice, and God will give thee long days in ſo doing, and fulfilling this his commandment and will by me Raphael, the which meſſage I am at Gods will and his pleaſure plainly to make known unto thee, that it is his will to have thee to follow this courſe, in which God will have thee to enter into, Not fearing nor miſtruſting the weakneſs of thy body, but that God will preſerve thee for that time, as ſhall be his good will and pleaſure, that thou ſhalt have life here in this world, to be a merciful a God to deliver thee from all ours and dangers, and from all infirmities, even with as much health as thou haſt had in this time as thou haſt lived thus many years; ſo God will have thee to follow his will in this direction, and then thou ſhalt have all things aforeſaid performed unto thee, and thou ſhalt then have ſuch favour, that thou ſhalt behold his bleſſed Creatures with theſe thy mortal eyes: and if thou wilt perform to the uttermoſt of thy power this meſſage from God by me delivered; Then God will in his mercies perform all that is promiſed unto thee. And except thou wilt be willing and dutiful ſo much as in thee lieth to make good this, the which I have through Gods means declared what courſe thou muſt take; and if thou doſt it not, then God will not no more ſend unto thee, to the beholding of any mans earthly eyes, any of his bleſſed Creatures. Therefore I command thee from God, as I am his faithful Miniſter and bleſſed Angel of God, that thou ſhouldſt not doubt to take this journy in hand, for God will be with thee and for thee, and his bleſſed Angels ſhall be thy comfort, even as the Angel of God was the comfort unto young Tobias in his journey, ſo God will deal with thee in thine. And ſo I have delivered unto thee what God will have thee to do.

John Pontoys.

Long life.

Δ Si Deus nobiſcum quis contra nos.

It is the will and favour of God to give thee as much underſtanding of Gods mercies towards thee yet for to come, as ever mortal man had delivered unto him by any ſpiritual Creature from God. So now I have fully ended my meſſage. Therefore, ſee that thou John Dee be as ready to perform it to the greateſt of thy power, as lovingly in giving God thanks for this meſſage delivered, becauſe I would have thee to be ſuch an one as ſhall not end his dayes in reproach, and rejoycing of thy enemies, but thou ſhalt have time and days to live, that when thou dieſt, and ſhalt depart this world, thou ſhalt die with fame and memory to the end, that ſuch an one was upon the earth, that God by him had wrought great and wonderful Miracles in his ſervice. And thus to Gods honour and his glory, I have ended my meſſage, yielding unto God all honour, and praiſe, and thanks for all his bleſſings, and his great benefits beſtowed upon his Creatures, both now and for evermore. Amen. Bleſſed be God in all his gifts, and holy in all his works. Praiſed be God. Amen, Amen.

Miracula.

Δ. Amen.

Δ. Now, O God, as I have willingly yielded unto thy will and commandment of undertaking a Journey: ſo I beſeech thee that it may ſtand with thy good pleaſure to notifie unto me the Country, Region or City unto which thou wouldſt have me direct my courſe from hence-forward.

Δ. Nothing appeared.

A Voice..... A Voice..... In the Name of God, to morrow at ten of the clock.

Δ. So be it.

Δ. All thanks, praiſe and glory be to God the Father, God the Son, and God the holy Ghoſt, now and for ever. Amen.

A Note to be considered.

Mr. Eccleſtone.

In the houſe at the breaking up of the place were theſe: James Bolton, Lettice Goſtwich a Maiden, Cook and Dairy-maid.

Or if any other be privy of it, who may give any evidence.

And whatſoever may make this a perfect work, to Mr. Eccleſtones reaſonable contentment, moſt humbly and heartily I beſeech God to make known now unto us, and ſo the praiſe and thanks due to God for his mercies, to the beſt of our power to be yielded unto him.

A Voice. I Am Raphael that ſpeak, if you will have me to appear, proceed in haſte, for God hath appointed me great ſervice to do.

△. In the Name of Jeſus, we deſire your anſwers and inſtructions to theſe Articles here ſlightly noted.

1. Raph. In the Name of Jeſus Chriſt, I Raphael am now ſent unto you to deliver unto you your queſtion ſo far forth as God his will and pleaſure is to command me, and I muſt make a ſhort continuance with you, for I have ſervice of God commanded me in haſte to be done, in his bleſſed Name I am come to fulfil his will in your deſires, and therefore in his Name go on.

1. △. The name of the place.

Raph. John Dee, thou haſt been a Traveller, and God hath ever yet at any time provided for thee in all thy Journeys, ſo much Gods favour and his mercies is ſuch toward thee, that this thy requeſt and deſire to be known, What Country is beſt for thy good: God hath referred it to thy own will to make choiſe, in what Country or City thou haſt thy beſt minde unto; and when thou haſt made thy choiſe, if it be Gods liking, and to thy good, it ſhall be directed unto thee; otherwiſe, if it ſhall be made known that ſome other place ſhall be better for thee: Therefore take thy own choiſe and liking.

Raph. John Dee, he that hath commanded thee to take this Journey in hand, he will provide for thee in Germany, or any other Country whereſoever thou goeſt. Therefore let thy good will and liking be in placing thy ſelf, if thou wilt be near unto England or far off.

△. Whether is beſt, I know not.

Raph. I have ſaid, that whereſoever thou wilt, God doth prize thy willing deſire, to fulfil that God doth command: think but thou ſatisfie and reſt in taking thy own choiſe, God will provide for thee, whither and to what City thou haſt a minde or will to enter into, and always Gods good Angel ſhall hold thee, and ever give thee to underſtand, what and where ſhall be ever beſt for thy good liking, when thou art there. Therefore take no care, he, that Almighty will provide for thee, that thou ſhalt be ſo governed with his goodneſs, that all ſhall ſtand well with thee.

2. △. Whom ſhall I have in my company beſide John Pontoys?

3, 4. Raph. John Dee, thou of thy ſelf doſt beſt know that without thy daughter; thou canſt cannot be without her: and likewise God hath sent thee a very honest and well-disposed young man to go with thee in thy Journey. And for John Pontoys, he shall be one, as thy greatest comfort and special-ayd, next unto the Almighty. And for any other else, it is at thy own good will and well-liking whom thou wilt chuse to make fit thy purpose for necessary uses, for helps about thee, Servants I mean.

5. △. What of my standing Books, and other appurtenances?

Raph. John Dee, thou hast spoken already of a very good course to send them away, not all at once, but some at one time, and some at another, and God shall and will give thee good
John Pontoys. success therein: and let thy friend John Pontoys, let him provide for all such purposes, and so shalt thou do well.

△. As I have been heretofore hindred of many of good purposes fulfilling, so perchance the King will not be willing now to grant me licence to pass over sea.

Raph. He shall and will grant thee licence.

6. △. For my Son Arthur, do to his help and comfort in his intended travel.

Raph. If thy Son do like his course to travel, he shall in the mean while do well, for thy sake, being a father unto him, God will favour him. And when thou art in place where God hath commanded thee to go, in short time after thy being there, thou shalt be able to do him good, in helping him for such things as he now wanteth, and then thou shalt take him near unto thee, so that he may have a comfort of thy fatherly help, and thou to have comfort of his well-doing: and so for this I have certified thee.

7. △. Shall not I at any time return hither into England again?

Raph. Thou shalt be better able in health and strength of thy body to come into England again, if thou wilt: but thou shalt see and perceive thy self so mercifully provided for, that thou wilt have but little minde or willingness to come into England again, such shall Gods great mercies be towards thee.

△. Then I perceive that I shall not make any great account of keeping my house at Mortlake for any my return hither.

Mr. Eccleston his Case of his money taken away by one Thomas Webster, &c.

Raph. Thou dost take an hard matter in hand. This man Thomas Webster had it, and hath it in his keeping as yet, but he will not yield that he hath it. And for Eccleston to deal by extremities with him, he shall prevail little, he shall not thereby obtain his purpose. But by friendly dealing with the party, and in proffering him to be a partaker with him, he may yield unto Eccleston. But otherwise, the matter will grow hard. I would from God advise thee, John Dee, to enter as few of these matters as may be, for this will not be compassed, except that he shall proceed into the mans house according unto Law; and then he shall entangle himself into trouble, and for the thing never the better: but, as I have said, by friendly dealing he may yield, and so far forth as it shall please God, I will work by Gods favour to make him yield. And thus much I have said, and let it suffice.

It doth remain as yet in a Coffer that is somewhat of a white colour, but he will, if he be stirred, he will then remove it, and hide it in the ground in a little Parlour that he hath. And so I have spoken and answered thee at this time, as concerning △. Money I had sent me from the Emperour by Hans Bik: I marvel that it is not yet come hither.

Raph. For that, John Pontoys will make known unto thee, all to thy good. And in whose Name, and in his whose Power I came, so now again I return to that place, to the which in his mercies bring all his blessed Creatures, yielding all honour and praise unto his holy Name, I end. Amen, Amen.

△. Amen.

14 day of July, hora 11½.

△. AS I sate at Dinner with Bartholomew Hickman, my Daughter, Patrick and Thomas Turner, about the end of the Dinner Bartholomew heard a Voice, saying, To morrow half an hour after 9 of the clock, give your attendance to know the Lords pleasure.

Barth. ..... The Creature.

IN the Name of him that created me Raphael, and all the bleſſed Creatures, and likewiſe in his power made all the world, and all things therein contained: Jeſus Chriſt of his great goodneſs hath ſent me now at his will, and ſo I am bound at his will to return, when his pleaſure is. All honour be given to him, being God Almighty for evermore. Amen. Jeſus Chriſt

John Dee, I am Raphael that laſt appeared unto you, and I through Gods good pleaſure did ſet down and made known unto thee, what pretended courſe God would have thee to enter into, and his will is ſuch, that ſo far forth, and ſo ſpeedily as thou canſt, to proceed in it, becauſe that God hath great ſervice for thee to do, when thou ſhalt be there placed.

And now I do let thee underſtand, that as concerning Eccleſton his ſuit and matter that I did at my laſt being here ſpeak of, ſo far forth as it pleaſed God to give me his free will: and now God hath ſent me for favour that God doth bear unto thee, and not for no cauſe elſe, I Raphael do now tell thee, that this matter, and all ſuch like unto it, are not for me to enter into, neither for any ſuch as be of that high Society and Calling as I am of. Yet notwithſtanding, I am ready by Gods merciful goodneſs to command thoſe whom God hath and doth appoint to ſerve under me: and ſuch his bleſſed Creatures being thoſe that do ſtand in his preſence, I Raphael will at Gods pleaſure command thoſe that ſhall deal in Eccleſtons ſuit, in conſtraining by ſuch Creatures as I have made known unto you, that they ſhall force and conſtrain theſe parties, as he which he had in hand; he is one, James Bolton is another, and the Treaſure was carried to the Carpenter his brothers houſe; and there, as I did ſhew unto thee, a Coffer of white colour. Thoſe parties are ſo troubled in minde, that they cannot be quiet, how or where to place the Treaſure, becauſe they would keep it cloſe. But let this ſuffice and ſatisfie for the whole anſwer in this his ſuit: I Raphael through Gods power will command ſuch Creatures that ſhall conſtrain thoſe parties to bring the matter to true light, and confeſs the ſaid Treaſure; and he, the party the owner to have his money again, in ſo ſhort time as may be pleaſing and acceptable unto the Almighty. God will have the whole matter made known in this order, without any further trouble unto the parties: but it is his will that he ſhall examine them in friendly manner, if they will not yield, then by the force of a Juſtice in examination; but they will not yield till ſuch time as I by theſe Creatures ſhall make them to yield, through Gods help, to their ſorrow; and ſo the party the owner ſhall ſo come by his goods again. And now I have anſwered you in as ample manner as God will have me; for (as I have ſaid) ſuch matters are not for me, but that courſe that I have now declared, by Gods help ſhall be performed. And ſo in the Name of the Higheſt for this I do now end, giving praiſe to the Almighty. And furthermore, John Dee, in few words, for thy ſake, If this Window by his Creatures, ſhould have medled in the cauſe, they ſhould have had a great labour. But notwithſtanding, that which I have ſpoken of, is ſufficient, praiſed be the Name of God: and ſo I end.

And for the good health of thy body, God will ſo carry thee in good health, that thou ſhalt ſet forth ſuch ſervice when thou art there placed, that ſhall be thy great comfort unto Gods honour, in* making of his marvellous works to be known. And thus much for thy comfort through Gods merciful goodneſs I have made known unto thee: and ſo I end.

And by and by did Raphael appear in the Stone, and in voice ſaid thus, as followeth:

Raph. In the Name of Jeſus Chriſt, I am Raphael whoſe voice thou didſt hear right now. And now, in Gods holy Name, for thy good, and for thy comfort, I have, now, here, in this Pearl entred Poſſeſſion, in token hereafter to be that bleſſed Creature, to be obedient unto Gods Commandment, to ſerve thee *at all times, when thou art placed in thy Journey, which God hath commanded thee. Barth. He is in the Stone now.

Benedictus qui venit in nomine Domini.

O Moſt merciful Lord and Saviour Chriſt Jeſus, who is and was the Creator and Redeemer of Mankinde, and of all his bleſſed Creatures. In his power I Raphael am now come at his will and commandment, and ſo likewiſe at his good pleaſure I muſt then return at ſuch time as he hath commanded me.

John Dee, in the Name of the Moſt Higheſt, I am come to deliver unto thee this my Meſſage, the which God in his goodneſs hath commanded me.

Firſt, I Raphael am ſent of God at this time moſt chiefly to put thee in that good remembrance of my laſt appearing to your preſence, to let thee to underſtand, that look what courſe God in his mercies did ſet then down, what way thou ſhouldſt take to enter into this Journey, the which God in his goodneſs is moſt willing that thou ſhouldſt enter into. For, John Dee, God hath declared, and made manifeſtly known unto thee at my laſt appearing, what ſervice God would uſe thee unto, and all ſuch purpoſes that were the laſt time ſpoken of, ſhall be by Gods favour and his merciful good gift performed unto thee: and fear thou not, but God will ſafely help and preſerve thy body in thy Journey, to that end, that thou ſhouldeſt be in that place wherein thou mighteſt have time to enter into all ſuch ſervice as God hath by me made known unto thee. For, John Dee, ſuch hath Gods mercies been in ſuffering wicked men to prevail againſt thee, and they have and do make a ſcorn of thee here in this thy Native Countrey: So it is with thee as it was with Chriſt and his Apoſtles, being moſt cruelly uſed in their own Native Countreys; ſo John Dee, God hath ſuffered thoſe wicked men to pluck thee down in worldly affairs, the which ſhould be maintenance for thee and for thine, and without ſuch maintenance man cannot be without, while he is here in this vale of Miſery. Such wicked men have moſt cruelly uſed thee, even as Job by Gods ſufferance, who ſuffered the Devil to prevail againſt him: yet Gods mercies be ſo great unto thee, that although they (moſt wickedly) have robbed thee of thy poſſeſſion, yet God would not ſuffer thoſe wicked ones by any of their malicious practices to prevail in any wiſe to hurt thy body, as Jobs was: For if they (brough their wicked purpoſes) could have wrought ſuch cruelty againſt thee, thou hadſt not been a man living here upon earth until this time. So John Dee, thou doſt know who is thy mortal enemy, who, rules next unto your earthly King.

Why thou maiſt well know, for I have made it known before time unto thee, that he is not thy friend, though thou haſt not offended him in any wiſe. Therefore, becauſe that this thy Native Countrey is not a place fit for Gods purpoſes in his wiſdome to be beſtowed upon thee here, Therefore at my laſt Meſſage, God did ſend me to make known unto thee, whether he would have thee to go, that there thou mightſt be a man; and that man, whom God hath appointed to make his Wiſdome known: for thou art that man whom God hath choſen, that (according'y as it was ſaid yeſterday) that no mortal man in fleſh, but onely Enoch, had or ſhall have the like wiſdome made known, plainly to be underſtood by any man, or thou thy ſelf ſhalt underſtand and receive at the hands of the Almighty. Therefore it is his will and purpoſe of God, that he would have thee in that Countrey, for this thy Native Countrey is not worthy of gifts that thou ſhalt receive at the hands of God, to come, and to be made known unto thoſe which be not worthy of ſuch great gifts of Gods wiſdome, to come amongſt thoſe that be unworthy.

Therefore, John Dee, in all theſe matters the which in favour at this time made known unto thee, the chief and greateſt cauſe of this my coming unto thee, is to make the matter plainly known, that God in his mercies would have thee with all diligence that thou canſt poſſibly, to haſte thee to that Countrey where God doth command thee, and at my laſt being here thou

 knoweſt

knowest what was my Message, therefore do thy diligence to fulfil it as thou canst, and God will put his great helps unto thee, in strengthning of thy body, and otherwise, which shall be to thy good. And thou being once in that place where God would have thee to be, thou shouldst well perceive and plainly understand, that God will most mercifully work with thee for thy good in performing all such promises, the which hath been both at the last time and at this time made known unto thee.

John Dee, I do put thee in remembrance, that whereas thou didst say, that thou hadst a portion of money sent thee from the Emperour unto thee; I tell thee, that the Devil in working in the heart of one of thy enemies (Cook I mean) did seek some wayes by his false important ill speeches, in most false manner, unto one that did in somewhat let the Emperour to understand, what he had most falsely, to thy discredit (as he thought) to hinder thee, that thou shouldst not come to any help or credit at the Emperours hand. But John Dee, be of good comfort, The Emperour of all Emperours will be thy comfort, and aid thee, and evermore put down thy enemies, that the Emperour (that thou shouldst have received that portion of) it shall be so with thee, that he shall have more need of thee, in such wisdome as God shall deliver unto thee; for thou shalt have no need of him, but onely to keep good will and friendship betwixt him and thee, in shewing thy self friendly unto him, as God shall hereafter give thee plainly to understand.

Now, John Dee, I have made known unto thee what Gods will is in this my message. This is the greatest and the most principal cause, why God hath sent me unto thee at this present time. And now I have through Gods mercies delivered this his Commandment unto thee: and for this I have now said and finished.

△. Blessed be the Almighty God, now and for ever.

Gladly I would have understood how much the portion was which the Emperour would have sent me.

John Dee, let it go, and speak no farther of it: for thou maist be joyful, whereas it is said unto thee, that he should have need of thee, and not thou of him. Therefore reason no more in that matter.

△. As concerning Mr. Eccleston.

John Dee, in few words I answer thee, He hath dealt with the parties in those affairs, but the chief party will not, as yet, yield any thing to be made known, but doth stubbornly and stoutly stand in his own defence: And Gods Creatures have wrought with him, and nothing he will (as yet) yield unto, except that those Creatures should deal so cruelly with him, as it were to pull him apieces: this is his wicked stubbornness. But God will bring the matter to light; but Eccleston hath not dealt so in the matter as he might have done, he is too too slack in his own cause. Therefore if the fault be in him, then do not blame the Creatures of God. For God could (as you very well do know it) command that said Treasure to be brought: but he will not have it so to be, because it shall come by other means among men: So God hath a great care and purpose to do all for your good, to keep matters out of blame and slander of the world, as it might come to passe, if it should come by any other wayes, but by this plot which is laid down to decline. And when it is the will of God that it shall be delivered, God will so perform it, as man will do as he should do, in all reverend manner towards God-ward. And so now I have you to perceive, and to know, that it is not as yet obtained.

△. Whether hath the other party confessed any thing?

Raph. He hath not as yet yielded openly: but he hath in secret manner perswaded his fellow, that the matter might be made known unto Eccleston, in confessing of all the whole matter, but the other will not yet yield: but it were better for him to yield at the first, then to tarry any longer, the lesse would be his punishment from God therein. And so I let you to understand, that you shall give God his time to work in that matter at his pleasure, and then shall it be to the good of the owner, and of you likewise. And now I have said.

△. As concerning the bereaving me of my own goods, I would gladly understand who hath my silver double gilt bell-Salt, and other things here of late conveyed from mee.

Raph. John Dee, This is the will and purpose of God to command thee, although thou dost suffer wrong because thy goods be so taken away from thee, yet Gods will is such, that he will have thee to be a peace-maker in this cause: for it is past help to have it again: But as thou art a mortal father, so use that matter as a father, for thy son had it, although he would not, neither will confess it. And likewise for such things of late missing about this house, thou shalt hereafter as plainly know who had them, and how they were gone, as thou dost plainly understand for thy Salt, but thou shalt stay and proceed no further, till such time as I Raphael shall speak further of it, for God will have all things to be done well, and to his best liking. So for that I have now said.

John Dee, it is in the hands of God and his power to ſend thee ſuch helps as thou doſt ſeek of the Treaſure to be brought unto thee, but God will not have it ſo to be, the while thou art in this place (England I mean) for God will not have thee to come into any diſdain, or ſlander might take ſome advantage againſt them, but be content with that little that can be made of thy right in the Colledge matters. And furthermore, thou ſhalt ſee that God will ſend thee ſoon ſome ſuch ſmall helps by man, that thou ſhalt have ſome feeling of help, to help thee whither thou ſhouldſt go; and therefore I Raphael have now ſaid.

△.... John Pontoys.

John Dee, be not too much inquiſitive, but what ſhall be beſt to your liking in any good cauſe whatſoever you or he ſhall think good to be done for your good, God will put his aſſiſtance and help that you ſhall perceive Gods favour therein. And thus much I have ſaid: at Gods commandment I came, and ſo on his mercifull goodneſſe, and his power, I muſt preſently depart.

△... Bartholomews requeſt of George Sherman his earneſt ofe and dreaming of Treaſure to be under the foundation of the wall called De la pry wall, a Nunry in times paſt within half a mile of Northampton, Sir William Tate his houſe is within that wall in three parts.

That man may lawfully have it, if he take heed in the breaking of the the three places, for it is for the greateſt part under the bottom of the wall, and many roots of thorns and trees that will let and hinder the working for it, if he do not work much as ſlope as you can, to go under the roots, the which he may well and lawfully do. So doing, he may well obtain his purpoſe; and now you have plainly underſtood the truth. 500. 300.

The one part of that Treaſure was laid by an old Nun, that was of that houſe, at that time, and one that was her brother, and the other was laid even at the ſame time, that the ſame travel the which you took the laſt day ſaving one, to know of that battel, it was bid at the ſame time by one of the Lords that was there killed, and ſo it hath remained ever ſince, the one place more eaſier to come at then the other, but with the favour of God, and in his mercy, that good fortune to be deſired at parties hand, it may be had and compaſſed by the ſaid party. And ſo now I have made the matter known unto you. And now in the name of the Almighty, and mercifull God, at whoſe will and pleaſure I came, ſo now I depart in Gods peace. The mercies of God be upon you, both for this life, and for that which is to come, his name be glorifyed for evermore. Amen, Amen.

John Dee, I am the ſame bleſſed creature Raphael, that did appear the laſt day but one in this place, I am at the commandment of the moſt higheſt to come unto your preſence at this time, becauſe thou ſhouldeſt very well know that I Raphael am very ready at all times, to come, when God ſhall command me; but John Dee, I have no long meſſage, at this time, for thou haſt Gods full purpoſe and his will, in what he would have thee to enter into, and becauſe that thou ſhalt well know that even now at your departing, the one from the other, it hath pleaſed God to ſend me to let thee to underſtand that for this time no more matters (as concerning what thou art taught) ſhall not (at this time) no more be ſpoken of, untill ſuch time as God ſhall appoint, at your next meeting and coming together, that then, if there be any thing, that is not done of you, ſo far forth as it is in your power to fulfill it, if any ſuch default in you be, I will then put you in remembrance of it, and help you in any thing which you ſhall doubt of: and if you have any queſtion or demand to aſk of me, even now, I am very ready in few words to anſwer you, and then in his name, who hath ſent me (that is the Almighty) I muſt return therefore, if you have to ask do it.

△.... As concerning Mr. John of the Iſle of Man, his pitiful caſe hath moved my compaſſion.

Raph.... John Dee, aſſure thy ſelf, that as thou doſt moſt heartily, with a good faith in God, that thou mighteſt be that man wherein God will moſt mercifully help his diſtreſſed caſe, therefore I anſwer thee, that God hath, and he will hear thee, to thy comfort therein, and to the great comfort of the man whom that cauſe doth belong unto. God will mercifully help the cauſe ſo ſhortly, as his will and pleaſure is to be done in it. So much I have ſaid for this.

△.... I thank God moſt heartily for his ſo great mercies.

△.... John Pontoys, my great friend, earneſtly deſireth to know his good Angel.

Raph. .... John Dee, for thy ſake he ſhall know his good Angel, but let it not be with him hereafter to have a pride in mind, that God hath made known unto him his good angel, for no man upon the face of the earth can have a better then he hath, for Uriel is his appointed Angel from his birth to this day, and ſo ſhall continue with him to the appointed time, that God will take his life away in ſeparating his ſoul from his body, for Uriel hath been under God his deliverer forth of many dangers, and ſo he ſhall be his defence under God to his lifes end. And for this, I have made the matter plainly known unto you. Procede.

△.... Secondly, John Pontoys is deſirous to know the end of the Poliſh troubles.

Raph.... John Dee, in few words, for that matter, I anſwer thee. Thoſe troubles will ſomewhat end to his loſſe; but it ſhall be no great matter, ſo that God will work the caſe that it ſhall end to his liking. And thus much for this I have ſaid.

△.... As concerning the man and the Treaſure, I am deſirous to know whether he will be content to aſſign his title to Bartholomew, upon ſome portion thereof delivered unto him; and what other he hath made acquainted with the matter; and whether it may not by Gods good liking be ſet up without digging.

Raph .... John Dee, in all this I hear thee, and I know thine intent herein. That man may be reaſonably ruled, but yet he will not put over his title therein; but he hath 4. that beknowing how the matter doth ſtand with him, and ſo much as he doth know, he hath made them to know as much as himſelf: Therefore aſſure thy ſelf that he ſhall be ruled, and that it ſhall not be as he will. If he will not be ordered in ſuch ſort and good councel as I Raphael ſhall give unto this Bartholomew at that time, that then he ſhall have no part of it, but I certifie you that he will be ruled; but onely the others, which I have made known unto you, they will not come to ſo good courſe in the matter as he will. Therefore let it reſt, I will direct Bartholomew in the matter which ſhall be to his good, or elſe it ſhall not come to his hand, the which you have to know of. And for this, now I have ſaid.

John Dee, it is the will and purpoſe of God, that it ſhall come by breaking of the ground, becauſe that God will have all things done well, that no diſcord may break out betwixt the parties hereafter. And ſo now in Gods name I have ſaid.

△.... Moſt humbly I thank and praiſe Almighty God for his infinite mercies and favour, beſeeching him to aſſiſt me evermore. Amen.

Note. John Dee, that is the plain meaning, wherein it is ſaid, not to do thee good, becauſe it will be ſomething too long (for thou art ready for it, if it were now, therefore with all haſt, ſo much as is in Gods will to be done in it, it ſhall be haſtened forward to do thee good.

And now I have plainly ſpoken unto thee in this caſe, my time appointed of God is at hand.

Foreward by the Editor

THIS PROJECT came to my attention a decade ago while socializing with a business associate. During the late hours one evening while discussing pillow books, he mentioned that Doctor Dee may have written such a work which still hadn't found its way into print and that a mutual acquaintence of ours, Richard Brzustowicz, had made a faithful transcription of the original manuscript during one of his visits to England decades before. The lore given to me at the time is that Dee had either authored or transcribed the work and presented it to Sir Edward Kelly as a wedding gift, presumably during his nuptials with Jane (or Joan) Cooper in 1582. I contacted Richard and he both confirmed the legend and graciously provided me with a copy of his transcription along with Meier's excellent presentation of the work.

While the task of the Latin translation seemed like it'd be child's play for someone with Michael Putnam's ability, I wondered whether having Meier's entire analysis translated wouldn't be a wiser avenue to pursue but I eventually abandoned that idea as impractical. In the interim, several other projects presented themselves and Tuba Veneris fell by the wayside. Seven years ago, I developed a proof copy of the book as it stood and was less than enthusiastic about the results so I decided to shelve it until it'd matured a bit. Circumstances at the time made it necessary for me to learn the art of bookbinding in order to keep publishing at all, so I busied myself with focusing on learning to become an adequate bookbinder. I continued to collect material for inclusion in what I envisioned to be the present volume and some time later I ran across a paper Phil Legard wrote on the subject of the Dee manuscript and decided to ask him whether he'd allow me to include his excellent treatise and he graciously accepted my invitation.

Today, a decade after beginning this project, I feel the book as a whole is of sufficiently high enough quality to warrant being offered to the public. When I embarked on this project, no other English translation of the work existed and since then a couple others have seen the light of day. I'll leave it up to you, Gentle Reader, to weigh the the combined efforts you now hold in your hands against those others which have been offered to you.

PREFACE
FROM THE TRANSLATOR

Michael Putman

Preface from the Translator

It was with profound pleasure and gratification that I accepted the task of producing the first English translation of the Tuba Veneris. It is not often one is able to render the goddess of love such a service, and I am humbled to have been given the opportunity.

Although there are three known MSS of the "Tuba" and a 1794 printed edition in Latin and German, I made the translation from the typescript Latin text given in Joerg M. Meier's German translation and commentary (Das Buechlein der Venus ["Libellus Veneris Nigro Sacer"]: Eine magische Handschrift des 16. Jh. Bonn, 1990). Meier edited his Latin text primarily from Warburg MS FBH510, which is the oldest extant. His edition includes an apparatus criticus, and as might be expected the later MSS show various nonsensical variations from the Warburg, whence they probably derive. Very rarely does Meier reject the Warburg attestation for that of one of the later MSS.

Early magical texts are notoriously pseudepigraphical. The authorship of the Tuba Veneris has been ascribed to John Dee, for the author gives his name as Dee in the text itself. There is, however, much room for doubt. In the above cited volume, Meier lays out the case both for and against Dee as the author.

Meier gives several points leading to suspicion of forgery. The first of these is that all the surviving manuscripts, including the earliest Warburg MS, were produced on the Continent, as evidenced by the script; thus Dee's autograph is not recognizable as his own. Moreover, there is no reference to the "Tuba" in any of Dee's diaries or other surviving writings. Another point against Dee as the author is the fact that the date of the text's composition is given as June 4, 1580, and the place given as London—this, although Dee's private diary states that he was at his home in Mortlake on June 7 and most probably on June 3 as well. There is also the question of why such a text should have been written in London and not Mortlake, where Dee's magical and alchemical experiments had been taking place in any event. Moreover, June 4 was a Saturday and not a Friday, even though the latter day would be more appropriate for the composition and consecration of a book dedicated to Venus. A final consideration is that the type of magic in the "Tuba" is of a nigromantic variety in as much as it involves forcibly evoking and binding spirits, whereas the magic that Dee was practicing during the 1580's was of a more religious nature, with prayer as its basis and pious supplication of God's holy angels as its central method.

For all of that, Meier admits, the Latin is of the good neo-classical style, with very few Medieval words (I note that it is similar in that respect to the Latin in Dee's Propaedeumata Aphoristica et al.); furthermore, the Warburg MS can be dated to around 1600, give or take twenty years, placing it within the span of Dee's lifetime. Meier also notes that few forgeries give an exact time and date of composition as does the "Tuba".

Another interesting point here is that Dee did have a certain affection for the Angel of Venus, a fact which Meier also notes: "Deutlich wird ebenfalls eine gewisse Vorliebe Dees fuer den Engel der Venus—dem er offenbar einen besonderen Abschnitt in seinem... Buch of Famous and Rich Discoveries widmete." Moreover, Dee's diaries do show that Dee and Kelly were wont to pester the angels on occasion for help in finding buried treasure, one of the goals of the "Tuba". Finally, there is the consideration that most pseudoepigraphical forgeries were attributed to magicians either partially or wholly mythical, or else long dead; the "Tuba", however, was likely written in Dee's own lifetime, when he was being somewhat defamed and slandered as a necromancer, but still not nearly as well-known or likely a candidate for reputed authorship of a forgery as Solomon, Agrippa, or Faust. Ultimately Meier concludes that if it is a forgery, it is a highly unusual one, probably written by a Continental author in all likelihood familiar with the person of Dee and somewhat familiar with his magical pursuits.

I personally am forced to agree with Meier that the weight of the evidence leans against Dee as author, but that there is at present no final conclusion to the matter. We may now say a few things about the content of the text itself, and my translation thereof.

The operative magic the text describes contains many elements that will be familiar to modern day lovers of the magical arts—the use of the circle, the burning of the seals of the spirits to compel obedience, the blowing of a trumpet before calling the spirits (cf. The Key of Solomon), the author's exhortation that the operator be stern and resolute and not let himself be cozened by the spirits or reduced to haggling with them, etc.

Meier gives a detailed analysis and commentary of the text in his edition, to which the reader is again referred. His opinion is that the Tuba Veneris as a whole stands in the tradition of Agrippa, pseudo-Agrippa, and the Heptameron of Peter of Abano ("Der Text...steht weitgehend in der Tradition des IV. Buches der Occulta Philosophia Agrippas und das Heptameron des Pietro de Albano.")

The actual names of the spirits are similar to those found in the "Herpentil" and the Libellus St. Gertrudis, and in fact Meier believes that the compiler of the "Herpentil" is using the "Tuba" as his source for these names ("Dies bestaetigt den bereits oben geauesserten Verdacht, das es sich bei diesem Text um eine relativ junge Kompilation handelt, so das man den Libellus Veneris mit Sicherheit als das weit aeltere Werk wird bezeichnen duerfen, das sehr wahrscheinlich eine Quelle fuer den Kompilator des Herpentil geliefert hat.") The barbarous names of evocation found in the conjurations are also very similar to those found in these works. The sigils of the spirits appear to be derived by a similar method as given in Agrippa for deriving the sigils of planetary spirits and intelligences ("Agrippa erklaert [III.30] eine Art der Bildung von Sigillen mittels einer kryptographischen Methode... Der Grundtypus solcher Figuren ist dem des vorliegenden Sigills sehr aehnlich.")

Finally, a note on my translation itself. Since our text is a practical magical manual and not a literary work, I have opted to give a fairly literal translation. It should also be noted that I have maintained the author's capitalization of certain words.

I wish to thank Professor Frank T. Coulson of the Ohio State University for his consideration and assistance in preparing this translation. His instruction in paleography and post-classical Latin has been most helpful.

THE MAGIC
OF THE TUBA VENERIS

Philip Legard

The Magic of the Tuba Veneris

LIBELLUS Veneri Nigro Sacer, or Tuba Veneris, is undoubtedly one of the most mysterious texts of ritual magic that has thus far come to light. Attributed to the renowned English magus and mathematician, Dr. John Dee, the grimoire sets itself apart from the highly formulaic literature of ritual magic by possessing subtle hints of genuine artistic merit and a profound understanding of the more cerebral, Classically learned magical theory of Agrippa et al. Within the context of a work on ritual magic the text conveys attitudes symptomatic to the rebirth of Classical learning that characterised the Renaissance and whose legacy even now influences European culture.

Upon first reading the text everything we see raises more questions than answers. Who exactly is this 'Black Venus'? Did John Dee really compose the ritual? What exactly are the natures of the 'daemons' that are discussed within the text? What do the barbarous words of their invocations signify? The Tuba Veneris may be a short work, but it is an enigmatic one. In spite of its brevity it is a work of no mean depth, some of which I hope to cast light upon by way of this introduction.

John Dee and the Solomonic Tradition

The Tuba Veneris exists in several manuscripts, of which the Warburg copy is thought to be the oldest.[1] Although the manuscript probably dates from the first half of the 17th century, possibly even being composed toward the end of Dee's life, the flowing hand preserved in the manuscript is certainly not that of Dee.

Aside from the graphological differences, there is significant documentary evidence that indicates the attribution to Dee is spurious.[2] It is well known that Dee was extremely concerned about having his name connected with dubious magical practices. His particular interest in Cabalistic and alchemical works had not gone unnoticed amongst his contemporaries, most notable among them John Foxe author of the monumental and immensely popular Actes and Monuments of the Church (1563). Discussing the trial and martyrdom of Archdeacon John Philpot, Foxe refers to Dee, who was one of the examiners in the case, as 'the great Conjuror'.[3] This incensed Dee and it seems that he took the opportunity to rebuff his critics in his Preface to Euclid (1570), where he interrupts his discussion of thaumaturgy to rail against those who confuse natural magic with sorcery and conjuration.[4] A similar vindication against such rumours is the cornerstone of his Discourse Apologeticall (1599), which proclaims to be "a plaine Demonstration, and feruent Protestation, for the lawfull, sincere, very faithfull and Christian course, of the Philosophicall studies and exercises, of a certain studious Gentleman."[5]

In addition to this Dee, toward the end of his life, petitioned James I to allow him to prove such continued allegations fallacious in a court of law.[6] This indicates that defamation by way of connection with superstitious magical arts was a life-long concern. It seems doubtful, therefore, that he would sign his name on a document that so explicitly deals, as we shall see, with the conjuration of evil spirits. It seems far more likely that the Tuba Veneris was the work of a 17th century author, who, being acquainted with Dee's reputation and having a superficial understanding of his magical work and interests, added his name as a stamp of authority upon his text.[7]

The pseudepigraphic attribution of magical works is a regular feature of the genre of grimoire literature. Almost invariably these works are attributed to some learned and respected historical figure to lend authority to their contents. Often Solomon is alleged to be the author, and indeed, one of the oldest known examples is the Testament of Solomon, which dates from between the 1st and 3rd centuries AD, while works from Coptic Egypt from around the same period also employ similar attributions, claiming figures such as Moses, Thoth, the Apostles, even Jesus and Mary themselves as the authors of magical tracts.[8]

By the time we reach the period in which the Tuba Veneris was probably composed, the early 17th century, we find many comprehensive works circulating in manuscript form that are attributed to favourite ancient authorities such as Solomon, Hermes and Ptolemy, along with more recent figures such as Peter d'Abano and Cornelius Agrippa.[9] The Tuba Veneris bears the hallmarks of a text that derives from these traditions, although this is coupled with the Classical learning so evident during the Renaissance and Baroque periods–in particular the streams of Neoplatonic thought that Agrippa disseminated to his magically-minded audience via the Three Books of Occult Philosophy. Whereas many so-called Solomonic texts are variants on older works, compilations or simply 're-brandings' under the name of a different authority, this short text presents an entirely novel synthesis of pre-existing magical and philosophical traditions.

Whether the Tuba Veneris is the work of John Dee or not, I will let the reader decide. There are some tantalising similarities with his work. There is Dee's fascination with number, and even the possibility of a cryptographic cipher as found in Trithemius' Steganographia, a work that Dee became particularly fixated upon. The powers possessed by the daemons also particularly relate to Dee's interests. There is most obviously the passing reference to finding hidden treasure: an activity notably pursued by Dee and his scryers, although they were certainly not alone in supposing the landscape to be full of undiscovered hordes.[10] Additionally navigation is mentioned, which was of keen interest to this friend of Mercator who mentions that he has written several unpublished works on the subject in his Discourse Apologeticall. The daemons also have powers in business and war may allude to Dee's official duties on behalf of the crown.

Finally the book is dated June 4th 1580, London. From his Private Diary it seems that Dee was indeed in the vicinity of London at that time, it being one year before his angelic experiments with Barnabas Saul and Edward Kelly would begin.

The Classical Inheritance of the Tuba Veneris

The learned magical authors of the Renaissance, among them Ficino, Agrippa and Bruno owed a great deal to the rediscovery of Classical literature, which elevated their studies beyond common conjuration, into the realms of theology and philosophy.

However, there were still magical practitioners following an earlier model, one that sought power over spiritual entities through the imitation or adaptation of liturgical ritual and the related conventions of legal language: two imposing and domineering edifices of Medieval life. The books now popularly associated with the grimoire genre, from the Clavicules of Solomon to the Grand Grimoire, generally take their approach from this particular stream of magical thought.

It is apparent from the outset of the Tuba Veneris that the inspirations of the author of this particular grimoire lay beyond the inheritance of post-Medieval Christendom and Biblical legend. Rather they hearken back to the magical culture of the Classical pagan world. From the first sentence alone it is apparent that this text owes a debt to the mythologies of the pagan Mediterranean: "The name Venus among the Stars was given to me by the Gods (a Superis)."

This is to say nothing of the striking image of the frontispiece that depicts the goddess herself arrayed in a red-black mantle, holding her magical implements and standing upon an appropriately verdant patch of grass. Depicted as a fair-skinned maiden it is seems that her 'blackness' relates to her association with six nocturnal spirits, who are described as 'Infernal dwellers' in the introductory verse.

Throughout the history of myth and magic the traditional representation of Venus, or Aphrodite, has been that of a fair-haired and beautiful woman. Indeed, there may even be said to be a rough suggestion of Botticelli's The Birth of Venus in this image. In the context of magic it was through cross-pollination with Arabic astrological magic that these depictions of the gods and goddesses lost their pagan identities and became considered purely as celestial images: figures somehow impressed upon the world-soul, which could be exploited by creating talismans in their likenesses.

Such images are found in many sources, the most popular among them Agrippa's Three Books of Occult Philosophy and the Picatrix, although there are innumerable other minor works on such astrological magic.[11] Although they often refer to the talismanic image of Venus as being a naked woman none of the common sources describe the image of Venus as having a red or black mantle, nor any of the other accoutrements she is shown with on the Tuba Veneris frontispiece. The following example from Agrippa's Three Books is typical of the talismanic representations of Venus:

> "They made another image of Venus, the first face of Taurus or Libra or Pisces ascending with Venus, the figure of which was a little maid with her hair spread abroad, clothed in long and white garments, holding a laurel, apple, or flowers in her right hand, and in her left a comb. It is reported to make men pleasant, jocund, strong, cheerful and to give beauty."[12]

Some tantalising hints as to the ultimate inspiration for the figure of the black Venus can be found throughout Classical literature. Perhaps the name is derived from the cult epithet of Aphrodite Philopannyx–"Night-loving," or "Lover of all the night". This epithet occurs in the Orphic Hymn to Aphrodite, which the Tuba Veneris author would have known, although it would probably have been in the Latin translation if he were at all familiar with the work.[13] Additionally, in his Guide to Greece, composed in the 2nd century AD, Pausanias mentions an Aphrodite Melaina–the "Black Aphrodite"–so called "due to the fact that men do not, as the beasts do, have sexual intercourse always by day, but in most cases by night."[14]

Furthermore, there is a Latin work that enjoyed wide dissemination across Europe from the mid-15th century onward and contains some (possibly autobiographical) information relating to the cult of Isis-Aphrodite and her stygian connections. This work is Lucius Apuleius' Metamorphoses, or The Golden Ass. Composed at some point in the mid-to-late 2nd century AD, it tells of the bawdy adventures of the aristocratic Lucius who, by the third book, is transformed into an ass through reckless meddling with a witches' magical ointment.

In the eleventh book, Lucius desperate to turn back into a human calls upon the "blessed Queene of Heaven," resulting in a dream vision of the goddess that ultimately leads him to become an initiate in an Egyptian cult serving Isis and Osiris. The description of the vision itself reads not unlike one of the formulae for image magic occurring in Agrippa:

"First shee had a great abundance of haire, dispersed and scattered about her neck, on the crowne of her head she bare many garlands enterlaced with floures, in the middle of her forehead was a compasse in fashion of a glasse, or resembling the light of the Moone, in one of her hands she bare serpents, in the other, blades of corne, her vestiment was of fine silke yeelding divers colours, sometime yellow, sometime rosie, sometime flamy, and sometime (which troubled my spirit sore) darke and obscure, covered with a blacke robe in manner of a shield."[15]

Furthermore the goddess herself declares some explicit connections between not only the celestial regions, but also the underworld:

"I am she that is the naturall mother of all things, mistresse and governesse of all the Elements, the initiall progeny of worlds, chiefe of powers divine, Queene of heaven! the principall of the Gods celestiall, the light of the goddesses: at my will the planets of the ayre, the wholesome winds of the Seas, and the silences of hell be diposed; my name, my divinity is adored throughout all the world in divers manners, in variable customes and in many names, for the Phrygians call me the mother of the Gods: the Athenians, Minerva: the Cyprians, Venus: the Candians, Diana: the Sicilians Proserpina: the Eleusians, Ceres: some Juno, other Bellona, other Hecate: and principally the Aethiopians which dwell in the Orient, and the Aegyptians which are excellent in all kind of ancient doctrine, and by their proper ceremonies accustome to worship mee, doe call mee Queene Isis."[16]

The connection of this goddess with agricultural deities such as Proserpina, Demeter and Ceres is telling, since such goddesses were generally considered chthonic–the germination of seeds and so forth being processes that took place beneath the earth, on the margins of the underworld. The most explicit connection between this many-named goddess and the stygian world relate to her predictions pertaining to Lucius' initiation into her cult. Lucius glosses over the exact details when he comes to recount them, but it is evident that the initiation involves a descent to the underworld, domain of the patron deities of the sect–Isis and Osiris:[17]

> "Thou shalt live blessed in this world, thou shalt live glorious by my guide and protection, and when thou descendest to Hell, where thou shalt see me shine in that subterene place, shining (as thou seest me now) in the darkness of Acheron, and raigning in the deepe profundity of Stix, thou shalt worship me, as one that hath bin favourable to thee, and if I perceive that thou art obedient to my commandement, addict to my religion, and merite my divine grace, know thou, that I will prolong thy dales above the time that the fates have appointed, and the celestial Planets ordeined."[18]

However, it is important that we do not consider the Tuba Veneris as a revival or reconstruction of ancient paganism, or even a survival of Lucius' Isis cult. Like many of the works of learned occultism that flourished in the Renaissance, the pagan aspect is somewhat ambiguous. As I have mentioned previously, the imagery of the pagan world generally became assimilated into a mechanical system of astral magic whereby the ancient myths explained the natures of the planets and gave indications as to how their virtues may be exploited.

An allegiance to this type of astral philosophy is indicated by the author of the Tuba Veneris who refers to his depiction of Venus as "a certain image representing the figure of the planet." Therefore the Venus being referred to in the text is not intended as an object of pagan veneration, but is a talismanic image–an expression of the nature and influence of the planet Venus. In the ritual itself, the subjugation of the daemons occurs through the agency of Anael, the angel of the Venereal sphere, rather than explicitly via the goddess. Outside of the opening verse and reference to the "certain image", the goddess is never explicitly referred to. Such astral relationships with the pagan gods are hinted at in Agrippa, but are most explicit in Ficino's astrological practice, which used ancient Orphic Hymns to attract stellar influence and affect the soul of the singer, rather than to call down the favour of the pagan divinities for whom they were originally composed.[19]

Further hints of Classicism can be found throughout the text, such as the specification that the Seal of Venus should be engraved upon Cyprian copper, an allusion to the Classical myth that Aphrodite was born at sea and came ashore at Cyprus.[20] The author also demonstrates his Classical learning during the consecration of the magical book, or Liber Spirituum, for which he has composed three verses loosely in the Sapphic style. Despite the author seeming to pay little heed to the prosody of the Sapphic form, and one of the lines being too long, this verse is still something of a novelty in the realm of grimoire literature, which usually prefer more utilitarian forms of writing, generally drawing on a Biblical 'fire and brimstone' approach.[21] Since Sappho was best known for her erotic lyrics, the Sapphic verse-form would be appropriate for a work dealing with Venereal forces.

Some of the most striking aspects of the Tuba Veneris are the numerological characteristics. The text is dominated by instances of the number six, the use of which ultimately derives from Pythagorean philosophy. Although the number seven is most often associated with Venus, the author has obsessively structured his work around the number six: the seal is six-sided, there are six daemons and the circle is six feet in diameter, and so on. The only other magical text contemporary with the work that has a comparable numerological obsession is the Heptarchia Mystica–a magical work undoubtedly by Dee, which uses a sevenfold scheme throughout. However, the Tuba Veneris goes further than the Heptarchia in its meticulous employment of number.

The notion of six as a Venereal number is recorded in Agrippa's Three Books of Occult Philosophy. In his discussion of the numbers ascribed to the gods "by the Pythagoreans", Agrippa states:

> "The number six, which consists of two threes, as a Commixtion of both sexes, is by the Pythagoreans ascribed to generation, and marriage, and belongs to Venus, and Juno."[22]

By 'a Commixtion of both sexes' Agrippa is pointing out that six is, according to Pythagorean numerology, the multiplication of the first 'masculine' number (three) and the first 'feminine' number (two). This notion of odd numbers as masculine and even numbers as feminine is recorded in part five of Aristotle's Metaphysics:

> "...there are ten principles, which they arrange in two columns of cognates-limit and unlimited, odd and even, one and plurality, right and left, male and female, resting and moving, straight and curved, light and darkness, good and bad, square and oblong."[23]

It is worth noting that this system of binary correspondences, along with Theon of Smyrna's writing on the quaternary, are the ancient templates for the systems of occult correspondences that flourished in the Hermeticism of the Renaissance.[24] Most notable among these the tables in Agrippa's Occult Philosophy (1531) and the later collection of magical correspondences, derivative of Agrippa, that are presented in the Magical Calendar of Frankfurt Hermeticist Johann Baptista Grosschedel (1620).[25]

The number three seems to play a part of secondary importance in the text. For example, with the exception of Amabosar, the daemons mentioned in the text have names consisting of three syllables. This means that the total number of syllables in the daemonic names comes to 19 (3+3+3+3+3+4). 19 multiplied by 6, the number of prime importance in the text, is 114–the number of syllables in three Sapphic stanzas. This may, however, be coincidence–such are the difficulties of analysing works of this nature–or it may indicate that the daemons are bound to the book through a numerological relation between their names and the verses used to consecrate it.

The Influence of Contemporary Magical Literature

As has been noted above, Agrippa seems to have been instrumental in imparting Classical influences to our author. However, Agrippa's work concentrated almost solely on the theories behind natural, astral and spiritual magic. For Agrippa to set down the particulars of practice, such as the invocations, instructions for ritual regalia and so forth would undoubtedly have been folly on many levels. Therefore the detailed instructions for practical ritual magic generally circulated privately in manuscripts, occasionally being printed where sympathetic communities flourished, such as in the Rhineland Palatinate of the 17th century.[26]

It is evident that the author the Tuba Veneris had access to several such practical works. The Book of the Spirits, or Liber Spirituum, is mentioned in the Key of Solomon amongst others. However, the author's description of the book has striking similarities with the process described in The Fourth Book of Occult Philosophy, attributed to Agrippa. Both the Tuba Veneris and the Fourth Book describe the Liber Spirituum as containing the names, invocations and seals of the spirits. Agrippa mentions binding the book between two curious apocalyptic talismans on the first and last leaves of the book, presumably indicative of divine power over the spirits.[27] Similarly, the author of the Tuba Veneris suggests that the 'character of Venus' (presumably the double-sided hexagonal seal) be drawn upon the book, alongside the aforementioned 'certain image' of the goddess, presumably with a similar purpose in mind. In addition to this, the angel Anael is called upon to impose his authority over the daemons during the consecration of the book.

Such magical books seem to have been commonplace in the toolkit of the ritual magician. Both Mathers' composite Solomonic work and Agrippa's Fourth Book seem to indicate that the spirits will appear immediately upon opening the book and reading their conjurations.[28] Richard Kieckhefer, in his discussion of consecrated magical books, notes that the tradition of the Liber Spirituum was widespread by at least the 15th century and that if a magician were to find his rituals ineffectual then his book could be re-consecrated according to certain techniques and its efficacy to be restored. [29]

Once the book has been written and consecrated Agrippa advises caution, saying that the book "is to be adorned, garnished, and kept secure, with Registers and Seals, lest it should happen after the consecration to open in some place not intended, and endanger the operator." Although many modern authors have claimed that the (often very lengthy and tedious) prayers and conjurations of ritual magic should be addressed from memory, it would appear that the commonly perceived image of the magician in his circle reading aloud from a magical book is actually closest to the authentic procedure of magical evocation–at least in this instance.

The author's instruction to bury the magical implements "in the earth next to the powers of flowing water," until such time as they are required is significant. It stirs up once more the connection between Venus and the underground and is an explicit instruction to put the items in a place of Venereal influence. Agrippa provides a list of geographical features that are ascribed to the planets, amongst them:

> "To Venus, pleasant fountains, green Meadows, flowrishing [flourishing] Gardens, garnished beds, stews [brothels] (and according to Orpheus) the sea, the sea shore, baths, dancing-places, and all places belonging to women."[30] (My italics).

The association of water with Venus again harkens back to the Classical mythology surrounding the birth of Aphrodite–the goddess was born from foam when Uranus' genitals were cut off and cast into the sea by his son, Kronos.[31] Agrippa mentions Orpheus, who sings in his Hymn to Venus that she is "rejoicing in the azure shores, Near where the sea with foaming billows roars."[32]

As with the Liber Spirituum, the trumpet is not a unique ritual device. It is found elsewhere in magical literature, but nowhere is it as strikingly employed as in the Tuba Veneris. One is notably used in the Key of Solomon and related manuscripts as a preparation for the conjuration of the spirits, where it is blown to the "four quarters of the Universe."[33] The trumpet is generally an instrument associated with war, and therefore a Martial influence. However, there is a list of the musical instruments–music being associated with Venus–in Giordano Bruno's De Imaginum Compositione, which mentions the lituus, a type of curved horn used in warfare, whose form is similar to that held by the image of the goddess, although such instruments were usually cast in brass, rather than being made of animal horn.[34] The warlike nature of the horn could perhaps be interpreted as relating to the influence in war that the demons are claimed to possess. In the Tuba Veneris the horn is to be taken from a live, but presumably sedated, bull–the zodiacal animal of Taurus, whose ruling planet is Venus. After which the horn is washed with a solution of vitriol (copper sulfate) and wine vinegar. This results in a natural dye, giving the horn a blue-green tint.

The six-sided Seal of Venus itself is analogous to the Pentacle of Solomon employed in the 17th century magical text called the Goetia, as well as with the lamen prescribed by many other texts as a symbol of authority over the spirits. In both the Goetia and Tuba Veneris, the magician wears the seal, or pentacle, whilst carrying out the ritual operations. Both texts also employ the technique of applying heat to the seal of a spirit as a form of torture to encourage it to appear, or to discipline it if unruly. While the Goetia advises the use of a heated box, the Tuba Veneris recommends heating the seal itself and applying it to the wax characters of the spirits–an approach presumably used because wax is less durable than the metals upon which the Goetic seals are inscribed.

The magical circle is a device found in almost every grimoire. The primary purpose of the circle in ritual magic seems to be for protection: "It is," the author of the Tuba Veneris says "just as a very strong fortress, in order to protect themselves from the snares of the Daemons." The circle is usually inscribed with names and words of power and this particular example contains three bands with the following words derived from Judeo-Christian religious/magical formulae:

+Mi+chael+AGLA+Uri+el+ALPHA+ Gabriel+OMEGA+Raph+ael+ON

+Joan+nes+JESUS+Lu+case+NAZ+RENUS
+Ma+thew+REX+Mar+cus+JUDEORUM
("Jesus of Nazareth, King of the Jews")

+TETRAGRAMMATON+JEHOVA+ELOHIM+ADONAY

The circle is divided into four quarters, its fourfold nature reflected in the use of the names of the four angels of the cardinal points and the four evangelists. Interestingly, the order of the names to the cardinal points does not correspond to the order given in Agrippa or other sources with which I am familiar. For example, proceeding clockwise from the north, Grosschedel's Magical Calendar gives the orders Gabriel, Raphael, Uriel, Michael for the angels and the Matthew, Mark, Luke and John for the evangelists.[35] It seems as though the names attributed to the south and west have been exchanged for some reason. It seems unlikely, given his obvious learning, but one explanation for this is that perhaps the author was unconcerned with the symbolic relationship between names and directions, but solely sought to use them to strengthen his circle.

Many of the ingredients used by the author can be traced back to the work of Agrippa, or further back to 13th century Liber Juratus. The fumigation contains elements all found in book I, chapter xxviii of Occult Philosophy, in which Agrippa lists the stones, plants and animals under the power of Venus. The dove, a feather of which is used to write the Liber Spirtiuum, is associated with Venus in Agrippa's table of correspondences for the number seven.[36] Once more the vitriolic water is used, both to write the book and to consecrate it.[37]

It seems probable that one the sources the author consulted was some variant on Grosschedel's Magical Calendar, if not the version published by Theodorus de Bry in 1620. The Calendar is a synthesis of Agrippa's magical correspondences and material from Paracelsus, pseudo-Agrippa and other sources presumably from manuscripts contemporary with those authors. It presents a set of seven very interesting seals relating to the planets, which seem to increase in complexity as they progress from Saturn to Luna.

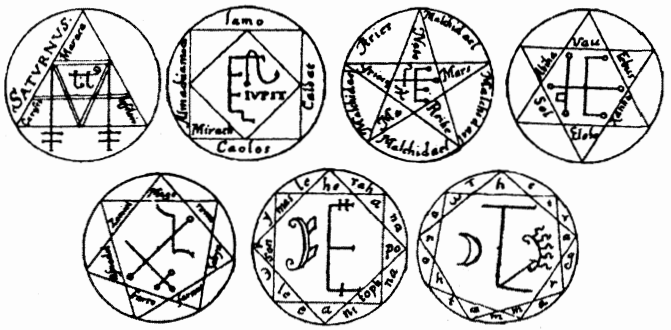

Fig. 1. Planetary seals from the Grosschedel's Magical Calendar (1620)[38]

The Seal of Venus prescribed by the Tuba Veneris contains a version of the sigil enclosed in the heptagon above, along with the sign of the angel Anael. This sign of Anael would have been well-known to practitioners of magic throughout Europe. It is most famously described in the Heptameron, a text of ritual magic attributed to the 13th century scholar Peter d'Abano, but which was most likely composed no earlier than the cusp of the 15th and 16th centuries. By 1600 it was certainly circulating alongside the pseudo-Agrippa's Fourth Book.[39] Ultimately these angelic sigils can be traced back to Medieval texts such as Liber Juratus and the 'Manual of Astral Magic'.[40] As an aside it may be worth noting that the Liber Juratus seemingly refers to the sign as being that of all the Venereal angels, rather than specifically belonging to Anael.

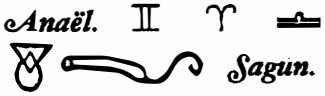

Fig. 2. The sigil and signs of the angel of Venus, from Turner's translation of the Heptameron (1654)[41]

The Seal of Venus also contains signs described by the Magical Calendar as 'characters of the planets'. These characters have their genesis in the art of Geomancy–a type of divination greatly respected by the authorities we have been discussing, who broadly considered it the 'sister' to, or terrestrial counterpart of, astrology.[42] This art involves the manipulation of 16 'figures', each composed of four lines of one or two dots–a system of binary divination in many ways superficially similar to the I-Ching.

The characters of Venus shown in the Magical Calendar correspond to the Geomantic signs of Puella and Amissio, and are imprinted on the Seal of Venus, along with a third character undoubtedly also of Geomantic origin. This character may be a miscopied version of Amissio, missing the upper dot, or it may indicate the Geomantic sign of Conjunctio, which was usually attributed to Mercury although the suggestion of a Venereal quality is obvious from its name! However, the latter theory seems doubtful at present: the lists of planetary characters from Geomantic sources of which I am aware do not have any sigils for Conjunctio that display this form. Additionally instances of the character relating to Amissio being miscopied in such a way are not unknown, for example The Key of Solomon preserved in Lansdowne 1203 misses the dot above the main body of the character.[43]

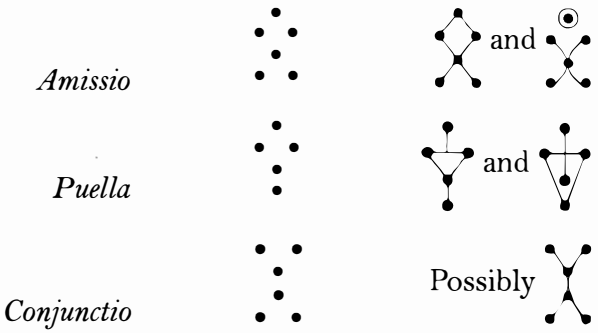

Fig. 3. Geomantic signs relating to Venus and their symbolic renderings.

The Geomantic signs also find their way into the sigils of the six daemons, along with the other elements that make up the Seal of Venus, such as the astrological symbols for Venus and her related constellations Taurus and Libra. The key elements in the daemonic sigils are here briefly tabulated:

Amabosar	Venus & ambiguous Geomantic character

Chthonic Powers and Steganographic Daemonology

While we are touching on the subject of the daemons it may be useful to look more closely at their natures as indicated by the text. There can be no doubt that these are not planetary daemons, but rather are the inhabitants of the underworld regions which the goddess figure had such a deep connection in her nocturnal and fertility aspects. Once more, the connection is made clear from the initial verses, which mention an 'infernal dweller' being subjugated by the sound of the horn. The author also refers to the magical doctrine that:

> "... the good angels have been placed over the evil spirits by God Thrice-Greatest and Best so that they should rule over them; on account of which when something is commanded by a good Spirit to a bad one, the former orders and calls the latter by means of his own capable invocation, and this perhaps may be in a language not particular to us mortals, or even comprehensible to us."

This interesting dualistic relationship between daemon and angel goes back to the very roots of the grimoire tradition, being found amongst the sources that make up the ancient Testament of Solomon (first to third century AD). In the Testament, the demons that spread disease can often be exorcised by the invocation of their corresponding angel. The Tuba Veneris confirms that these daemons are 'evil', and although it assures the reader that the techniques for calling them are safe unless abused, this does not seem like the kind of magic that Dee, with his pious thirst for divine knowledge, would have pursued.

One of the most enigmatic aspects of the text are the conjurations that accompany the daemonic sigils. These are strings of what have become known as 'barbarous' words– inscrutable formulae that may simply be nonsense or may once have been words in foreign languages. There are none of the familiar formulae of Judeo-Christian magic in these conjurations. Perhaps this is the 'language not particular to us mortals, or even comprehensible to us,' which the author mentions in his preface–the tongue of the spirits. Dee was, of course, notorious for his work with angels and the codification of the 'Enochian' language; perhaps this is being alluded to by our author. The conjurations may otherwise be in a magical language derived by similar visionary means ... or they may simply be 'gibberish'.

That is not to say that 'gibberish' words cannot be as magical as well worn foreign words or religious formulae. Aquinas discusses his belief that all the apparatus of magic, such as signs, pentacles and words can only work through being beheld by some intelligent entity. Which is to say that signs and words have no inherent power, rather their meanings are agreed by the parties involved, who act on them accordingly.[44] If such a position was considered then even the most obscure words and signs may be considered compacts between the magician and other entities.

There is, however, also the possibility that the conjurations are a cipher–an example of Steganographia, or 'Hidden Writing', an area in which Dee was also particularly interested, and the study of which went in and out of vogue during the course of the Renaissance.

There are some parallels that may be drawn between the Tuba Veneris and Trithemius' Steganographia–a work which Dee went to great lengths to procure, succeeding in 1562. Both works use invocations consisting of seemingly made-up words. Also, the works give little indication of the particular talents allocated to each spirit, instead speaking about them in general terms. The Tuba Veneris tells us that the spirits are useful in the following ways:

> "... for the finding of hidden treasures, for journeys, for Business, for Navigation at sea, for war, and for similar things which the Spirits are able to do for you and be of service to you."

Trithemius applies his Steganographic 'spirits' (or modes of ciphering secret messages) to similar situations. For example: a prince planning the overthrow a city uses Steganographic methods in order to securely share his plans; a discoverer of treasure wishes to notify trustworthy friends to help him remove it so he sends a ciphered message, and so on.[45]

However, attempts to apply the cryptographic techniques of both Trithemius' Steganographia and his Polygraphia to the mysterious conjurations in the Tuba Veneris have so far been unsuccessful.[46] If the conjurations are not examples of cryptography, then it is possible that they may have been derived by some kind of mechanical method for purely magical purposes. An example of such a technique would be a table of words or letters that creates permutations of a single magical word or name (as detailed in the various Cabalistic tables for discovering the names of astrological spirits in Agrippa's Occult Philosophy), or perhaps even something akin the complex letter squares used by Dee and Kelly to dictate the Enochian language.[47]

It seems there is some kind of structure to the language of the Tuba Veneris. The words used all have between two and four syllables, with certain syllables occurring frequently. For example, a significant number of words begin with 'Al' or 'Ham', have 'ga' for their central syllable or terminate with 'roth' or 'zoth'. It's tantalising to speculate that there must be some system behind these words, although exactly how it works still remains obscure.

There is also a curious relationship between the number of syllables in each conjuration, tabulated here, which may provide some further clue to the inner workings of the grimoire:

Spirit	Syllable Count
Amabosar	41
Belzazel	42
Alkyzub	44
Falkaroth	45
Mephgazub	46
Mogarip	47

Fig. 5. Syllabic count for each conjuration.

Possibly the above does indicate a numerological or cryptographic mystery here to be solved–or perhaps these words are indeed "not particular to us mortals".

Subsequent Influence: The German Tradition

It seems likely that the Tuba Veneris was composed in Germany, or at least enjoyed an enthusiastic reception there. Not only do several of the extant manuscripts belong to German institutions and have their provenance from German collections, but there is also a group of grimoires that seem to ultimately derive from the work.

These texts fall into what has become known as the 'Faustian' school of grimoire literature. Works of this genre are generally characterised by an unforgiving bloody fixation upon all things demonic. Although similarly bloodthirsty rituals are found in earlier texts of Medieval magic, the Faust-books rose to the level of popular and titillating literature in Germany being especially prevalent throughout the 18th century.[48] It is no surprise that when a German version of Tuba Veneris came into print for the first time it was in late 18th century Germany.[49]

Several German works relating to the Tuba Veneris can be found in the great 19th century compilations of printed works assembled by Horst and Scheible, along with other examples in manuscript form. Both Scheible and Horst preserve several works of interest attributed to Josef Anton Herpentil, variously described as a philosopher or a Jesuit.

The texts discussed here are difficult to date, especially in relation to the Tuba Veneris, although one is naturally suspicious the dates assigned to them by their printers and copyists. Generally these dates fall within the first half of the sixteenth century but appear to be spurious. For example: several Herpentil texts claim him as a Jesuit, although their alleged dates of composition invariably fall before the 1534 formation of the Society of Jesus![50] The Handwörterbuch des deutschen aberglaubens, an epic catalogue of Germanic lore, contains an article by Jacoby that dates the works of Herpentil to end of the 17th century, or early 18th century.[51]

Amongst the literature attributed to Herpentil, it is the Inbegriff der Übernatürlichen Magie that is of most interest. The Inbegriff seems to preserve more of the Tuba Veneris material than any of the other grimoires that will be discussed here, incorporating as it does all of the conjurations of the spirits into its text.

The Inbegriff details a ritual to conjure the three 'great princes', namely: Almischak, Aschirika and Amabosar.[52] Amabosar is, of course, one of pseudo-Dee's spirits, although the derivation of the other two names is as yet obscure.

Herpentil's 'divine magic' owes a lot to the Tuba Veneris in its method. The circle is similarly made from paper, although in this instance the words are inscribed with the blood of a white pigeon. The author also stresses the need to retire to an undisturbed place where the conjuror will withdraw with his circle and a wand inscribed with the seal of the spirit in weasel blood. The planetary seal also occurs, but has been transformed into the golden Seal of Jupiter, the names of whose angels are written upon it in the blood of a white dove. In keeping with the ritual of pseudo-Dee, this seal must be laid upon any money that the spirits bring to the operator and there is also mention of applying heat to coerce obstinate spirits.

As previously mentioned, the conjurations of the Inbegiff incorporate all of those from the Tuba Veneris. They occur in order, although they have been merged together to give one conjuration for each prince:

Almischak	Mogarip, Amabosar, Alkyzub
Aschirika	Falkaroth, Belzazel
Amabosar	Mephgazub

Fig. 6. The spirits of Herpentil and their corresponding conjurations in the Tuba Veneris.

While the dismissal of the spirit is also the same as in the Tuba Veneris, none of the subtleties that mark the author of the Tuba Veneris out as a man of sensitivity and learning are present in this or the other texts here mentioned. They are generally, save for the introduction, workmanlike and lacking in those elements that make the work of pseudo-Dee so unique. Even their introductions, usually providing us with a fanciful lineage for the art, with obligatory mentions of Egypt and the Middle East, are poorly executed mystical clichés compared to the Tuba Veneris and its pleasing attempts to pass itself off as the work of Dee in addition to its powerful verse and imagery.

There is a related work that seems to draw on both the Herpentil text discussed above and also the same author's Liber Spirituum Potentis. The work in question is Compendium

Magiae Innaturalis Nigrae, attributed to the famous alchemist Michael Scot and dated 1255.[53]

Two of Herpentil's spirits remain in the hierarchy discussed by Scot: Amabosar and Almischack, although their names have been corrupted to Almuchabosar and Almisch. Once again, the sigils provided for the spirits are different and in this case so are the conjurations. However, many aspects of the ritual are similar: the magus carries the wand, inscribed with blood (although of a white dove in this case), while an ornately decorated mitre and belt have been borrowed from the Liber Spirituum Potentis.

Finally, there is a very short work entitled Magia Ordinis, attributed to one Johannes Kornreutheri (Johann Kornritter), an Augustinian Prior. This work, like the Compendium, is also linked to Herpentil's Liber Spirituum Potentis in its use of the circle, staff and mitre–again liberally scrawled upon with animal blood. The date of authorship is allegedly 1515, although the entry for the manuscript version held by the Wellcome Institute dates it to the early 18th century.[54] Of the five spirits dealt with in Magia Ordinis, two have curiously familiar names: Azabhsar (Amabosar) and Mebhazzubb (Mephgazub).

Once again the ritual has aspects that ultimately relate to the Tuba Veneris, via Herpentil. The circle of paper and retirement to an undisturbed place are key elements, along with the taboo on talking during the ritual and use of heat to compel the spirits.[55]

Further connections between the texts under discussion can be drawn. Each text has a preface to the reader allegedly from the pen of the pseudonymous author. Intriguingly, as with the Tuba Veneris, the work of pseudo-Scot addresses the readers as Amatoribus Artis Magicae. All the texts make a connection between the practice of magical conjuration and the occult arts of the Middle East and furthermore, the Herpentil text perhaps alludes to its primary source as the Tuba Veneris by describing the magic under discussion as 'an English science'.

Since Amabosar is common to all of the works discussed above, a comparison between the seals and conjurations of the spirit is here provided:

As noted above, the presence of these spirits in these documents indicates a possible German provenance for the Tuba Veneris. Along with the 18th century German edition of the text, two of the three manuscripts of the Tuba Veneris belong to libraries in Germany–the Universitätsbibliothek Erlangen-Nürnberg and the Bayerische Staatsbibliothek.

Conclusion

Through this examination of the sources of the Tuba Veneris we may conclude that the author was a keen student of the type of magic advocated by Agrippa, and that he had diligently studied the Three Books of Occult Philosophy, constructing a practical grimoire from the theoretical discussions of magic contained therein. The work, with its Classical allusions and Neoplatonic and Pythagorean bias represents the apex of the grimoire genre, certainly in terms of the artistry and historical awareness of the author. The attempts at Sapphic verse, regardless of prosodic errors, also indicate an affinity with the Classical world and the workings of a sensitive and poetic mind, especially when compared to the unsophisticated conjurations found in most grimoires of the period.

However, it appears that this style of grimoire was an evolutionary dead-end. The works that were derivative of it lacked any of the charm and awareness that make it such an intriguing and enigmatic text. Instead the German grimoire-makers dragged the ritual through new and bloodier underworlds, hauling the spirits from their pagan Hades into a very Christian Hell. By the time Scheible published his epic Doctor Johann Faust's Magia Naturalis et Innaturalis even Anael, 'great prince of Heaven', had been assimilated into the infernal hordes of Faustian magic.[58] The Faustian author describes him as the "fifth lord of Hell and under the power of the angel Haniel," while the accompanying plate depicts the fallen one as a hunch-backed, red-eyed, ape like demon in fine clothes. From the trousers of these protrudes a conspicuously erect tail as he tugs on the cloak of a woman walking in front of him. Of course, like other classically inclined authors of the time, the author was well aware that he is living in the Christian era, and the pagan goddess is redefined as a planetary image of Venus, in line with the prevalent cosmological and astrological doctrines of the period. I conclude that the author was a Christian who saw nothing wrong with using knowledge that, since it originated from respected 'virtuous pagan' authors, could be seen as being compatible with Christian doctrines.

The piety of the author, however, may be called into question by his designation of the text as a work of the 'Black Art' or 'Negromancy'. He mentions three divisions of magical art, namely: 'Magic, Kabbala, and Negromancy'. I would suggest that this indicates the main streams into which the art of magic is divided. First there is the natural magic, which also encompasses astrological and talismanic works. Second is the magical theology of Kabbala. Therefore by 'negromancy' he intends to indicate all magic that involves the conjuration of spirits. To this end he makes it clear that in spite of the text dealing with stygian daemons, he is presenting a true work of magic that can be practiced without risking ruin in this world or perdition in the next. This is as opposed to the base works of magic that lead men into diabolic pacts and are rightly proscribed by the church. We also find this curious categorisation in the later German works. Herpentil, for example, refers to his art as 'Black Magic,' but insists that it is a divine and holy science.[59] Perhaps the implication is that such magic is 'black' in so far as it relates to the nocturnal conjurations of subterranean daemons, and yet 'holy' in that it operates through the aid of divine and celestial agencies, such as the angel Anael.

From the influence on the Herpentil, Kornritter and pseudo-Scot, all German publications, along with the geographical distribution of extant Tuba Veneris manuscripts, it may be speculated that the author was based in Germany and may have had an awareness of the Hermetic works being published by the Palatinate house of Theodorus de Bry, or at least had access to one of the sources used for the Magical Calendar. This would place the composition of the Tuba Veneris to circa 1620, that is, after De Brys publication of Grosschedel's Magical Calendar. It is this work that contains the seven planetary seals the provenance of which are otherwise–at the time of writing–obscure.

Regardless of the exact location of the author in time and space the Tuba Veneris provides us with a perfect example of how the theoretical elements of Renaissance magic, such as those discussed in Agrippa's treatise, may have been put into practice by an enterprising magician. Despite being a work of considerable brevity, I know of no other ritual magic text that employs the systems of occult philosophy and planetary correspondence that flowered in the wake of Agrippa so methodically and thoughtfully. On a practical level it is as if the author has provided us with a template or textbook example after which we may also compose our own planetary rituals: the Scythe of Saturn and Sceptre of the Phoebus almost demand such an interpretation.

In conclusion, the Tuba Veneris is truly a gift to all the lovers of the magical art.

THE LIFE OF DOCTOR JOHN DEE

Charles Mackay

The Life of Doctor John Dee

JOHN Dee and Edward Kelly claim to be mentioned together, having been so long associated in the same pursuits, and undergone so many strange vicissitudes in each other's society. Dee was altogether a wonderful man, and had he lived in an age when folly and superstition were less rife, he would, with the same powers which he enjoyed, have left behind him a bright and enduring reputation. He was born in London, in the year 1527, and very early manifested a love for study. At the age of fifteen he was sent to Cambridge, and delighted so much in his books, that he passed regularly eighteen hours every day among them. Of the other six, he devoted four to sleep and two for refreshment. Such intense application did not injure his health, and could not fail to make him one of the first scholars of his time. Unfortunately, however, he quitted the mathematics and the pursuits of true philosophy to indulge in the unprofitable reveries of the occult sciences. He studied alchymy, astrology, and magic, and thereby rendered himself obnoxious to the authorities at Cambridge. To avoid persecution, he was at last obliged to retire to the university of Louvain; the rumours of sorcery that were current respecting him rendering his longer stay in England not altogether without danger. He found at Louvain many kindred spirits who had known Cornelius Agrippa while he resided among them, and by whom he was constantly entertained with the wondrous deeds of that great master of the hermetic mysteries. From their conversation he received much encouragement to continue the search for the philosopher's stone, which soon began to occupy nearly all his thoughts.

He did not long remain on the Continent, but returned to England in 1551, being at that time in the twenty-fourth year of his age. By the influence of his friend, Sir John Cheek, he was kindly received at the court of King Edward VI, and rewarded (it is difficult to say for what) with a pension of one hundred crowns. He continued for several years to practise in London as an astrologer; casting nativities, telling fortunes, and pointing out lucky and unlucky days. During the reign of Queen Mary he got into trouble, being suspected of heresy, and charged with attempting Mary's life by means of enchantments. He was tried for the latter offence, and acquitted; but was retained in prison on the former charge, and left to the tender mercies of Bishop Bonner. He had a very narrow escape from being burned in Smithfield, but he, somehow or other, contrived to persuade that fierce bigot that his orthodoxy was unimpeachable, and was set at liberty in 1555.

On the accession of Elizabeth, a brighter day dawned upon him. During her retirement at Woodstock, her servants appear to have consulted him as to the time of Mary's death, which Circumstance, no doubt, first gave rise to the serious charge for which he was brought to trial. They now came to consult him more openly as to the fortunes of their mistress; and Robert Dudley, the celebrated Earl of Leicester, was sent by command of the Queen herself to know the most auspicious day for her coronation. So great was the favour he enjoyed that, some years afterwards, Elizabeth condescended to pay him a visit at his house in Mortlake, to view his museum of curiosities, and, when he was ill, sent her own physician to attend upon him.

Astrology was the means whereby he lived, and he continued to practise it with great assiduity; but his heart was in alchymy. The philosopher's stone and the elixir of life haunted his daily thoughts and his nightly dreams. The Talmudic mysteries, which he had also deeply studied, impressed him with the belief, that he might hold converse with spirits and angels, and learn from them all the mysteries of the universe. Holding the same idea as the then obscure sect of the Rosicrucians, some of whom he had perhaps encountered in his travels in Germany, he imagined that, by means of the philosopher's stone, he could summon these kindly spirits at his will. By dint of continually brooding upon the subject, his imagination became so diseased, that he at last persuaded himself that an angel appeared to him, and promised to be his friend and companion as long as he lived. He relates that, one day, in November 1582, while he was engaged in fervent prayer, the window of his museum looking towards the west suddenly glowed with a dazzling light, in the midst of which, in all his glory, stood the great angel Uriel. Awe and wonder rendered him speechless; but the angel smiling graciously upon him, gave him a crystal, of a convex form, and told him that, whenever he wished to hold converse with the beings of another sphere, he had only to gaze intently upon it, and they would appear in the crystal and unveil to him all the secrets of futurity.* This saying, the angel disappeared. Dee found from experience of the crystal that it was necessary that all the faculties of the soul should be concentrated upon it, otherwise the spirits did not appear. He also found that he could never recollect the conversations he had with the angels. He therefore determined to communicate the secret to another person, who might converse with the spirits while he (Dee) sat in another part of the room, and took down in writing the revelations which they made.

He had at this time in his service, as his assistant, one Edward Kelly, who, like himself, was crazy upon the subject of the philosopher's stone. There was this difference, however, between them, that, while Dee was more of an enthusiast than an impostor, Kelly was more of an impostor than an enthusiast.

* The "crystal" alluded to appears to have been a black stone, or piece of polished coal. The following account of it is given in the Supplement to Granger's Biographical History. "The black stone into which Dee used to call his spirits was in the collection of the Earls of Peterborough, from whence it came to Lady Elizabeth Germaine. It was next the property of the late Duke of Argyle, and is now Mr. Walpole's. It appears upon examination to be nothing more than a polished piece of cannel coal; but this is what Butler means when he says,

'Kelly did all his feats upon
The devil's looking-glass—a stone.'"

In early life he was a notary, and had the misfortune to lose both his ears for forgery. This mutilation, degrading enough in any man, was destructive to a philosopher; Kelly, therefore, lest his wisdom should suffer in the world's opinion, wore a black skull-cap, which, fitting close to his head, and descending over both his cheeks, not only concealed his loss, but gave him a very solemn and oracular appearance. So well did he keep his secret, that even Dee, with whom he lived so many years, appears never to have discovered it. Kelly, with this character, was just the man to carry on any piece of roguery for his own advantage, or to nurture the delusions of his master for the same purpose. No sooner did Dee inform him of the visit he had received from the glorious Uriel, than Kelly expressed such a fervour of belief that Dee's heart glowed with delight. He set about consulting his crystal forthwith, and on the 2nd of December 1581, the spirits appeared, and held a very extraordinary discourse with Kelly, which Dee took down in writing. The curious reader may see this farrago of nonsense among the Harleian MSS. in the British Museum. The later consultations were published in a folio volume, in 1659, by Dr. Meric Casaubon, under the title of *A True and Faithful Relation of what passed between Dr. John Dee and some Spirits; tending, had it succeeded, to a general Alteration of most States and Kingdoms in the World.

* Lilly, the astrologer, in his Life written by himself, frequently tells of prophecies delivered by the angels in a manner similar to the angels of Dr. Dee. He says, "The prophecies were not given vocally by the angels, but by inspection of the crystal in types and figures, or by apparition the circular way; where, at some distance, the angels appear, representing by forms, shapes, and creatures what is demanded. It is very rare, yea, even

The fame of these wondrous colloquies soon spread over the country, and even reached the Continent. Dee, at the same time, pretended to be in possession of the elixir vitae, which he stated he had found among the ruins of Glastonbury Abbey, in Somersetshire. People flocked from far and near to his house at Mortlake to have their nativities cast, in preference to visiting astrologers of less renown. They also longed to see a man who, according to his own account, would never die. Altogether, he carried on a very profitable trade, but spent so much in drugs and metals to work out some peculiar process of transmutation, that he never became rich.

About this time there came into England a wealthy polish nobleman, named Albert Laski, Count Palatine of Siradz. His object was principally, he said, to visit the court of Queen Elizabeth, the fame of whose glory and magnificence had reached him in distant Poland. Elizabeth received this flattering stranger with the most splendid hospitality, and appointed her favourite Leicester to show him all that was worth seeing in England. He visited all the curiosities of London and Westminster, and from thence proceeded to Oxford and Cambridge, that he might converse with some of the great scholars whose writings shed lustre upon the land of their birth. He was very much disappointed at not finding Dr. Dee among them, and told the Earl of Leicester that he would not have gone to Oxford if he had known that Dee was not there. The Earl promised to introduce him to the great alchymist on their return to London, and the Pole was satisfied. A few days afterwards, the Earl and Laski being in the antechamber of the Queen, awaiting an audience of her Majesty, Dr. Dee arrived on the same errand, and was introduced to the Pole.* An interesting conversation ensued, which ended by the stranger inviting himself to dine with the astrologer at his house at Mortlake. Dee returned home in some tribulation, for he found he had not money enough, without pawning his plate, to entertain Count Laski and his retinue in a manner becoming their dignity. In this emergency he sent off an express to the Earl of Leicester, stating frankly the embarrassment he laboured under, and praying his good offices in representing the matter to her Majesty. Elizabeth immediately sent him a present of twenty pounds.

On the appointed day, Count Laski came, attended by a numerous retinue, and expressed such open and warm admiration of the wonderful attainments of his host, that Dee turned over, in his own mind, how he could bind irretrievably

* Albert Laski, son of Jaroslav, was Palatine of Siradz, and afterwards of Sendomir, and chiefly contributed to the election of Henry of Valois, the Third of France, to the throne of Poland, and was one of the delegates who went to France in order to announce to the new monarch his elevation to the sovereignty of Poland. After the deposition of Henry, Albert Laski voted for Maximilian of Austria. In 1585 he visited England, when Queen Elizabeth received him with great distinction. The honours which were shown him during his visit to Oxford, by the especial command of the Queen, were equal to those rendered to sovereign princes. His extraordinary prodigality rendered his enormous wealth insufficient to defray his expenses, and he therefore became a zealous adept in alchymy, and took from England to Poland with him two known alchymists.—Count Valerian Krasinski's Historical Sketch of the Reformation in Poland.

to his interests a man who seemed so well inclined to become his friend. Long acquaintance with Kelly had imbued him with all the roguery of that personage; and he resolved to make the Pole pay dearly for his dinner. He found out, before many days, that he possessed great estates in his own country, as well as great influence; but that an extravagant disposition had reduced him to temporary embarrassment. He also discovered, that he was a firm believer in the philosopher's stone and the water of life. He was, therefore, just the man upon whom an adventurer might fasten himself. Kelly thought so too; and both of them set to work, to weave a web, in the meshes of which they might firmly entangle the rich and credulous stranger. They went very cautiously about it; first throwing out obscure hints of the stone and the elixir; and, finally, of the spirits, by means of whom they could turn over the pages of the Book of Futurity, and read the awful secrets inscribed therein. Laski eagerly implored that he might be admitted to one of their mysterious interviews with Uriel and the angels; but they knew human nature too well to accede at once to the request. To the Count's entreaties they only replied by hints of the difficulty or impropriety of summoning the spirits in the presence of a stranger; or of one who might, perchance, have no other motive than the gratification of a vain curiosity: but they only meant to whet the edge of his appetite by this delay, and would have been sorry indeed if the Count had been discouraged. To show how exclusively the thoughts both of Dee and Kelly were fixed upon their dupe, at this time, it is only necessary to read the introduction to their first interview with the spirits, related in the volume of Dr. Casaubon. The entry made by Dee, under the date of the 25th of May 1583, says, that when the spirit appeared to them, "I, [John Dee], and E. K. [Edward Kelly], sat together, conversing of that noble Polonian Albertus Laski, his great honour here with us obtained, and of his great liking among all sorts of the people." No doubt they were discussing how they might make the most of the "noble Polonian," and concocting the fine story with which they afterwards excited his curiosity, and drew him firmly within their toils. "Suddenly," says Dee, as they were thus employed, "there seemed to come out of the oratory, a spiritual creature, like a pretty girl, of seven or nine years of age, attired on her head, with her hair rolled up before, and hanging down behind; with a gown of silk, of changeable red and green, and with a train. She seemed to play up and down, and seemed to go in and out behind the books; and, as she seemed to go between them, the books displaced themselves, and made way for her."

With such tales as these they lured on the Pole from day to day; and at last persuaded him to be a witness of their mysteries. Whether they played off any optical delusions upon him; or whether, by the force of a strong imagination, he deluded himself, does not appear; but certain it is, that he became a complete tool in their hands, and consented to do whatever they wished him. Kelly, at these interviews, placed himself at a certain distance from the wondrous crystal, and gazed intently upon it; while Dee took his place in corner, ready to set down the prophecies as they were uttered by the spirits. In this manner they prophesied to the Pole, that he should become the fortunate possessor of the philosopher's stone; that he should live for centuries, and be chosen King of Poland; in which capacity he should gain many great victories over the Saracens, and make his name illustrious over all the earth. For this pose it was necessary, however, that Laski should leave England, and take them with him, together with their wives and families; that he should treat them all sumptuously, and allow them to want for nothing. Laski at once consented; and very shortly afterwards they were all on the road to Poland.

It took them upwards of four months to reach the Count's estates, in the neighbourhood of Cracow. In the mean time, they led a pleasant life, and spent money with an unsparing hand. When once established in the Count's palace, they commenced the great hermetic operation of transmuting iron into gold. Laski provided them with all necessary materials, and aided them himself with his knowledge of alchymy: but, somehow or other, the experiment always failed at the very moment that it ought to have succeeded; and they were obliged to recommence operations on a grander scale. But the hopes of Laski were not easily extinguished. Already, in idea, the possessor of countless millions, he was not to be cast down for fear of present expenses. He thus continued from day to day, and from month to month, till he was, at last, obliged to sell a portion of his deeply-mortgaged estates, to find aliment for the hungry crucibles of Dee and Kelly, and the no less hungry stomachs of their wives and families. It was not till ruin stared him in the face, that he awoke from his dream of infatuation —too happy, even then, to find that he had escaped utter beggary. Thus restored to his senses, his first thought was how to rid himself of his expensive visiters. Not wishing to quarrel with them, he proposed that they should proceed to Prague, well furnished with letters of recommendation to the Emperor Rudolph. Our alchymists too plainly saw that nothing more was to be made of the almost destitute Count Laski. Without hesitation, therefore, they accepted the proposal, and set out forthwith to the Imperial residence. They had no difficulty, on their arrival at Prague, in obtaining an audience of the Emperor. They found him willing enough to believe that such a thing as the philosopher's stone existed, and flattered themselves that they had made a favourable impression upon him; but, from some cause or other -- perhaps the look of low cunning and quackery upon the face of Kelly -- the Emperor conceived no very high opinion of their abilities. He allowed them, however, to remain for some months at Prague, feeding themselves upon the hope that he would employ them: but the more he saw of them, the less he liked them; and, when the Pope's Nuncio represented to him, that he ought not to countenance such heretic magicians, he gave orders that they should quit his dominions within four-and-twenty hours. It was fortunate for them that so little time was given them; for, had they remained six hours longer, the Nuncio had received orders to procure a perpetual dungeon, or the stake, for them.

Not knowing well where to direct their steps, they resolved to return to Cracow, where they had still a few friends; but, by this time, the funds they had drawn from Laski were almost exhausted; and they were many days obliged to go dinnerless and supperless. They had great difficulty to keep their poverty a secret from the world; but they managed to bear privation without murmuring, from a conviction that if the fact were known, it would militate very much against their pretensions. Nobody would believe that they were possessors of the philosopher's stone, if it were once suspected that they did not know how to procure bread for their subsistence. They still gained a little by casting nativities, and kept starvation at arm's length, till a new dupe, rich enough for their purposes, dropped into their toils, in the shape of a royal personage. Having procured an introduction to Stephen, King of Poland, they predicted to him, that the Emperor Rudolph would shortly be assassinated, and that the Germans would look to Poland for his successor. As this prediction was not precise enough to satisfy the King, they tried their crystal again; and a spirit appeared, who told them that the new sovereign of Germany would be Stephen of Poland. Stephen was credulous enough to believe them, and was once present when Kelly held his mystic conversations with the shadows of his crystal. He also appears to have furnished them with money to carry on their experiments in alchymy: but he grew tired, at last, of their broken promises, and their constant drains upon his pocket; and was on the point of discarding them with disgrace, when they met with another dupe, to whom they eagerly transferred their services. This was Count Rosenberg, a nobleman of large estates, at Trebona, in Bohemia. So comfortable did they find themselves in the palace of this munificent patron, that they remained nearly four years with him, faring sumptuously, and having an almost unlimited command of his money. The Count was more ambitious than avaricious: he had wealth enough, and did not care for the philosopher's stone on account of the gold, but of the length of days it would bring him. They had their predictions, accordingly, all ready framed to suit his character. They prophesied that he should be chosen King of Poland; and promised, moreover, that he should live for five hundred years to enjoy his dignity; provided always, that he found them sufficient money to carry on their experiments.

But now, while fortune smiled upon them; while they revelled in the rewards of successful villany, retributive justice came upon them in a shape they had not anticipated. Jealousy and mistrust sprang up between the two confederates, and led to such violent and frequent quarrels, that Dee was in constant fear of exposure. Kelly imagined himself a much greater personage than Dee; measuring, most likely, by the standard of impudent roguery; and was displeased that on all occasions, and from all persons, Dee received the greater share of honour and consideration. He often threatened to leave Dee to shift for himself; and the latter, who had degenerated into the mere tool of his more daring associate, was distressed beyond measure at the prospect of his desertion. His mind was so deeply imbued with superstition, that he believed the rhapsodies of Kelly to be, in a great measure, derived from his intercourse with angels; and he knew not where, in the whole world, to look for a man of depth and wisdom enough to succeed him. As their quarrels every day became more and more frequent, Dee wrote letters to Queen Elizabeth, to secure a favourable reception on his return to England; whither he intended to proceed, if Kelly forsook him. He also sent her a round piece of silver, which he pretended he had made of a portion of brass cut out of a warming-pan. He afterwards sent her the warming-pan also, that she might convince herself that the piece of silver corresponded exactly with the hole which was cut into the brass. While thus preparing for the worst, his chief desire was to remain in Bohemia with Count Rosenberg, who treated him well, and reposed much confidence in him. Neither had Kelly any great objection to remain; but a new passion had taken possession of his breast, and he was laying deep schemes to gratify it. His own wife was ill-favoured and ill-natured; Dee's was comely and agreeable: and he longed to make an exchange of partners, without exciting the jealousy or shocking the morality of Dee. This was a difficult matter; but, to a man like Kelly, who was as deficient in rectitude and right feeling as he was full of impudence and ingenuity, the difficulty was not insurmountable. He had also deeply studied the character and the foibles of Dee; and he took his measures accordingly. The next time they consulted the spirits, Kelly pretended to be shocked at their language, and refused to tell Dee what they had said. Dee insisted, and was informed that they were henceforth to have their wives in common. Dee, a little startled, inquired whether the spirits might not mean that they were to live in common harmony and good-will? Kelly tried again, with apparent reluctance, and said the spirits insisted upon the literal interpretation. The poor fanatic, Dee, resigned himself to their will; but it suited Kelly's purpose to appear coy a little longer. He declared that the spirits must be spirits, not of good, but of evil; and refused to consult them any more. He thereupon took his departure, saying that he would never return.

Dee, thus left to himself, was in sore trouble and distress of mind. He knew not on whom to fix as the successor to Kelly for consulting the spirits; but at last chose his son Arthur, a boy of eight years of age. He consecrated him to this service with great ceremony, and impressed upon the child's mind the dignified and awful nature of the duties he was called upon to perform; but the poor boy had neither the imagination, the faith, nor the artifice of Kelly. He looked intently upon the crystal, as he was told; but could see nothing and hear nothing. At last, when his eyes ached, he said he could see a vague indistinct shadow; but nothing more. Dee was in despair. The deception had been carried on so long, that he was never so happy as when he fancied he was holding converse with superior beings; and he cursed the day that had put estrangement between him and his dear friend Kelly. This was exactly what Kelly had foreseen; and, when he thought the Doctor had grieved sufficiently for his absence, he returned unexpectedly, and entered the room where the little Arthur was in vain endeavouring to distinguish something in the crystal. Dee, in entering this circumstance in his journal, ascribes this sudden return to a "miraculous fortune," and a "divine fate;" and goes on to record that Kelly immediately saw the spirits, which had remained invisible to little Arthur. One of these spirits reiterated the previous command, that they should have their wives in common. Kelly bowed his head, and submitted; and Dee, in all humility, consented to the arrangement.

This was the extreme depth of the wretched man's degradation. In this manner they continued to live for three or four months, when, new quarrels breaking out, they separated once more. This time their separation was final. Kelly, taking the elixir which he had found in Glastonbury Abbey, proceeded to Prague, forgetful of the abrupt mode in which he had previously been expelled from that city. Almost immediately after his arrival, he was seized by order of the Emperor Rudolph, and thrown into prison. He was released after some months' confinement, and continued for five years to lead a vagabond life in Germany, telling fortunes at one place, and pretending to make gold at another. He was a second time thrown into prison, on a charge of heresy and sorcery; and he then resolved, if ever he obtained his liberty, to return to England. He soon discovered that there was no prospect of this, and that his imprisonment was likely to be for life. He twisted his bed-clothes into a rope, one stormy night in February 1595, and let himself down from the window of his dungeon, situated at the top of a very high tower. Being a corpulent man, the rope gave way, and he was precipitated to the ground. He broke two of his ribs, and both his legs; and was otherwise so much injured, that he expired a few days afterwards.

Dee, for a while, had more prosperous fortune. The warming-pan he had sent to Queen Elizabeth was not without effect. He was rewarded, soon after Kelly had left him, with an invitation to return to England. His pride, which had been sorely humbled, sprang up again to its pristine dimensions; and he set out for Bohemia with a train of attendants becoming an ambassador. How he procured the money does not appear, unless from the liberality of the rich Bohemian Rosenberg, or perhaps from his plunder. He travelled with three coaches for himself and family, and three waggons to carry his baggage. Each coach had four horses, and the whole train was protected by a guard of four and twenty soldiers. This statement may be doubted; but it is on the authority of Dee himself, who made it on oath before the commissioners appointed by Elizabeth to inquire into his circumstances. On his arrival in England he had an audience of the Queen, who received him kindly as far as words went, and gave orders that he should not be molested in his pursuits of chemistry and philosophy. A man who boasted of the power to turn baser metals into gold, could not, thought Elizabeth, be in want of money; and she, therefore, gave him no more substantial marks of her approbation than her countenance and protection.

Thrown thus unexpectedly upon his own resources, Dee began in earnest the search for the philosopher's stone. He worked incessantly among his furnaces, retorts, and crucibles, and almost poisoned himself with deleterious fumes. He also consulted his miraculous crystal; but the spirits appeared not to him. He tried one Bartholomew to supply the place of the invaluable Kelly; but he being a man of some little probity, and of no imagination at all, the spirits would not hold any communication with him. Dee then tried another pretender to philosophy, of the name of Hickman; but had no better fortune. The crystal had lost its power since the departure of its great high-priest. From this quarter then Dee could get no information on the stone or elixir of the alchymists, and all his efforts to discover them by other means were not only fruitless but expensive. He was soon reduced to great distress, and wrote piteous letters to the Queen, praying relief. He represented that, after he left England with Count Laski, the mob had pillaged his house at Mortlake, accusing him of being a necromancer and a wizard; and had broken all his furniture, burned his library, consisting of four thousand rare volumes, and destroyed all the philosophical instruments and curiosities in his museum. For this damage he claimed compensation; and furthermore stated, that, as he had come to England by the Queen's command, she ought to pay the expenses of his journey. Elizabeth sent him small sums of money at various times; but, Dee still continuing his complaints, a commission was appointed to inquire into his circumstances. He finally obtained a small appointment as Chancellor of St. Paul's cathedral, which he exchanged, in 1595, for the wardenship of the college at Manchester. He remained in this capacity till 1602 or 1603, when, his strength and intellect beginning to fail him, he was compelled to resign. He retired to his old dwelling at Mortlake, in a state not far removed from actual want, supporting himself as a common fortune-teller, and being often obliged to sell or pawn his books to procure a dinner. James I. was often applied to on his behalf, but he refused to do anything for him. It may be said to the discredit of this King, that the only reward he would grant the indefatigable Stowe, in his days of old age and want, was the royal permission to beg; but no one will blame him for neglecting such a quack as John Dee. He died in 1608, in the eighty-first year of his age, and was buried at Mortlake.

The Little Book Sacred to the Black Venus

The name VENUS among the Stars was given to me by the Gods
Soon an Infernal dweller is present until the TRUMPET sounds
Behold the Daemon groans, subdued by the power of the SIGN
Well done! You return from the enemy an honored conqueror.

THE TRUMPET OF VENUS

that is

THE Invocation or summonings of Six Spirits existing under the Dominion of Venus, where is taught a method of completing the Seal of Venus and Her Trumpet, Circles, a Composition, the particular names of the Spirits, their Invocations and Sigils with their preparation. The consecration of the book, rites of operation. The banishing of the Spirits along with still many other things to be observed in this work.

John Dee
Sends Many Greetings to the Lovers of the Magical Art.

IT IS NEITHER our intent nor the Purpose of our little book to treat of the various definitions or divisions or Types or even the multitude of practices of the Black Arts. For in truth many authors have written much about this subject, although few authors have written few things clear and accurate; they have rather written volumes that are really very difficult in regards to comprehension and practice.

But the Trumpet we sing of here, Dear Reader, through its sound the Six Spirits which are subject to the Dominion of Venus are stirred forth to their dances. They oftentimes are stirred forth by me by the rule and method just as I have been taught.

For before all else it is necessary to use the Invocation particular to whichever Spirit you are calling. For not otherwise will they appear, and although I do not deny that they are able to be compelled to do so through strong conjurations (as like effective chains), still this is not to be done without great labor or through very difficult, tedious, and ample circumstances. If truly you have the knowledge of this Invocation—that is, of the names and summon-ings or the appropriate words by which the spirits are called forth and ruled by the very Angels of the Planets themselves—and if you do not lack the remaining requisites given in our little book, soon both without delay, noise, or terror and with every phantasm far removed you will be able to try to compel the spirit to assume a human form.

For you should know that the good angels have been placed over the evil spirits by God Thrice-Greatest and Best so that they should rule over them; on account of which when something is commanded by a good Spirit to a bad one, the former orders and calls the latter by means of his own capable invocation, and this perhaps may be in a language not particular to us mortals, or even comprehensible to us.

Among learned men there are indeed various opinions about this, but there is nothing certain as of yet. For indeed truly the greatest Creator of all things placed a certain Character and name upon every created thing just as it is said "He who numbers the multitude of the Stars and gives names to all things." (Psalm 146). However all the evil Daemons had names and sigils placed upon them by the Highest Creator when previously they were Angels and Stars in heaven; and through these same names and sigils it is wholly necessary to summon and compel them, by which means we are able to summon even the good angels, just as elsewhere I have taught and demonstrated.

This aforementioned science has been piously practiced by the ancient Hebrew and Chaldean Fathers and by many others, and may also be practiced nowadays by pious men. For therefore the Sciences are revealed: Magic, Qabala, and Negromancy, which previously flourished not a little among the Egyptians, Persians, and Arabs; when it was also practiced in a depraved, usurped, and deformed manner, in that men would willingly give themselves over into the hands of evil Daemons by means of blasphemous pacts, which certainly is horrible to hear.

On account of this most vile abuse this Art was piously forbidden by the Church and by the Secular Authorities, and for this reason one can find exceedingly few suitable books concerning its practice.

Therefore this our Trumpet, acquired by peculiar study, we desire to share with you faithfully for a good purpose, and by no means for your ruin (which arises from its abuse alone), and we bequeath it to you so that you may use it for your own good and to your advantage—e.g., for the finding of hidden treasures, for journeys, for Business, for Navigation at sea, for war, and for similar things which the Spirits are able to do for you and be of service to you. Practice and experience will be sufficient to teach you.

Beyond that are given other invocations or summonings of the Spirits which are made through their highest Princes which they have among themselves; but these obey with great difficulty, not otherwise than with great noise and by appearing in a most terrifying form, and not without great danger to the Operator.

Therefore this our Invocation of the Spirits, concerning which we are about to write, is particular to Venus; and for this reason it is called by us "The Trumpet of Venus", since indeed the evil Daemons are almost all subjected to the Angels of the Seven Planets, which Daemons however have been placed in this little book and are considered to be under the Dominion of Venus. Wherefore the book is entitled by us "A Little Book of Venus", and indeed it is to be consecrated to that Planet. We have now made a beginning towards this book's description, and we advise that you diligently listen and pay attention to the rest of it. Farewell!

Completed and written in London in the year 1580, on the 4th of June.

Chapter One

In what manner the Seal or Character of Venus is to be prepared.

THE first requisite for our Negromantic operation is the sigil of Venus which now is to be prepared as follows. ℭLet a piece of new Cyprian copper be taken which never has been used for anything else before. From this let a plate be cut in the size of the figure drawn a little bit below, and let it be cut according to the particular number of the planet—that is to say, into sex angles. On this is to be engraved with an iron or steel instrument the new and clean character. This is to be done however on the day of Venus in the third or tenth hour of night from the setting of the sun. If the space of one hour is not sufficient, then the next hour is to be awaited—that is, the tenth hour. For it is only permissible to do this in the hours of Venus and indeed (which again is to be noted) during the new moon; wherefore if in a single night in the two prescribed hours the sigil of Venus is not able to be completed, then the next new moon is to be awaited. After the sigil is completed, it is to be fumigated on the very day and hour of Venus.

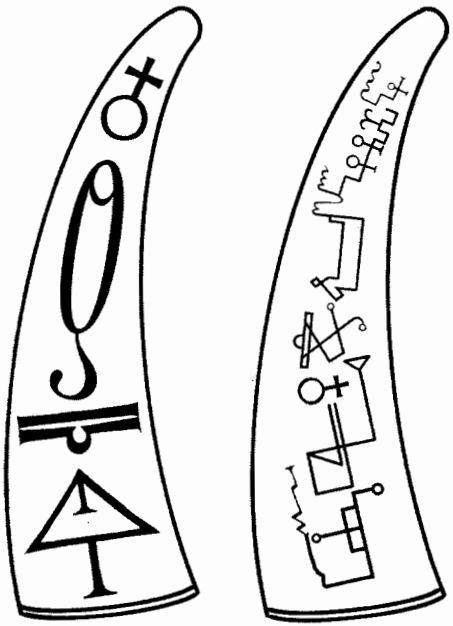
Let the fumigation be by the following types: Vervain, myrtle, and musk.

Let it be wrapped up in a new linen cloth and again in the aforementioned time of the day and hour of the new moon let it buried at night in the earth in the powers of the flowing water. Let it be unearthed on the following day and in the hour of Venus. Let it be preserved for the opportunity of the operation.



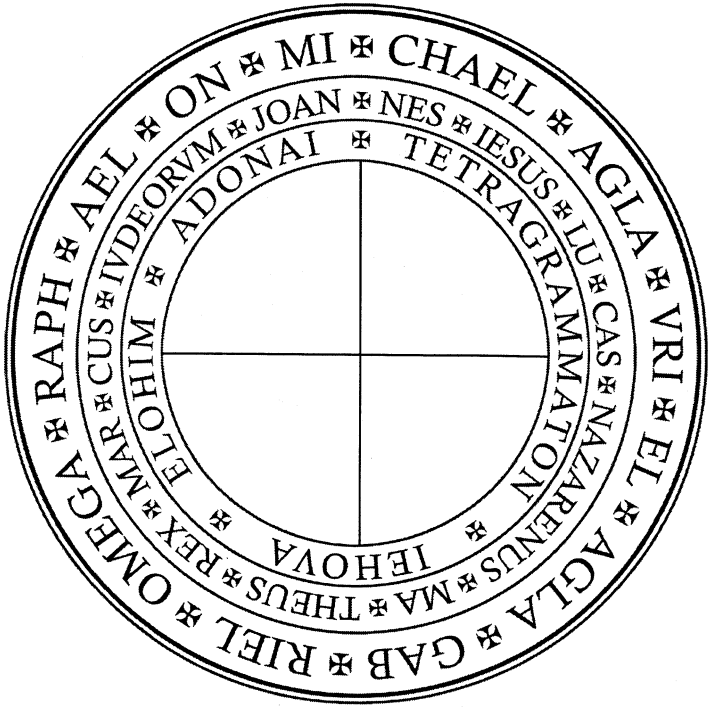
The Sigils of Venus

Chapter Two

In what manner the Horn of Venus is to be made.

LET A HORN be taken from a live bull, and let Vitriol which has been dissolved in vinegar made from wine be taken. Let the horn be washed and purified by the Vitriol. Using the aforementioned steel instrument let the characters be carved as shown in the following illustration. One must make certain that the entire preparation of the Horn, including the time which it is torn from the bull must be in the time, day and hour of Venus, just as was done in preparing the Sigil. Afterwards, it is enveloped in smoke, wrapped in linen, and buried together with the Sigil of Venus, then later unburied and preserved for later use.

The Trumpet of Venus.

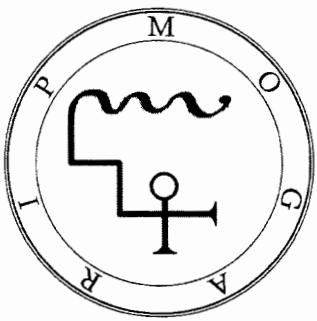


Chapter Three

In what manner the Circle is to be made.

BEFORE we proceed to the Invocation or summoning of the Spirits we must treat of the composition of the circle, by which all Negromancers always make use of in their operations just as a very strong fortress, in order to protect themselves from the snares of the Daemons. The composition of circles varies, however; some operators complete the circle in their houses with chalk, coals, or colors; some operators exorcising in forests or crossroads use a sword or certain staffs; but others complete the circle from parchment with an inscription of the Divine names, which method we ourselves elect for our own operation, and we leave this design to the rather fortunate reader just as we have left all the other necessary preparations. And indeed, for the sake of the fulfilling the scope of our little book we do include here the form and plan of the circle.

Therefore let parchment or virgin paper be taken, and let three circles be cut from it, to the breadth of a thumb. Let the first circle be of the size of six feet in diameter, and let the other two be narrower than the first by two or three fingers in width. Afterwards, in the aforementioned times and hours of Venus let the divine Names be inscribed with paints as shown in the following diagram. Finally let the finished circle be fumigated and let it guarded for use by burying it in the earth and letting it alone there.



The form of the Circle.

In What Manner The Sigils of the Spirits Are to be Made.

LET green Wax be mixed with soot, and from this mixture let little round chips be formed, and let the Sigil of whatever Spirit is to be invoked be carved onto these with a steel instrument. Let these things be done in a similar manner as the aforementioned preparations were done—in the time, day and hour of Venus, after which the Sigils are to be fumigated, then buried and let alone, preserved for the operation.

In What Manner That Little Book Is To Be Consecrated.

THE little book (in which the names and invocations of the spirits are to be inscribed) must be consecrated beforehand, as undoubtedly the ancient Magi did, who so instituted the consecration of similar books such that merely by opening the book the spirits would be greatly compelled to manifest, which however seems to us to be exceedingly dangerous, especially if such a book were to fall into the hands of men ignorant of this art. Wherefore our little book may be consecrated in the following manner.

Let the little book be made from parchment, on which let the character of Venus be inscribed and if it is pleasing, also a certain image representing the figure of this planet, with the sign of Venus above its head. Let the little book be entitled: A Little Book Sacred to the Black Venus.

Before the invocation of the spirits let there be inscribed in Red ink "The Trumpet of Venus", according to the Form and function of this little book of ours, which has been consecrated by myself and given to posterity with all other things appurtenant, in as much as fortune might have given all these things to you. The whole of the little book ought therefore to be written during the oftentimes before said times of Venus, for which is further required a feather from a dove and ink which has prepared from copper-sulfate water and which has been used be no one else. Also the operator is able to use a red or green color as he pleases, since these colors are wholly pleasing to our Planet.

After the little book has been made and written let it be fumigated. Then let Vitriolic water be taken with which the hand is to be filled, and the book baptized with it, saying:

I consecrate you, O little black book, to Venus
Let the Trumpet of Venus be your name
Let it be terrible and well known
To all the dwellers of the Underworld.

O Great Prince of Heaven Anael!
I humbly ask that you strengthen this book,
And let it be washed in your spring
For your eternal honor.

In the hours of Venus,
let the Dæmon inscribed therein
Fly hither quickly if this Trumpet sounds
And do that which I desire, though unwilling
Let him stand hither peaceably!

After this is done the book is again to be fumigated, and then wrapped in either a green or red cloth. Let it be buried in the earth with the other items, and at the prescribed time be unearthed and preserved for use.

In What Manner the Operation Is To Be Carried Out

F all of these aforesaid things have been prepared aright and are all ready at hand, and the operator has tested himself sufficiently, and has prepared himself so that he is capable and courageous (for this operation requires a man both dauntless and high-minded), in the same time which has often before been indicated—that is, in the hour and night of Venus—let him go to a place secure from any human disturbances; or let him go to his house, or better yet into a wood and crossroads deserted and unfrequented. There let the operator construct the circle and hang the seal of Venus over his neck. Let him then kindle the incense and begin to summon the Spirit from the assigned number chosen by him. Let the summoning of the spirit though be announced by the Trumpet of Venus, and let him call the Spirit by its own name, both at the beginning of the summoning and again at the end, but always with some pause.

Now let the operator welcome the arriving spirit with the following:

Hail, noble and obedient Spirit (here let the Spirit be called by his own name)! I command you by the name Adonai and by this Seal (here let the operator show the Seal to the Spirit) of the angel Anael, chief ruler of the sphere of Venus, so that you show yourself quietly and peaceably, and that you fulfill my will in all of the demands which I shall give you. This I charge you again by God the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit, and by the Triumphant Lord Jesus Christ who is coming to judge the world by fire.

After this, the Spirit will ask the Operator why he has been summoned, and what it is that the Operator wishes. Let then the Operator state clearly and distinctly what it is that he wants. Here it is to be noted that if the Spirits show themselves in any way obstinate, the Seal of Venus should be taken and placed over the fire or over the coals upon which the incense has been lit, or if incense is not being used (as at this point it is not necessary) let the Seal be held over a burning candle so that it becomes warm, and then let it be placed over the Sigil of the spirit which is being summoned. By doing this the spirits are greatly tormented, and they will ask the operator to stop torturing them; and they will no longer refuse to carry out his wishes.

Still let the Operator be not excessive in his requests and desires; for I may advise that you not perchance arouse the anger of the Divine Godhead. Nor should the Operator display an inconstant or hesitant mind to the wily Spirits; still less should he accept conditions of service proposed by them. But after he shall have given the spirits his commands with a strong and constant mind, let him consider their pretended difficulties or even threats to be as nothing, lest he lose his dominion over the Spirits.

Nor must the Operator any less beware lest he use the assistance of the spirits for impious and wicked ends, toward which indeed the Spirits lend themselves all the more promptly; and thus indeed does the soul lie open to the greatest harm, for while the operator seeks to exercise his power over the Daemons he hands over his soul into their horrible possession. Wherefore again, in a few words, we faithfully urge that anyone and everyone refrain from the abuse of this art. But if the Spirits fulfill the commands or will of the Operator, they are to be licensed to depart as follows.

The Banishing of the Spirits

Let the banishing be done just as the invocation, through the trumpet of Venus, with these words:

Norcados Fenoram Anosiren (let the spirit be called once by his own name and continue): Oparciim Amosan Zezaphilos Aspairath Anthyras Zyriffon.

After these words are heard, the Spirits will disappear, and it is then permissible for the operator to leave the Circle after making a benediction and giving thanks.

What Are Further To Be Observed In This Operation

IF AN experiment is to be done with companions let only the Operator himself call and speak to the Spirits, and let the others observe silence. But if the Spirits are commanded to bring coins or treasure, the operator must lay the Seal of Venus atop the coins or Treasure and afterwards empty the Treasure from its container, and transfer it into a new container that has previously been blessed and fumigated.

With these words then we finish our little book. But you, Dear Reader! Beware of abusing that which has been written here, lest you forget something, and if you do anything do it wisely, with a calm and steady mind, and this book will be of usefulness and solace to you.

But there remains only one thing, that we warn you in the event of a successful operation to be mindful to give alms to the poor, and so both in this life and in the next you will be blessed, and it will be propitious to us all when He whose Kingdom does not end will have come to judge the living and the dead.

Artis Magicæ

Non de variis Negromanticæ Artis vel definitionibus vel divisionibus vel Speciebus vel etiam multifaria ejusdem praxi hic scribendi nostra intentio Scopusque Libelli nostri est, quippe quam plurimi de his quam plurima pauci tamen pauca clara ac vera quin potius tum captu tum praxi difficillima scripsere volumina. Sed Tuba hic tibi canimus Amice Lectori per cujus Sonum Sex Veneris Dominio subjecti Spiritum ad choreas excitantur citantur ad normam et modum à me ipso prout edoctus sum saepe saepius exercitatum.

Citanti enim tibi Daemones ante omnia Vocatus Spiritui cuivis proprius necesse est. Secus haud quaquam comparebunt quamvis eos per fortes conjurationes ceu efficacia vincula cogi posse non negaverim non tamen sine ingenti labore aut circumstantiis prolixis amplivaguis et difficillimis.

Si vero hujus Vocatus, id est nominum ac citationum seu vocabulorum propriorum, quibus Spiritus ab ipsis Planetarum Angelis advocantur imperantur tibi notitia est nec requisitis reliquis in hoc Libello nostro assignatis carueris mox et sine mora strepitu terrore ac phantasmate omni longe remoto citatos â te Spiritum in forma humana comparere coactos experieris.

Scire enim te oportet bonos â Deo teropt. Max. malis praepositos esse Spiritibus ut in illos dominentur; qua propter si â Spiritu bono malo alicui praecipietur quidquam hunc ille competenti suo vocatu vocat jubetque, licet forte in lingua mortalibus nobis haud propria quin imo incognita.

Inter Doctores variae quidem de ea opinionem certitudo autem hactenus nulla. Verum enim vero Creator omnium maximus omni creaturae certum imposuit Characterem nomenque utpote qui numerat multitudinem Stellarum et omnibus eis nomina vocat. ψ al. CXLVI. Omnes autem mali Daemones, quum Angeli Stellaeque antecedenter fuerint in coelis, nomina Signaque illis â Summo creatore imposita adhuc dum retinent atque per haec ipsissima illos citare et compellere omnino necessarium est, quo modo etiam bonos Angelos advocare possumus, prout alibi docui et demonstravi.

Scientiam hanc praefatam ab antiquis Patribus Israëliticis Chaldeis aliisque pluribus pie exercitatam ac hodiedum â piis hominibus practicandam. Exinde enim revelatæ sunt Scientiæ: Magia, Qabala et Negromantia, quæ posterior apud Aegyptos, Persas et Arabes non parum floruit, licet execrandum in modum usurpata, depravata lacerata, hominibus per Sacrilega pacta in Dæmoniorum malorum mancipia se se sponte tradentibum quod certe horrendum auditu est. Propter pessimum igitur hunc abusum ab Ecclesia et Secularibus Magistratibus hæc Ars piè est interdicta atque ideo paucissimos idoneos de ejus praxi libros reperire fas est.

Tubam ergo hancce noctram studio peculiari adeptam fideliter tibi in bonum tamen finem nequaquam autem in tuum interitum (:qui ex soli abusione nanciscitur:) communicatam legatamque volumus ut pro bono tui ea utaris et commodo v:g: ad levandos thesauros absconditos ad itinera ad Mercaturam ad Navigationem ad bellum et similia ad quæ Spiritus prodesse tibi et inservire possunt uti. Praxis et experientia satis docebit. Dantur ceteroquin alii adhuc vocatus seu citationes Spirituum quæ fiunt per supremos illorum Principes inter semet ipsos habentes sed hi valde difficulter obediunt haud aliter quam cum ingenti strepitu et in forma maxime terribili comparentes non sine ingenti Operatoris periculo.

Hic noster proinde Vocatus Spirituum de quo scripturi sumus Veneri proprius est et ideo à nobis Tuba Veneris nuncupatur siquidem mali Dæmones Septem Planetarum Angelis vix non omnes sunt subjecti qui autem huic inserti sunt Libello sub Veneris duntaxat computantur Dominio ex quo capite Libellus Veneris â nobis fuit intitulatus quin etiam isti Planetæ consecrandus est ad cujus descriptionem jam initium facimus teque ad cuncta diligenter auscultare et attendere monemus. Vale!

Perfectum Scriptumque Londini

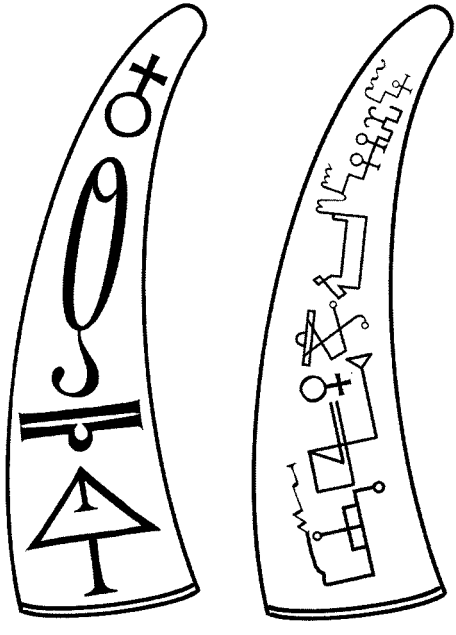
Tubæ Veneris Caput Primum

Quodmodo Sigillum sive Character Veneris pediciendum.

PRIMUM ad Negromanticam hanc operationem nostram requisitum Sigillum Veneris est quod modo sequenti præparandum. Accipiatur Pars æris Cyprii novi et nunquam usati perficiatur ex eo in magnitudine figuræ paulo post delineatæ Lamina quæ scindi debet secundum Planetæ numerum sibi proprium, id est in sex Angulos: cui deinde instrumento ferreo vel chalybeo nova pariter et munda Character insculpatur fiat autem hoc in die de nocte in tertia et decima hora â occasu numeranda. Si unius horæ spatium non suffecerit expectandum est usque ad alteram id est decimam horam in Veneris enim duntaxat fieri licet horis et quidem (:quod rursus notendum:) in novilunio, quare si una nocte in duabus præscriptis horis sigillum perfici nequit pari ratione expectandum est usque ad alterum novilunium. Perfectum ex post Sigillum infumetur in ipsissima die et hora.

Fumigium fiat em Speciebus: Verbena puscia* et Musco.

Involvatur postea in lintheum novum atque iterum in tem-pore prædicto Novilunii diei horæque noctu defodiatur in terram penes aquam fluentem effodiatur in subsequenti die et hora pariter de nocte serveturque pro operationis oportunitate.



Sigillum Veneris

* This appears to be a slip of the pen; no herb of this name is found in any classical or Medieval Latin lexicon. Meier (1990) considers that posia or pausea (a kind of olive), or ruscus (wild myrtle) may have been intended. I guessed myrtle, as Agrippa gives it as a Venusian herb and the combination of it with the other two herbs appears to me to produce a satisfactory scent. —M.P.

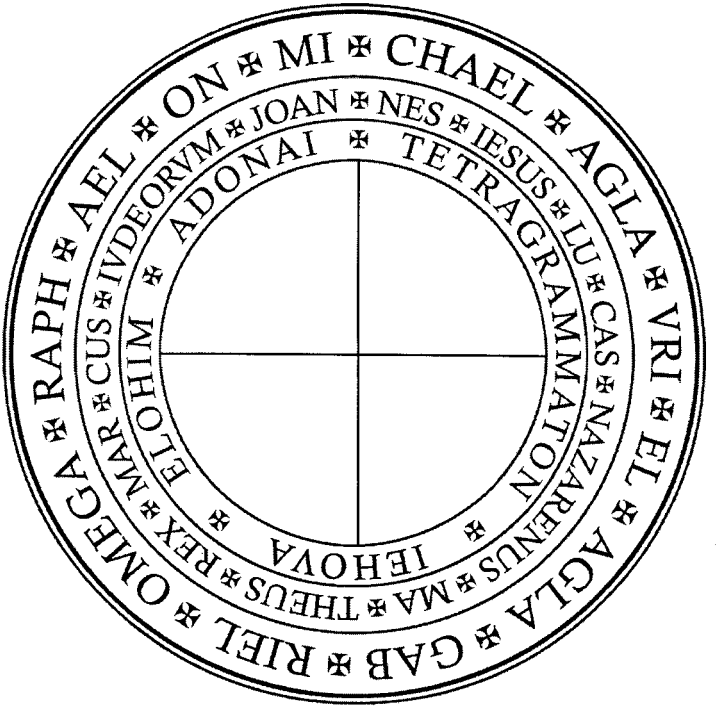
Caput Secondum

Quomodo Tuba Veneris sit præparanda.

ACCIPIATUR Cornu em Tauro vivo dein sumatur Vitriolum in aceto vineo liquefactum cum quo abluatur purgaturque Cornu, quo facto predicto Instrumento Chalybeo cuivis parti insculpantur Characteres uti in mox sequenti adumbratione extant. Tota autem hæc prædicta Cornu præparatio incluso tempore in quo id ex tauro abripitur, pari ratone ac de Sigillo antecedenter indicatum est in temporibus diebus et horis fieri debet quod bene notandum est. Infumetur postea ac involvatur in lintheum atque unacum Sigillo infodiatur, effodiatur et in usum conservetur.

Tuba Veneris.

Caput Tertium

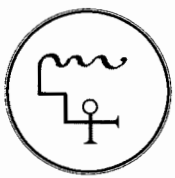


Quomodo Circulus faciendus

NTEQUAM ad Spirituum Vocatum seu citationem progrediamur de circuli compositione nobis agendum erit, utpote quo Negromantici omnes in suis semper utantur operationibus per hunc tanquam per fortissimum munimentum contra Dæmonum insidiationes sese tuentes. Compositio autem circulorum multifaria est, aliqui operantes in ædibus eundem perficiunt crete carbonibus et coloribus; nonnulli in sylvis vel biviis exorzisantes* faciunt gladio vel certis baculis; Alii vero conficiunt circulum ex pergamento cum inscriptione Divinorum nominum, quem et nos ad nostram oporationem elegimus, prout etiam fortunatiori hæredi cum cæteris requisitis omnibus jamjam confectum reliquimus, nec non formam ejus et rationem pro libelli nostri ordine et integritate hic adjungimus.

*This is obviously a simple misspelling of the participle exorcizantes. —M.P.

Accipiatur ergo pergamentum sive charta virginea, scindantur ex eo in latitudine pollicari tres circuli. primus in amplitudine sex pedum reliqui duobus vel tribus digitis angustius, postmodum in præfixis temporibus horisque Nomina divina cum coloribus inscribantur uti in subsequenti Circuli videntur figura. Circulus postquam confectus infumetur ac defossu in terram hic intermittente ad usum custodiatur.



Forma Circli.

Quomodo hæc Sigilla Spirituum sint faci-enda

ACCIPIATUR Cera viridis cui misceatur de fuligine, fiant ex ea assulæ rotundæ inseranturque in eas instrumento chalybeo Sigillum hujusce Spiritus qui citari intenditur. fiant hæc sicut cætera antedicta simili ratione in tempore die et hora suffitus cum defossu hic intermittatur verum ad opus custodiatur.

Quomodo Libellus iste sit consecrandus.

IBELLUS (:cui Spirituum nomina et Vocatus inscripti sunt:) antecedenter consecretur necesse est: uti nimirum antiqui fecerunt Magi qui similium librorum consecrationem ita instituere ut apperiendo duntaxat librum spiritus max comparere coëgissent, quod tamen nobis nimium videtur periculosum præsertim si talis liber infortuite in manus hominum hanc artem penitus ignorantium incidat.

Quare libellum nostrum sequenti consecrare libuit modo. Fiat Libellus ex Pergamento cui imprimis insignatur Character et si libet Imago quædam Planetæ hujus figuram repræsentans cum Signo super Caput ejus. Libellus intituletur: Libellus Veneri nigræ Sacer. Ante Vocatum Spirituum scribatur in Rubrica Tuba Veneris ad Normam hujus nostri Libelli, qui â me ipso consecratus atque cum reliquis omnibus appertinentiis posteritati relictus est, si secus fortuna hæc omnia tibi ad manus decreverit. Integer proinde libellus in sæpe dictis temporibus conscribi debet ad quod ulterius requiritur penna ex columba atque attramentum calcanto compositum et a nemine usatum etiam viridi rubeoque colore pro libitu uti potest, nam hi colores Planetæ nostro omnino grati sunt.

Libellus postquam compositus et conscriptus est infumicetur. dein accipiatur aqua Vitrioli cum qua manus impleatur et liber bapti[z]etur dicendo.

Veneri nigrum te Sacro libellum, Veneris esto Tuba tibi nomen, incolis tremena sitque bene notum omnibus orci.

O Magne Princeps Anaël Olympi!
Te rogo supplex robora Volumen tuo qui perenni semper honori fonte lavatur.

Veneris horis Dæmon ut inscriptus advolet velox hæc si Tuba cantat qua volo præstet, faciat invitus.
Placidus adsta!

Hoc facto rursum Libellus infumetur atque in pannum vel viridum vel rubrum involvetur, subdatur supter terram cum cæteris rebus et in tempore præscripto effodiatur et pro usu conservetur.

Quomodo Operatio instituenda sit

I OMNIA hæc antedicta tandem rite præparata promptaque ad manus fuerint atque operator se se ipsum satis probaverit præparaveritque idoneum et animosum (:pro uti id imperterritum magnanimumque omnino desiderat virum:) accedat in eodem sæepe indicato tempore hora et nocte locum ab omni hominum perturbatione securum vel in ædibus vel melius in Sylvia biviisque absitis atque desertis, disponat ibi circulum et uupendat Sigillum super collum, faciat fumigium et incipiat citare Spiritum ex numero assignato a se electum. Totum autem Vocatum per Tubam pronunciet vocetque Spiritum suo nomine tum ab initia citationis tum in fine sed semper cum aliqua pausa.

Advenientem Spiritum salutet modo sequenti:

Salve nobilis ac obediens Spiritus (: nominetur hic Spiritus suo nomine :) Impero tibi per tremendum nomen Adonai et per hoc Sigillum (: monstret Spiritui Sigillum :) Angeli Anaëlis Principis Regentis Planetæ Veneris ut quietem te exhibeas et tranquillum atque in omnibus quæ tibi mandaturus sum voluntatem meam adimpleas. Hoc tibi iterato præcipio per Deum Patrem Filium et Spiritum Sanctum et per Triumphatorem Dominum Jesum Christum qui venturus est judicare seculum per ignem.

Post hæc Spiritus Magistrum interragobit quare fuerit citatus, quidnam præcipiat? et desideret atque hoc Magister clare et distincte denominet. ubi notandum quad si Spiritum in aliquibus pertinaces sese ostenderent, accipiatur Sigillum, detur super ignem vel carbones cum quibus fumigium factum est, vel si fumigio non utatur (:sicut etiam adeo necessarium non est:) porrigatur Sigillum super candelam ardentem ut fiat calidum et imponatur super illud Sigillum istius Spiritus qui citatur per hoc enim enormiter cruciantur Spiritus et rogabunt magistrum ut cesset illos tormentare et non amplius resistant adimplere ejus voluntatem.

Non tamen in petitionibus et desideriis Magister nimium excedat, suaserim ne forte Divini Numinis iram provocet; nec inconstantem astutis us monstret spiritibus aut vaticillantem nec minus conditiones ab iis proponendas acceptet. Sed animo forti ac constanti petitionibus â se Spiritibus semel propositis insistat et Spirituum forte simultaneas difficultates vel etiam minas nauci floccique faciat secus Dominii sui in Spiritus frustraretur.

Non minus cavendum est, ne Spirituum assistentia pro perpetrandis impiis ac sceleratis facinoribus utatur ad quod quidem eo promptiores se se ostenderent Spiritus: verum sic summum sane anima pateretur detrimentum nam dum suum in Dæmones vellet exercere Dominium animam suam in horrendum illorum traderet mancipatum. Quare paucis rursum de omni abusu artis hujus cunctos et singulos fideliter dehortamur. Quod si itaque Spiritus mandata seu voluntatem Magistri adimpleverint licentientur modo sequenti:

Valedictio Spiritu-um.

Hæc fit sicut Vocatus per Tubam ♀
hisce verbis:

Norcados Fenoram Anosiren (:vocetur hic Spiritus suo nomine semel et pergatur:) Oparcliim Amosan Zezaphilos Aspairath Anthyras Zyriffon.

His auditis Spiritum mox fient invisibiles.
et magistro facta pro libitu benedictio-ne e Circulo egredi est licitum.

Quæ ulterius ad huo in operatione observanda sunt.

SI CUM sociis fiat experimentum Ille tantum unicus loquatur Spiritibus, qui Magistrum agit, et illos advocat, reliqui omnes silentium observent. Quod si Spiritus ad adferendum Thesauros et nummos compellantur sic pecuniis vel Thesauro imponi debet, Sigillum ex post evacuetur Thesaurus ex vasibus suis et in aliud vas novum prius perfurmatum et benedictum transferatur.

Hisce igitur libello nostro finem imponimus. Tu vero amice Lector! de ejus abusu cave quæ hic scripta sunt bene perpende ne quid obliviscaris attendas et si quid agis prudenter agas atque animo imperterrito et constanti perficias et magno tibi erit utilitati et solatio.

Ast unicum adhuc restat te admoneamus ut in bono operis successu pauperum quam optime benefaciendo sis memor. Et sic tum in hac tum in altera vita beatus eris at propitius erit omnibus nobis ille qui venturus est judicare vivos et mortuos cujus Regni non erit Finis.

Libellus Veneri Nigro Sacer

Trident Books is proud to offer this new English translation of this exceedingly rare work from the original Latin manuscript. Tuba Veneris is particularly important because it's one of the very few non-Enochian magical texts written by the famous Elizabethean Magus Dr. John Dee. It is said that this book was given to his friend Sir Edward Kelly as a wedding gift on the occasion of his marriage to Joan Cooper in 1582.
